12 So Jeroboam, and all the people came to Roboam the third day, as he commanded them. 13 And the king answered roughly, leaving the counsel of the ancients. 14 And he spoke according to the advice of the young men: My father laid upon you a heavy yoke, which I will make heavier; my father beat you with scourges, but I will beat you with scorpions. 15 And he condescended not to the people's request, for it was the will of God, that his word might be fulfilled [b] which he had spoken by the hand of Ahias the Silonite to Jeroboam the son of Nabat.

16 And all the people upon the king's speaking roughly, said thus unto him: We have no part in David, nor inheritance in the son of Isai. Return to thy dwellings, O Israel, and do thou, O David, feed thy own house. And Israel went away to their dwellings. 17 But Roboam reigned over the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Juda.

18 And king Roboam sent Aduram, who was over the tributes; and the children of Israel stoned him, and he died. And king Roboam made haste to get up into his chariot, and fled into Jerusalem. 19 And Israel revolted from the house of David unto this day.

CHAPTER 11.

The Reign of Roboam. 1 And [c] Roboam came to Jerusalem, and called together all the house of Juda and of Benjamin, a hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men and warriors, to fight against Israel, and to bring back his kingdom to him. 2 And the word of the Lord came to Semeias the man of God, saying: 3 Speak to Roboam the son of Solomon the king of Juda, and to all Israel, in Juda and Benjamin: 4 Thus saith the Lord: You shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren. Let every man return to his own house, for by my will this thing has been done. And when they heard the word of the Lord, they returned, and did not go against Jeroboam.

5 And Roboam dwelt in Jerusalem, and built walled cities in Juda. 6 And he built Bethlehem, and Etam, and Thecua, 7 and Bethsur, and Socho, and Odollam, 8 and Geth, and Maresa, and Ziph, 9 and Aduram, and Lachis, and Azecha, 10 Saraa also, and Aialon, and Hebron, which are in Juda and Benjamin, well fenced cities. 11 And when he had enclosed them with walls, he put in them governors and storehouses of provisions, that is, of oil and of wine. 12 Moreover in every city he made an armory of shields and spears, and he fortified them with great diligence, and he reigned over Juda and Benjamin.

13 And the priests and Levites, that were in all Israel, came to him out of all their seats, 14 leaving their suburbs and their possessions, and passing over to Juda and Jerusalem, because Jeroboam and his sons had cast them off from executing the priestly office to the Lord. 15 And he made to himself priests for the high places, and for the devils, and for the calves which he had made. 16 Moreover out of all the tribes of Israel, whosoever gave their heart to seek the Lord the God of Israel, came into Jerusalem to sacrifice their victims before the Lord the God of their fathers. 17 And they strengthened the kingdom of Juda, and established Roboam the son of Solomon for three years, for they walked in the ways of David and of Solomon, only three years.

18 And Roboam took to wife Mahalath, the daughter of Jerimoth the son of David, and Abihail, the daughter of Eliab the son of Isai, 19 and they bore him sons, Jehus, and Somorias, and Zoom. 20 And after her he married Maacha the daughter of Absalom, who bore him Abia, and Ethai, and Ziza, and Salomith. 21 And Roboam loved Maacha the daughter of Absalom above all his wives and concubines, for he had married eighteen wives, and threescore concubines; and he begot eight and twenty sons, and threescore daughters. 22 But he put the head of them Abia the son of Maacha to be the chief ruler over all his brethren, for he meant to make him king, 23 because he was wiser and mightier than all his sons, and in all the countries of Juda, and of Benjamin, and in all the walled cities; and he gave them provisions in abundance, and he sought many wives.

CHAPTER 12.

King of Egypt Invades Jerusalem. 1 And when the kingdom of Roboam was strengthened and fortified, he forsook the law of the Lord, and all Israel with him. 2 And in the fifth year d of the reign of Roboam, Sesac king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem (because they had sinned against the Lord), 3 with twelve hundred chariots and threescore thousand horsemen; and the people were without number that came with him out of Egypt, to wit, Libyans, and Troglodites, and Ethiopians. 4 And he took the strongest cities in Juda, and came to Jerusalem.

5 And Semeias the prophet came to Roboam, and to the princes of Juda that were gathered together in Jerusalem, fleeing from Sesac, and he said to them: Thus saith the Lord: You have left me, and I have left you in the hand of Sesac. 6 And the princes of Israel and the king, being in a consternation, said: The Lord is just. 7 And when the Lord saw that they were humbled, the word of the Lord came to Semeias, saying: Because they are humbled, I will not destroy them, and I will give them a little help, and my wrath shall not fall upon Jerusalem by the hand of Sesac. 8 But yet they shall serve him, that they may know the difference between my service and the service of a kingdom of the earth.

9 So Sesac king of Egypt departed from Jerusalem, taking away the treasures of the house of the Lord and of the king's house, and he took all with him, and the golden shields that Solomon had made, 10 instead of which the king made brazen ones, and delivered them to the captains of the shieldbearers, who guarded the entrance of the palace. 11 And when the king entered into the house of the Lord, the shieldbearers came and took them, and brought them back again to their armory. 12 But yet because they were humbled, the wrath of the Lord turned away from them, and they were not utterly destroyed, for even in Juda there were found good works.

13 e King Roboam therefore was strengthened in Jerusalem, and reigned. He was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the Lord chose out of all the tribes of Israel, to establish his name there. And the name of his mother was Naama an Ammonitess. 14 But he did evil, and did not prepare his heart to seek the Lord.

15 Now the acts of Roboam first and last are written in the books of Semeias the prophet, and of Addo the seer, and diligently recorded. And there was war between Roboam and Jeroboam all their days. 16 And Roboam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David. And Abia his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER 13.

Abia's Reign: His Victory Over Jeroboam. 1 In the eighteenth year f of king Jeroboam, Abia reigned over Juda. 2 Three years he reigned in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Michaia,* the daughter of Uriel of Gabaa. And there was war between Abia and Jeroboam. 3 g And when Abia had begun battle, and had with him four hundred thousand most valiant and chosen men, Jeroboam put his army in array against him, eight hundred thousand men, who were also chosen and most valiant for war.

4 And Abia stood upon mount Semeron, which was in Ephraim, and said: Hear me, O Jeroboam, and all Israel. 5 Do you not know that the Lord God of Israel gave to David the kingdom over Israel forever, to him and to his sons by a covenant of salt?* 6 And Jeroboam the son of Nabat, the servant of Solomon the son of David, rose up, h and rebelled against his lord. 7 And there were gathered to him vain men, and children of Belial; and they prevailed against Roboam the son of Solomon; for Roboam was unexperienced, and of a fearful heart, and could not resist them. 8 And now you say that you are able to withstand the kingdom of the Lord, which he possesseth by the sons of David, and you have a great multitude of people, and golden calves, which Jeroboam hath made you for gods. 9 i And you have cast out the priests of the Lord, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites; and you have made you priests, like all the nations of the earth. Whosoever cometh and consecrateth his hand with a bullock of the herd, and with seven rams, is made a priest of those who are no gods. 10 But the Lord is our God, whom we forsake not, and the priests who minister to the Lord are the sons of Aaron, and the Levites are in their order. 11 And they offer holocausts to the Lord every day, morning and evening, and incense made according to the ordinance of the law, and the loaves are set forth on a most clean table, and there is with us the golden candlestick, and the lamps thereof, to be lighted always in the evening; for we keep the precepts of the Lord our God, whom you have forsaken. 12 Therefore God is the leader in our army, and his priests who sound with trumpets, and resound against you. O children of Israel, fight not against the Lord the God of your fathers, for it is not good for you.

The Strategy of the Battle. 13 While he spoke these things, Jeroboam caused an ambushment to come about behind him. And while he stood facing the enemies, he encompassed Juda, who perceived it not, with his army. 14 And when Juda looked back, they saw the battle coming upon them both before and behind, and they cried to the Lord; and the priests began to sound with the trumpets. 15 And all the men of Juda shouted: and behold when they shouted, God terrified Jeroboam, and all Israel that stood against Abia and Juda. 16 And the children of Israel fled before Juda, and the Lord delivered them into their hand. 17 And Abia and his people slew them with a great slaughter, and there fell wounded of Israel five hundred thousand valiant men. 18 And the children of Israel were brought down at that time; and the children of Juda were exceedingly strengthened, because they had trusted in the Lord the God of their fathers. 19 And Abia pursued after Jeroboam, and took cities from him, Bethel and her daughters, and Jesana with her daughters, Ephron also and her daughters. 20 And Jeroboam was not able to resist any more in the days of Abia: and the Lord struck him, and he died.

21 But Abia, being strengthened in his kingdom, took fourteen wives, and begot two and twenty sons and sixteen daughters. 22 And the rest of the acts of Abia, and of his ways and works, are written diligently in the book of Addo the prophet.

Reign of Asa: His Religious Zeal. 1 And 13, 2: Michaia, alias Maacha. Her father had also two names, i.e., Absalom, or Abesalom, and Uriel.

13, 5: A covenant of salt: this is a firm and perpetual covenant. See Nm 18, 19.

i Abia slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David. And Asa his son reigned in his stead: in his days the land was quiet ten years. 2 And Asa did that which was good and pleasing in the sight of his God; and he destroyed the altars of foreign worship and the high places, 3 and broke the statues, and cut down the groves. 4 And he commanded Juda to seek the Lord the God of their fathers, and to do the law, and all the commandments. 5 And he took away out of all the cities of Juda the altars and temples, and reigned in peace.

6 He built also strong cities in Juda, for he was quiet, and there had no wars risen in his time, the Lord giving peace. 7 And he said to Juda: Let us build these cities, and compass them with walls, and fortify them with towers, and gates, and bars, while all is quiet from wars, because we have sought the Lord the God of our fathers, and he hath given us peace round about. So they built, and there was no hindrance in building.

8 And Asa had in his army of men that bore shields and spears of Juda three hundred thousand, and of Benjamin that bore shields and drew bows, two hundred and eighty thousand; all these were most valiant men.

9 And Zara the Ethiopian came out against them with his army of ten hundred thousand men, and with three hundred chariots: and he came as far as Maresa. 10 And Asa went out to meet him, and set his army in array for battle in the vale of Sephata, which is near Maresa. 11 And he called upon the Lord God, and said: k Lord, there is no difference with thee, whether thou help with few, or with many. Help us, O Lord our God, for with confidence in thee and in thy name we are come against this multitude. O Lord, thou art our God, let not man prevail against thee. 12 And the Lord terrified the Ethiopians before Asa and Juda, and the Ethiopians fled. 13 And Asa and the people that were with him pursued them to Gerara: and the Ethiopians fell even to utter destruction, for the Lord slew them, and his army fought against them, and they were destroyed. And they took abundance of spoils, 14 and they took all the cities round about Gerara, for a great fear was come upon all men; and they pillaged the cities, and carried off much booty. 15 And they destroyed the sheepcotes, and took an infinite number of cattle, and of camels, and returned to Jerusalem.

CHAPTER 15.

Prophecy of Azarias. 1 And the spirit of God came upon Azarias the son of Oded, 2 and he went out to meet Asa, and said to him: Hear ye me, Asa, and all Juda and Benjamin: The Lord is with you, because you have been with him. If you seek him, you shall find, but if you forsake him, he will forsake you. 3 And many days shall pass in Israel, without the true God, and without a priest, a teacher, and without the law. 4 And when in their distress they shall return to the Lord the God of Israel, and shall seek him, they shall find him. 5 At that time there shall be no peace to him that goeth out and cometh in, but terrors on every side among all the inhabitants of the earth. 6 For nation shall fight against nation, and city against city, for the Lord will trouble them with all distress. 7 Do you therefore take courage, and let not your hands be weakened, for there shall be a reward for your work.

His Covenant with God. 8 And when Asa had heard the words and the prophecy of Azarias the son of Oded the prophet, he took courage, and took away the idols out of all the land of Juda, and out of Benjamin, and out of the cities of mount Ephraim, which he had taken, and he dedicated the altar of the Lord, which was before the porch of the Lord. 9 And he gathered together all Juda and Benjamin, and the strangers with them of Ephraim, and Manasses, and Simeon, for many were come over to him out of Israel, seeing that the Lord his God was with him. 10 And when they were come to Jerusalem in the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa, 11 they sacrificed to the Lord in that day, of the spoils and of the prey that they had brought, seven hundred oxen, and seven thousand rams. 12 And he went in to confirm as usual the covenant, that they should seek the Lord the God of their fathers with all their heart and with all their soul. 13 And if anyone, said he, seek not the Lord the God of Israel, let him die, whether little or great, man or woman. 14 And they swore to the Lord with a loud voice with joyful shouting, and with sound of trumpet, and sound of cornets, 15 all that were in Juda with a curse: for with all their heart they swore, and with all their will they sought him, and they found him, and the Lord gave them rest round about.

16 Moreover Maacha the mother of king Asa he deposed from the royal authority, because she had made in a grove an idol of Priapus; and he entirely destroyed it, and breaking it into pieces, burnt it at the torrent Cedron. 17 But high places were left in Israel; nevertheless the heart of Asa was perfect all his days. 18 And the things which his father had vowed, and he himself had vowed, he brought into the house of the Lord, gold and silver, and vessels of divers uses.

19 And there was no war unto the five and thirtieth year of the kingdom of Asa.

CHAPTER 16.

The King of Israel against Asa. 1 And in the sixth and thirtieth year of his kingdom,* Baasa l the king of Irsael came up against Juda, and built a wall about Rama, that no one might safely go out or come in of the kingdom of Asa.

2 Then Asa brought out silver and gold out of the treasures of the house of the Lord, and of the king's treasures, and sent to Benadad king of Syria, who dwelt in Damascus, saying: 3 There is a league between me and thee, as there was between my father and thy father; wherefore I have sent thee silver and gold, that thou mayest break thy league with Baasa king of Israel, and make him depart from me. 4 And when Benadad heard this, he sent the captains of his armies against the cities of Israel; and they took Ahion, and Dan, and Abelmaim, and all the walled cities of Nephtali. 5 And when Baasa heard of it, he left off the building of Rama, and interrupted his work. 6 Then king Asa took all Juda, and they carried away from Rama the stones and the timber that Baasa had prepared for the building; and he built with them Gabaa, and Maspha.

7 At that time Hanani the prophet came to Asa king of Juda, and said to him: Because thou hast had confidence in the king of Syria, and not in the Lord thy God, therefore hath the army of the king of Syria escaped out of thy hand. 8 *m*Were not the Ethiopians and the Libyans much more numerous in chariots, and horsemen, and an exceeding great multitude; yet because thou trustedst in the Lord, he delivered them into thy hand? 9 For the eyes of the Lord beholdeth all the earth, and give strength to those who with a perfect heart trust in him. Wherefore thou hast done foolishly, and for this cause from this time wars shall arise against thee. 10 And Asa was angry with the seer, and commanded him to be put in prison; for he was greatly enraged because of this thing: and he put to death many of the people at that time. 11 But the works of Asa the first and last are written in the book of the kings of Juda and Israel.

12 And Asa fell sick in the nine and thirtieth n year of his reign, of a most violent pain in his feet, and yet in his illness he did not seek the Lord, but rather trusted in the skill of physicians. 13 And he slept with his fathers; and he died in the one and fortieth year of his reign. 14 And they buried him in his own sepulchre, which he had made for himself in the city of David; and they laid him on his bed full of spices and odoriferous ointments, which were made by the art of the perfumers, and they burnt them over him with very great pomp.

Glorious Reign of Josaphat. 1 And o Josaphat his son reigned in his stead, and grew strong against Israel. 2 And he placed numbers of soldiers in all the fortified cities of Juda. And he put garrisons in the land of Juda, and in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa his father had taken.

3 And the Lord was with Josaphat, because he walked in the first ways of David his father, and trusted not in Baalim, 4 but in the God of his father, and walked in his commandments, and not according to the sins of Israel. 5 And the Lord established the kingdom in his hand, and all Juda brought presents to Josaphat, and he acquired immense riches and much glory. 6 And when his heart had taken courage for the ways of the Lord, he took away also the high places and the groves out of Juda.

7 And in the third year [p] of his reign, he sent of his princes Benhail, and Abdias, and Zacharias, and Nathanael, and Micheas, to teach in the cities of Juda; 8 and with them the Levites, Semeias, and Nathanias, and Zabadias, and Asael, and Semiramoth, and Jonathan, and Adonias, and Tobias, and Thobadonias, Levites, and with them Elisama and Joram priests. 9 And they taught the people in Juda, having with them the book of the law of the Lord; and they went about all the cities of Juda, and instructed the people.

10 And the fear of the Lord came upon all the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Juda, and they durst not make war against Josaphat. 11 The Philistines also brought presents to Josaphat and tribute in silver, and the Arabians brought him cattle, seven thousand seven hundred rams, and as many he-goats.

12 And Josaphat grew, and became exceeding great, and he built in Juda houses like towers and walled cities. 13 And he prepared many works in the cities of Juda; and he had warriors and valiant men in Jerusalem, 14 of whom this is the number of the houses and families of everyone: in Juda captains of the army, Ednas the chief, and with him three hundred thousand most valiant men. 15 After him Johanan the captain, and with him two hundred and eighty thousand. 16 And after him was Amasias the son of Zechri, consecrated to the Lord, and with him were two hundred thousand valiant men. 17 After him was Eliada valiant in battle, and with him two hundred thousand armed with bow and shield. 18 After him also was Jozabad, and with him a hundred and eighty thousand ready for war. 19 All these were at the hand of the king, besides others, whom he had put in the walled cities, in all Juda.

Pact between Josaphat and Achab. 1 Now Josaphat was rich and very glorious, and was joined by affinity to Achab. 2 And he went down to him after some years to Samaria; and Achab at his coming killed sheep and oxen in abundance for him and the people that came with him; and he persauded him to go up to Ramoth Galaad.

3 And Achab king of Israel said to Josaphat king of Juda: Come with me to Ramoth Galaad. And he answered him: Thou art as I am, and my people as thy people, and we will be with thee in the war.

4 And Josaphat said to the king of Israel: Inquire, I beseech thee, at present the word of the Lord. 5 So the king of Israel gathered together of the prophets four hundred men, and he said to them: Shall we go to Ramoth Galaad to fight, or shall we forbear? But they said: Go up, and God will deliver it into the king's hand. 6 And Josaphat said: Is there not here a prophet of the Lord, that we may inquire also of him? 7 And the king of Israel said to Josaphat: There is one man of whom we may ask the will of the Lord; but I hate him, for he never prophesieth good to me, but always evil; and it is Micheas the son of Jemla. And Josaphat said: Speak not thus, O king. 8 And the king of Israel called one of the eunuchs, and said to him: Call quickly Micheas the son of Jemla.

9 Now the king of Israel and Josaphat king of Juda both sat on their thrones, clothed in royal robes, and they sat in the open court by the gate of Samaria, and all the prophets prophesied before them. 10 And Sedecias the son of Chanaana made him horns of iron, and said: Thus saith the Lord: With these shalt thou push Syria, till thou destroy it. 11 And all the prophets prophesied in like manner, and said: Go up to Ramoth Galaad, and thou shalt prosper, and the Lord will deliver them into the king's hand.

Prophecy of Micheas. 12 And the messenger that went to call Micheas, said to him: Behold the words of all the prophets with one mouth declare good to the king; I beseech thee therefore let not thy word disagree with them, and speak thou also good success. 13 And Micheas answered him: As the Lord liveth, whatsoever my God shall say to me, that will I speak.

14 So he came to the king, and the king said to him: Micheas, shall we go to Ramoth Galaad to fight, or forbear? And he answered him: Go up, for all shall succeed prosperously, and the enemies shall be delivered into your hands. 15 And the king said: I adjure thee again and again to say nothing but the truth to me, in the name of the Lord. 16 Then he said: I saw all Israel scattered in the mountains, like sheep without a shepherd. And the Lord said: These have no masters. Let every man return to his own house in peace.

17 And the king of Israel said to Josaphat: Did I not tell thee that this man would not prophesy me any good, but evil? 18 Then he said: Hear ye therefore the word of the Lord: I saw the Lord sitting on his throne, and all the army of heaven standing by him on the right hand and on the left. 19 And the Lord said: Who shall deceive* Achab king of Israel, that he may go up and fall in Ramoth Galaad? And when one spoke in this manner, and another otherwise, 20 there came forth a spirit, and stood before the Lord, and said: I will deceive him. And the Lord said to him: By what means wilt thou deceive him? 21 And he answered: I will go out, and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the Lord said: Thou shalt deceive, and shalt prevail. Go out, and do so. 22 Now therefore behold the Lord hath put a spirit of lying in the mouth of all thy prophets, and the Lord hath spoken evil against thee.

23 And Sedecias the son of Chanaana came and struck Micheas on the cheek and said: Which way went the spirit of the Lord from me, to speak to thee? 24 And Micheas said: Thou thyself shalt see in that day when thou shalt go in from chamber to chamber to hide thyself. 25 And the king of Israel commanded, saying: Take Micheas, and carry him to Amon the governor of the city, and to Joas the son of Amelech, 26 and say: Thus saith the king: Put this fellow in prison, and give him bread and water in a small quantity till I return in peace. 27 And Micheas said: If thou return in peace, the Lord hath not spoken by me. And he said: Hear, all ye people.

28 So the king of Israel and Josaphat king of Juda went up to Ramoth Galaad. 29 And the king of Israel said to Josaphat: I will change my dress, and so I will go to the battle, but put thou on thy own garments. And the king of Israel having changed his dress, went to the battle.

30 Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of his cavalry, saying: Fight ye not with small or great, but with the king of Israel only. 31 So when the captains of the cavalry saw Josaphat, they said: This is the king of Israel. And they surrounded him to attack him; but he cried to the Lord, and he helped him, and turned them away from him. 32 For when the captains of the cavalry saw that he was not the king of Israel, they left him. 33 And it happened that one of the people shot an arrow at a venture, and struck the king of Israel between the neck and the shoulders, and he said to his chariot man: Turn thy hand, and carry me out of the battle, for I am wounded. 34 And the fight was ended that day; but the king of Israel stood in his chariot against the Syrians until the evening and died at the sunset.

Josaphat's Charge to the Judges and Levites. 1 And Josaphat king of Juda returned to his house in peace to Jerusalem. 2 And Jehu the son of Hanani the seer met him, and said to him: Thou helpest the ungodly, and thou art joined in friendship with them that hate the Lord, and therefore thou didst deserve indeed the wrath of the Lord; 3 but good works are found in thee, because thou hast taken away the groves out of the land of Juda, and hast prepared thy heart to seek the Lord the God of thy fathers.

4 And Josaphat dwelt in Jerusalem; and he went out again to the people from Bersabee to mount Ephraim, and brought them back to the Lord the God of their fathers. 5 And he set judges of the land in all the fenced cities of Juda, in every place. 6 And charging the judges, he said: Take heed what you do, for you exercise not the judgment of man, but of the Lord; and whatsoever you judge, it shall redound to you. 7 Let the fear of the Lord be with you, and do all things with diligence, for there is no iniquity with the Lord our God, [q] nor respect of persons, nor desire of gifts.

8 In Jerusalem also Josaphat appointed Levites, and priests and chiefs of the families of Israel, to judge the judgment and the cause of the Lord for the inhabitants thereof. 9 And he charged them, saying: Thus shall you do in the fear of the Lord faithfully, and with a perfect heart. 10 Every cause that shall come to you of your brethren that dwell in their cities, between kindred and kindred, wheresoever there is question concerning the law, the commandment, the ceremonies, the justifications; show it them, that they may not sin against the Lord, and that wrath may not come upon you and your brethren; and so doing you shall not sin. 11 And Amarias the priest your high priest shall be chief in the things which regard God. And Zabadias the son of Ismahel, who is ruler in the house of Juda, shall be over those matters which belong to the king's office; and you have before you the Levites for masters. Take courage and do diligently, and the Lord will be with you in good things.

CHAPTER 20.

Josaphat Implores God's Aid. 1 After [r] this the children of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and with them of the Ammonites, were gathered together to fight against Josaphat. 2 And there came messengers, and told Josaphat, saying: There cometh a great multitude against thee from beyond the sea, and out of Syria, and behold they are in Asasonthamar, which is Engaddi. 3 And Josaphat being seized with fear betook himself wholly to pray to the Lord, and he proclaimed a fast for all Juda. 4 And Juda gathered themselves together to pray to the Lord: and all came out of their cities to make supplication to him.

5 And Josaphat stood in the midst of the assembly of Juda and Jerusalem, in the house of the Lord before the new court, 6 and said: O Lord God of our fathers, thou art God in heaven, and rulest over all the kingdoms and nations; in thy hand is strength and power, and no one can resist thee. 7 Didst not thou our God kill all the inhabitants of this land before thy people Israel, and gavest it to the seed of Abraham thy friend forever? 8 And they dwelt in it, and built in it a sanctuary to thy name, saying: 9 If evils fall upon us, the sword of judgment, or pestilence, or famine, we will stand in thy presence before this house, in which thy name is called upon; and we will cry to thee in our afflictions, and thou wilt hear and save us. 10 [s] Now therefore behold the children of Ammon, and of Moab, and mount Seir, through whose lands thou didst not allow Israel to pass when they came out of Egypt, but they turned aside from them, and slew them not, 11 do the contrary, and endeavor to cast us out of the possession which thou hast delivered to us. 12 O our God, wilt thou not then judge them? As for us we have not strength enough to be able to resist this multitude, which cometh violently upon us. But as we know not what to do, we can only turn our eyes to thee. 13 And all Juda stood before the Lord with their little ones, and their wives, and their children.

God's Answer. 14 And Jahaziel the son of Zacharias, the son of Banaias, the son of Jehiel, the son of Mathanias, a Levite of the sons of Asaph, was there, upon whom the spirit of the Lord came in the midst of the multitude. 15 And he said: Attend ye, all Juda, and you that dwell in Jerusalem, and thou king Josaphat; thus saith the Lord to you: Fear ye not, and be not dismayed at this multitude, for the battle is not yours, but God's. 16 Tomorrow you shall go down against them; for they will come up by the ascent named Sis, and you shall find them at the head of the torrent, which is over against the wilderness of Jeruel. 17 It shall not be you that shall fight, but only stand with confidence, and you shall see the help of the Lord over you, O Juda, and Jerusalem. Fear ye not, nor be you dismayed; tomorrow you shall go out against them, and the Lord will be with you.

18 Then Josaphat, and Juda, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell flat on the ground before the Lord, and adored him. 19 And the Levites of the sons of Caath and of the sons of Core praised the Lord the God of Israel with a loud voice, on high.

20 And they rose early in the morning, and went out through the desert of Thecua; and as they were marching, Josaphat standing in the midst of them, said: Hear me, ye men of Juda, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem: Believe in the Lord your God, and you shall be secure; believe his prophets, and all things shall succeed well. 21 And he gave counsel to the people, and appointed the singing men of the Lord to praise him by their companies, and to go before the army, and with one voice to say: t Give glory to the Lord, for his mercy endureth forever. 22 And when they began to sing praises, the Lord turned their ambushments upon themselves, that is to say, of the children of Ammon, and of Moab, and of mount Seir, who were come out to fight against Juda, and they were slain. 23 For the children of Ammon and of Moab rose up against the inhabitants of mount Seir, to kill and destroy them. And when they had made an end of them, they turned also against one another, and destroyed one another.

24 And when Juda came to the watch tower that looketh towards the desert, they saw afar off all the country, for a great space, full of dead bodies, and that no one was left that could escape death. 25 Then Josaphat came and all the people with him to take away the spoils of the dead, and they found among the dead bodies stuff of various kinds, and garments, and most precious vessels. And they took them for themselves, insomuch that they could not carry all, nor in three days take away the spoils, the booty was so great. 26 And on the fourth day they were assembled in the valley of Blessing, for there they blessed the Lord, and therefore they called that place the valley of Blessing until this day. 27 And every man of Juda and the inhabitants of Jerusalem returned, and Josaphat at their head, into Jerusalem with great joy, because the Lord had made them rejoice over their enemies. 28 And they came into Jerusalem with psalteries, and harps, and trumpets into the house of the Lord. 29 And the fear of the Lord fell upon all the kingdoms of the lands when they heard that the Lord had fought against the enemies of Israel. 30 And the kingdom of Josaphat was quiet, and God gave him peace round about.

End of Josaphat's Reign. 31 u And Josaphat reigned over Juda, and he was five and thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned five and twenty years in Jerusalem. And the name of his mother was Azuba the daughter of Selahi. 32 And he walked in the way of his father Asa, and departed not from it, doing the things that were pleasing before the Lord. 33 But yet he took not away the high places, and the people had not yet turned their heart to the Lord the God of their fathers.

34 But the rest of the acts of Josaphat, first and last, are written in the words of Jehu the son of Hanani, which he digested into the books of the kings of Israel.

35 After these things Josaphat king of Juda made friendship with Ochozias king of Israel, whose works were very wicked. 36 And he was partner with him in making ships, to go to Tharsis; and they made the ships in Asiongaber. 37 And Eliezer the son of Dodau of Maresa prophesied to Josaphat, saying: Because thou hast made a league with Ochozias, the Lord hath destroyed thy works, and the ships are broken and they could not go to Tharsis.

CHAPTER 21.

Joram's Wicked Reign. 1 And v Josaphat slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the city of David. And Joram his son reigned in his stead.

2 And he had brethren the sons of Josaphat, Azarias, and Jahiel, and Zacharias, and Azaria, and Michael, and Saphatias: all these were the sons of Josaphat king of Juda. 3 And their father gave them great gifts of silver, and of gold, and pensions, with strong cities in Juda; but the kingdom he gave to Joram, because he was the eldest. 4 So Joram rose up over the kingdom of his father; and when he had established himself, he slew all his brethren with the sword, and some of the princes of Israel.

5 Joram was two and thirty years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem. 6 w And he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, as the house of Achab had done; for his wife was a daughter of Achab, and he did evil in the sight of the Lord. 7 But the Lord would not destroy the house of David, because of the covenant which he had made with him, and because he had promised to give a lamp to him and to his sons forever.

8 In those days Edom revolted [x] from being subject to Juda, and made themselves a king. 9 And Joram went over with his princes, and all his cavalry with him, and rose in the night, and defeated the Edomites who had surrounded him, and all the captains of his cavalry. 10 However Edom revolted from being under the dominion of Juda unto this day. At that time Lobna also revolted from being under his hand; for he had forsaken the Lord the God of his fathers. 11 Moreover he built also high places in the cities of Juda, and he made the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commit fornication, and Juda to transgress.

12 And there was a letter brought him from Elias the prophet, in which it was written: Thus saith the Lord the God of David thy father: Because thou hast not walked in the ways of Josaphat thy father nor in the ways of Asa king of Juda, 13 but hast walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and hast made Juda and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commit fornication, imitating the fornication of the house of Achab, moreover also thou hast killed thy brethren, the house of thy father, better men than thyself, 14 behold the Lord will strike thee with a great plague, with all thy people, and thy children, and thy wives, and all thy substance. 15 And thou shalt be sick of a very grievous disease of thy bowels, till thy vital parts come out by little and little every day.

16 And the Lord stirred up against Joram the spirit of the Philistines, and of the Arabians, who border on the Ethiopians. 17 And they came up into the land of Juda, and wasted it, and they carried away all the substance that was found in the king's house, his sons also, and his wives, so that there was no son left him but Joachaz,* who was the youngest. 18 And besides all this the Lord struck him with an incurable disease in his bowels. 19 And as day came after day, and time rolled on, two whole years passed; then after being wasted with a long consumption, so as to void his very bowels, his disease ended with his life. [y] And he died of a most wretched illness, and the people did not make a funeral for him according to the manner of burning, as they had done for his ancestors.

20 He was two and thirty years old when he began his reign, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem. And he walked not rightly, and they buried him in the city of David, but not in the sepulchres of the kings.

CHAPTER 22.

Reign and Death of Ochozias. 1 And [z] the inhabitants of Jerusalem made Ochozias his youngest son king in his place; for the rovers of the Arabians, who had broke in upon the camp, had killed all that were his elder brothers. So Ochozias the son of Joram king of Juda reigned.

2 Ochozias was forty-two* years old when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. And the name of his mother was Athalia the daughter of Amri. 3 He also walked in the ways of the house of Achab, for his mother pushed him on to do wickedly. 4 So he did evil in the sight of the Lord, as the house of Achab did, for they were his counsellors after the death of his father, to his destruction.

5 And he walked after their counsels. And he went with Joram the son of Achab king of Israel, to fight against Hazael king of Syria, at Ramoth Galaad; and the Syrians wounded Joram. 6 And he returned to be healed in Jezrahel, for he received many wounds in the foresaid battle. And Ochozias the son of Joram king of Juda, went down to visit Joram the son of Achab in Jezrahel where he lay sick. 7 For it was the will of God against Ochozias that he should come to Joram; and when he was come, should go out also against Jehu the son of Namsi, whom the Lord had anointed to destroy the house of Achab. 8 So when Jehu was rooting out the house of Achab, he found the princes of Juda, and the sons of the brethren of Ochozias, who served him, and he slew them. 9 And he sought for Ochozias himself, and took him lying hid in Samaria. And when he was brought to him, he killed him. And they buried him, because he was the son of Josaphat, who had sought the Lord with all his heart. And there was no more hope that anyone should reign of the race of Ochozias.

10 a For Athalia his mother, seeing that her son was dead, rose up, and killed all the royal family of the house of Joram. 11 But Josabeth the king's daughter took Joas the son of Ochozias, and stole him from among the king's sons that were slain. And she hid him with his nurse in a bedchamber. Now Josabeth that hid him, was daughter of king Joram, wife of Joiada the high priest, and sister of Ochozias, and therefore Athalia did not kill him. 12 And he was with them hid in the house of God six years, during which Athalia reigned over the land.

Joiada Anoints Joas. 1 And b in the seventh year Joiada being encouraged took the captains of hundreds, to wit, Azarias the son of Jeroham, and Ismahel the son of Johanan, and Azarias the son of Obed, and Maasias the son of Adaias, and Elisaphat the son of Zechri, and made a covenant with them. 2 And they went about Juda, and gathered together the Levites out of all the cities of Juda, and the chiefs of families of Israel, and they came to Jerusalem. 3 And all the multitude made a covenant with the king in the house of God. And Joiada said to them: Behold the king's son shall reign, as the Lord hath said of the sons of David. 4 And this is the thing that you shall do: 5 a third part of you that come to the sabbath,* of the priests, and of the Levites, and of the porters, shall be at the gates; and a third part at the king's house; and a third at the gate that is called the Foundation; but let all the rest of the people be in the courts of the house of the Lord. 6 And let no one come into the house of the Lord, but the priests and they that minister of the Levites. Let them only come in, because they are sanctified: and let all the rest of the people keep the watches of the Lord. 7 And let the Levites be round about the king, every man with his arms; (and if any other come into the temple, let him be slain), and let them be with the king, both coming in and going out.

8 So the Levites and all Juda did according to all that Joiada the high priest had commanded; and they took everyone his men that were under him, and that came in by the course of the sabbath, with those who had fulfilled the sabbath, and were to go out. For Joiada the high priest permitted not the companies to depart, which were accustomed to succeed one another every week. 9 And Joiada the priest gave to the captains the spears, and the shields, and targets of king David, which he had dedicated in the house of the Lord. 10 And he set all the people with swords in their hands from the right side of the temple, to the left side of the temple, before the altar, and the temple, round about the king. 11 And they brought out the king's son, and put the crown upon him, and the testimony, and gave him the law to hold in his hand, and they made him king: and Joiada the high priest and his sons anointed him; and they prayed for him, and said: God save the king.

12 Now when Athalia heard the noise of the people running and praising the king, she came in to the people, into the temple of the Lord. 13 And when she saw the king standing upon the step in the entrance, and the princes and the companies about him, and all the people of the land rejoicing, and sounding with trumpets, and playing on instruments of divers kinds, and the voice of those that praised, she rent her garments, and said: Treason, treason. 14 And Joiada the high priest going out to the captains, and the chiefs of the army, said to them: Take her forth without the precinct of the temple, and when she is without, let her be killed with the sword. For the priest commanded that she should not be killed in the house of the Lord. 15 And they laid hold on her by the neck; and when she was come within the horse gate of the palace, they killed her there.

16 And Joiada made a covenant between himself and all the people and the king, that they should be the people of the Lord. 17 And all the people went into the house of Baal, and destroyed it; and they broke down his altars and his idols; and they slew Mathan the priest of Baal before the altars. 18 And Joiada appointed overseers in the house of the Lord, under the hands of the priests and the Levites, whom David had distributed in the house of the Lord, to offer holocausts to the Lord, as it is written in the law of Moses, with joy and singing, according to the disposition of David. 19 He appointed also porters in the gates of the house of the Lord, that none who was unclean in anything should enter in. 20 And he took the captains of hundreds, and the most valiant men, and the chiefs of the people, and all the people of the land, and they brought down the king from the house of the Lord, and brought him through the upper gate into the king's house, and set him on the royal throne. 21 And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was quiet; but Athalia was slain with the sword.

Reign of Joas, Perversion and Punishment. 1 Joas [c] was seven years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem. The name of his mother was Sebia of Bersabee. 2 And he did that which is good before the Lord all the days of Joiada the priest. 3 And Joiada took for him two wives, by whom he had sons and daughters.

4 After this Joas had a mind to repair the house of the Lord. 5 And he assembled the priests, and the Levites, and said to them: Go out to the cities of Juda, and gather of all Israel money to repair the temple of your God, from year to year, and do this with speed. But the Levites were negligent. 6 And the king called Joiada the chief, and said to him: Why hast thou not taken care to oblige the Levites to bring in out of Juda and Jerusalem the money that was appointed by Moses the servant of the Lord for all the multitude of Israel to bring into the tabernacle of the testimony? 7 For that wicked woman Athalia and her children have destroyed the house of God, and adorned the temple of Baal with all the things that had been dedicated in the temple of the Lord.

8 And the king commanded, and they made a chest, and set it by the gate of the house of the Lord on the outside. 9 And they made a proclamation in Juda and Jerusalem, that every man should bring to the Lord [d] the money which Moses the servant of God appointed for all Israel, in the desert. 10 And all the princes and all the people rejoiced; and going in they contributed and cast so much into the chest of the Lord, that it was filled. 11 And when it was time to bring the chest before the king by the hands of the Levites (for they saw there was much money), the king's scribe and he whom the high priest had appointed went in; and they poured out the money that was in the chest; and they carried back the chest to its place. And thus they did from day to day. And there was gathered an immense sum of money. 12 And the king and Joiada gave it to those who were over the works of the house of the Lord; but they hired with it stonecutters and artificers of every kind of work to repair the house of the Lord; and such as wrought in iron and brass, to uphold what began to be falling. 13 And the workmen were diligent, and the breach of the walls was closed up by their hands, and they set up the house of the Lord in its former state, and made it stand firm. 14 And when they had finished all the works, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Joiada; and with it were made vessels for the temple for the ministry, and for holocausts and bowls, and other vessels of gold and silver; and holocausts were offered in the house of the Lord continually all the days of Joiada.

15 But Joiada grew old and was full of days, and died when he was a hundred and thirty years old. 16 And they buried him in the city of David among the kings, because he had done good to Israel and to his house.

17 And after the death of Joiada, the princes of Juda went in, and worshiped the king; and he was soothed by their services and hearkened to them. 18 And they forsook the temple of the Lord the God of their fathers, and served groves and idols, and wrath came upon Juda and Jerusalem for this sin. 19 And he sent prophets to them to bring them back to c 4 Kgs 11, 21; 12, 1.—d Ex 30, 12.

the Lord, and they would not give ear when they testified against them.

20 The spirit of God then came upon Zacharias the son of Joiada the priest, and he stood in the sight of the people, and said to them: Thus saith the Lord God: Why transgress you the commandment of the Lord which will not be for your good, and have forsaken the Lord, to make him forsake you? 21 And they gathered themselves together against him, and stoned him at the king's commandment in the court of the house of the Lord. 22 And king Joas did not remember the kindness that Joiada his father had done to him, [e] but killed his son. And when he died, he said: The Lord see, and require it.

23 And when a year was come about, the army of Syria came up against him; and they came to Juda and Jerusalem, and killed all the princes of the people, and they sent all the spoils to the king of Damascus. 24 And whereas there came a very small number of the Syrians, the Lord delivered into their hands an infinite multitude, because they had forsaken the Lord the God of their fathers; and on Joas they executed shameful judgments. 25 And departing they left him in great diseases; and his servants rose up against him, for revenge of the blood of the son of Joiada the priest, and they slew him in his bed, and he died. And they buried him in the city of David, but not in the sepulchres of the kings.

26 Now the men that conspired against him were Zabad the son of Semmaath an Ammonitess, and Jozabad the son of Semarith a Moabitess. 27 And concerning his sons, and the sum of money which was gathered under him, and the repairing the house of God, they are written more diligently in the book of kings. And Amasias his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER 25.

Reign of Amasias. 1 Amasias [f] was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem. The name of his mother was Joadan of Jerusalem. 2 And he did what was good in the sight of the Lord, but yet not with a perfect heart. 3 And when he saw himself strengthened in his kingdom, he put to death the servants that had slain the king his father. 4 But he slew not their children, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses, where the Lord commanded, saying: [g] The fathers shall not be slain for the children, nor the children for their fathers, but every man shall die for his own sin.

5 Amasias therefore gathered Juda together, and appointed them by families, and captains of thousands and of hundreds in all Juda and Benjamin; and he numbered them from twenty years old and upwards, and found three hundred thousand young men that could go out to battle, and could hold the spear and shield. 6 He hired also of Israel a hundred thousand valiant men for a hundred talents of silver. 7 But a man of God came to him, and said: O king, let not the army of Israel go out with thee, for the Lord is not with Israel, and all the children of Ephraim. 8 And if thou think that battles consist in the strength of the army, God will make thee to be overcome by the enemies, for it belongeth to God both to help, and to put to flight. 9 And Amasias said to the man of God: What will then become of the hundred talents which I have given to the soldiers of Israel? And the man of God answered: The Lord is rich enough to be able to give thee much more than this. 10 Then Amasias separated the army that came to him out of Ephraim, to go home again; but they being much enraged against Juda, returned to their own country.

11 And Amasias taking courage led forth his people, and went to the vale of saltpits, and slew of the children of Seir ten thousand. 12 And other ten thousand men the sons of Juda took, and brought to the steep of a certain rock, and cast them down headlong from the top, and they all were broken to pieces. 13 But that army which Amasias had sent back, that they should not go with him to battle, spread themselves among the cities of Juda, from Samaria to Beth-horon, and having killed three thousand took away much spoil.

14 But Amasias after he had slain the Edomites, set up the gods of the children of Seir, which he had brought thence, to be his gods, and adored them, and burnt incense to them. 15 Wherefore the Lord being angry against Amasias, sent a prophet to him, to say to him: Why hast thou adored gods that have not delivered their own people out of thy hand? 16 And when he spoke these things, he answered him: Art thou the king's counsellor? Be quiet, lest I kill thee. And the prophet departing, said: I know that God is minded to kill thee, because thou hast done this evil, and moreover hast not hearkened to my counsel.

War Against the King of Israel. 17 Then Amasias king of Juda taking very bad counsel, sent to Joas the son of Joachaz the son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying: Come, let us see one another. 18 But he sent back the messengers, saying: The thistle that is in Libanus, sent to the cedar in Libanus, saying: Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and behold the beasts that were in the wood of Libanus passed by, and trod down the thistle. 19 Thou hast said: I have overthrown Edom, and therefore thy heart is lifted up with pride. Stay at home. Why dost thou provoke evil against thee, that both thou shouldst fall and Juda with thee? 20 Amasias would not hearken to him, because it was the Lord's will that he should be delivered into the hands of enemies, because of the gods of Edom. 21 So Joas king of Israel went up, and they presented themselves to be seen by one another; and Amasias king of Juda was in Bethsames of Juda. 22 And Juda fell before Israel, and they fled to their dwellings. 23 And Joas king of Israel took Amasias king of Juda, the son of Joas, the son of Joachaz, in Bethsames, and brought him to Jerusalem; and broke down the walls thereof, from the gate of Ephraim to the gate of the corner, four hundred cubits. 24 And he took all the gold, and silver, and all the vessels, that he found in the house of God, and with Obededom, and in the treasures of the king's house. Moreover also the sons of the hostages, he brought back to Samaria.

25 And Amasias the son of Joas king of Juda lived after the death of Joas the son of Joachaz king of Israel, fifteen years. 26 Now the rest of the acts of Amasias, the first and last, are written in the book of the kings of Juda and Israel. 27 And after he revolted from the Lord, they made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem. [h] And he fled into Lachis, and they sent, and killed him there. 28 And they brought him back upon horses, and buried him with his fathers in the city of David.

Reign of Ozias. 1 And [i] all the people of Juda took his son Ozias, who was sixteen years old, and made him king in the room of Amasias his father. 2 He built Ailath, and restored it to the dominion of Juda, after that the king slept with his fathers.

3 Ozias was sixteen years old when he began to reign, and he reigned two and fifty years in Jerusalem. The name of his mother was Jechelia of Jerusalem. 4 And he did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, according to all that Amasias his father had done. 5 And he sought the Lord in the days of Zacharias that understood and saw God; and as long as he sought the Lord, he directed him in all things.

6 Moreover he went forth and fought against the Philistines, and broke down the wall of Geth, and the wall of Jabnia, and the wall of Azotus; and he built towns in Azotus, and among the Philistines. 7 And God helped him against the Philistines, and against the Arabians, that dwelt in Gurbaal, and against the Ammonites. 8 And the Ammonites gave gifts to Ozias; and his name was spread abroad even to the entrance of Egypt for his frequent victories.

9 And Ozias built towers in Jerusalem over the gate of the corner, and over the gate of the valley, and the rest in the same side of the wall, and fortified them. 10 And he built towers in the wilderness, and dug many cisterns, for he had much cattle both in the plains and in the waste of the desert. He had also vineyards and dressers of vines in the mountains, and in Carmel, for he was a man that loved husbandry.

11 And the army of his fighting men that went out to war, was under the hand of Jehiel the scribe, and Maasias the doctor, and under the hand of Henanias, who was one of the king's captains. 12

And the whole number of the chiefs by the families of valiant men were two thousand six hundred. 13 And the whole army under them three hundred and seven thousand five hundred, who were fit for war, and fought for the king against the enemy. 14 And Ozias prepared for them, that is, for the whole army, shields, and spears, and helmets, and coats of mail, and bows, and slings to cast stones. 15 And he made in Jerusalem engines of diverse kinds, which he placed in the towers and in the corners of the walls, to shoot arrows and great stones: and his name went forth far abroad, for the Lord helped him, and had strengthened him.

The Vanity of Ozias. 16 But when he was made strong, his heart was lifted up to his destruction, and he neglected the Lord his God. And going into the temple of the Lord, he had a mind to burn incense upon the altar of incense. 17 And immediately Azarias the priest going in after him, and with him fourscore priests of the Lord, most valiant men, 18 withstood the king and said: It doth not belong to thee, Ozias, to burn incense to the Lord, but to the priests, that is, to the sons of Aaron, i who are consecrated for this ministry. Go out of the sanctuary; do not despise, for this thing shall not be accounted to thy glory by the Lord God. 19 And Ozias was angry, and holding in his hand the censer to burn incense, threatened the priests. And presently there rose a leprosy in his forehead before the priests, in the house of the Lord at the altar of incense. 20 And Azarias the high priest and all the rest of the priests looked upon him, and saw the leprosy in his forehead, and they made haste to thrust him out. Yea, himself also being frightened, hastened to go out, because he had quickly felt the stroke of the Lord. 21 k And Ozias the king was a leper unto the day of his death, and he dwelt in a house apart being full of the leprosy, for which he had been cast out of the house of the Lord. And Joatham his son governed the king's house, and judged the people of the land.

22 But the rest of the acts of Ozias first and last were written by Isaias the son of Amos, the prophet. 23 And Ozias slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the field of the royal sepulchres, because he was a leper. And Joatham his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER 27.

Joatham's Good Reign. 1 Joatham l was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. The name of his mother was Jerusa the daughter of Sadoc. 2 And he did that which was right before the Lord, according to all that Ozias his father had done, only that he entered not into the temple of the Lord, and the people still transgressed.

3 He built the high gate of the house of the Lord, and on the wall of Ophel he built much. 4 Moreover he built cities in the mountains of Juda, and castles and towers in the forests. 5 He fought against the king of the children of Ammon, and overcame them, and the children of Ammon gave him at that time a hundred talents of silver, and ten thousand measures of wheat, and as many measures of barley; so much did the children of Ammon give him in the second and third year. 6 And Joatham was strengthened because he had his way directed before the Lord his God.

7 Now the rest of the acts of Joatham, and all his wars, and his works, are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Juda. 8 He was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. 9 And Joatham slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David. And Achaz his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER 28.

Wicked and Unhappy Reign of Achaz. 1 Achaz m was twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. He did not that which was right in the sight of the Lord as David his father had done, 2 but walked in the ways of the kings of Israel; moreover also he cast statues for Baalim. 3 It was he that burnt incense in the valley of Benennom, and consecrated his sons in the fire according to the manner of the nations, which the Lord slew at the coming of the children of Israel. 4 He sacrificed also and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

5 And the Lord his God delivered him into the hands of the king of Syria, who defeated him, and took a great booty out of his kingdom, and carried it to Damascus. He was also delivered into the hands of the king of Israel, who overthrew him with a great slaughter. 6 For Phacee the son of Romelia slew of Juda a hundred and twenty thousand in one day, all valiant men, because they had forsaken the Lord the God of their fathers. 7 At the same time Zechri a powerful man of Ephraim, slew Maasias the king's son, and Ezricam the governor of his house, and Elcana who was next to the king. 8 And the children of Israel carried away of their brethren two hundred thousand women, boys, and girls, and an immense booty; and they brought it to Samaria.

9 At that time there was a prophet of the Lord there, whose name was Oded. And he went out to meet the army that came to Samaria, and said to them: Behold the Lord the God of your fathers being angry with Juda, hath delivered them into your hands, and you have butchered them cruelly, so that your cruelty hath reached up to heaven. 10 Moreover you have a mind to keep under the children of Juda and Jerusalem for your bondmen and bondwomen, which ought not to be done, for you have sinned in this against the Lord your God. 11 But hear ye my counsel, and release the captives that you have brought of your brethren, because a great indignation of the Lord hangeth over you.

12 Then some of the chief men of the sons of Ephraim, Azarias the son of Johanan, Barachias the son of Mosollamoth, Ezechias the son of Sellum, and Amasa the son of Adali, stood up against them that came from the war. 13 And they said to them: You shall not bring in the captives hither, lest we sin against the Lord. Why will you add to our sins, and heap up upon our former offenses? For the sin is great, and the fierce anger of the Lord hangeth over Israel. 14 So the soldiers left the spoils, and all that they had taken, before the princes and all the multitude. 15 And the men, whom we mentioned above, rose up and took the captives, and with the spoils clothed all them that were naked; and when they had clothed and shod them, and refreshed them with meat and drink, and anointed them because of their labor, and had taken care of them, they set such of them as could not walk, and were feeble, upon beasts, and brought them to Jericho the city of palm trees to their brethren, and they returned to Samaria.

Achaz Appeals to the Assyrian King. 16 At that time king Achaz sent to the king of the Assyrians asking help. 17 And the Edomites came and slew many of Juda, and took a great booty. 18 The Philistines also spread themselves among the cities of the plains, and to the south of Juda; and they took Bethsames, and Aialon, and Gaderoth, and Socho, and Thamnan, and Gamzo, with their villages, and they dwelt in them. 19 For the Lord had humbled Juda because of Achaz the king of Juda, for he had stripped it of help,* and had contemned the Lord. 20 And he brought against him Thelgathphalnasar [n] king of the Assyrians, who also afflicted him, and plundered him without any resistance. 21 And Achaz stripped the house of the Lord, and the house of the kings and of the princes, and gave gifts to the king of the Assyrians, and yet it availed him nothing.

22 Moreover also in the time of his distress he increased contempt against the Lord. King Achaz himself by himself 23 sacrificed victims to the gods of Damascus that struck him, and he said: The gods of the kings of Syria help them, and I will appease them with victims, and they will help me; whereas on the contrary they were the ruin of him, and of all Israel. 24 Then Achaz having taken away all the vessels of the house of God, and broken them, shut up the doors of the temple of God, and made himself altars in all the corners of Jerusalem. 25 And in all the cities of Juda he built altars to burn frankincense, and he provoked the Lord the God of his fathers to wrath.

26 But the rest of his acts, and all his works first and last are written in the book of the kings of Juda and Israel. 27 And Achaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of Jerusalem; for they received him not into the sepulchres of the kings of Israel. And Ezechias his son reigned in his stead.

Ezechias Restores Religion. 1 Now [o] Ezechias began to reign when he was five and twenty years old, and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem. The name of his mother was Abia, the daughter of Zacharias. 2 And he did that which was pleasing in the sight of the Lord, according to all that David his father had done.

3 In the first year and month of his reign he opened the doors of the house of the Lord, and repaired them. 4 And he brought the priests and the Levites, and assembled them in the east street. 5 And he said to them: Hear me, ye Levites, and be sanctified: purify the house of the Lord the God of your fathers, and take away all filth out of the sanctuary. 6 Our fathers have sinned and done evil in the sight of the Lord God, forsaking him. They have turned away their faces from the tabernacle of the Lord, and turned their backs. 7 They have shut up the doors that were in the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burnt incense, nor offered holocausts in the sanctuary of the God of Israel. 8 Therefore the wrath of the Lord hath been stirred up against Juda and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them to trouble, and to destruction, and to be hissed at, as you see with your eyes. 9 Behold, our fathers are fallen by the sword, our sons, and our daughters, and wives are led away captives for this wickedness. 10 Now therefore I have a mind that we make a covenant with the Lord the God of Israel, and he will turn away the wrath of his indignation from us. 11 My sons, be not negligent: the Lord hath chosen you to stand before him, and to minister to him, and to worship him, and to burn incense to him.

12 Then the Levites arose, Mahath the son of Amasai, and Joel the son of Azarias, of the sons of Caath; and of the sons of Merari, Cis the son of Abdi, and Azarias the son of Jalaleel. And of the sons of Gerson, Joah the son of Zemma, and Eden the son of Joah. 13 And of the sons of Elisaphan, Samri and Jahiel. Also of the sons of Asaph, Zacharias, and Mathanias. 14 And of the sons of Heman, Jahiel and Semei; and of the sons of Idithun, Semeias and Oziel. 15 And they gathered together their brethren, and sanctified themselves, and went in according to the commandment of the king, and the precept of the Lord, to purify the house of God. 16 And the priests went into the temple of the Lord to sanctify it, and brought out all the uncleanness that they found within to the entrance of the house of the Lord, and the Levites took it away, and carried it out abroad to the torrent Cedron. 17 And they began to cleanse on the first day of the first month, and on the eighth day of the same month they came into the porch of the temple of the Lord, and they purified the temple in eight days, and on the sixteenth day of the same month they finished what they had begun.

18 And they went in to king Ezechias, and said to him: We have sanctified all the house of the Lord, and the altar of holocaust, and the vessels thereof, and the table of proposition with all its vessels, 19 and all the furniture of the temple, which king Achaz in his reign had defiled, after his transgression; and behold they are all set forth before the altar of the Lord.

Expiatory Sacrifices. 20 And king Ezechias rising early, assembled all the rulers of the city, and went up into the house of the Lord; 21 and they offered together seven bullocks, and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he-goats for sin, for the kingdom, for the sanctuary, for Juda; and he spoke to the priests the sons of Aaron, to offer them upon the altar of the Lord. 22 Therefore they killed the bullocks, and the priests took the blood, and poured it upon the altar; they killed also the rams, and their blood they poured also upon the altar, and they killed the lambs, and poured the blood upon the altar. 23 And they brought the he-goats for sin before the king and the whole multitude, and they laid their hand upon them. 24 And the priests immolated them, and sprinkled their blood before the altar for an expiation of all Israel; for the king had commanded that the holocaust and the sin offering should be made for all Israel.

25 And he set the Levites in the house of the Lord with cymbals, and psalteries, and harps according to the regulation of David the king, and of Gad the seer, and of Nathan the prophet, for it was the commandment of the Lord by the hand of his prophets. 26 And the Levites stood with the instruments of David, and the priests with trumpets.

27 And Ezechias commanded that they should offer holocausts upon the altar. And when the holocausts were offered, they began to sing praises to the Lord, and to sound with trumpets and divers instruments which David the king of Israel had prepared. 28 And all the multitude adored, and the singers and the trumpeters were in their office till the holocaust was finished. 29 And when the oblation was ended, the king and all that were with him bowed down and adored. 30 And Ezechias and the princes commanded the Levites to praise the Lord with the words of David, and Asaph the seer; and they praised him with great joy, and bowing the knee adored.

31 And Ezechias added, and said: You have filled your hands to the Lord; come and offer victims and praises in the house of the Lord. And all the multitude offered victims, and praises, and holocausts with a devout mind. 32 And the number of the holocausts which the multitude offered, was seventy bullocks, a hundred rams, and two hundred lambs. 33 And they consecrated to the Lord six hundred oxen, and three thousand sheep. 34 But the priests were few, and were not enough to flay the holocausts. Wherefore the Levites their brethren helped them, till the work was ended, and priests were sanctified. For the Levites are sanctified with an easier rite than the priests.

35 So there were many holocausts, and the fat of peace offerings, and the libations of holocausts; and the service of the house of the Lord was completed. 36 And Ezechias and all the people rejoiced because the ministry of the Lord was accomplished. For the resolution of doing this thing was taken suddenly.

CHAPTER 30.

Ezechias Invites Israel and Juda to Celebrate the Pasch. 1 And Ezechias sent to all Israel and Juda; and he wrote letters to Ephraim and Manasses, that they should come to the house of the Lord in Jerusalem, and keep the phase to the Lord the God of Israel. 2 For the king, taking counsel, and the princes, and all the assembly of Jerusalem, decreed to keep the phase the second month. 3 For they could not keep it in its time, because there were not priests enough sanctified, and the people was not as yet gathered together to Jerusalem. 4 And the thing pleased the king, and all the people. 5 And they decreed to send messengers to all Israel from Bersabee even to Dan, that they should come, and keep the phase to the Lord the God of Israel in Jerusalem; for many had not kept it as it is prescribed by the law.

6 And the posts went with letters by commandment of the king, and his princes, to all Israel and Juda, proclaiming according to the king's orders: Ye children of Israel, turn again to the Lord the God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Israel; and he will return to the remnant of you that have escaped the hand of the king of the Assyrians. 7 Be not like your fathers and brethren, who departed from the Lord the God of their fathers, and he hath given them up to destruction, as you see. 8 Harden not your necks, as your fathers did. Yield yourselves to the Lord, and come to his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified forever. Serve the Lord the God of your fathers, and the wrath of his indignation shall be turned away from you. 9 For if you turn again to the Lord, your brethren and children shall find mercy before their masters, that have led them away captive, and they shall return into this land, for the Lord your God is merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if you return to him.

10 So the posts went speedily from city to city, through the land of Ephraim and of Manasses, even to Zabulon, whilst they laughed at them and mocked them. 11 Nevertheless some men of Aser, and of Manasses, and of Zabulon, yielding to the counsel, came to Jerusalem. 12 But the hand of God was in Juda, to give them one heart to do the word of the Lord, according to the commandment of the king and of the princes.

The People Assemble for the Pasch. 13 And much people were assembled to Jerusalem to celebrate the solemnity of the unleavened bread in the second month. 14 And they arose and destroyed the altars that were in Jerusalem, and took away all things in which incense was burnt to idols, and cast them into the torrent Cedron. 15 And they immolated the phase on the fourteenth day of the second month. And the priests and the Levites being at length sanctified offered holocausts in the house of the Lord. 16 And they stood in their order according to the disposition and law of Moses, the man of God; but the priests received the blood which was to be poured out from the hands of the Levites, 17 because a great number was not sanctified; and therefore the Levites immolated the phase for them that came not in time to be sanctified to the Lord. 18 For a great part of the people from Ephraim, and Manasses, and Issachar, and Zabulon, that had not been sanctified, ate the phase otherwise than it is written. And Ezechias prayed for them, saying: The Lord who is good will show mercy 19 to all them who with their whole heart seek the Lord the God of their fathers; and will not impute it to them that they are not sanctified. 20 And the Lord heard him, and was merciful to the people.

21 And the children of Israel, that were found at Jerusalem, kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with great joy, praising the Lord every day: the Levites also, and the priests, with instruments that agreed to their office. 22 And Ezechias spoke to the heart of all the Levites that had good understanding concerning the Lord. And they ate during the seven days of the solemnity, immolating victims of peace offerings, and praising the Lord the God of their fathers.

23 And it pleased the whole multitude to keep other seven days, which they did with great joy. 24 For Ezechias the king of Juda had given to the multitude a thousand bullocks and seven thousand sheep. And the princes had given the people a thousand bullocks and ten thousand sheep: and a great number of priests was sanctified. 25 And all the multitude of Juda with the priests and Levites, and all the assembly that came out of Israel, and the proselytes of the land of Israel and that dwelt in Juda, were full of joy. 26 And there was a great solemnity in Jerusalem, such as had not been in that city since the time of Solomon the son of David king of Israel. 27 And the priests and the Levites rose up and blessed the people: and their voice was heard, and their prayer came to the holy dwelling place of heaven.

Idolatry Is Abolished. 1 And when these things had been duly celebrated, all Israel that were found in the cities of Juda went out, and they broke the idols, and cut down the groves, demolished the high places, and destroyed the altars, not only out of all Juda and Benjamin, but out of Ephraim also and Manasses, till they had utterly destroyed them. Then all the children of Israel returned to their possessions and cities.

2 And Ezechias appointed companies of the priests and the Levites by their courses, every man in his own office, to wit, both of the priests and of the Levites, for holocausts, and for peace offerings, to minister, and to praise, and to sing in the gates of the camp of the Lord. 3 And the king's part was, that of his proper substance the holocaust should be offered always morning and evening, and on the sabbaths, and the new moons and the other solemnities, as it is written in the law of Moses.

4 He commanded also the people that dwelt in Jerusalem to give to the priests and the Levites their portion, that they might attend to the law of the Lord: 5 which when it was noised abroad in the ears of the people, the children of Israel offered in abundance the firstfruits of corn, wine, and oil, and honey; and brought the tithes of all things which the ground bringeth forth. 6 Moreover the children of Israel and Juda, that dwelt in the cities of Juda, brought in the tithes of oxen, and sheep, and the tithes of holy things, which they had vowed to the Lord their God; and carrying them all, made many heaps. 7 In the third month they began to lay the foundations of the heaps, and in the seventh month, they finished them. 8 And when Ezechias and his princes came in, they saw the heaps, and they blessed the Lord and the people of Israel. 9 And Ezechias asked the priests and the Levites, why the heaps lay so. 10 Azarias the chief priest of the race of Sadoc answered him, saying: Since the firstfruits began to be offered in the house of the Lord, we have eaten, and have been filled, and abundance is left, because the Lord hath blessed his people; and of that which is left is this great store which thou seest.

The Storehouses and Overseers. 11 Then Ezechias commanded to prepare storehouses in the house of the Lord. And when they had done so, 12 they brought in faithfully both the firstfruits, and the tithes, and all they had vowed. And the overseer of them was Chonenias the Levite, and Semei his brother was the second, 13 and after him Jehiel, and Azarias, and Nahath, and Asael, and Jerimoth, and Jozabad, and Eliel, and Jesmachias, and Mahath, and Banaias, overseers under the hand of Chonenias, and Semei his brother, by the commandment of Ezechias the king, and Azarias the high priest of the house of God, to whom all things appertained. 14 But Core the son of Jemna the Levite, the porter of the east gate, was overseer of the things which were freely offered to the Lord, and of the firstfruits and the things dedicated for the Holy of Holies. 15 And under his charge were Eden, and Benjamin, Jesue, and Semeias, and Amarias, and Sechenias, in the cities of the priests, to distribute faithfully portions to their brethren, both little and great; 16 besides the males from three years old and upward, to all that went into the temple of the Lord; and whatsoever there was need of in the ministry, and their offices according to their courses, day by day, 17 to the priests by their families, and to the Levites from the twentieth year and upward, by their classes and companies. 18 And to all the multitude, both to their wives, and to their children of both sexes, victuals were given faithfully out of the things that had been sanctified. 19 Also of the sons of Aaron who were in the fields and in the suburbs of each city, there were men appointed to distribute portions to all the males among the priests and the Levites.

20 So Ezechias did all things which we have said in all Juda, and wrought that which was good, and right, and true, before the Lord his God, 21 in all the service of the ministry of the house of the Lord according to the law and the ceremonies, desiring to seek his God with all his heart. And he did it and prospered.

Sennacherib Invades Juda. 1 After p these things, and this truth, Sennacherib king of the Assyrians came and entered into Juda, and besieged the fenced cities, desiring to take them. 2 And when Ezechias saw that Sennacherib was come, and that the whole force of the war was turning against Jerusalem, 3 he took counsel with the princes, and the most valiant men, to stop up the heads of the springs, that were without the city; and as they were all of this mind, 4 he gathered together a very great multitude, and they stopped up all the springs, and the brook that ran through the midst of the land, saying: Lest the kings of the Assyrians should come, and find abundance of water. 5 He built up also with great diligence all the wall that had been broken down, and built towers upon it, and another wall without; and he repaired Mello in the city of David, and made all sorts of arms and shields. 6 And he appointed captains of the soldiers of the army; and he called them all together in the street of the gate of the city, and spoke to their heart, saying: 7 Behave like men, and take courage: be not afraid nor dismayed for the king of the Assyrians, nor for all the multitude that is with him, for there are many more with us than with him. 8 For with him is an arm of flesh; with us the Lord our God, who is our helper, and fighteth for us. And the people were encouraged with these words of Ezechias king of Juda.

Sennacherib Sends a Message. 9 After this, Sennacherib king of the Assyrians sent his servants to Jerusalem (for he with all his army was besieging Lachis), to Ezechias king of Juda, and to all the people that were in the city, saying: 10 Thus saith Sennacherib king of the Assyrians: In whom do you trust, that you sit still besieged in Jerusalem? 11 Doth not Ezechias deceive you, to give you up to die by hunger and thirst, affirming that the Lord your God shall deliver you from

the hand of the king of the Assyrians? 12 Is it not this same Ezechias that hath destroyed his high places, and his altars, and commanded Juda and Jerusalem, saying: You shall worship before one altar, and upon it you shall burn incense? 13 Know you not what I and my fathers have done to all the people of the lands? Have the gods of any nations and lands been able to deliver their country out of my hand? 14 Who is there among all the gods of the nations, which my fathers have destroyed, that could deliver his people out of my hand, that your God should be able to deliver you out of this hand? 15 Therefore let not Ezechias deceive you, nor delude you with a vain persuasion, and do not believe him. For if no god of all the nations and kingdoms could deliver his people out of my hand, and out of the hand of my fathers, consequently neither shall your God be able to deliver you out of my hand.

16 And many other things did his servants speak against the Lord God, and against Ezechias his servant. 17 He wrote also letters full of blasphemy against the Lord the God of Israel, and he spoke against him: As the gods of other nations could not deliver their people out of my hand, so neither can the God of Ezechias deliver his people out of this hand. 18 Moreover he cried out with a loud voice, in the Jews' tongue, to the people that sat on the walls of Jerusalem, that he might frighten them, and take the city. 19 And he spoke against the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods of the people of the earth, the works of the hands of men.

20 And Ezechias the king, and Isaias the prophet the son of Amos, prayed against this blasphemy, and cried out to heaven. 21 q And the Lord sent an angel, who cut off all the stout men and the warriors, and the captains of the army of the king of the Assyrians; and he returned with disgrace into his own country. And when he was come into the house of his god, his sons that came out of his bowels slew him with the sword. 22 And the Lord saved Ezechias and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of the hand of Sennacherib king of the Assyrians, and out of the hand of all, and gave them treasures on every side. 23 Many also brought victims and sacrifices to the Lord to Jerusalem, and presents to Ezechias king of Juda. And he was magnified thenceforth in the sight of all nations.

Ezechias Recovers from Sickness. 24 r In those days Ezechias was sick even to death, and he prayed to the Lord: and he heard him, and gave him a sign. 25 But he did not render again according to the benefits which he had received, for his heart was lifted up; and wrath was enkindled against him, and against Juda and Jerusalem. 26 And he humbled himself afterwards, because his heart had been lifted up, both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and therefore the wrath of the Lord came not upon them in the days of Ezechias.

27 And Ezechias was rich and very glorious, and he gathered himself great treasures of silver and of gold, and of precious stones, of spices, and of arms of all kinds, and of vessels of great price; 28 storehouses also of corn, of wine, and of oil, and stalls for all beasts, and folds for cattle. 29 And he built himself cities, for he had flocks of sheep, and herds without number, for the Lord had given him very much substance. 30 This same Ezechias was he that stopped the upper source of the waters of Gihon, and turned them away underneath toward the west of the city of David: in all his works he did prosperously what he would. 31 But yet in the embassy of the princes of Babylon, that were sent to him to inquire of the wonder that had happened upon the earth, God left him that he might be tempted, and all things might be made known that were in his heart.

32 Now the rest of the acts of Ezechias, and of his mercies, are written in the vision of Isaias, the son of Amos the prophet and in the book of the kings of Juda and Israel. 33 And Ezechias slept with his fathers, s and they buried him above the sepulchres of the sons of David; and all Juda and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem celebrated his funeral. And Manasses his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER 33.

Apostasy of Manasses. 1 Manasses t was twelve years old when he began to reign,

and he reigned fifty-five years in Jerusalem. 2 And he did evil before the Lord, according to all the abominations of the nations, which the Lord cast out before the children of Israel; 3 and he turned, and built again the high places which Ezechias his father had destroyed; and he built altars to Baalim, and made groves, and he adored all the host of heaven,* and worshiped them. 42He built also altars in the house of the Lord, whereof the Lord had said: u In Jerusalem shall my name be forever. 5 And he built them for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the Lord. 6 And he made his sons to pass through the fire in the valley of Benennom. He observed dreams, followed divinations, gave himself up to magic arts, had with him magicians, and enchanters, and he wrought many evils before the Lord, to provoke him to anger. 7 v He set also a graven and a molten statue in the house of God, of which God had said to David, and to Solomon his son: In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name forever. 8 And I will not make the foot of Israel to be removed out of the land which I have delivered to their fathers; yet so if they will take heed to do what I have commanded them, and all the law, and the ceremonies, and judgments by the hand of Moses. 9 So Manasses seduced Juda and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to do evil beyond all the nations, which the Lord had destroyed before the face of the children of Israel.

His Punishment and Repentance. 10 And the Lord spoke to him and to his people, and they would not hearken. 11 Therefore he brought upon them the captains of the army of the king of the Assyrians; and they took Manasses, and carried him bound with chains and fetters to Babylon. 12 And after that he was in distress he prayed to the Lord his God; and did penance exceedingly before the God of his fathers. 13 And he entreated him, and besought him earnestly; and he heard his prayer, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom, and Manasses knew that the Lord was God.

18But the rest of the acts of Manasses, and his prayer to his God, and the words of the seers that spoke to him in the name of the Lord the God of Israel, are contained in the words of the kings of Israel. 19 His prayer also, and his being heard, and all his sins, and contempt, and places wherein he built high places, and set up groves, and statues before he did penance, are written in the words of Hozai. 20 And Manasses slept w with his fathers, and they buried him in his house. And his son Amon reigned in his stead.

21 Amon was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem. 22 And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, as Manasses his father had done; and he sacrificed to all the idols which Manasses his father had made, and served them. 23 And he did not humble himself before the Lord, as Manasses his father had humbled himself, but committed far greater sins. 24 And his servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house. 25 But the rest of the multitude of the people slew them that had killed Amon, and made Josias his son king in his stead.

CHAPTER 34.

Josias Destroys Idolatry. 1 Josias x was eight years old when he began to reign, y and he reigned one and thirty years in Jerusalem. 2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the ways of David his father. He declined not, neither to the right hand, nor to the left.

33, 3: The host of heaven: the sun, moon, and stars.

3 And in the eighth year of his reign, when he was yet a boy, he began to seek the God of his father David. And in the twelfth year after he began to reign, he cleansed Juda and Jerusalem from the high places, and the groves, and the idols, and the graven things. 4 And they broke down before him the altars of Baalim, and demolished the idols that had been set upon them. And he cut down the groves and the graven things, and broke them in pieces, and strewed the fragments upon the graves of them that had sacrificed to them. 5 And he burnt the bones of the priests on the altars of the idols, and he cleansed Juda and Jerusalem. 6 And in the cities of Manasses, and of Ephraim, and of Simeon, even to Nephtali, he demolished all. 7 And when he had destroyed the altars, and the groves, and had broken the idols in pieces, and had demolished all profane temples throughout all the land of Israel, he returned to Jerusalem.

8 Now in the eighteenth year [z] of his reign, when he had cleansed the land and the temple of the Lord, he sent Saphan the son of Eselias, and Maasias the governor of the city, and Joha the son of Joachaz the recorder, to repair the house of the Lord his God. 9 And they came to Helcias the high priest, and received of him the money which had been brought into the house of the Lord, and which the Levites and porters had gathered together from Manasses, and Ephraim, and all the remnant of Israel, and from all Juda, and Benjamin, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, 10 which they delivered into the hands of them that were over the workmen in the house of the Lord, to repair the temple, and mend all that was weak. 11 But they gave it to the artificers, and to the masons, to buy stones out of the quarries, and timber for the couplings of the building, and to rafter the houses, which the kings of Juda had destroyed. 12 And they did all faithfully. Now the overseers of the workmen were Jahath and Abdias of the sons of Merari, Zacharias and Mosollam of the sons of Caath, who hastened the work; all Levites skillful to play on instruments. 13 But over them that carried burdens for divers uses, were scribes, and masters of the number of the Levites, and porters.

The Book of the Law. 14 Now when they carried out the money that had been brought into the temple of the Lord, Helcias the priest found the book of the law of the Lord, by the hand of Moses. 15 And he said to Saphan the scribe: I have found the book of the law in the house of the Lord; and he delivered it to him. 16 But he carried the book to the king, and told him, saying: Lo, all that thou hast committed to thy servants, is accomplished. 17 They have gathered together the silver that was found in the house of the Lord; and it is given to the overseers of the artificers, and of the workmen, for divers works. 18 Moreover Helcias the priest gave me this book. And he read it before the king. 19 And when he had heard the words of the law, he rent his garments. 20 And he commanded Helcias, and Ahicam the son of Saphan, and Abdon the son of Micha, and Saphan the scribe, and Asaa the king's servant, saying: 21 Go, and pray to the Lord for me, and for the remnant of Israel and Juda, concerning all the words of this book which is found, for the great wrath of the Lord hath fallen upon us, because our fathers have not kept the words of the Lord, to do all things that are written in this book.

22 And Helcias and they that were sent with him by the king, went to Olda the prophetess, the wife of Sellum the son of Thecuath, the son of Hasra keeper of the wardrobe, who dwelt in Jerusalem in the Second part: and they spoke to her the words above-mentioned. 23 And she answered them: Thus saith the Lord the God of Israel: Tell the man that sent you to me: 24 Thus saith the Lord: Behold I will bring evils upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, and all the curses that are written in this book which they read before the king of Juda. 25 Because they have forsaken me, and have sacrificed to strange gods, to provoke me to wrath with all the works of their hands, therefore my wrath shall fall upon this place, and shall not be quenched. 26 But as to the king of Juda that sent you to beseech the Lord, thus shall you say to him: Thus saith the Lord the God of Israel: Because thou hast heard the words of this book, 27 and thy heart

was softened, and thou hast humbled thyself in the sight of God for the things that are spoken against this place and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and reverencing my face, hast rent thy garments, and wept before me, I also have heard thee, saith the Lord. 28 For now I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be brought to thy tomb in peace; and thy eyes shall not see all the evil that I will bring upon this place and the inhabitants thereof. [a] They therefore reported to the king all that she had said.

A Solemn Covenant. 29 And he called together all the ancients of Juda and Jerusalem, 30 and went up to the house of the Lord, and all the men of Juda, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the priests and the Levites, and all the people from the least to the greatest. And the king read in their hearing, in the house of the Lord, all the words of the book. 31 And standing up in his tribunal, he made a covenant before the Lord to walk after him, and keep his commandments, and testimonies, and justifications with all his heart, and with all his soul, and to do the things that were written in that book which he had read. 32 And he adjured all that were found in Jerusalem and Benjamin to do the same. And the inhabitants of Jerusalem did according to the covenant of the Lord the God of their fathers. 33 And Josias took away all the abominations out of all the countries of the children of Israel; and made all that were left in Israel to serve the Lord their God. As long as he lived, they departed not from the Lord the God of their fathers.

Celebration of the Pasch. 1 And [b] Josias kept a phase to the Lord in Jerusalem, and it was sacrificed on the fourteenth day of the first month. 2 And he set the priests in their offices, and exhorted them to minister in the house of the Lord. 3 And he spoke to the Levites, by whose instruction all Israel was sanctified to the Lord, saying: Put the ark in the sanctuary of the temple, which Solomon the son of David king of Israel built, for you shall carry it no more; but minister now to the Lord your God, and to his people Israel. 4 And prepare yourselves by your houses and families according to your courses, as David king of Israel commanded, and Solomon his son hath written. 5 And serve ye in the sanctuary by the families and companies of Levi. 6 And being sanctified kill the phase; and prepare your brethren, that they may do according to the words which the Lord spoke by the hand of Moses.

7 And Josias gave to all the people that were found there in the solemnity of the phase, of lambs, and of kids of the flocks, and of other small cattle thirty thousand, and of oxen three thousand: all these were of the king's substance. 8 And his princes willingly offered what they had vowed, both to the people and to the priests and the Levites. Moreover Helcias, and Zacharias, and Jahiel rulers of the house of the Lord, gave to the priests to keep the phase two thousand six hundred small cattle and three hundred oxen. 9 And Chonenias, and Semeias and Nathanael, his brethren, and Hasabias, and Jehiel, and Jozabad princes of the Levites, gave to the rest of the Levites to celebrate the phase five thousand small cattle and five hundred oxen.

The Phase Is Immolated. 10 And the ministry was prepared, and the priests stood in their office: the Levites also in their companies, according to the king's commandment. 11 And the phase was immolated: and the priests sprinkled the blood with their hand, and the Levites flayed the holocausts. 12 And they separated them to give them by the houses and families of everyone, and to be offered to the Lord, as it is written in the book of Moses; and with the oxen they did in like manner. 13 And they roasted the phase with fire, according to that which is written in the law; but the victims of peace offerings they boiled in caldrons, and kettles, and pots, and they distributed them speedily among all the people. 14 And afterwards they made ready for themselves and for the priests, for the priests were busied in offering of holocausts and the fat until night. Wherefore the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the priests the sons of Aaron last. 15 And the singers the sons of Asaph stood in their order, according to the commandment of David, and Asaph, and Heman,

and Idithun the prophets of the king. And the porters kept guard at every gate, so as not to depart one moment from their service. And therefore their brethren the Levites prepared meats for them.

16 So all the service of the Lord was duly accomplished that day, both in keeping the phase and offering holocausts upon the altar of the Lord, according to the commandment of king Josias. 17 And the children of Israel that were found there, kept the phase at that time, and the feast of unleavened bread seven days. 18 There was no phase like to this in Israel, from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did any of all the kings of Israel keep such a phase as Josias kept, with the priests, and the Levites, and all Juda and Israel that were found, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. 19 In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josias was this phase celebrated.

Death of Josias. 20 [c] After that Josias had repaired the temple, Nechao king of Egypt came up to fight in Charcamis by the Euphrates, and Josias went out to meet him. 21 But he sent messengers to him, saying: What have I to do with thee, O king of Juda? I come not against thee this day, but I fight against another house, to which God hath commanded me to go in haste. Forbear to do against God, who is with me, lest he kill thee. 22 Josias would not return, but prepared to fight against him, and hearkened not to the words of Nechao from the mouth of God, [d] but went to fight in the field of Mageddo. 23 And there he was wounded by the archers, and he said to his servants: Carry me out of the battle, for I am grievously wounded. 24 And they removed him from the chariot into another, that followed him after the manner of kings, and they carried him away to Jerusalem, and he died, and was buried in the monument of his fathers, and all Juda and Jerusalem mourned for him, 25 particularly Jeremias: whose lamentations for Josias all the singing men and singing women repeat unto this day, and it became like a law in Israel. Behold it is found written in the Lamentations.

26 Now the rest of the acts of Josias and of his mercies, according to what was commanded by the law of the Lord, 27 and his works, first and last, are written in the book of the kings of Juda and Israel.

CHAPTER 36.

Last Kings of Juda. 1 Then [e] the people of the land took Joachaz the son of Josias, and made him king instead of his father in Jerusalem. 2 Joachaz was three and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. 3 And the king of Egypt came to Jerusalem, and deposed him, and condemned the land in a hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold. 4 And he made [f] Eliakim his brother king in his stead over Juda and Jerusalem; and he turned his name to Joakim; but he took Joachaz with him, and carried him away into Egypt.

5 Joakim was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem; and he did evil before the Lord his God. 6 Against him came up Nabuchodonosor king of the Chaldeans, and led him bound in chains into Babylon. 7 And he carried also thither the vessels of the Lord, and put them in his temple.

8 But the rest of the acts of Joakim, and his abominations which he wrought, and the things that were found in him, are contained in the book of the kings of Juda and Israel. And Joachin his son reigned in his stead.

9 Joachin was eight years old* when he began to reign, and he reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem, and he did evil in the sight of the Lord. 10 And at the return of the year, king Nabuchodonosor sent and brought him to Babylon, carrying away at the same time the most precious vessels of the house of the Lord. [g] And he made Sedecias his uncle king over Juda and Jerusalem.

Sedecias was one and twenty years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. 12 And he did evil in the eyes of the Lord his God, and did not reverence the face of Jeremias the prophet speaking to him from the mouth of the Lord.

36, 9: Eight years old: he was associated by his father to the kingdom, when he was but eight years old; but after his father's death, when he reigned alone, he was eighteen years old. 4 Kgs 24, 8.

13 He also revolted from king Nabuchodonosor, [b] who had made him swear by God. And he hardened his neck and his heart from returning to the Lord the God of Israel. 14 Moreover all the chiefs of the priests and the people wickedly transgressed according to all the abominations of the Gentiles; and they defiled the house of the Lord, which he had sanctified to himself in Jerusalem.

15 And the Lord the God of their fathers sent to them by the hand of his messengers, rising early, and daily admonishing them, because he spared his people and his dwelling place. 16 But they mocked the messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused the prophets, until the wrath of the Lord arose against his people, and there was no remedy. 17 For he brought upon them the king of the Chaldeans, and he slew their young men with the sword in the house of his sanctuary. He had no compassion on young man, or maiden, old man or even him that stooped for age, but he delivered them all into his hands. 18 And all the vessels of the house of the Lord great and small, and the treasures of the temple and of the king and of the princes, he carried away to Babylon. 19 And the enemies set fire to the house of God, and broke down the wall of Jerusalem, burnt all the towers, and whatsoever was precious they destroyed. 20 Whosoever escaped the sword was led into Babylon, and there served the king and his sons till the reign of the king of Persia. 21 That the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremias might be fulfilled; and the land might keep her sabbaths, for all the days of the desolation she kept a sabbath, till the seventy years were expired.

Decree of Cyrus. 22 [i] But in the first year of Cyrus king of the Persians, to fulfill the word of the Lord, which he had spoken by the mouth of Jeremias, the Lord stirred up the heart of Cyrus king of the Persians, who commanded it to be proclaimed through all his kingdom, and by writing also, saying: 23 Thus saith Cyrus king of the Persians: All the kingdoms of the earth hath the Lord the God of heaven given to me, and he hath charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judea. Who is there among you of all his people? The Lord his God be with him, and let him go up.

CHAPTER 1.

The Decree of Cyrus. 1 In the first year [a] of Cyrus king of the Persians, that the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremias might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of the Persians: and he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and in writing also, saying: 2 Thus saith Cyrus king of the Persians: The Lord the God of heaven hath given to me all the kingdoms of the earth, and he hath charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judea. 3 Who is there among you of all his people? His God be with him. Let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judea, and build the house of the Lord the God of Israel: he is the God that is in Jerusalem. 4 And let all the rest in all places wheresoever they dwell, help him every man from his place, with silver and gold, and goods, and cattle, besides that which they offer freely to the temple of God, which is in Jerusalem.

5 Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Juda and Benjamin, and the priests, and Levites, and everyone whose spirit God had raised up, to go up to build the temple of the Lord, which was in Jerusalem. 6 And all they that were round about, helped their hands with vessels of silver, and gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with furniture, besides what they had offered on their own accord. 7 And king Cyrus brought forth the vessels of the temple of the Lord, which Nabuchodonosor had taken from Jerusalem, and had put them in the temple of his god. 8 Now Cyrus king of Persia brought them forth by the hand of Mithridates the son of Gazabar, and numbered them to Sassabasar the prince of Juda.

9 And this is the number of them: thirty bowls of gold, a thousand bowls of silver, nine and twenty knives, thirty cups of gold, 10 silver cups of a second sort, four hundred and ten: other vessels a thousand. 11 All the vessels of gold and silver, five thousand four hundred: all these Sassabasar brought with them that came up from the captivity of Babylon to Jerusalem.

CHAPTER 2.

The Number of Refugees. 1 Now [b] these are the children of the province, that went out of the captivity, which Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon had carried away to Babylon, and who returned to Jerusalem and Juda, every man to his city: 2 who came with Zorobabel, Josue, Nehemia, Saraia, Rahelaia, Mardochai, Belsan, Mesphar, Beguai, Rehum, Baana.

The number of the men of the people of Israel: 3 The children of Pharos, two thousand one hundred seventy-two; 4 the children of Sephatia, three hundred seventy-five; 5 the children of Area, seven hundred seventy-five; 6 the children of Phahath Moab, of the children of Josue: Joab, two thousand eight hundred twelve; 7 the children of Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty-four; 8 the children of Zethua, nine hundred forty-five; 9 the children of Zachai, seven hundred sixty; 10 the children of Bani, six hundred forty-two; 11 the children of Bebai, six hundred twenty-three; 12 the children of Azgad, a thousand two hundred twenty-two; 13 the children of Adonicam, six hundred sixty-six; 14 the children of Beguai, two thousand fifty-six; 15 the children of Adin, four hundred fifty-four; 16 the children of Ather, who were of Ezechias, ninety-eight; 17 the children of Besai, three hundred and twenty-three; 18 the children of Jora, a hundred and twelve; 19 the children of Hasum, two hundred twenty-three; 20 the children of Gebbar, ninety-five; 21 the children of Bethlehem, a hundred twenty-three; 22 the men of Netupha, fifty-six; 23 the men of Anathoth, a hundred twenty-eight; 24 the children of Azmaveth, forty-two; 25 the children of Cariathiarim, Cephira, and Beroth, seven hundred forty-three; 26 the children of Rama and Gabaa, six hundred twenty-one; 27 the men of Machmas, a hundred twenty-two; 28 the men of Bethel and Hai, two hundred twenty-three; 29 the children of Nebo, fifty-two; 30 the children of Megbis, a hundred fifty-six; 31 the children of the other Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty-four; 32 the children of Harim, three hundred and twenty; 33 the children of Lod, Hadid and Ono, seven hundred twenty-five; 34 the children of Jericho, three hundred forty-five; 35 the children of Senaa, three thousand six hundred thirty.

36 The priests: The children of Jadaia of the house of Josue, nine hundred seventy-three; 37 the children of Emmer, a thousand fifty-two; 38 the children of Pheshur, a thousand two hundred forty-seven; 39 the children of Harim, a thousand and seventeen.

40 The Levites: The children of Josue and of Cedmihel, the children of Odovia, seventy-four.

41 The singing men: The children of Asaph, a hundred twenty-eight.

Those Who Knew Not Their Origin. 59 And these are they that came up from Thelmela, Thelharsa, Cherub, and Adon, and Emer. And they could not show the house of their fathers and their seed, whether they were of Israel: 60 The children of Dalaia, the children of Tobia, the children of Necoda, six hundred fifty-two. 61 And of the children of the priests: the children of Hobia, the children of Accos, the children of Berzellai, who took a wife of the daughters of Berzellai, the Galaadite, and was called by their name: 62 these sought the writing of their genealogy, and found it not, and they were cast out of the priesthood. 63 c And Athersatha said to them, that they should not eat of the Holy of Holies, till there arose a priest learned and perfect.

64 All the multitudes as one man, were forty-two thousand* three hundred and sixty, 65 besides their menservants, and womenservants, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven: and among them singing men, and singing women two hundred: 66 their horses seven hundred thirty-six, their mules two hundred forty-five, 67 their camels four hundred thirty-five, their asses six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

68 And some of the chief of the fathers, when they came to the temple of the Lord, which is in Jerusalem, offered freely to the house of the Lord to build it in its place. 69 According to their ability, they gave towards the expenses of the work, sixty-one thousand solids of gold, five thousand pounds of silver, and a hundred garments for the priests. 70 So the priests and the Levites, and some of the people, and the singing men, and the porters, and the Nathinites dwelt in their cities, and all Israel in their cities.

An Altar for Sacrifices. 1 And now the seventh month was come, and the children of Israel were in their cities; and the people gathered themselves together as one man to Jerusalem. 2 And Josue* the son of Josedec rose up, and his brethren the priests, and Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and his brethren, and they built the altar of the God of Israel that they might offer holocausts upon it, as it is written in the law of Moses the man of God. 3 And they set the altar of God upon its bases, while the people of the lands round about put them in fear; and they offered upon it a holocaust to the Lord morning and evening. 4 And they kept the feast of tabernacles, as it is written, and offered the holocaust every day orderly according to the commandment, the duty of the day in its day. 5 And afterwards the continual holocaust, both on the new moons and on all the solemnities of the Lord that were consecrated, and on all in which a freewill offering was made to the Lord.

6 From the first day of the seventh month they began to offer holocausts to the Lord; but the temple of God was not yet founded. 7 And they gave money to hewers of stones and to masons; and meat and drink, and oil to the Sidonians, and Tyrians, to bring cedar trees from Libanus to the sea of Joppe, according to the orders which Cyrus king of the Persians had given them.

8 And in the second year of their coming to the temple of God in Jerusalem, the second month, Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and Josue the son of Josedec, c 2 Esd 7, 65.

2, 64: Forty-two thousand, etc.: those who are reckoned up above of the tribes of Juda, Benjamin, and Levi, fall short of this number. The rest, who must be taken in to make up the whole sum, were of the other tribes.

and the rest of their brethren the priests, and the Levites, and all that were come from the captivity to Jerusalem began, and they appointed Levites from twenty years old and upward, to hasten forward the work of the Lord. 9 Then Josue and his sons and brethren, Cedmihel, and his sons, and the children of Juda, as one man, stood to hasten them that did the work in the temple of God: the sons of Henadad, and their sons, and their brethren the Levites.

10 And when the masons laid the foundations of the temple of the Lord, the priests stood in their ornaments with trumpets, and the Levites the sons of Asaph with cymbals, to praise God by the hands of David king of Israel. 11 And they sang together hymns and praise to the Lord, because he is good, for his mercy endureth forever towards Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout, praising the Lord, because the foundations of the temple of the Lord were laid. 12 But many of the priests and the Levites, and the chiefs of the fathers and the ancients that had seen the former temple, when they had the foundation of this temple before their eyes, wept with a loud voice; and many shouting for joy, lifted up their voice, 13 so that one could not distinguish the voice of the shout of joy, from the noise of the weeping of the people: for one with another the people shouted with a loud shout, and the voice was heard afar off.

Samaritans Hinder the Building. 1 Now the enemies of Juda and Benjamin heard that the children of the captivity were building a temple to the Lord the God of Israel. 2 And they came to Zorobabel, and the chief of the fathers, and said to them: Let us build with you, for we seek your God as ye do. Behold we have sacrificed to him, since the days of Asor Haddan king of Assyria, who brought us hither. 3 But Zorobabel, and Josue, and the rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel said to them: You have nothing to do with us to build a house to our God, but we ourselves alone will build to the Lord our God, as Cyrus king of the Persians hath commanded us.

4 Then the people of the land hindered the hands of the people of Juda, and troubled them in building. 5 And they hired counsellors against them, to frustrate their design all the days of Cyrus king of Persia, even until the reign of Darius king of the Persians.

2. The Walls of Jerusalem Rebuilt

6 And in the reign of Assuerus,* in the beginning of his reign, they wrote an accusation against the inhabitants of Juda and Jerusalem.

7 And in the days of Artaxerxes, Beselam, Mithridates, and Thabeel, and the rest that were in the council wrote to Artaxerxes king of the Persians; and the letter of accusation was written in Syriac, and was read in the Syrian tongue.

8 Reum Beelteem and Samsai the scribe wrote a letter from Jerusalem to king Artaxerxes, in this manner: 9 Reum Beelteem, and Samsai the scribe and the rest of their counsellors, the Dinites, and the Apharsathacites, the Therphalites, the Apharsites, the Erchuites, the Babylonians, the Susanechites, the Dievites, and the Elamites, 10 and the rest of the nations, whom the great and glorious Asenaphar brought over, and made to dwell in the cities of Samaria and in the rest of the countries of this side of the river in peace.

11 (This is the copy of the letter, which they sent to him): To Artaxerxes the king, thy servants, the men that are on this side of the river, send greeting. 12 Be it known to the king, that the Jews, who came up from thee to us, are come to Jerusalem a rebellious and wicked city, which they are building, setting up the ramparts thereof and repairing the walls. 13 And now be it known to the king, that if this city be built up, and the walls thereof repaired, they will not pay tribute nor toll, nor yearly revenues, and this loss will fall upon the kings. 14 But we, remembering the salt that we have eaten in the palace, and because we count it a crime to see the king wronged, have therefore sent and certified the king, 15 that search may be made in the books of the histories of thy fathers, and thou shalt find written in the records, and shalt know that this city is a rebellious city, and hurtful to the kings and provinces, and that wars were raised therein of old time; for which cause also the city was destroyed. 16 We certify the king, that if this city be built, and the walls thereof repaired, thou shalt have no possession on this side of the river.

The King's Answer. 17 The king sent word to Reum Beelteem and Samsai the scribe, and to the rest that were in their council, inhabitants of Samaria, and to the rest beyond the river, sending greeting and peace: 18 The accusation, which you have sent to us, hath been plainly read before me. 19 And I commanded, and search hath been made, and it is found that this city of old time hath rebelled against kings, and seditions and wars have been raised therein. 20 For there have been powerful kings in Jerusalem, who have had dominion over all the country that is beyond the river; and have received tribute, and toll and revenues. 21 Now therefore hear the sentence: Hinder those men, that this city be not built, till further orders be given by me. 22 See that you be not negligent in executing this, lest by little and little the evil grow to the hurt of the kings.

23 Now the copy of the edict of king Artaxerxes was read before Reum Beelteem, and Samsai the scribe, and their counsellors, and they went up in haste to Jerusalem to the Jews; and hindered them with arm and power. 24 Then the work of the house of the Lord in Jerusalem was interrupted, and ceased till the second year of the reign of Darius king of the Persians.

Building of Temple Is Resumed. 1 Now Aggeus the prophet, and Zacharias the son of Addo, prophesied to the Jews that were in Judea and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israel. 2 Then rose up Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and Josue the son of Josedec, and began to build the temple of God in Jerusalem, and with them were the prophets of God helping them.

3 And at the same time came to them Thathanai, who was governor beyond the river, and Stharbuzanai, and their counsellors, and said thus to them: Who hath given you counsel to build this house, and to repair the walls thereof? 4 In answer to which we gave them the names of the men who were the promoters of that building. 5 But the eye of their God was upon the ancients of the Jews, and they could not hinder them. And it was agreed that the matter should be referred to Darius, and then they should give satisfaction concerning that accusation.

6 The copy of the letter that Thathanai governor of the country beyond the river, and Stharbuzanai, and his counsellors the Arphasachites, who dwelt beyond the river, sent to Darius the king. 7 The letter which they sent him, was written thus: To Darius the king, all peace. 8 Be it known to the king, that we went to the province of Judea, to the house of the great God, which they are building with unpolished stones, and timber is laid in the walls; and this work is carried on diligently, and advanceth in their hands. And we asked those ancients, and said to them thus: Who hath given you authority to build this house, and to repair these walls? 10 We asked also of them their names, that we might give thee notice. And we have written the names of the men that are the chief among them. 11 And they answered us in these words, saying: We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and we are building a temple that was built these many years ago, and which a great king of Israel built and set up. 12 But after that our fathers had provoked the God of heaven to wrath, he delivered them into the hands of Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon the Chaldean; and he destroyed this house, and carried away the people to Babylon. 13 But in the first year of Cyrus the king of Babylon, king Cyrus set forth a decree that this house of God should be built. 14 And the vessels also of gold and silver of the temple of God, which Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple, that was in Jerusalem, and had brought them to the temple of Babylon, king Cyrus brought out of the temple of Babylon, and they were delivered to one Sassabasar, whom also he appointed governor, 15 and said to him: Take these vessels, and go, and put them in the temple that is in Jerusalem, and let the house of God be built in its place. 16 Then came this same Sassabasar, and laid the foundations of the temple of God in Jerusalem, and from that time until now it is in building, and is not yet finished. 17 Now therefore if it seem good to the king, let him search in the king's library, which is in Babylon, whether it hath been decreed by Cyrus the king that the house of God in Jerusalem should be built, and let the king send his pleasure to us concerning this matter.

King Darius Confirms Cyrus' Decree. 1 Then king Darius gave orders, and they searched in the library of the books that were laid up in Babylon, 2 and there was found in Ecbatana, which is a castle in the province of Media, a book in which this record was written: 3 In the first year of Cyrus the king: Cyrus the king decreed that the house of God should be built, which is in Jerusalem, in the place where they may offer sacrifices, and that they lay the foundations that may support the height of threescore cubits, and the breadth of threescore cubits, 4 three rows of unpolished stones, and with rows of new timber; and the charges shall be given out of the king's house. 5 And also let the golden and silver vessels of the temple of God, which Nabuchodonosor took out of the temple of Jerusalem and brought to Babylon, be restored and carried back to the temple of Jerusalem to their place, which also were placed in the temple of God.

6 Now therefore Thathanai, governor of the country beyond the river, Stharbuzanai, and your counsellors the Apharsachites, who are beyond the river, depart far from them, 7 and let that temple of God be built by the governor of the Jews, and by their ancients, that they may build that house of God in its place. 8 I also have commanded what must be done by those ancients of the Jews, that the house of God may be built, to wit, that of the king's chest, that is, of the tribute that is paid out of the country beyond the river, the charges be diligently given to those men, lest the work be hindered. 9 And if it shall be necessary, let calves also, and lambs, and kids, for holocausts to the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, and oil, according to the custom of the priests that are in Jerusalem, be given them day by day, that there be no complaint in anything. 10 And let them offer oblations to the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the king, and of his children. 11 And I have made a decree: That if any whosoever shall alter this commandment, a beam be taken from his house, and set up, and he be nailed upon it, and his house be confiscated. 12 And may the God, that hath caused his name to dwell there, destroy all kingdoms, and the people that shall put out their hand to resist, and to destroy the house of God, that is in Jerusalem. I, Darius have made the decree, which I will have diligently complied with.

13 So then Thathanai, governor of the country beyond the river, and Stharbuzanai, and his counsellors diligently executed what Darius the king had commanded. 14 And the ancients of the Jews built, and prospered according to the prophecy of Aggeus the prophet, and of Zacharias the son of Addo. And they built and finished, by the commandment of the God of Israel, and by the commandment of Cyrus, and Darius, and Artaxerxes king of the Persians. 15 And they were finishing this house of God until the third day of the month of Adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of king Darius.

16 And the children of Israel, the priests and the Levites, and the rest of the children of the captivity kept the dedication of the house of God with joy. 17 And they offered at the dedication of the house of God a hundred calves, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs, and for a sin offering for all Israel twelve he-goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel. 18 And they set the priests in their divisions, and the Levites in their courses over the works of God in Jerusalem, [d] as it is written in the book of Moses.

19 And the children of Israel of the captivity kept the phase on the fourteenth day of the first month. 20 For all the priests and the Levites were purified as one man: all were clean to kill the phase for all the children of the captivity, and for their brethren the priests, and themselves. 21 And the children of Israel that were returned from captivity, and all that had separated themselves from the filthiness of the nations of the earth to them, to seek the Lord the God of Israel, did eat. 22 And they kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with joy, for the Lord had made them joyful, and had turned the heart of the king of Assyria to them, that he should help their hands in the work of the house of the Lord the God of Israel.

II: ESDRAS — HIS MISSION OF REFORM

CHAPTER 7.

Esdras In Jerusalem. 1 Now [e] after these things in the reign of Artaxerxes king of the Persians, Esdras the son of Saraias, the son of Azarias, the son of Helcias, 2 the son of Sellum, the son of Sadoc, the son of Achitob, 3 the son of Amarias, the son of Azarias, the son of Maraioth, 4 the son of Zarahias, the son of Ozi, the son of Bocci, 5 the son of Abisue, the son of Phinees, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron, the priest from the beginning: 6 this Esdras went up from Babylon, and he was a ready scribe in the law of Moses, which the Lord God had given to Israel. And the king granted him all his request, according to the hand of the Lord his God upon him. 7 And there went up some of the children of Israel, and of the children of the priests, and of the children of the Levites, and of the singing men, and of the porters, and of the Nathinites to Jerusalem in the seventh year [f] of Artaxerxes the king. 8 And they came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, in the seventh year of the king. 9 For upon the first day of the first month he began to go up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month he came to Jerusalem according to the good hand of his God upon him. 10 For Esdras had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord, and to do and to teach in Israel the commandment and judgment.

Decree of Artaxerxes. 11 And this is the copy of the letter of the edict which king Artaxerxes gave to Esdras the priest, the scribe instructed in the words and commandments of the Lord, and his ceremonies in Israel.

12 Artaxerxes king of kings to Esdras the priest, the most learned scribe of the law of the God of heaven, greeting.

13 It is decreed by me that all they of the people of Israel, and of the priests and of the Levites in my realm, that are minded to go into Jerusalem, should go with thee. 14 For thou art sent from before the king, and his seven counsellors, to visit Judea and Jerusalem according to the law of thy God, which is in thy hand. 15 And to carry the silver and gold which the king and his counsellors have freely offered to the God of Israel, whose tabernacle is in Jerusalem. 16 And all the silver and gold that thou shalt find in all the province of Babylon, and that the people is willing to offer, and that the priests shall offer of their own accord to the house of their God, which is in Jerusalem, 17 take freely, and buy diligently with this money calves, rams, lambs, with the sacrifices and libations of them, and offer them upon the altar of the temple of your God, that is in Jerusalem. 18 And if it seem good to thee, and to thy brethren to do anything with the rest of the silver and gold, do it according to the will of your God. 19 The vessels also, that are given thee for the sacrifice of the house of thy God, deliver thou in the sight of God in Jerusalem. 20 And whatsoever more there shall be need of for the house of thy God, how much soever thou shalt have occasion to spend, it shall be given out of the treasury, and the king's exchequer, and by me. 21 I Artaxerxes the king have ordered and decreed to all the keepers of the public chest, that are beyond the river, that whatsoever Esdras the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, you give it without delay, 22 unto a hundred talents of silver, and unto a hundred cores of wheat, and unto a hundred bates of wine, and unto a hundred bates of oil, and salt without measure. 23 All that belongeth to the rites of the God of heaven, let it be given diligently in the house of the God of heaven, lest his wrath should be enkindled against the realm of the king, and of his sons. 24 We give you also to understand concerning all the priests, and the Levites, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nathinites, and ministers of the house of this God, that you have no authority to impose toll or tribute, or custom upon them. 25 And thou Esdras according to the wisdom of thy God, which is in thy hand, appoint judges and magistrates, that may judge all the people that is beyond the river, that is, for them who know the law of thy God. Yea and the ignorant teach ye freely. 26

e 458 B.C.—f 458 B.C.

And whosoever will not do the law of thy God, and the law of the king diligently, judgment shall be executed upon him, either unto death, or unto banishment, or to the confiscation of goods, or at least to prison.

27 Blessed be the Lord the God of our fathers, who hath put this in the king's heart, to glorify the house of the Lord, which is in Jerusalem, 28 and hath inclined his mercy towards me before the king and his counsellors, and all the mighty princes of the king. And I being strengthened by the hand of the Lord my God, which was upon me, gathered together out of Israel chief men to go up with me.

Companions of Esdras. 1 Now [g] these are the chiefs of families, and the genealogy of them, who came up with me from Babylon in the reign of Artaxerxes the king: 2 Of the sons of Phinees, Gersom. Of the sons of Ithamar, Daniel. Of the sons of David, Hattus. 3 Of the sons of Sechenias, the son of Pharos, Zacharias, and with him were numbered a hundred and fifty men. 4 Of the sons of Phahath Moab, Eleonai the son of Zareha, and with him two hundred men. 5 Of the sons of Sechenias, the son of Ezechiel, and with him three hundred men. 6 Of the sons of Adan, Abed the son of Jonathan, and with him fifty men. 7 Of the sons of Alam, Isaias the son of Athalias, and with him seventy men. 8 Of the sons of Saphatia, Zebodia the son of Michael, and with him eighty men. 9 Of the sons of Joab, Obedia the son of Jahiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen men. 10 Of the sons of Selomith, the son of Josphia, and with him a hundred and sixty men. 11 Of the sons of Bebai, Zacharias the son of Bebai, and with him eight and twenty men. 12 Of the sons of Azgad, Joanan the son of Eccetan, and with him a hundred and ten men. 13 Of the sons of Adonicam, who were the last, and these are their names: Eliphelet, and Jehiel, and Samaias, and with them sixty men. 14 Of the sons of Begui, Uthai and Zachur, and with them seventy men.

15 And I gathered them together to the river, which runneth down to Ahava, and we stayed there three days. And I sought among the people and among the priests for the sons of Levi, and found none there. 16 So I sent Eliezer, and Ariel, and Semeias, and Elnathan, and Jarib, and another Elnathan, and Nathan, and Zacharias, and Mosollam, chief men, and Joiarib and Elnathan, wise men. 17 And I sent them to Eddo, who is chief in the place of Chasphia, and I put in their mouth the words that they should speak to Eddo, and his brethren the Nathinites in the place of Chasphia, that they should bring us ministers of the house of our God. 18 And by the good hand of our God upon us, they brought us a most learned man of the sons of Moholi the son of Levi the son of Israel, and Sarabias and his sons, and his brethren eighteen, 19 and Hasabias, and with him Isaias of the sons of Merari, and his brethren, and his sons, twenty. 20 And of the Nathinites, whom David and the princes gave for the service of the Levites, Nathinites two hundred and twenty: all these were called by their names.

Preparation for the Fast. 21 And I proclaimed there a fast* by the river Ahava, that we might afflict ourselves before the Lord our God, and might ask of him a right way for us and for our children, and for all our substance. 22 For I was ashamed to ask the king for aid and for horsemen, to defend us from the enemy in the way, because we had said to the king: The hand of our God is upon all them that seek him in goodness; and his power and strength and wrath upon all them that forsake him. 23 And we fasted, and besought our God for this: and it fell out prosperously unto us.

24 And I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sarabias, and Hasabias, and with them ten of their brethren, 25 and I weighed unto them the silver and gold, and the vessels consecrated for the house of our God, which the king and his counsellors, and his princes, and all Israel that were found, had offered. 26 And I weighed to their hands six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and a hundred vessels of silver, and a hundred talents of gold, 27 and twenty cups of gold,

8, 21: And I proclaimed a fast: it is not enough to part from Babylon, i.e., figuratively from sin; we must also do works of penance. Therefore, Esdras here proclaimed an extraordinary fast to those that were come from captivity. This shows that fasting was commanded and practised from the earliest times.

of a thousand solids, and two vessels of the best shining brass, beautiful as gold. 28 And I said to them: You are the holy ones of the Lord, and the vessels are holy, and the silver and gold, that is freely offered to the Lord the God of our fathers. 29 Watch ye and keep them, till you deliver them by weight before the chief of the priests, and of the Levites, and the heads of the families of Israel in Jerusalem, into the treasure of the house of the Lord.

30 And the priests and the Levites received the weight of the silver and gold, and the vessels, to carry them to Jerusalem to the house of our God. 31 Then we set forward from the river Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month to go to Jerusalem: and the hand of our God was upon us, and delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way. 32 And we came to Jerusalem, and we stayed there three days. 33 And on the fourth day the silver and the gold and the vessels were weighed in the house of our God by the hand of Meremoth the son of Urias the priest, and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinees, and with them Jozabad the son of Josue, and Noadaia the son of Benoi, Levites, 34 according to the number and weight of everything. And all the weight was written at that time.

35 Moreover the children of them that had been carried away that were come out of the captivity, offered holocausts to the God of Israel: twelve calves for all the people of Israel, ninety-six rams, seventy-seven lambs, and twelve he-goats for sin: all for a holocaust to the Lord. 36 And they gave the king's edicts to the lords that were from the king's court, and the governors beyond the river, and they furthered the people and the house of God.

Transgression of the People. 1 And h after these things were accomplished, the princes came to me, saying: *The people of Israel, and the priests and Levites have not separated themselves from the people of the lands, and from their abominations, namely, of the Chanaanites, and the Hethites, and the Pherezites, and the Jebusites, and the Ammonites, and the Moabites, and the Egyptians, and the Amorrhites. 2 For they have taken of their daughters for themselves and for their sons, and they have mingled the holy seed with the people of the lands. And the hand of the princes and magistrates hath been first in this transgression. 3 And when I had heard this word, I rent my mantle and my coat, and plucked off the hairs of my head and my beard, and I sat down mourning. 4 And there were assembled to me all that feared the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those that were come from the captivity, and I sat sorrowful until the evening sacrifice.

Prayer of Esdras. 5 And at the evening sacrifice I rose up from my affliction, and having rent my mantle and my garment, I fell upon my knees, and spread out my hands to the Lord my God, 6 and said: My God I am confounded and ashamed to lift up my face to thee, for our iniquities are multiplied over our heads, and our sins are grown up even unto heaven, 7 from the days of our fathers. And we ourselves also have sinned grievously unto this day, and for our iniquities we and our kings, and our priests have been delivered into the hands of the kings of the lands, and to the sword, and to captivity, and to spoil, and to confusion of face, as it is at this day. 8 And now as little and for a moment has our prayer been made before the Lord our God, to leave us a remnant, and give us a pin* in his holy place, and that our God would enlighten our eyes, and would give us a little life in our bondage. 9 For we are bondmen, and in our bondage our God hath not forsaken us, but hath extended mercy upon us before the king of the Persians, to give us life, and to set up the house of our God, and to rebuild the desolations thereof, and to give us a fence in Juda and Jerusalem. 10 And now, O our God, what shall we say after this? For we have forsaken thy commandments, 11 which thou hast commanded by the hand of thy servants the prophets, saying: The land which you go to possess, is an unclean land, according to the uncleanness of the people, and of other

9, 1f: This shows how dangerous it is to intermarry with those outside the Church, because of the risk of perversion and falling away from the True Faith.

9, 8: A pin or nail, here signifies a small settlement or holding; which Esdras begs for, to preserve even a part of the people, who by their great iniquity, had incurred the anger of God.

lands, with their abominations, who have filled it from mouth to mouth with their filth. 12 i Now therefore give not your daughters to their sons, and take not their daughters for your sons, and seek not their peace, nor their prosperity forever: that you may be strengthened, and may eat the good things of the land, and may have your children your heirs forever. 13 And after all that is come upon us for our most wicked deeds and our great sin, seeing that thou our God hast saved us from our iniquity, and hast given us a deliverance as at this day, 14 that we should not turn away, nor break thy commandments, nor join in marriage with the people of these abominations. Art thou angry with us unto utter destruction, not to leave us a remnant to be saved? 15 O Lord God of Israel, thou art just, for we remain yet to be saved as at this day. Behold we are before thee in our sin, for there can be no standing before thee in this matter.

The Discharge of Strange Women. 1 Now i when Esdras was thus praying, and beseeching, and weeping, and lying before the temple of God, there was gathered to him of Israel an exceeding great assembly of men and women and children, and the people wept with much lamentation. 2 And Sechenias the son of Jehiel of the sons of Elam answered, and said to Esdras: We have sinned against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land. And now if there be repentance in Israel concerning this, 3 let us make a covenant with the Lord our God, to put away all the wives, and such as are born of them, according to the will of the Lord, and of them that fear the commandment of the Lord our God: let it be done according to the law. 4 Arise, it is thy part to give orders, and we will be with thee. Take courage, and do it.

5 So Esdras arose, and made the chiefs of the priests and of the Levites, and all Israel, to swear that they would do according to this word, and they swore. 6 And Esdras rose up from before the house of God, and went to the chamber of Johanan the son of Eliasib, and entered in thither. He ate no bread, and drank no water; for he mourned for the transgression of them that were come out of the captivity.

7 And proclamation was made in Juda and Jerusalem to all the children of the captivity, that they should assemble together into Jerusalem, 8 and that whosoever would not come within three days, according to the counsel of the princes and the ancients, all his substance should be taken away, and he should be cast out of the company of them that were returned from captivity. 9 Then all the men of Juda and Benjamin gathered themselves together to Jerusalem within three days, in the ninth month, the twentieth day of the month; and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, trembling because of the sin and the rain. 10 And Esdras the priest stood up, and said to them: You have transgressed, and taken strange wives, to add to the sins of Israel. 11 And now make confession to the Lord the God of your fathers, and do his pleasure, and separate yourselves from the people of the land, and from your strange wives.

12 And all the multitude answered and said with a loud voice: According to thy word unto us, so be it done. 13 But as the people are many, and it is time of rain, and we are not able to stand without, and it is not a work of one day or two (for we have exceedingly sinned in this matter), 14 let rulers be appointed in all the multitude; and in our cities, let all those that have taken strange wives come at the times appointed, and with them the ancients and the judges of every city, until the wrath of our God be turned away from us for this sin.

15 Then Jonathan the son of Azahel and Jaasia the son of Thecua were appointed over this, and Mesollam and Sebethai, Levites, helped them; 16 and the children of the captivity did so. And Esdras the priest, and the men heads of the families in the houses of their fathers, and all by their names, went and sat down in the first day of the tenth month to examine the matter. 17 And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives by the first day of the first month.

The Men Who Took Strange Wives. 18 And there were found among the sons of the priests that had taken strange wives:

i Dt 7, 3.—j 458 B.C.

Of the sons of Josue the son of Josedec, and his brethren, Maasia, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Godolia. 19 And they gave their hands to put away their wives, and to offer for their offense a ram of the flock. 20 And of the sons of Emmer, Hanani, and Zebedia. 21 And of the sons of Harim, Maasia, and Elia, and Semeia, and Jehiel, and Ozias. 22 And of the sons of Pheshur, Elioenai, Maasia, Ismael, Nathanael, Jozabed, and Elasa. 23 And of the sons of the Levites, Jozabed, and Semei, and Celaia, the same is Calita, Phataia, Juda, and Eliezer. 24 And of the singing men, Eliasib. And of the porters, Sellum, and Telem, and Uri. 25 And of Israel, of the sons of Pharos, Remeia, and Jezia, and Melchia, and Miamin, and Eliezer, and Melchia, and Banea. 26 And of the sons of Elam, Mathania, Zacharias, and Jehiel, and Abdi, and Jerimoth, and Elia. 27 And of the sons of Zethua, Elioenai, Eliasib, Mathania, Jerimuth, and Zabad, and Aziaza. 28 And of the sons of Babai, Johanan, Hanania, Zabbai, Athalai. 29 And of the sons of Bani, Mosollam, and Melluch, and Adaia, Jasub, and Saal, and Ramoth. 30 And of the sons of Phahath, Moab, Edna, and Chalal, Banaias, and Maasias, Mathanias, Beseleel, Bennui, and Manasse. 31 And of the sons of Herem, Eliezer, Josue, Melchias, Semeias, Simeon, 32 Benjamin, Maloch, Samarias. 33 And of the sons of Hasom, Mathanai, Mathatha, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jermai, Manasse, Semei. 34 Of the sons of Bani, Maaddi, Amram, and Uel, 35 Baneas, and Badaias, Cheliau, 36 Vania, Marimuth, and Eliasib, 37 Mathanias, Mathania, and Jasi, 38 and Bani, and Bennui, Semei, 39 and Salmias, and Nathan, and Adaias, 40 and Mechnedebai, Sisai, Sarai, 41 Ezrel, and Selemiau, Semeria, 42 Sellum, Amaria, Joseph. 43 Of the sons of Nebo, Jehiel, Mathathias, Zabad, Zabina, Jeddu, and Joel, and Banaia.

44 All these had taken strange wives, and there were among them women that had borne children.

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAS

WHICH IS CALLED

THE SECOND BOOK OF ESDRAS

This Book takes its name from the writer, who was the cupbearer to the King of Persia, and was sent by him with a commission to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem. It is also called the "Second Book of Esdras," because it is a continuation of the history, begun by Esdras, of the state of the people of God after their return from captivity.

I: NEHEMIAS — FIRST MISSION

1. Nehemias Returns to Palestine

CHAPTER 1.

Lamentation and Prayer of Nehemias. 1 The [a] words of Nehemias the son of Helchias. And it came to pass in the month of Casleu, in the twentieth year, as I was in the castle of Susa, 2 that Hanani one of my brethren came, he and some men of Juda; and I asked them concerning the Jews that remained and were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem. 3 And they said to me: They that have remained, and are left of the captivity there in the province, are in great affliction and reproach; and the wall of Jerusalem is broken down, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire.

4 And when I had heard these words, I sat down, and wept, and mourned for many days; and I fasted, and prayed before the face of the God of heaven. 5 And I said: [b] I beseech thee, O Lord God of heaven, strong, great, and terrible, who keepest covenant and mercy with those that love thee, and keep thy commandments. 6 Let thy ears be attentive, and thy eyes open to hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, night and day, for the children of Israel thy servants. And I confess the sins of the children of Israel, by which they have sinned against thee: I and my father's house have sinned. 7 We have been seduced by vanity, and have not kept thy commandments, and ceremonies and judgments, which thou hast commanded thy servant Moses. 8 Remember the word that thou commandedst to Moses thy servant, saying: If you shall transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations; 9 but if you return to me, and keep my commandments, and do them, though you should be led away to the uttermost parts of the world, I will gather you from thence, and bring you back to the place which I have chosen for my name to dwell there. 10 And these are thy servants and thy people, whom thou hast redeemed by thy great strength, and by thy mighty hand. 11 I beseech thee, O Lord, let thy ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants who desire to fear thy name; and direct thy servant this day, and give him mercy before this man. For I was the king's cupbearer.

CHAPTER 2.

Nehemias in Jerusalem. 1 And [c] it came to pass in the month of Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him, and I took up the wine, and gave it to the king. And I was as one languishing away before his face. 2 And the king said to me: Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou dost not appear to be sick? This is not without cause, but some evil, I know not what, is in thy heart. And I was seized with an exceeding great fear; 3 and I said to the king: O king, live forever. Why should not my countenance be sorrowful, seeing the city of the place of the sepulchres of my fathers is desolate, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire? 4 Then the king said to me: For what dost thou make request? And I prayed to the God of heaven, 5 and I said to the king: If it seem good to the king, and if thy servant hath found favor in thy sight, that thou wouldst send me into Judea to the city of the sepulchre of my father, and I will build it. 6 And the king said to me, and the queen that sat by him: For how long shall thy journey be, and when wilt thou return? And it pleased the king, and he sent me: and I fixed him a time. 7 And I said to the king: If it seem good to the king, let him give me letters to the governors of the country beyond the river, that they convey me over, till I come into Judea; 8 and a letter to Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, to give me timber that I may cover the gates of the tower of the house, and the walls of the city, and the house that I shall enter into. And the king gave me according to the good hand of my God with me.

9 And I came to the governors of the country beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. And the king had sent with me captains of soldiers, and horsemen. 10 And Sanaballat the Horonite, and Tobias the servant, the Ammonite, heard it, and it grieved them exceedingly, that a man was come, who sought the prosperity of the children of Israel.

2. Restoration of the Walls

11 And I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days. 12 And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me, and I told not any man what God had put in my heart to do in Jerusalem, and there was no beast with me, but the beast that I rode upon. 13 And I went out by night by the gate of the valley, and before the dragon fountain, and to the dung gate, and I viewed the wall of Jerusalem which was broken down, and the gates thereof which were consumed with fire. 14 And I passed to the gate of the fountain, and to the king's aqueduct, and there was no place for the beast on which I rode to pass. 15 And I went up in the night by the torrent, and viewed the wall, and going back I came to the gate of the valley, and returned.

Walls of Jerusalem Rebuilt. 16 But the magistrates knew not whither I went, or what I did; neither had I as yet told anything to the Jews, or to the priests, or to the nobles, or to the magistrates, or to the rest that did the work. 17 Then I said to them: You know the affliction wherein we are, because Jerusalem is desolate, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire; come, and let us build up the walls of Jerusalem, and let us be no longer a reproach. 18 And I showed them how the hand of my God was good with me, and the king's words, which he had spoken to me, and I said: Let us rise up, and build. And their hands were strengthened in good.

19 But Sanaballat the Horonite, and Tobias the servant, the Ammonite, and Gossem the Arabian heard of it, and they scoffed at us, and despised us, and said: What is this thing that you do? Are you going to rebel against the king? 20 And I answered them, and said to them: The God of heaven he helpeth us, and we are his servants: let us rise up and build; but you have no part, nor justice, nor remembrance in Jerusalem.

CHAPTER 3.

Names and Order of the Builders. 1 Then Eliasib the high priest arose, and his brethren the priests, and they built the flock gate. They sanctified it, and set up the doors thereof, and even unto the tower of a hundred cubits they sanctified it, unto the tower of Hananeel. 2 And next to him the men of Jericho built; and next to them built Zachur the son of Amri.

3 But the fish gate the sons of Asnaa built. They covered it, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and the bars. And next to them built Marimuth the son of Urias the son of Accus. 4 And next to him built Mosollam the son of Barachias, the son of Merezebel, and next to them built Sadoc the son of Baana. 5 And next to them the Thecuites built; but their great men did not put their necks to the work of their Lord.

6 And Joiada the son of Phasea, and Mosollom the son of Besodia built the old gate. They covered it and set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and the bars. 7 And next to them built Meltias the Gabaonite, and Jadon the Meronathite, the men of Gabaon and Maspha, for the governor that was in the country beyond the river. 8 And next to him built Eziel the son of Araia the goldsmith; and next to him built Ananias the son of the perfumer; and they left Jerusalem unto the wall of the broad street. 9 And next to him built Raphaia the son of Hur, lord of the street of Jerusalem. 10 And next to him Jedaia the son of Haromaph over against his own house; and next to him built Hattus the son of Hasebonia. 11 Melchias the son of Herem, and Hasub the son of Phahath Moab, built half the street, and the tower of the furnaces. 12 And next to him built Sellum the son of Alohes, lord of half the street of Jerusalem, he and his daughters.

13 And the gate of the valley Hanun built, and the inhabitants of Zanoe: they built it, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and the bars, and a thousand cubits in the wall unto the gate of the dunghill.

14 And the gate of the dunghill Melchias the son of Rechab built, lord of the street of Bethacharam: he built it, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and the bars.

15 And the gate of the fountain Sellum the son of Cholhoza built, lord of the street of Maspha: he built it, and covered it, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and the bars, and the walls of the pool of Siloe unto the king's guard, and unto the steps that go down from the city of David.

16 After him built Nehemias the son of Azboc, lord of half the street of Bethsur, as far as over against the sepulchre of David, and to the pool that was built with great labor, and to the house of the mighty. 17 After him built the Levites, Rehum the son of Benni. After him built Hasebias, lord of half the street of Ceila in his own street. 18 After him built their brethren Bavai the son of Enadad, lord of half Ceila. 19 And next to him Aser the son of Josue, lord of Maspha, built another measure, over against the going up of the strong corner.

20 After him in the mount Baruch the son of Zachai built another measure, from the corner to the door of the house of Eliasib the high priest. 21 After him Merimuth the son of Urias the son of Haccus built another measure, from the door of the house of Eliasib to the end of the house of Eliasib. 22 And after him built the priests, the men of the plains of the Jordan. 23 After him built Benjamin and Hasub, over against their own house; and after him built Azarias the son of Maasias the son of Ananias over against his house. 24 After him built Bennui the son of Hanadad another measure, from the house of Azarias unto the bending, and unto the corner. 25 Phalel, the son of Ozi, over against the bending and the tower which lieth out from the king's high house, that is, in the court of the prison; after him Phadaia the son of Pharos. 26 And the Nathinites dwelt in Ophel, as far as over against the water gate towards the east, and the tower that stood out. 27 After him the Thecuites built another measure over against, from the great tower that standeth out unto the wall of the temple. 28 And upward from the horse gate the priests built, every man over against his house. 29 After them built Sadoc the son of Emmer over against his house. And after him built Semaia the son of Sechenias, keeper of the east gate. 30 After him built Hanania the son of Selemia, and Hanun the sixth son of Seleph, another measure; after him built Mosollam the son of Barachias over against his treasury. After him Melchias the goldsmith's son built unto the house of the Nathinites and of the sellers of small wares, over against the judgment gate, and unto the chamber of the corner. 31 And within the chamber of the corner of the flock gate, the goldsmiths and the merchants built.

Opposition of Their Enemies. 1 And it came to pass, that when Sanaballat heard that we were building the wall he was angry; and being moved exceedingly he scoffed at the Jews, 2 and said before his brethren, and the multitude of the Samaritans: What are the silly Jews doing? Will the Gentiles let them alone? Will they sacrifice and make an end in a day? Are they able to raise stones out of the heaps of the rubbish, which are burnt? 3 Tobias also the Ammonite who was by him said: Let them build. If a fox go up, he will leap over their stone wall.

4 Hear thou our God, for we are despised. Turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them to be despised in a land of captivity. 5 Cover not their iniquity, and let not their sin be blotted out from before thy face, because they have mocked thy builders. 6 So we built the wall, and joined it all together unto the half thereof: and the heart of the people was excited to work.

7 And it came to pass, when Sanaballat, and Tobias, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Azotians heard that the walls of Jerusalem were made up, and the breaches began to be closed, that they were exceedingly angry. 8 And they all assembled themselves together to come and to fight against Jerusalem, and to prepare ambushes. 9 And we prayed to our God, and set watchmen upon the wall day and night against them. 10 And Juda said: The strength of the bearer of burdens is decayed, and the rubbish is very much, and we shall not be able to build the wall. 11 And our enemies said: Let them not know, nor understand, till we come in the midst of them, and kill them, and cause the work to cease.

12 And it came to pass, that when the Jews that dwelt by them came and told us ten times, out of all the places from whence they came to us, 13 I set the people in the place behind the wall round about in order, with their swords, and spears, and bows. 14 And I looked and rose up; and I said to the chief men and the magistrates, and to the rest of the common people: Be not afraid of them. Remember the Lord who is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, and your wives, and your houses.

15 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that the thing had been told us, that God defeated their counsel. And we returned all of us to the walls, every man to his work.

16 And it came to pass from that day forward, that half of their young men did the work, and half were ready for to fight, with spears, and shields, and bows, and coats of mail, and the rulers were behind them in all the house of Juda. 17 Of them that built on the wall and that carried burdens, and that laded, with one of his hands he did the work, and with the other he held a sword. 18 For everyone of the builders was girded with a sword about his reins. And they built, and sounded with a trumpet by me. 19 And I said to the nobles, and to the magistrates, and to the rest of the common people: The work is great and wide, and we are separated on the wall one far from another. 20 In what place soever you shall hear the sound of the trumpet, run all thither unto us; our God will fight for us. 21 And let us do the work; and let one half of us hold our spears from the rising of the morning till the stars appear. 22 At that time also I said to the people: Let everyone with his servant stay in the midst of Jerusalem, and let us take our turns in the night, and by day, to work. 23 Now I and my brethren, and my servants, and the watchmen that followed me, did not put off our clothes; only every man stripped himself when he was to be washed.

CHAPTER 5.

The Rich Oppress the Poor. 1 Now there was a great cry of the people, and of their wives against their brethren the Jews. 2 And there were some that said: Our sons and daughters are very many. Let us take up corn for the price of them, and let us eat and live. 3 And there were some that said: Let us mortgage our lands, and our vineyards, and our houses, and let us take corn because of the famine. 4 And others said: Let us borrow money for the king's tribute, and let us give up our fields and vineyards. 5 And now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, and our children as their children. Behold we bring into bondage our sons and our daughters, and some of our daughters are bondwomen already; neither have we wherewith to redeem them, and our fields and our vineyards other men possess.

6 And I was exceedingly angry when I heard their cry according to these words. 7 And my heart thought with myself; and I rebuked the nobles and magistrates, and said to them: Do you everyone exact usury of your brethren? And I gathered together a great assembly against them, 8 and I said to them: We, as you know, have redeemed according to our ability our brethren the Jews, that were sold to the Gentiles; and will you then sell your brethren for us to redeem them? And they held their peace, and found not what to answer. 9 And I said to them: The thing you do is not good. Why walk you not in the fear of our God, that we be not exposed to the reproaches of the Gentiles our enemies? 10 Both I and my brethren, and my servants, have lent money and corn to many. Let us all agree not to call for it again; let us forgive the debt that is owing to us. 11 Restore ye to them this day their fields, and their vineyards, and their oliveyards, and their houses; and the hundredth part of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, which you were wont to exact of them, give it rather for them. 12 And they said: We will restore, and we will require nothing of them; and we will do as thou sayest. And I called the priests and took an oath of them, to do according to what I had said. 13 Moreover I shook my lap, and said: So may God shake every man that shall not accomplish this word, out of his house, and out of his labors, thus may he be shaken out, and become empty. And all the multitude said: Amen. And they praised God. And the people did according to what was said.

Exemplary Conduct of Nehemias. 14 And from the day in which the king commanded me to be governor in the land of Juda, from the twentieth year even to the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, for twelve years, I and my brethren did not eat the yearly allowance that was due to the governors. 15 But the former governors that had been before me, were chargeable to the people, and took of them in bread, and wine, and in money every day forty sicles; and their officers also oppressed the people. But I did not so for the fear of God. 16 Moreover I built in the work of the wall, and I bought no land, and all my servants were gathered together to the work. 17 The Jews also and the magistrates to the number of one hundred and fifty men, were at my table, besides them that came to us from among the nations that were round about us. 18 And there was prepared for me day by day one ox, and six choice rams, besides fowls; and once in ten days I gave store of divers wines, and many other things. Yet I did not require my yearly allowance as governor, for the people were very much impoverished. 19 Remember me, O my God, for good according to all that I have done for this people.

Nehemias and His Enemies. 1 And it came to pass, when Sanaballat, and Tobias, and Gossem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had built the wall, and that there was no breach left in it (though at that time I had not set up the doors in the gates), 2 Sanaballat and Gossem sent to me saying: Come, and let us make a league together in the villages, in the plain of Ono. But they thought to do me mischief. 3 And I sent messengers to them, saying: I am doing a great work, and I cannot come down, lest it be neglected whilst I come, and go down to you. 4 And they sent to me according to this word, four times; and I answered them after the same manner. 5 And Sanaballat sent his servant to me the fifth time according to the former word, and he had a letter in his hand written in this manner: 6 It is reported amongst the Gentiles, and Gossem hath said it, that thou and the Jews think to rebel, and therefore thou buildest the wall, and hast a mind to set thyself king over them; for which end 7 thou hast also set up prophets, to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying: There is a king in Judea. The king will hear of these things; therefore come now, that we may take counsel together. 8 And I sent to them, saying: There is no such thing done as thou sayest; but thou feignest these things out of thy own heart. 9 For all these men thought to frighten us, thinking that our hands would cease from the work, and that we would leave off. Wherefore I strengthened my hands the more.

10 And I went into the house of Samaia the son of Delaia, the son of Metabeel privately. And he said: Let us consult together in the house of God in the midst of the temple; and let us shut the doors of the temple, for they will come to kill thee, and in the night they will come to slay thee. 11 And I said: Should such a man as I flee? And who is there that being as I am, would go into the temple, to save his life? I will not go in. 12 And I understood that God had not sent him, but that he had spoken to me as if he had been prophesying, and Tobias, and Sanaballat had hired him. 13 For he had taken money, that I being afraid should do this thing, and sin, and they might have some evil to upbraid me withal. 14 Remember me, O Lord, for Tobias and Sanaballat, according to their works of this kind; and Noadias the prophet, and the rest of the prophets that would have put me in fear.

The Wall Is Finished. 15 But the wall was finished the five and twentieth day of the month of Elul, in two and fifty days. 16 And it came to pass when all our enemies heard of it, that all nations which were round about us, were afraid, and were cast down within themselves, for they perceived that this work was the work of God.

17 Moreover in those days many letters were sent by the principal men of the Jews to Tobias, and from Tobias there came letters to them. 18 For there were many in Judea sworn to him, because he was the son-in-law of Sechenias the son of Area, and Johanan his son had taken to wife the daughter of Mosollam the son of Barachias. 19 And they praised him also before me, and they related my words to him; and Tobias sent letters to put me in fear.

List of Those Coming from Babylon. 1 Now [d] after the wall was built, and I had set up the doors, and numbered the porters and singing men, and Levites, 2 I commanded Hanani my brother, and Hanani as ruler of the house of Jerusalem (for he seemed as a sincere man, and one that feared God above the rest), 3 and I said to them: Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened till the sun be hot. And while they were yet standing by, the gates were shut, and barred. And I set watchmen of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, everyone by their courses, and every man over against his house.

4 And the city was very wide and great, and the people few in the midst thereof, and the houses were not built. 5 But God had put in my heart, and I assembled the princes and magistrates, and common people, to number them; and I found a book of the number of them who came up at first, and therein it was found written: 6 [e] These are the children of the province, who came up from the captivity of them that had been carried away, whom Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon had carried away, and who returned into Judea, everyone into his own city, 7 who came with Zorobabel: Josue, Nehemias, Azarias, Raamias, Nahamani, Mardochai, Belsam, Mespharath, Begoai, Nahum, Baana.

hundred seventy-two. 9 The children of Sephatia, three hundred seventy-two. 10 The children of Area, six hundred fifty-two. 11 The children of Phahath Moab of the children of Josue and Joab, two thousand eight hundred eighteen. 12 The children of Elam, one thousand two hundred fifty-four. 13 The children of Zethua, eight hundred forty-five. 14 The children of Zachai, seven hundred sixty. 15 The children of Bannui, six hundred forty-eight. 16 The children of Bebai, six hundred twenty-eight. 17 The children of Azgad, two thousand three hundred twenty-two. 18 The children of Adonicam, six hundred sixty-seven. 19 The children of Beguai, two thousand sixty-seven. 20 The children of Adin, six hundred fifty-five. 21 The children of Ater, children of Hezecias, ninety-eight. 22 The children of Hasem, three hundred twenty-eight. 23 The children of Besai, three hundred twenty-four. 24 The children of Hareph, a hundred and twelve. 25 The children of Gabaon, ninety-five. 26 The children of Bethlehem, and Netupha, a hundred eighty-eight. 27 The men of Anathoth, a hundred twenty-eight. 28 The men of Bethazmoth, forty-two. 29 The men of Cariathiarim, Cephira, and Beroth, seven hundred forty-three. 30 The men of Rama and Geba, six hundred twenty-one. 31 The men of Machmas, a hundred twenty-two. 32 The men of Bethel and Hai, a hundred twenty-three. 33 The men of the other Nebo, fifty-two. 34 The men of the other Elam, one thousand two hundred fifty-four. 35 The children of Harem, three hundred and twenty. 36 The children of Jericho, three hundred forty-five. 37 The children of Lod, of Hadid and Ono, seven hundred twenty-one. 38 The children of Senaa, three thousand nine hundred thirty.

The Priests and Levites. 39 The priests: the children of Idaia in the house of Josue, nine hundred and seventy-three. 40 The children of Emmer, one thousand fifty-two. 41 The children of Phashur, one thousand two hundred forty-seven. 42 The children of Arem, one thousand and seventeen. The Levites: 43 the children of Josue and Cedmihel, the sons 44 of Oduia, seventy-four. The singing men: 45 the children of Asaph, a hundred forty-eight.

61 And these are they that came up from Telmela, Thelharsa, Cherub, Addon, and Emmer; and could not show the house of their fathers, nor their seed, whether they were of Israel. 62 The children of Dalaia, the children of Tobia, the children of Necoda, six hundred forty-two. 63 And of the priests, the children of Habia, the children of Accos, the children of Berzellai, who took a wife of the daughters of Berzellai the Galaadite, and he was called by their name. 64 These sought their writing in the record, and found it not; and they were cast out of the priesthood. 65 And Athersatha said to them, that they should not eat of the Holies of Holies, until there stood up a priest learned and skillful.

66 All the multitude as it were one man, forty-two thousand three hundred sixty, 67 besides their menservants and womenservants, who were seven thousand three hundred thirty-seven: and among them singing men, and singing women, two hundred forty-five. 68 Their horses, seven hundred thirty-six; their mules, two hundred forty-five; 69 their camels, four hundred thirty-five; their asses, six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

Hitherto is related what was written in the record. From this place forward goeth on the history of Nehemias.

70 And some of the heads of the families gave unto the work. Athersatha* gave into the treasure a thousand drams of gold, fifty bowls, and five hundred and thirty garments for priests. 71 And some of the heads of families gave to the treasure of the work, twenty thousand drams of gold and two thousand two hundred pounds of silver. 72 And that which the rest of the people gave, was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pounds of silver, and sixty-seven garments for priests. 73 And the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singing men, and the rest of the common people and the Nathinites, and all Israel dwelt in their cities.

II: THE READING OF THE LAW

CHAPTER 8.

Esdras Reads and Explains the Law. 1 And the seventh month came, and the children of Israel were in their cities. And all the people were gathered together as one man to the street which is before the water gate, and they spoke to Esdras the scribe, to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord had commanded to Israel.

2 Then Esdras the priest brought the law before the multitude of men and women, and all those that could understand, in the first day of the seventh month. 3 And he read it plainly in the street that was before the water gate, from the morning until midday, before the men, and the women, and all those that could understand; and the ears of all the people were attentive to the book. 4 And Esdras the scribe stood upon a step of wood, which he had made to speak upon, and there stood by him Mathathias, and Semeia, and Ania, and Uria, and Helcia, and Maasia, on his right hand; and on the left, Phadaia, Misael, and Melchia, and Hasum, and Hasbadana, Zacharia and Mosollam. 5 And Esdras opened the book before all the people, for he was above all the people. And when he had opened it, all the people stood. 6 And Esdras blessed the Lord the great God. And all the people answered, Amen, Amen: lifting up their hands. And they bowed down, and adored God with their faces to the ground. 7 Now Josue, and Bani, and Serebia, Jamin, Accub, Sephtai, Odia, Maasia, Celtia, Azarias, Jozabed, Hanan, Phalaia, the Levites, made silence among the people to hear the law; and the people stood in their place. 8 And they read in the book of the law of God distinctly and plainly to be understood; and they understood when it was read.

9 And Nehemias (he is Athersatha) and Esdras the priest and scribe, and the Levites who interpreted to all the people, said: This is a holy day to the Lord our God; do not mourn, nor weep. For all the people wept, when they heard the words of the law. 10 And he said to them: Go, eat fat meats, and drink sweet wine, and send portions to them that have not prepared for themselves, because it is a holy day of the Lord, and be not sad, for the joy of the Lord is our strength. 11 And the Levites stilled all the people, saying: Hold your peace, for the day is holy, and be not sorrowful. 12 So all the people went to eat and drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because they understood the words that he had taught them.

The Feast of Tabernacles. 13 And on the second day the chiefs of the families of all the people, the priests, and the Levites were gathered together to Esdras the scribe, that he should interpret to them the words of the law. 14 And they found written in the law that the Lord had commanded by the hand of Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in tabernacles, on the feast, in the seventh month; 15 and that they should proclaim and publish the word in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying: Go forth to the mount, and fetch branches of olive, and branches of beautiful wood, branches of myrtle, and branches of palm, and branches of thick trees, to make tabernacles, as it is written. 16 And the people went forth, and brought. And they made themselves tabernacles every man on the top of his house, and in their courts, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water gate, and in the street of the gate of Ephraim. 17 And all the assembly of them that were returned from the captivity, f made tabernacles, and dwelt in tabernacles; for since the days of Josue the son of Nun the children of Israel had not done so, until that day; and there was exceeding great joy.

18 And he read in the book of the law of God day by day, from the first day till the last, and they kept the solemnity seven days, and in the eighth day a solemn assembly according to the manner.

CHAPTER 9.

The People Do Penance. 1 And in the four and twentieth day of the month the children of Israel came together with fasting and with sackcloth, and earth upon them. 2 And the seed of the children of Israel separated themselves from every stranger; and they stood, and confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers. 3 And they rose up to stand; and they read in the book of the law of the Lord their God, four times in the day, and four times they confessed, and adored the Lord their God.

4 And there stood up upon the step of the Levites, Josue, and Bani, and Cedmihel, Sabania, Bonni, Sarebias, Bani, and Chanani; and they cried with a loud voice to the Lord their God. 5 And the Levites Josue and Cedmihel, Bonni, Hasebnia, Serebia, Oduia, Sebnia, and Phathahia, said: Arise, bless the Lord your God from eternity to eternity; and blessed be the high name of thy glory with all blessing and praise.

6 Thou thyself, O Lord alone, thou hast made heaven, and the heaven of heavens, and all the host thereof; the earth and all things that are in it; the seas and all that are therein; and thou givest life to all these things, and the host of heaven adoreth thee. 7 Thou, O Lord God, art he who chosest Abram,g and broughtest him forth out of the fire of the Chaldeans,* and gavest him the name of Abraham. 8 And thou didst find his heart faithful before thee; and thou madest a covenant with him, to give him the land of the Chanaanite, of the Hethite, and of the Amorrhite, and of the Pherezite, and of the Jebusite, and of the Gergesite, to give it to his seed; and thou has fulfilled thy words, because thou art just.

9 And thou sawest the affliction of our fathers in Egypt; and thou didst hear their cry by the Red Sea. 10 And thou showedst signs and wonders upon Pharao, and upon all his servants, and upon the people of his land; for thou knewest that they dealt proudly against them; and thou madest thyself a name, as it is at this day. 11 And thou didst divide the sea before them, and they passed through the midst of the sea on dry land; but their persecutors thou threwest into the depth, as a stone into mighty waters. 12 And in a pillar of a cloud thou wast their leader by day, and in a pillar of fire by night, that they might see the way by which they went. 13 Thou camest down also to mount Sinai, and didst speak with them from heaven, and thou gavest them right judgments, and the law of truth, ceremonies, and good precepts. 14 Thou madest known to them thy holy sabbath, and didst prescribe to them commandments, and ceremonies, and the law by the hand of Moses thy servant. 15 And thou gavest them bread from heaven in their hunger, and broughtest forth water for them out of the rock in their thirst, and thou saidst to them that they should go in and possess the land, upon which thou hadst lifted up thy hand to give it them.

Ingratitude Is Deplored. 16 But they and our fathers dealt proudly and hardened their necks and hearkened not to thy commandments. 17 And they would not hear, and they remembered not thy wonders which thou hadst done for them. And they hardened their necks, and gave the head* to return to their bondage, as it were by contention. But thou, a forgiving God, gracious, and merciful, long-suffering, and full of compassion, didst not forsake them. 18 Yea when they had made also to themselves a molten calf, and had said: This is thy God, that brought thee out of Egypt, and had committed great blasphemies, 19 yet thou, in thy many mercies, didst not leave them in the desert. The pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day to lead them in the way, and the pillar of fire by night to show them the way by which they should go. 20 And thou gavest them thy good Spirit to teach them, and thy manna thou didst not withhold from their mouth, and thou gavest them water for their thirst. 21 Forty years didst thou feed them in the desert, and nothing was wanting to them; their garments did not grow old, and their feet were not worn.

9, 7: The fire of the Chaldeans: the city of Ur in Chaldea, the name of which signifies fire. Or out of the fire of the tribulations and temptations, to which he was there exposed. The ancient Rabbins understood this literally, affirming that Abram was cast into the fire by the idolaters, and brought out by a miracle without any hurt.

22 And thou gavest them kingdoms and nations, and didst divide lots for them; and they possessed the land of Sehon, and the land of the king of Hesebon, and the land of Og king of Basan. 23 And thou didst multiply their children as the stars of heaven, and broughtest them to the land concerning which thou hadst said to their fathers, that they should go in and possess it. 24 And the children came and possessed the land, and thou didst humble before them the inhabitants of the land, the Chanaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them as it pleased them. 25 And they took strong cities and a fat land, and possessed houses full of all goods, cisterns made by others, vineyards, and oliveyards, and fruit trees in abundance; and they ate, and were filled, and became fat, and abounded with delight in thy great goodness.

Ingratitude of the People. 26 But they provoked thee to wrath, and departed from thee, and threw thy law behind their backs. And they killed thy prophets, who admonished them earnestly to return to thee. And they were guilty of great blasphemies. 27 And thou gavest them into the hands of their enemies, and they afflicted them. And in the time of their tribulation they cried to thee, and thou heardest from heaven, and according to the multitude of thy tender mercies thou gavest them saviors, to save them from the hands of their enemies. 28 But after they had rest, they returned to do evil in thy sight; and thou leftest them in the hand of their enemies, and they had dominion over them. Then they returned, and cried to thee; and thou heardest from heaven, and deliveredst them many times in thy mercies. 29 And thou didst admonish them to return to thy law; but they dealt proudly, and hearkened not to thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, which, if a man do, he shall live in them: and they withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their neck, and would not hear. 30 And thou didst forbear with them for many years, and didst testify against them by thy spirit by the hand of thy prophets; and they heard not, and thou didst deliver them into the hand of the people of the lands. 31 Yet in thy very many mercies thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them, because thou art a merciful and gracious God.

32 Now therefore, our God, great, strong and terrible, who keepest covenant and mercy, turn not away from thy face all the labor which hath come upon us, upon our kings, and our princes, and our priests, and our prophets, and our fathers, and all the people from the days of the king of Assur, until this day. 33 And thou art just in all things that have come upon us, because thou hast done truth, but we have done wickedly. 34 Our kings, our princes, our priests, and our fathers have not kept thy law, and have not minded thy commandments, and thy testimonies which thou hast testified among them. 35 And they have not served thee in their kingdoms, and in thy manifold goodness which thou gavest them, and in the large and fat land which thou deliveredst before them, nor did they return from their most wicked devices. 36 Behold we ourselves this day are bondmen; and the land which thou gavest our fathers, to eat the bread thereof and the good things thereof, and we ourselves are servants in it. 37 And the fruits thereof grow up for the kings, whom thou hast set over us for our sins, and they have dominion over our bodies, and over our beasts, according to their will, and we are in great tribulation. 38 And because of all this we ourselves make a covenant, and write it, and our princes, our Levites, and our priests sign it.

Names of Subscribers to the Covenant. 1 And the subscribers were Nehemias, Athersatha the son of Hachelai, and Sedecias, 2 Saraias, Azarias, Jeremias, 3 Pheshur, Amarias, Melchias, 4 Hattus, Sebenia, Melluch, 5 Harem, Merimuth, Obdias, 6 Daniel, Genthon, Baruch, 7 Mosollam, Abia, Miamin, 8 Maazia, Belgia, Semeia: these were priests. 9 And the Levites, Josue the son of Azanias, Bennui of the sons of Henadad, Cedmihel, 10 and their brethren Sebenia, Oruia, Celita, Phalaia, Hanan, 11 Micha, Rohob, Hasebia, 12 Zachur, Serebia, Sabania, 13 Odaia, Bani, Baninu. 14 The heads of the people, Pharos, Phahath Moab, Elam, Zethu, Bani, 15 Bonni, Azgad, Bebai, 16 Adonia, Begoai, Adin, 17 Ater, Hezecia, Azur, 18 Odaia, Hasum, Besai, 19 Hareph, Anathoth, Neba, 20 Megphias, Mosollam, Hazir, 21 Mesizabel, Sadoc, Jeddua, 22 Pheltia, Hanan, Anaia, 23 Osee, Hanania, Hasub, 24 Alohes, Phalea, Sobec, 25 Rehum, Hasebna, Maasia, 26 Echaia, Hanan, Anan, 27 Melluch, Haran, Baana.

Obligations Imposed. 28 And the rest of the people, priests, Levites, porters, and singing men, Nathinites, and all that had separated themselves from the people of the lands to the law of God, their wives, their sons, and their daughters, 29 all that could understand, promising for their brethren, with their chief men, and they came to promise, and swear that they would walk in the law of God, which he gave in the hand of Moses the servant of God, that they would do and keep all the commandments of the Lord our God, and his judgments and his ceremonies. 30 And that we would not give our daughters to the people of the land, nor take their daughters for our sons. 31 And if the people of the land bring in things to sell, or any things for use, to sell them on the sabbath day, that we would not buy them of them on the sabbath, or on the holy day. And that we would leave the seventh year, and the exaction of every hand.

32 And we made ordinances for ourselves, to give the third part of a sicle every year for the work of the house of our God, 33 for the loaves of proposition, and for the continual sacrifice, and for a continual holocaust on the sabbaths, on the new moons, on the set feasts, and for the holy things, and for the sin offering, that atonement might be made for Israel, and for every use of the house of our God. 34 And we cast lots among the priests, and the Levites, and the people for the offering of wood, that it might be brought into the house of our God by the houses of our fathers at set times from year to year, to burn upon the altar of the Lord our God, as it is written in the law of Moses; 35 and that we would bring the firstfruits of our land, and the firstfruits of all fruit of every tree, from year to year, in the house of our Lord; 36 and the firstborn of our sons, and of our cattle, as it is written in the law, and the firstlings of our oxen, and of our sheep, to be offered in the house of our God, to the priests who minister in the house of our God; 37 and that we would bring the firstfruits of our meats, and of our libations, and the fruit of every tree, of the vintage also and of oil to the priests, to the storehouse of our God, and the tithes of our ground to the Levites. The Levites also shall receive the tithes of our works out of all the cities. 38 And the priest the son of Aaron shall be with the Levites in the tithes of the Levites, and the Levites shall offer the tithe of their tithes in the house of our God, to the storeroom into the treasure house. 39 For the children of Israel and the children of Levi shall carry to the treasury the firstfruits of corn, of wine, and of oil; and the sanctified vessels shall be there, and the priests, and the singing men, and the porters, and ministers. And we will not forsake the house of our God.

III: THE STATE OF THE CITY

CHAPTER 11.

Inhabitants of Jerusalem and Other Cities. 1 And the princes of the people dwelt at Jerusalem; but the rest of the people cast lots, to take one part in ten to dwell in Jerusalem the holy city, and nine parts in the other cities. 2 And the people blessed all the men that willingly offered themselves to dwell in Jerusalem.

3 These therefore are the chief men of the province, who dwelt in Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda. And everyone dwelt in his possession, in their cities: Israel, the priests, the Levites, the Na-thinites, and the children of the servants of Solomon.

4 And in Jerusalem there dwelt some of the children of Juda, and some of the children of Benjamin. Of the children of Juda: Athaias the son of Aziam, the son of Zacharias, the son of Amarias, the son of Saphatias, the son of Malaleel. Of the sons of Phares: 5 Maasia the son of Baruch, the son of Cholhaza, the son of Hazia, the son of Adaia, the son of Joiarib, the son of Zacharias, the son of the Silonite. 6 All these the sons of Phares, who dwelt in Jerusalem, were four hundred sixty-eight valiant men. 7 And these are the children of Benjamin: Sellum the son of Mosollam, the son of Joed, the son of Phadaia, the son of Colaia, the son of Masia, the son of Etheel, the son of Isaia. 8 And after him Gebbai, Sellai, nine hundred twenty-eight. 9 And Joel the son of Zechri their ruler, and Judas the son of Senua was second over the city.

10 And of the priests: Idaia the son of Joarib, Jachin, 11 Saraia the son of Helcias, the son of Mosollam, the son of Sadoc, the son of Meraioth, the son of Achitob the prince of the house of God, 12 and their brethren that do the works of the temple: eight hundred twenty-two. And Adaia the son of Jeroham, the son of Phelelia, the son of Amsi, the son of Zacharias, the son of Pheshur, the son of Melchias, 13 and his brethren the chiefs of the fathers: two hundred forty-two. And Amassai the son of Azreel, the son of Ahazi, the son of Mosollamoth, the son of Emmer, 14 and their brethren who were very mighty, a hundred twenty-eight; and their ruler Zabdiel son of the mighty.

15 And of the Levites: Semeia the son of Hasub, the son of Azaricam, the son of Hasabia, the son of Boni, 16 and Sabathai, and Jozabed, who were over all the outward business of the house of God, of the princes of the Levites; 17 and Mathania the son of Micha; the son of Zebedei, the son of Asaph, was the principal man to praise, and to give glory in prayer; and Becbecia the second, one of his brethren, and Abda the son of Samua, the son of Galal, the son of Idithun. 18 All the Levites in the holy city were two hundred eighty-four. 19 And the porters, Accub, Telmon, and their brethren, who kept the doors: a hundred seventy-two.

The Nathinites and the Singers. 20 And the rest of Israel, the priests and the Levites were in all the cities of Juda, every man in his possession. 21 And the Nathinites, that dwelt in Ophel, and Siaha, and Gaspha of the Nathinites. 22 And the overseer of the Levites in Jerusalem, was Azzi the son of Bani, the son of Hasabia, the son of Mathania, the son of Micha. Of the sons of Asaph, were the singing men in the ministry of the house of God. 23 For the king's commandment was concerning them, and an order among the singing men day by day. 24 And Phathahia, the son of Mesezebel of the children of Zara the son of Juda, was at the hand of the king, in all matters concerning the people, 25 and in the houses through all their countries. Of the children of Juda some dwelt at Cariath-Arbe, and in the villages thereof, and at Dibon, and in the villages thereof, and at Cabseel, and in the villages thereof, 26 and at Jesue, and at Molada, and at Bethphaleth, 27 and at Hasersual, and at Bersabee, and in the villages thereof, 28 and at Siceleg, and at Mochona, and in the villages thereof, 29 and at Remmon, and at Saraa, and at Jerimuth, 30 Zanoa, Odollam, and in their villages, at Lachis and its dependencies, and at Azeca and the villages thereof. And they dwelt from Bersabee unto the valley of Ennom. their brethren in the days of Josue.

31 And the children of Benjamin, from Geba, at Mechmas, and at Hai, and at Bethel, and in the villages thereof, 32 at These were the chiefs of the priests, and Idaia, Sellum, Amoc, Helcias, 7 Idaia. Anathoth, Nob, Anania, 33 Asor, Rama, Gethaim, 34 Hadid, Seboim, and Neballat, Lod, 35 and Ono the valley of craftsmen. 36 And of the Levites were portions of Juda and Benjamin.

CHAPTER 12.

Priests and Levites Who Came with Zorobabel. 1 Now these are the priests and the Levites, that went up with Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and Josue: Saraia, Jeremias, Esdras, 2 Amaria, Melluch, Hattus, 3 Sebenias, Rheum, Merimuth, 4 Addo, Genthon, Abia, 5 Miamin, Madia, Belga, 6 Semeia, and Joiarib,

8 And the Levites: Jesua, Bennui, Cedmihel, Sarebia, Juda, Mathanias, they and their brethren were over the hymns; 9 and Becbecia, and Hanni, and their brethren everyone in his office.

10 And Josue begot Joacim, and Joacim begot Eliasib, and Eliasib begot Joiada, 11 and Joiada begot Jonathan, and Jonathan begot Jeddoa.

12 And in the days of Joacim the priests and heads of the families were: of Saraia, Maraia; of Jeremias, Hanania; 13 of Esdras, Mosollam; and of Amaria, Johanan; 14 of Milicho, Jonathan; of Sebenia, Joseph; 15 of Haram, Edna; of Maraioth, Helci; 16 of Adaia, Zacharia; of Genthon, Mosollam; 17 of Abia, Zechri; of Miamin and Moadia, Phelti; 18 of Belga, Sammua; of Semaia, Jonathan; 19 of Joiarib, Mathanai; of Jodaia, Azzi; 20 of Sellai, Celai; of Amoc, Heber; 21 of Helcias, Hasebia; of Idaia, Nathanael.

22 The Levites the chiefs of the families in the days of Eliasib, and Joiada, and Johanan, and Jeddoa, were recorded, and the priests in the reign of Darius the Persian. 23 The sons of Levi, heads of the families were written in the book of Chronicles, even unto the days of Jonathan the son of Eliasib. 24 Now the chief of the Levites were Hasebia, Serebia, and Josue the son of Cedmihel, and their brethren by their courses, to praise and to give thanks according to the commandment of David the man of God, and to wait equally in order. 25 Mathania, and Becbecia, Obedia, and Mosollam, Telmon, Accub, were keepers of the gates and of the entrances before the gates. 26 These were in the days of Joacim the son of Josue, the son of Josedec, and in the days of Nehemias the governor, and of Esdras the priest and scribe.

Dedication of the Wall. 27 And at the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem they sought the Levites out of all their places to bring them to Jerusalem, and to keep the dedication, and to rejoice with thanksgiving, and with singing, and with cymbals, and psalteries and harps. 28 And the sons of the singing men were gathered together out of the plain country about Jerusalem, and out of the villages of Nethuphati, 29 and from the house of Galgal, and from the countries of Geba and Azmaveth; for the singing men had built themselves villages round about Jerusalem. 30 And the priests and the Levites were purified, and they purified the people, and the gates, and the wall.

31 And I made the princes of Juda go up upon the wall, and I appointed two great choirs to give praise. And they went on the right hand upon the wall towards the dunghill gate. 32 And after them went Osaias, and half of the princes of Juda, 33 and Azarias, Esdras, and Mosollam, Judas, and Benjamin, and Semeia, and Jeremias. 34 And of the sons of the priests with trumpets, Zacharias the son of Jonathan, the son of Semeia, the son of Mathania, the son of Michaia, the son of Zechur, the son of Asaph; 35 and his brethren Semeia, and Azareel, Malalai, Galalai, Maai, Nathanael, and Judas, and Hanani, with the musical instruments of David the man of God; and Esdras the scribe before them at the fountain gate. 36 And they went up over against them by the stairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall of the house of David, and to the water gate eastward.

37 And the second choir of them that gave thanks went on the opposite side, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, and upon the tower of the furnaces, even to the broad wall, 38 and above the gate of Ephraim, and above the old gate, and above the fish gate and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Emath, and even to the flock gate; and they stood still in the watch gate. 39 And the two choirs of them that gave praise stood still at the house of God, and I and the half of the magistrates with me. 40 And the priests, Eliachim, Maasia, Miamin, Michea, Elioenai, Zacharia, Hanania with trumpets, 41 and Maasia, and Semeia, and Eleazar, and Azzi, and Johanan, and Melchia, and Elam, and Ezer. And the singers sang loud, and Jezraia was their overseer. 42 And they sacrificed on that day great sacrifices, and they rejoiced, for God had made them joyful with great joy. Their wives also and their children rejoiced, and the joy of Jerusalem was heard afar off.

43 They appointed also in that day men over the storehouses of the treasure, for the libations, and for the firstfruits, and for the tithes, that the rulers of the city might bring them in by them in honor of thanksgiving, for the priests and Levites. For Juda was joyful in the priests and Levites that assisted. 44 And they kept the watch of their God, and the observance of expiation, and the singing men, and the porters, according to the commandment of David, and of Solomon his son. 45 For in the days of David and Asaph from the beginning there were chief singers appointed, to praise with canticles, and give thanks to God. 46 And all Israel, in the days of Zorobabel and in the days of Nehemias, gave portions to the singing men, and to the porters, day by day, and they sanctified* the Levites, and the Levites sanctified the sons of Aaron.

IV: THE REFORMS OF NEHEMIAS

CHAPTER 13.

Many Abuses Are Reformed. 1 And [h] on that day they read in the book of Moses in the hearing of the people; and therein was found written, that the Ammonites and the Moabites should not come into the church of God forever, 2 because they met not the children of Israel with bread and water, and they hired against them Balaam to curse them, and our God turned the curse into blessing. 3 And it came to pass, when they had heard the law, that they separated every stranger from Israel.

4 And over this thing* was Eliasib the priest, who was set over the treasury of the house of our God, and was near akin to Tobias. 5 And he made him a great storeroom, where before him they laid up gifts, and frankincense, and vessels, and the tithes of the corn, of the wine, and of the oil, the portions of the Levites, and of the singing men, and of the porters, and the firstfruits of the priests. 6 But in all this time I was not in Jerusalem, because in the two and thirtieth year [i] of Artaxerxes king of Babylon, I went to the king, and after certain days I asked the king; 7 and I came to Jerusalem, and I understood the evil that Eliasib had done for Tobias, to make him a storehouse in the courts of the house of God. 8 And it seemed to me exceeding evil. And I cast forth the vessels of the house of Tobias out of the storehouse. 9 And I commanded and they cleansed the storehouses. And I brought thither again the vessels of the house of God, the sacrifice, and the frankincense.

The Revenues for the Levites. 10 And I perceived that the portions of the Levites had not been given them, and that the Levites, and the singing men, and they that ministered were fled away every man to his own country. 11 And I pleaded the matter against the magistrates, and said: Why have we forsaken the house of God? And I gathered them together, and I made them to stand in their places. 12 And all Juda brought the tithe of the corn, and the wine, and the oil into the storehouses. 13 And we set over the storehouses Selemias the priest, and Sadoc the scribe, and of the Levites Phadaia, and next to them Hanan the son of Zachur, the son of Mathania, for they were approved as faithful, and to them were committed the portions of their brethren.

14 Remember me, O my God, for this thing, and wipe not out my kindnesses, which I have done relating to the house of my God and his ceremonies.

15 In those days I saw in Juda some treading the presses on the sabbath, and carrying sheaves, and lading asses with wine, and grapes, and figs, and all manner of burdens, and bringing them into Jerusalem on the sabbath day. And I charged them that they should sell on a day on which it was lawful to sell. 16 Some Tyrians also dwelt there, who brought fish and all manner of wares. And they sold them on the sabbaths to the children of Juda in Jerusalem. 17 And I rebuked the chief men of Juda, and said to them: What is this evil thing that you are doing, profaning the sabbath day? 18 Did not our fathers do these things, and our God brought all this evil upon us, and upon this city? And you bring more wrath upon Israel by violating the sabbath. 19 And it came to pass, that when the gates of Jerusalem were at rest on the sabbath day, I spoke. And they shut the gates, and I commanded that they should not open them till after the sabbath. And I set some of my servants at the gates, that none should bring in burdens on the sabbath day. 20 So the merchants, and they that sold all kinds of wares, stayed without Jerusalem once or twice. 21 And I charged them, and I said to them: Why stay you before the wall? If you do so another time, I will lay hands on you. And from that time they came no more on the sabbath. 22 I spoke also to the Levites that they should be purified, and should come to keep the gates, and to sanctify the sabbath day. For this also remember me, O my God, and spare me according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.

Mixed Marriages Forbidden. 23 In those days also I saw Jews that married wives, women of Azotus, and of Ammon, and of Moab. 24 And their children spoke half in the speech of Azotus, and could not speak the Jews' language, but they spoke according to the language of this and that people. 25 And I chid them, and laid my curse upon them. And I beat some of them, and shaved off their hair, and made them swear by God that they would not give their daughters to their sons, nor take their daughters for their sons, nor for themselves, saying: 26 j Did not Solomon king of Israel sin in this kind of thing? And surely among many nations, there was not a king like him, and he was beloved of his God, and God made him king over all Israel. k And yet women of other countries brought even him to sin. 27 And shall we also be disobedient and do all this great evil to transgress against our God, and marry strange women?

28 And one of the sons of Joiada the son of Eliasib the high priest, was son-in-law to Sanaballat the Horonite, and I drove him from me.

29 Remember them, O Lord my God, that defile the priesthood, and the law of priests and Levites.

30 So I separated from them all strangers, and I appointed the courses of the priests and the Levites, every man in his ministry, 31 and for the offering of wood at times appointed, and for the firstfruits. Remember me, O my God, unto good. Amen.

THE BOOK OF TOBIAS

This Book is named after the holy man, whose history is here recorded. Though led into captivity, he distinguished himself by his unwavering faith in God, his observance of the Law, and his heroic charity towards his neighbor. Afflicted with blindness, he manifested exemplary patience and extraordinary resignation to the will of God. To reward his virtue, God sent the angel Raphael to restore his sight, for which favor he failed not to thank and glorify God. The Book records much also concerning the virtues of the younger Tobias his son, especially his respect for his parents and the holy dispositions with which he entered upon marriage.

I: UNFAILING CONFIDENCE IN GOD

CHAPTER 1.

The Piety of Tobias. 1 Tobias of the tribe and city of Nephtali (which is in the upper parts of Galilee above Naasson, beyond the way that leadeth to the west, having on the right hand the city of Sephet), 2 a when he was made captive in the days of Salmanasar king of the Assyrians, even in his captivity, forsook not the way of truth, 3 but every day gave all he could get to his brethren his fellow captives, that were of his kindred.

4 And when he was younger than any of the tribe of Nephtali, yet did he no childish thing in his work. 5 Moreover when all went to the golden calves b which Jeroboam king of Israel had made, he alone fled the company of all, 6 and went to Jerusalem to the temple of the Lord, and there adored the Lord God of Israel, offering faithfully all his firstfruits and his tithes, 7 so that in the third year he gave all his tithes to the proselytes, and strangers. 8 These and such like things did he observe when but a boy according to the law of God. 9 But when he was a man, he took to wife Anna of his own tribe, and had a son by her, whom he called after his own name, 10 and from his infancy he taught him to fear God, and to abstain from all sin.

11 And when by the captivity he with his wife and his son and all his tribe was come to the city of Ninive 12 (when all ate of the meats of the Gentiles), he kept his soul and never was defiled with their meats. 13 And because he was mindful of the Lord with all his heart, God gave him favor in the sight of Salmanasar the king. 14 And he gave him leave to go whithersoever he would, with liberty to do whatever he had a mind. 15 He therefore went to all that were in captivity, and gave them wholesome admonitions.

16 And when he was come to Rages a city of the Medes, and had ten talents of silver of that with which he had been honored by the king, 17 and when amongst a great multitude of his kindred, he saw Gabelus in want, who was one of his tribe, taking a note of his hand, he gave him the aforesaid sum of money.

18 But after a long time, Salmanasar the king being dead, [c] when Sennacherib his son, who reigned in his place, had a hatred for the children of Israel, 19 Tobias daily went among all his kindred, and comforted them, and distributed to everyone as he was able, out of his goods. 20 He fed the hungry, and gave clothes to the naked, and was careful to bury the dead, and them that were slain. 21 [d] And when king Sennacherib was come back, fleeing from Judea by reason of the slaughter that God had made about him for his blasphemy, and being angry slew many of the children of Israel, Tobias buried their bodies. 22 But when it was told the king, he commanded him to be slain, and took away all his substance. 23 But Tobias fleeing naked away with his son and with his wife, lay concealed, for many loved him. 24 [e] But after forty-five days, the king was killed by his own sons. 25 And Tobias returned to his house, and all his substance was restored to him.

CHAPTER 2.

Tobias Loses His Sight. 1 But after this, when there was a festival of the Lord, and a good dinner was prepared in Tobias's house, 2 he said to his son: Go, and bring some of our tribe that fear God, to feast with us. 3 And when he had gone, returning he told him that one of the children of Israel lay slain in the street. And he forthwith leaped up from his place at the table, and left his dinner, and came fasting to the body. 4 And taking it up carried it privately to his house, that after the sun was down, he might bury him cautiously. 5 And when he had hid the body, he ate bread with mourning and fear, 6 remembering the word which the Lord spoke by [f] Amos the prophet: Your festival days shall be turned into lamentation and mourning. 7 So when the sun was down, he went and buried him. 8 Now all his neighbors blamed him, saying: Once already commandment was given for thee to be slain because of this matter, and thou didst scarce escape the sentence of death, and dost thou again bury the dead? 9 [g] But Tobias fearing God more than the king, carried off the bodies of them that were slain, and hid them in his house, and at midnight buried them.

10 Now it happened one day, that being wearied with burying, he came to his house, and cast himself down by the wall and slept; 11 and as he was sleeping, hot dung out of a swallow's nest fell upon his eyes, and he was made blind. 12 Now this trial the Lord therefore permitted to happen to him, that an example might be given to posterity of his patience, as also of holy Job. 13 For whereas he had always feared God from his infancy, and kept his commandments, he repined not against God because the evil of blindness had befallen him, 14 but continued immoveable in the fear of God, giving thanks to God all the days of his life. 15 For as the kings* insulted over holy Job, so his relations and kinsmen mocked at his life, saying: 16 Where is thy hope, for which thou gavest alms, and buriedst the dead? 17 But Tobias rebuked them, saying: Speak not so, 18 for we are the children of saints, and look for that life which God will give to those that never change their faith from him.

19 Now Anna his wife went daily to weaving work, and she brought home what she could get for their living by the labor of her hands. 20 Whereby it came to pass that she received a young kid, and brought it home. 21 And when her husband heard it bleating, he said: Take heed, lest perhaps it be stolen. Restore ye it to its owners, for it is not lawful for us either to eat or to touch anything that cometh by theft. 22 h At these words his wife being angry answered: It is evident thy hope is come to nothing, and thy alms now appear. 23 And with these and other such like words she upbraided him.

Prayer of Tobias and Sara. 1 Then Tobias sighed, and began to pray with tears, 2 saying: Thou art just, O Lord, and all thy judgments are just, and all thy ways mercy, and truth, and judgment. 3 And now, O Lord, think of me, and take not revenge of my sins, neither remember my offenses, nor those of my parents. 4 i For we have not obeyed thy commandments, therefore are we delivered to spoil and to captivity and death, and are made a fable and a reproach to all nations, amongst which thou hast scattered us. 5 And now, O Lord, great are thy judgments, because we have not done according to thy precepts, and have not walked sincerely before thee. 6 And now, O Lord, do with me according to thy will, and command my spirit to be received in peace, for it is better for me to die than to live.

7 Now it happened on the same day, that Sara daughter of Raguel, in Rages* a city of the Medes, received a reproach from one of her father's servant maids, 8 because she had been given to seven husbands, and a devil named Asmodeus had killed them, at their first going in unto her. 9 So when she reproved the maid for her fault, she answered her, saying: May we never see son or daughter of thee upon the earth, thou murderer of thy husbands. 10 Wilt thou kill me also, as thou hast already killed seven husbands? At these words she went into an upper chamber of her house; and for three days and three nights did neither eat nor drink, 11 but continuing in prayer with tears besought God, that he would deliver her from this reproach.

12 And it came to pass on the third day, when she was making an end of her prayer, blessing the Lord, 13 she said: Blessed is thy name, O God of our fathers: who when thou hast been angry, wilt show mercy, and in the time of tribulation forgivest the sins of them that call upon thee. 14 To thee, O Lord, I turn my face, to thee I direct my eyes. 15 I beg, O Lord, that thou loose me from the bond of this reproach, or else take me away from the earth. 16 Thou knowest, O Lord, that I never coveted a husband, and have kept my soul clean from all lust. 17 Never have I joined myself with them that play; neither have I made myself partaker with them that walk in lightness. 18 But a husband I consented to take, with thy fear, not with my lust. 19 And either I was unworthy of them, or they perhaps were not worthy of me, because perhaps thou hast kept me for another man. 20 For thy counsel is not in man's power. 21 But this everyone is sure of that worshipeth thee, that his life, if it be under trial, shall be crowned; and if it be under tribulation, it shall be delivered; and if it be under correction, it shall be allowed to come to thy mercy. 22 For thou art not delighted in our being lost, because after a storm thou makest a calm, and after tears and weeping thou pourest in joyfulness. 23 Be thy name, O God of Israel, blessed forever.

II: PROVIDENCE FAVORS TOBIAS AND SARA

24 At that time the prayers of them both were heard in the sight of the glory of the most high God. 25 And the holy angel of the Lord, Raphael, was sent to heal them both, whose prayers at one time were rehearsed in the sight of the Lord.

CHAPTER 4.

Tobias Counsels His Son. 1 Therefore, when Tobias thought that his prayer was heard that he might die, he called to him Tobias his son, 2 and said to him: Hear, my son, the words of my mouth, and lay them as a foundation in thy heart. 3 When

h Jb 2, 9.—i Dt 28, 15.

3, 7: Rages: in the Greek it is Ecbatana, which was also called Rages. For there were two cities in Media of the name of Rages. Raguel dwelt in one of them, and Gabelus in the other.

God shall take my soul, thou shalt bury my body; [j] and thou shalt honor thy mother all the days of her life. 4 For thou must be mindful what and how great perils she suffered for thee in her womb. 5 And when she also shall have ended the time of her life, bury her by me. 6 And all the days of thy life have God in thy mind. And take heed thou never consent to sin, nor transgress the commandments of the Lord our God.

7 [k] Give alms out of thy substance, and turn not away thy face from any poor person, for so it shall come to pass that the face of the Lord shall not be turned from thee. 8 [l] According to thy ability be merciful. 9 If thou have much, give abundantly; if thou have little, take care even so to bestow willingly a little. 10 For thus thou storest up to thyself a good reward for the day of necessity. 11 [m] For alms deliver from all sin and from death, and will not suffer the soul to go into darkness. 12 Alms shall be a great confidence before the most high God, to all them that give it.

13 [n] Take heed to keep thyself, my son, from all fornication, and besides thy wife never endure to know a crime.

14 Never suffer pride to reign in thy mind, or in thy words: [o] for from it all perdition took its beginning.

15 [p] If any man hath done any work for thee, immediately pay him his hire, and let not the wages of thy hired servant stay with thee at all.

16 [q] See thou never do to another what thou wouldst hate to have done to thee by another.

17 [r] Eat thy bread with the hungry and the needy, and with thy garments cover the naked.

18 Lay out thy bread and thy wine upon the burial of a just man, and do not eat and drink thereof with the wicked.

19 Seek counsel always of a wise man.

20 Bless God at all times, and desire of him to direct thy ways, and that all thy counsels may abide in him.

21 I tell thee also, my son, that I lent ten talents of silver, while thou wast yet a child, to Gabelus in Rages a city of the Medes, and I have a note of his hand with me. 22 Now therefore inquire how thou mayest go to him, and receive of him the foresaid sum of money, and restore to him the note of his hand.

23 Fear not, my son. We lead indeed a poor life, [s] but we shall have many good things if we fear God, and depart from all sin, and do that which is good.

CHAPTER 5.

The Angel Raphael Guides Young Tobias. 1 Then Tobias answered his father, and said: I will do all things, father, which thou hast commanded me. 2 But how I shall get this money, I cannot tell; he knoweth not me, and I know not him. What token shall I give him? Nor did I ever know the way which leadeth thither. 3 Then his father answered him, and said: I have a note of his hand with me, which when thou shalt show him, he will presently pay it. 4 But go now, and seek thee out some faithful man to go with thee for his hire, that thou mayest receive it, while I yet live.

5 Then Tobias going forth found a beautiful young man, standing girded, and as it were ready to walk. 6 And not knowing that he was an angel of God, he saluted him, and said: From whence art thou, good young man? 7 But he answered: Of the children of Israel. And Tobias said to him: Knowest thou the way that leadeth to the country of the Medes? 8 And he answered: I know it, and I have often walked through all the ways thereof, and I have abode with Gabelus our brother, who dwelleth at Rages a city of the Medes, which is situated in the mount of Ecbatana. 9 And Tobias said to him: Stay for me, I beseech thee, till I tell these same things to my father.

10 Then Tobias going in told all these things to his father. Upon which his father, being in admiration, desired that he would come in unto him. 11 So going in he saluted him, and said: Joy be to thee always. 12 And Tobias said: What manner of joy shall be to me, who sit in darkness, and see not the light of heaven? 13 And the young man said to him: Be of good courage, thy cure from God is at hand. 14 And Tobias said to him: Canst thou conduct my son to Gabelus at Rages, a city of the Medes? And when thou shalt return, I will pay thee thy hire. 15 And the angel said to him: I will conduct him thither, and bring him back to thee. 16 And Tobias said to him: I pray thee, tell me, of what family, or what tribe art thou? 17 And Raphael the angel answered: Dost thou seek the family of him thou hirest, or the hired servant himself to go with thy son? 18 But lest I should make thee uneasy, I am Azarias* the son of the great Ananias. 19 And Tobias answered: Thou art of a great family. But I pray thee be not angry that I desired to know thy family. 20 And the angel said to him: I will lead thy son safe, and bring him to thee again safe. 21 And Tobias answering, said: May you have a good journey, and God be with you in your way, and his angel accompany you. 22 Then all things being ready, that were to be carried in their journey, Tobias bade his father and his mother farewell, and they set out both together.

23 t And when they were departed, his mother began to weep, and to say: Thou hast taken the staff of our old age, and sent him away from us. 24 I wish the money for which thou hast sent him, had never been. 25 For our poverty was sufficient for us, that we might account it as riches, that we saw our son. 26 And Tobias said to her: Weep not, our son will arrive thither safe, and will return safe to us, and thy eyes shall see him. 27 For I believe that the good angel of God doth accompany him, and doth order all things well that are done about him, so that he shall return to us with joy. 28 At these words his mother ceased weeping, and held her peace.

CHAPTER 6.

Camp Is Set by the Tigris. 1 And Tobias went forward, and the dog followed him, and he lodged the first night by the river of Tigris. 2 And he went out to wash his feet, and behold a monstrous fish came up to devour him. 3 And Tobias being afraid of him, cried out with a loud voice, saying: Sir, he cometh upon me. 4 And the angel said to him: Take him by the gill, and draw him to thee. And when he had done so, he drew him out upon the land, and he began to pant before his feet. 5 Then the angel said to him: Take out the entrails of this fish, and lay up his heart, and his gall, and his liver for thee, for these are necessary for useful medicines. 6 And when he had done so, he roasted the flesh thereof, and they took it with them in the way. The rest they salted as much as might serve them, till they came to Rages the city of the Medes.

7 Then Tobias asked the angel, and said to him: I beseech thee, brother Azarias, tell me what remedies are these things good for, which thou hast bid me keep of the fish? 8 And the angel, answering, said to him: If thou put a little piece of its heart* upon coals, the smoke thereof driveth away all kinds of devils, either from man or from woman, so that they come no more to them. 9 And the gall is good for anointing the eyes, in which there is a white speck, and they shall be cured.

Sara Is Offered in Marriage. 10 And Tobias said to him: Where wilt thou that we lodge? 11 And the angel answering, said: Here is one whose name is Raguel, a near kinsman of thy tribe, and he hath a daughter named Sara, but he hath no son nor any other daughter beside her. 12. u All his substance is due to thee, and thou must take her to wife. 13 Ask her therefore of her father, and he will give her thee to wife.

14 Then Tobias answered, and said: I hear that she hath been given to seven husbands, and they all died. Moreover I have heard that a devil killed them. 15 Now I am afraid lest the same thing should happen to me also; and whereas I am the only child of my parents, I should bring down their old age with sorrow to hell.*

16 Then the angel Raphael said to him: Hear me, and I will show thee who they are, over whom the devil can prevail. 17 For they who in such manner receive matrimony, as to shut out God from themselves and from their mind, and to give themselves to their lust, as the horse and mule which have not understanding, over them the devil hath power. 18 But thou, when thou shalt take her, go into the chamber, and for three days keep thyself continent from her, and give thyself to nothing else but to prayers with her. 19 And on that night lay the liver of the fish on the fire, and the devil shall be driven away. 20 But the second night thou shalt be admitted into the society of the holy Patriarchs. 21 And the third night thou shalt obtain a blessing that sound children may be born of you. 22 And when the third night is past, thou shalt take the virgin with the fear of the Lord, moved rather for love of children than for lust, that in the seed of Abraham thou mayest obtain a blessing in children.

Tobias Marries Sara. 1 And they went in to Raguel, and Raguel received them with joy. 2 And Raguel looking upon Tobias, said to Anna his wife: How like is this young man to my cousin! 3 And when he had spoken these words, he said: Whence are ye, young men our brethren? 4 But they said: We are of the tribe of Nephtali, of the captivity of Ninive. 5 And Raguel said to them: Do you know Tobias my brother? And they said: We know him. 6 And when he was speaking many good things of him, the angel said to Raguel: Tobias concerning whom thou inquirest is this young man's father. 7 And Raguel went to him, and kissed him with tears, and weeping upon his neck, said: A blessing be upon thee, my son, because thou art the son of a good and most virtuous man. 8 And Anna his wife, and Sara their daughter wept.

9 And after they had spoken, Raguel commanded a sheep to be killed, and a feast to be prepared. And when he desired them to sit down to dinner, 10 Tobias said: I will not eat nor drink here this day, unless thou first grant me my petition, and promise to give me Sara thy daughter. 11 Now when Raguel heard this he was afraid, knowing what had happened to those seven husbands that went in unto her. And he began to fear lest it might happen to him also in like manner. And as he was in suspense, and gave no answer to his petition, 12 the angel said to him: Be not afraid to give her to this man, for to him who feareth God is thy daughter due to be his wife. Therefore another could not have her. 13 Then Raguel said: I doubt not but God hath regarded my prayers and tears in his sight. 14 And I believe he hath therefore made you come to me, that this maid might be married to one of her own kindred, [v] according to the law of Moses. And now doubt not but I will give her to thee. 15 And taking the right hand of his daughter, he gave it into the right hand of Tobias, saying: The God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob be with you, and may he join you together, and fulfill his blessing in you. 16 And taking paper they made a writing of the marriage. 17 And afterwards they made merry, blessing God.

18 And Raguel called to him Anna his wife, and bade her prepare another chamber. 19 And she brought Sara her daughter in thither, and she wept. 20 And she said to her: Be of good cheer, my daughter. The Lord of heaven give thee joy for the trouble thou hast undergone.

CHAPTER 8.

Tobias and Sara in Prayer. 1 And after they had supped, they brought in the young man to her. 2 And Tobias, remembering the angel's word, took out of his bag part of the liver, and laid it upon burning coals. 3 Then the angel Raphael took the devil, and bound him in the desert of upper Egypt.

4 Then Tobias exhorted the virgin, and said to her: Sara, arise, and let us pray to God today, and tomorrow, and the next day, because for these three nights we are joined to God, and when the third night is over, we will be in our own wedlock. 5 For we are the children of saints, and we must not be joined together like heathens that know not God. 6 So they both arose, and prayed earnestly both together that health might be given them. 7 And Tobias said: Lord God of our fathers, may the heavens and the earth, and the sea, and the fountains, and the rivers, and all thy creatures that are in them, bless thee. 8 [w] Thou madest Adam of the slime of the earth, and gavest him Eve for a helper. 9 And now, Lord, thou knowest that not for fleshly lust do I take my sister to wife, but only for the love of posterity, in which thy name may be blessed forever and ever. 10 Sara also said: Have mercy on us, O Lord, have mercy on us, and

11 And it came to pass about the cock-crowing, Raguel ordered his servants to be called for, and they went with him together to dig a grave. 12 For he said: Lest perhaps it may have happened to him in like manner as it did to the other seven husbands that went in unto her. 13 And when they had prepared the pit, Raguel went back to his wife, and said to her: 14 Send one of thy maids, and let her see if he be dead, that I may bury him before it be day. 15 So she sent one of her maidservants, who went into the chamber, and found them safe and sound, sleeping both together. 16 And returning she brought the good news. And Raguel and Anna his wife blessed the Lord, 17 and said: We bless thee, O Lord God of Israel, because it hath not happened as we suspected. 18 For thou hast shown thy mercy to us, and hast shut out from us the enemy that persecuted us. 19 And thou hast taken pity upon two only children. Make them, O Lord, to bless thee more fully, and to offer up to thee a sacrifice of thy praise and of their health, that all nations may know that thou alone art God in all the earth.

20 And immediately Raguel commanded his servants to fill up the pit they had made, before it was day. 21 And he spoke to his wife to make ready a feast, and prepare all kind of provisions that are necessary for such as go a journey. 22 He caused also two fat kine and four wethers to be killed, and a banquet to be prepared for all his neighbors and all his friends. 23 And Raguel adjured Tobias to abide with him two weeks. 24 And of all things which Raguel possessed, he gave one half to Tobias, and made a writing that the half that remained should after their decease come also to Tobias.

CHAPTER 9.

Raphael Recovers the Money. 1 Then Tobias called the angel to him, whom he took to be a man, and said to him: Brother Azarias, I pray thee hearken to my words: 2 If I should give myself to be thy servant, I should not make a worthy return for thy care. 3 However, I beseech thee, to take with thee beasts and servants, and to go to Gabelus to Rages the city of the Medes; and to restore to him his note of hand, and receive of him the money, and desire him to come to my wedding. 4 For thou knowest that my father numbereth the days: and if I stay one day more, his soul will be afflicted. 5 And indeed thou seest how Raguel hath adjured me, whose adjuring I cannot despise.

6 Then Raphael took four of Raguel's servants and two camels, and went to Rages the city of the Medes; and finding Gabelus, gave him his note of hand, and received of him all the money. 7 And he told him concerning Tobias the son of Tobias, all that had been done; and made him come with him to the wedding.

8 And when he was come into Raguel's house, he found Tobias sitting at the table. And he leaped up, and they kissed each other. And Gabelus wept, and blessed God, 9 and said: The God of Israel bless thee, because thou art the son of a very good and just man, that feareth God, and doth almsdeeds. 10 And may a blessing come upon thy wife and upon your parents. 11 And may you see your children, and your children's children, unto the third and fourth generation. And may your seed be blessed by the God of Israel, who reigneth forever and ever. 12 And when all had said, Amen, they went to the feast: but the marriage feast they celebrated also with the fear of the Lord.

CHAPTER 10.

The Long Absence of Tobias. 1 But as Tobias made longer stay upon occasion of the marriage, Tobias his father was solicitous, saying: Why thinkest thou doth my son tarry, or why is he detained there? 2 Is Gabelus dead, thinkest thou, and no man will pay him the money? 3 And he began to be exceeding sad, both he and Anna his wife with him: and they began both to weep together, because their son did not return to them on the day appointed. 4 x But his mother wept and was quite disconsolate, and said: Woe, woe is me! My son, why did we send thee to go to a strange country, the light of our eyes, the staff of our old age, the comfort of our life, the hope of our posterity? 5 We having all things together in thee alone, ought not to have let thee go from us. 6 And Tobias said to her: Hold thy peace, and be not troubled, our son is safe. That man with whom we sent him is very trusty. 7 But she could by no means be comforted, but daily running out looked round about, and went into all the ways by which there seemed any hope he might return, that she might if possible see him coming afar off.

8 But Raguel said to his son-in-law: Stay here, and I will send a messenger to Tobias thy father, that thou art in health. 9 And Tobias said to him: I know that my father and mother now count the days, and their spirit is grievously afflicted within them. 10 And when Raguel had pressed Tobias with many words, and he by no means would hearken to him, he delivered Sara unto him, and half of all his substance in menservants, and womenservants, in cattle, in camels, and in kine, and in much money, and sent him away safe and joyful from him, 11 saying: The holy angel of the Lord be with you in your journey, and bring you through safe, and that you may find all things well about your parents, and my eyes may see your children before I die. 12 And the parents taking their daughter kissed her, and let her go, 13 admonishing her to honor her father and mother-in-law, to love her husband, to take care of the family, to govern the house, and to behave herself irreprehensibly.

CHAPTER 11.

Tobias Restores His Father's Sight. 1 And as they were returning they came to Charan, which is in the midway to Ninive, the eleventh day. 2 And the angel said: Brother Tobias, thou knowest how thou didst leave thy father. 3 If it please thee therefore, let us go before, and let the family follow softly after us, together with thy wife, and with the beasts. 4 And as this their going pleased him, Raphael said to Tobias: Take with thee of the gall of the fish, for it will be necessary. So Tobias took some of that gall and departed.

5 But Anna sat beside the way daily, on the top of a hill, from whence she might see afar off. 6 And while she watched his coming from that place, she saw him afar off, and presently perceived it was her son coming. And returning she told her husband, saying: Behold thy son cometh.

7 And Raphael said to Tobias: As soon as thou shalt come into thy house, forthwith adore the Lord thy God; and giving thanks to him, go to thy father, and kiss him. 8 And immediately anoint his eyes with this gall of the fish, which thou carriest with thee. For be assured that his eyes shall be presently opened, and thy father shall see the light of heaven, and shall rejoice in the sight of thee.

9 Then the dog,* which had been with them in the way, ran before, and coming as if he had brought the news, showed his joy by his fawning and wagging his tail. 10 And his father that was blind, rising up, began to run stumbling with his feet; and giving a servant his hand, went to meet his son, 11 and receiving him kissed him, as did also his wife, and they began to weep for joy. 12 And when they had adored God, and given him thanks, they sat down together. 13 Then Tobias taking of the gall of the fish, anointed his father's eyes. 14 And he stayed about half an hour; and a white skin began to come out of his eyes, like the skin of an egg. 15 And Tobias took hold of it, and drew it from his eyes, and immediately he recovered his sight. 16 And they glorified God, both he and his wife and all that knew him. 17 And Tobias said: I bless thee, O Lord God of Israel, because thou hast chastised me, and thou hast saved me; and behold I see Tobias my son.

18 And after seven days, Sara his son's wife, and all the family arrived safe, and the cattle, and the camels, and an abundance of money of his wife's and that money also which he had received of Gabelus. 19 And he told his parents all the benefits of God, which he had done to him by the man that conducted him. 20 And Achior and Nabath the kinsmen of Tobias came, rejoicing for Tobias, and congratulating with him for all the good things that God had done for him. 21 And for seven days they feasted and rejoiced all with great joy.

CHAPTER 12.

Raphael Makes Himself Known. 1 Then Tobias called to him his son, and said to him: What can we give to this holy man, that is come with thee? 2 Tobias answering, said to his father: Father, 11, 9: The dog, etc.: this may seem a very minute circumstance to be recorded in sacred history, but we learn from our Savior, Mt 5, 18, that here are iotas and tittles in the word of God, that is to say, things that appear minute, but which have indeed a deep and mysterious meaning in them.

what wages shall we give him? Or what can be worthy of his benefits? 3 He conducted me and brought me safe again; he received the money of Gabelus; he caused me to have my wife, and he chased from her the evil spirit. He gave joy to her parents; myself he delivered from being devoured by the fish; thee also he hath made to see the light of heaven; and we are filled with all good things through him. What can we give him sufficient for these things? 4 But I beseech thee, my father, to desire him, that he would vouchsafe to accept of one half of all things that have been brought. 5 So the father and the son calling him, took him aside, and began to desire him that he would vouchsafe to accept of half of all things that they had brought.

6 Then he said to them secretly: Bless ye the God of heaven, give glory to him in the sight of all that live, because he hath shown his mercy to you. 7 For it is good to hide the secret of a king, but honorable to reveal and confess the works of God. 8 Prayer is good with fasting and alms more than to lay up treasures of gold, 9 for alms delivereth from death, and the same is that which purgeth away sins, and maketh to find mercy and life everlasting. 10 But they that commit sin and iniquity, are enemies to their own soul. 11 I discover then the truth unto you, and I will not hide the secret from you. 12 When thou didst pray with tears, and didst bury the dead, and didst leave thy dinner, and hide the dead by day in thy house, and bury them by night, I offered thy prayer to the Lord. 13 And because thou wast acceptable to God, it was necessary that temptation should prove thee. 14 And now the Lord hath sent me to heal thee, and to deliver Sara thy son's wife from the devil. 15 For I am the angel Raphael, one of the seven, who stand before the Lord.

16 And when they had heard these things, they were troubled, and being seized with fear they fell upon the ground on their face. 17 And the angel said to them: Peace be to you, fear not. 18 For when I was with you, I was there by the will of God. Bless ye him, and sing praises to him. 19 I seemed indeed to eat and to drink with you, but I use an invisible meat and drink, which cannot be seen by men. 20 It is time therefore that I return to him that sent me; but bless ye God, and publish all his wonderful works.

21 And when he had said these things, he was taken from their sight, and they could see him no more. 22 Then they lying prostrate for three hours upon their face, blessed God, and rising up, they told all his wonderful works.

III: THE HAPPINESS OF ALL

CHAPTER 13.

The Canticle of the Elder Tobias. 1 And Tobias the elder opening his mouth, blessed the Lord, and said: Thou art great, O Lord, forever, and thy kingdom is unto all ages. 2 y For thou scourgest, and thou savest; thou leadest down to hell, and bringest up again; and there is none that can escape thy hand.

3 Give glory to the Lord, ye children of Israel, and praise him in the sight of the Gentiles, 4 because he hath therefore scattered you among the Gentiles, who know not him, that you may declare his wonderful works, and make them know that there is no other almighty God besides him.

5 He hath chastised us for our iniquities; and he will save us for his own mercy. 6 See then what he hath done with us, and with fear and trembling give ye glory to him, and extol the eternal King of worlds in your works.

7 As for me, I will praise him in the land of my captivity, because he hath shown his majesty towards a sinful nation. 8 Be converted therefore, ye sinners, and do justice before God, believing that he will show his mercy to you. 9 And I and my soul will rejoice in him.

10 Bless ye the Lord, all his elect, keep days of joy, and give glory to him. 11 Jerusalem,* city of God, the Lord hath chastised thee for the works of thy hands. 12 Give glory to the Lord for thy good things, and bless the God eternal, that he may rebuild his tabernacle in thee, and may call back all the captives to thee, and thou mayest rejoice forever and ever.

13 Thou shalt shine with a glorious light; and all the ends of the earth shall worship thee. 14 [z] Nations from afar shall come to thee, and shall bring gifts, and shall adore the Lord in thee, and shall esteem thy land as holy. 15 For they shall call upon the great name in thee.

16 They shall be cursed that shall despise thee; and they shall be condemned that shall blaspheme thee; and blessed shall they be that shall build thee up. 17 But thou shalt rejoice in thy children, because they shall all be blessed, and shall be gathered together to the Lord. 18 Blessed are all they that love thee, and that rejoice in thy peace.

19 My soul, bless thou the Lord, because the Lord our God hath delivered Jerusalem his city from all her troubles. 20 Happy shall I be if there shall remain of my seed, to see the glory of Jerusalem.

21 [a] The gates of Jerusalem shall be built of sapphire, and of emerald, and all the walls thereof round about of precious stones. 22 All its streets shall be paved with white and clean stones, and Alleluia shall be sung in its streets. 23 Blessed be the Lord, who hath exalted it, and may he reign over it forever and ever, Amen.

CHAPTER 14.

Last Days of Tobias and His Son. 1 And the words of Tobias were ended. And after Tobias was restored to his sight, he lived two and forty years, and saw the children of his grandchildren. 2 And after he had lived a hundred and two years, he was buried honorably in Ninive. 3 For he was six and fifty years old when he lost the sight of his eyes, and sixty when he recovered it again. 4 And the rest of his life was in joy, and with great increase of the fear of God he departed in peace.

5 And at the hour of his death he called unto him his son Tobias and his children, seven young men, his grandsons, and said to them: 6 The destruction of Ninive is at hand, for the word of the Lord must be fulfilled; [b] and our brethren, that are scattered abroad from the land of Israel, shall return to it. 7 And all the land thereof that is desert shall be filled with people, and the house of God which is burnt in it, shall again be rebuilt; and all that fear God shall return thither. 8 And the Gentiles shall leave their idols, and shall come into Jerusalem, and shall dwell in it. 9 And all the kings of the earth shall rejoice in it, adoring the King of Israel.

10 Hearken therefore, my children, to your father. Serve the Lord in truth, and seek to do the things that please him; 11 and command your children that they do justice and almsdeeds, and that they be mindful of God, and bless him at all times in truth, and with all their power.

12 And now, children, hear me, and do not stay here, but as soon as you shall bury your mother by me in one sepulchre, without delay direct your steps to depart hence. 13 For I see that its iniquity will bring it to destruction.

14 And it came to pass that after the death of his mother, Tobias departed out of Ninive with his wife, and children, and children's children, and returned to his father and mother-in-law. 15 And he found them in health in a good old age; and he took care of them, and he closed their eyes. And all the inheritance of Raguel's house came to him; and he saw his children's children to the fifth generation. 16 And after he had lived ninety-nine years in the fear of the Lord, with joy they buried him. 17 And all his kindred, and all his generation continued in good life, and in holy conversation, so that they were acceptable both to God, and to men, and to all that dwelt in the land.

THE BOOK OF JUDITH

This Book is named after the woman whose sublime faith in God and heroic love of country are here recorded. By her valor she saved her people, when Holofernes and his army threatened to destroy them. The Book closes with her Canticle of thanksgiving to God.

I: NABUCHODONOSOR'S WAR AGAINST JUDEA

1. Holofernes Subdues the Western Countries

CHAPTER 1.

Arphaxad and Nabuchodonosor. 1 Now Arphaxad* king of the Medes had brought many nations under his dominions, and he built a very strong city, which he called Ecbatana, 2 of stones squared and hewed: he made the walls thereof seventy cubits broad, and thirty cubits high; and the towers thereof he made a hundred cubits high. But on the square of them, each side was extended the space of twenty feet. 3 And he made the gates thereof according to the height of the towers. 4 And he gloried as a mighty one in the force of his army and in the glory of his chariots.

5 Now in the twelfth year of his reign, Nabuchodonosor* king of the Assyrians, who reigned in Ninive the great city, fought against Arphaxad and overcame him 6 in the great plain which is called Ragua, about the Euphrates, and the Tigris, and the Jadason, in the plain of Erioch the king of the Elicians.

7 Then was the kingdom of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his heart was elevated. And he sent to all that dwelt in Cilicia and Damascus, and Libanus, 8 and to the nations that are in Carmelus, and Cedar, and to the inhabitants of Galilee in the great plain of Esdrelon, 9 and to all that were in Samaria, and beyond the river Jordan even to Jerusalem, and all the land of Jesse till you come to the borders of Ethiopia. 10 To all these Nabuchodonosor king of the Assyrians sent messengers. 11 But they all with one mind refused, and sent them back empty, and rejected them without honor. 12 Then king Nabuchodonosor being angry against all that land, swore by his throne and kingdom that he would revenge himself on all those countries.

CHAPTER 2.

Holofernes Prepares for War. 1 In the thirteenth year of the reign of Nabuchodonosor, the two and twentieth day of the first month, the word was given out in the house of Nabuchodonosor king of the Assyrians, that he would revenge himself. 2 And he called all the ancients, and all the governors, and his officers of war, and communicated to them the secret of his counsel. 3 And he said that his thoughts were to bring all the earth under his empire. 4 And when this saying pleased them all, Nabuchodonosor, the king, called Holofernes the general of his armies, 5 and said to him: Go out against all the kingdoms of the west, and against them especially that despised my commandment. 6 Thy eye shall not spare any kingdom, and all the strong cities thou shalt bring under my yoke.

7 Then Holofernes called the captains and officers of the power of the Assyrians. And he mustered men for the expedition, as the king commanded him: a hundred and twenty thousand fighting men on foot, and twelve thousand archers, horsemen. 8 And he made all his warlike preparations to go before with a multitude of innumerable camels, with all provisions sufficient for the armies in abundance, and herds of oxen and flocks of sheep without number. 9 He appointed corn to be prepared out of all Syria in his passage. 10 But gold and silver he took out of the king's house in great abundance. 11 And he went forth, he and all the army, with the chariots, and horsemen, and archers, who covered the face of the earth, like locusts.

12 And when he had passed through the borders of the Assyrians, he came to the great mountains of Ange, which are on the left of Cilicia; and he went up to all their castles, and took all the strong places. 13 And he took by assault the renowned city of Melothus, and pillaged all the children of Tharsis, and the children of Ismahel, who were over against the face of the desert, and on the south of the land of Cellon. 14 And he passed over the Euphrates, and came into Mesopotamia. And he forced all the stately cities that were there, from the torrent of Mambre, till one comes to the sea. 15 And he took the borders thereof, from Cilicia to the lands of Japheth, which are towards the south. 16 And he carried away all the children of Madian, and stripped them of all their riches, and all that re-

1, 5: Nabuchodonosor: not the king of Babylon, who took and destroyed Jerusalem, but another of the same name, who reigned in Ninive, and is called by profane historians Saosduchin. He succeeded Asarhaddon in the kingdom of the Assyrians, and was contemporary with Manasses king of Juda.

17 And after these things he went down into the plains of Damascus in the days of the harvest, and he set all the corn on fire, and he caused all the trees and vineyards to be cut down. 18 And the fear of them fell upon all the inhabitants of the land.

CHAPTER 3.

Many Submit to Holofernes. 1 Then the kings and the princes of all the cities and provinces, of Syria, Mesopotamia, and Syria Sobal, and Libya, and Cilicia sent their ambassadors, who coming to Holofernes said: 2 Let thy indignation towards us cease, for it is better for us to live and serve Nabuchodonosor the great king, and be subject to thee, than to die and to perish, or suffer the miseries of slavery. 3 All our cities and our possessions, all mountains and hills, and fields, and herds of oxen, and flocks of sheep, and goats, and horses, and camels, and all our goods, and families are in thy sight. 4 Let all we have be subject to thy law. 5 Both we and our children are thy servants. 6 Come to us a peaceable lord, and use our service as it shall please thee.

7 Then he came down from the mountains with horsemen, in great power, and made himself master of every city, and all the inhabitants of the land. 8 And from all the cities he took auxiliaries, valiant men, and chosen for war. 9 And so great a fear lay upon all those provinces, that the inhabitants of all the cities, both princes and nobles, as well as the people, went out to meet him at his coming, 10 and received him with garlands, and lights, and dances, and timbrels, and flutes. 11 And though they did these things, they could not for all that mitigate the fierceness of his heart. 12 For he both destroyed their cities, and cut down their groves. 13 For Nabuchodonosor the king had commanded him to destroy all the gods of the earth, that he only might be called god by those nations which could be brought under him by the power of Holofernes.

14 And when he had passed through all Syria Sobal, and all Apamea, and all Mesopotamia, he came to the Idumeans into the land of Gabaa, 15 and he took possession of their cities, and stayed there for thirty days, in which days he commanded all the troops of his army to be united.

CHAPTER 4.

Israel Prepares to Resist. 1 Then the children of Israel, who dwelt in the land of Juda, hearing these things, were exceedingly afraid of him. 2 Dread and horror seized upon their minds, lest he should do the same to Jerusalem and to the temple of the Lord, that he had done to other cities and their temples. 3 And they sent into all Samaria round about, as far as Jericho, and seized upon all the tops of the mountains. 4 And they compassed their towns with walls, and gathered together corn for provision for war. 5 And Eliachim the priest wrote to all that were over against Esdrelon, which faceth the great plain near Dothain, and to all by whom there might be a passage of way, that they should take possession of the ascents of the mountains, by which there might be any way to Jerusalem, and should keep watch where the way was narrow between the mountains. 6 And the children of Israel did as the priest of the Lord Eliachim had appointed them.

7 And all the people cried to the Lord with great earnestness, and they humbled their souls in fastings and prayers, both they and their wives. 8 And the priests put on haircloths, and they caused the little children to lie prostrate before the temple of the Lord, and the altar of the Lord they covered with haircloth. 9 And they cried to the Lord the God of Israel with one accord, that their children might not be made a prey, and their wives carried off, and their cities destroyed, and their holy things profaned, and that they might not be made a reproach to the Gentiles.

10 Then Eliachim the high priest of the Lord went about all Israel and spoke to them, 11 saying: Know ye that the Lord will hear your prayers, if you continue with perseverance in fastings and prayers in the sight of the Lord. 12 Remember Moses the servant of the Lord, who overcame Amalec that trusted in his own strength, and in his power, and in his army, and in his shields, and in his chariots, and in his horsemen, not by fighting with the sword, but by holy prayers. 13 [a] So shall all the enemies of Israel be, if you persevere in this work which you have begun. 14 So they being moved by this exhortation of his, prayed to the Lord, and continued in the sight of the Lord, 15 so that even they who offered the holocausts to the Lord, offered the sacrifices to the Lord girded with haircloths, and with ashes upon their head. 16 And they all begged of God with all their heart, that he would visit his people Israel.

CHAPTER 5.

Achior's Account of Israel. 1 And it was told Holofernes the general of the army of the Assyrians, that the children of Israel prepared themselves to resist, and had shut up the ways of the mountains. 2 And he was transported with exceeding great fury and indignation, and he called all the princes of Moab and the leaders of Ammon, 3 and he said to them: Tell me what is this people that besetteth the mountains; or what are their cities, and of what sort, and how great? Also what is their power, or what is their multitude; or who is the king over their warfare? 4 And why they above all that dwell in the east, have despised us, and have not come out to meet us, that they might receive us with peace?

5 Then Achior captain of all the children of Ammon answering, said: If thou vouchsafe, my lord, to hear, I will tell the truth in thy sight concerning this people, that dwelleth in the mountains; and there shall not a false word come out of my mouth. 6 This people is of the offspring of the Chaldeans. 7 b They dwelt first in Mesopotamia, because they would not follow the gods of their fathers, who were in the land of the Chaldeans. 8 Wherefore forsaking the ceremonies of their fathers, which consisted in the worship of many gods, 9 they worshiped one God of heaven, c who also commanded them to depart from thence, and to dwell in Charan. And when there was a famine over all the land, d they went down into Egypt, and there for four hundred years were so multiplied that the army of them could not be numbered. 10 And when the king of Egypt oppressed them, and made slaves of them to labor in clay and brick in the building of his cities, they cried to their Lord, and he struck the whole land of Egypt with divers plagues. 11 e And when the Egyptians had cast them out from them, and the plague had ceased from them, and they had a mind to take them again, and bring them back to their service, 12 f the God of heaven opened the sea to them in their flight, so that the waters were made to stand firm as a wall on either side; and they walked through the bottom of the sea and passed it dry foot. 13 And when an innumerable army of the Egyptians pursued after them in that place, they were so overwhelmed with the waters, that there was not one left to tell what had happened to posterity. 14 And after they came out of the Red Sea, they abode in the deserts of mount Sina, in which never man could dwell, or son of man rested. 15 There bitter fountains were made sweet for them to drink, and for forty years they received food from heaven. 16 Wheresoever they went in without bow and arrow, and without shield and sword, their God fought for them and overcame. 17 And there was no one that triumphed over this people, but when they departed from the worship of the Lord their God. 18 But as often as besides their own God, they worshiped any other, they were given to spoil, and to the sword, and to reproach. 19 And as often as they were penitent for having revolted from the worship of their God, the God of heaven gave them power to resist.

The Israelites Return to God. 20 So they overthrew the king of the Chanaanites, and of the Jebusites, and of the Pherezites, and of the Hethites, and of the Hevites, and of the Amorrhites, and all the mighty ones in Hesebon, and they possessed their lands and their cities. 21 And as long as they sinned not in the sight of their God, it was well with them, for their God hateth iniquity. 22 And even some years ago when they had revolted from the way which God had given them to walk therein, they were destroyed in battles by many nations; and very many of them were led away captive into a strange land. 23 But of late returning to the Lord their God, from the different places wherein they were scattered, they are come together and are gone up into all these mountains, and possess Jerusalem again, where their holies are. 24 Now

therefore, my lord, search if there be any iniquity of theirs in the sight of their God. Let us go up to them, because their God will surely deliver them to thee, and they shall be brought under the yoke of thy power. 25 But if there be no offense of this people in the sight of their God, we cannot resist them, because their God will defend them; and we shall be a reproach to the whole earth.

26 And it came to pass, when Achior had ceased to speak these words, all the great men of Holofernes were angry, and they had a mind to kill him, saying to each other: 27 Who is this, that saith the children of Israel can resist king Nabuchodonosor, and his armies, men unarmed, and without force, and without skill in the art of war? 28 That Achior therefore may know that he deceiveth us, let us go up into the mountains. And when the bravest of them shall be taken then shall he with them be stabbed with the sword: 29 that every nation may know that Nabuchodonosor is god of the earth, and besides him there is no other.

CHAPTER 6.

The Indignation of Holofernes. 1 And it came to pass when they had left off speaking, that Holofernes, being in a violent passion, said to Achior: 2 Because thou hast prophesied unto us, saying: That the nation of Israel is defended by their God: to show thee that there is no God, but Nabuchodonosor: 3 when we shall slay them all as one man, then thou also shalt die with them by the sword of the Assyrians; and all Israel shall perish with thee. 4 And thou shalt find that Nabuchodonosor is lord of the whole earth. And then the sword of my soldiers shall pass through thy sides; and thou shalt be stabbed and fall among the wounded of Israel; and thou shalt breathe no more, till thou be destroyed with them. 5 But if thou think thy prophecy true, let not thy countenance sink, and let the paleness that is in thy face, depart from thee, if thou imaginest these my words cannot be accomplished. 6 And that thou mayest know that thou shalt experience these things together with them, behold from this hour thou shalt be associated to their people, that when they shall receive the punishment they deserve from my sword, thou mayest fall under the same vengeance.

7 Then Holofernes commanded his servants to take Achior, and to lead him to Bethulia, and to deliver him into the hands of the children of Israel. 8 And the servants of Holofernes taking him went through the plains. But when they came near the mountains, the slingers came out against them. 9 Then turning out of the way by the side of the mountain, they tied Achior to a tree hand and foot, and so left him bound with ropes, and returned to their master.

10 And the children of Israel coming down from Bethulia, came to him, and loosing him they brought him to Bethulia; and setting him in the midst of the people, asked him what was the matter, that the Assyrians had left him bound. 11 In those days the rulers there were Ozias the son of Micha of the tribe of Simeon, and Charmi, called also Gothoniel. 12 And Achior related in the midst of the ancients, and in the presence of all the people, all that he had said being asked by Holofernes; and how the people of Holofernes would have killed him for this word. 13 And how Holofernes himself being angry had commanded him to be delivered for this cause to the Israelites; that when he should overcome the children of Israel, then he might command Achior also himself to be put to death by diverse torments, for having said: The God of heaven is their defender.

The Israelites Pray. 14 g And when Achior had declared all these things, all the people fell upon their faces, adoring the Lord. And all of them together mourning and weeping poured out their prayers with one accord to the Lord, 15 saying: O Lord God of heaven and earth, behold their pride, and look on our low condition, and have regard to the face of thy saints, and show that thou forsakest not them that trust on thee; and that thou humblest them that presume of themselves, and glory in their own strength.

16 So when their weeping was ended, and the people's prayer, in which they continued all the day, was concluded, they comforted Achior, 17 saying: The God of our fathers, whose power thou hast set forth, will make this return to

thee, that thou rather shalt see their destruction. 18 And when the Lord our God shall give this liberty to his servants, let God be with thee also in the midst of us, that, as it shall please thee, so thou with all thine mayest converse with us.

19 Then Ozias, after the assembly was broken up, received him into his house, and made him a great supper. 20 And all the ancients were invited, and they refreshed themselves together after their fast was over. 21 And afterwards all the people were called together, and they prayed all the night long within the church,* desiring help of the God of Israel.

II: SIEGE AND LIBERATION OF BETHULIA

CHAPTER 7.

The Siege of Bethulia. 1 But Holofernes on the next day gave orders to his army to go up against Bethulia. 2 Now there were in his troops a hundred and twenty thousand footmen, and two and twenty thousand horsemen, besides the preparations of those men who had been taken, and who had been brought away out of the provinces and cities of all the youth. 3 All these prepared themselves together to fight against the children of Israel. And they came by the hillside to the top, which looks towards Dothain, from the place which is called Belma, unto Chelmo, which is over against Esdrelon. 4 But the children of Israel, when they saw the multitude of them, prostrated themselves upon the ground, putting ashes upon their heads, praying with one accord that the God of Israel would show his mercy upon his people. 5 And taking their arms of war, they posted themselves at the places, which by a narrow pathway lead directly between the mountains, and they guarded them all day and night.

6 Now Holofernes, in going round about, found that the fountain which supplied them with water, ran through an aqueduct without the city on the south side. And he commanded their aqueduct to be cut off. 7 Nevertheless there were springs not far from the walls, out of which they were seen secretly to draw water, to refresh themselves a little rather than to drink their fill. 8 But the children of Ammon and Moab came to Holofernes, saying: The children of Israel trust not in their spears, nor in their arrows, but the mountains are their defense, and the steep hills and precipices guard them. 9 Wherefore that thou mayest overcome them without joining battle, set guards at the springs that they may not draw water out of them, and thou shalt destroy them without sword; or at least being wearied out they will yield up their city, which they suppose, because it is situated in the mountains, to be impregnable. 10 And these words pleased Holofernes and his officers, and he placed all round about a hundred men at every spring.

The Distress and Prayer of the People. 11 And when they had kept this watch for full twenty days, the cisterns and the reserve of waters failed among all the inhabitants of Bethulia, so that there was not within the city enough to satisfy them; no not for one day, for water was daily given out to the people by measure.

12 Then all the men and women, young men, and children, gathering themselves together to Ozias, all together with one voice 13 said: h God be judge between us and thee, for thou hast done evil against us, in that thou wouldst not speak peaceably with the Assyrians, and for this cause God hath sold us into their hands. 14 And therefore there is no one to help us, while we are cast down before their eyes in thirst and sad destruction. 15 And now assemble ye all that are in the city, that we may of our own accord yield ourselves all up to the people of Holofernes. 16 For it is better that being captives we should live and bless the Lord, than that we should die, and be a reproach to all flesh, after we have seen our wives and our infants die before our eyes. 17 We call to witness this day heaven and earth and the God of our fathers, who taketh vengeance upon us according to our sins, conjuring you to deliver now the city into the hand of the army of Holofernes, that our end may be short by the edge of the sword, which is made longer by the drought of thirst. 18 And when they had said these things, there was great weeping and lamentation of all in the assembly, and for many hours with one voice they cried to God, saying: 19 i We have sinned with our fathers, we have done

h Ex 5, 21.—1 Ps 105 (106), 6.

6, 21: The church: i.e., the synagogue or place where they met for prayer.

unjustly, we have committed iniquity. 20 Have thou mercy on us, because thou art good, or punish our iniquities by chastising us thyself, and deliver not them that trust in thee to a people that knoweth not thee, 21 that they may not say among the Gentiles: Where is their God?

22 And when being wearied with these cries, and tired with these weepings, they held their peace, 23 Ozias rising up all in tears said: Be of good courage, my brethren, and let us wait these five days for mercy from the Lord. 24 For perhaps he will put a stop to his indignation, and will give glory to his own name. 25 But if after five days be past there come no aid, we will do the things which you have spoken.

CHAPTER 8.

The Intervention of Judith. 1 Now it came to pass, when Judith a widow had heard these words, who was the daughter of Merari, the son of Idox, the son of Joseph, the son of Ozias, the son of Elai, the son of Jamnor, the son of Gedeon, the son of Raphaim, the son of Achitob, the son of Melchias, the son of Enan, the son of Nathanias, the son of Salathiel, the son of Simeon, the son of Ruben.* 2 And her husband was Manasses, who died in the time of the barley harvest. 3 For he was standing over them that bound sheaves in the field, and the heat came upon his head, and he died in Bethulia his own city, and was buried there with his fathers. 4 And Judith his relict was a widow now three years and six months. 5 And she made herself a private chamber in the upper part of her house, in which she abode shut up with her maids. 6 And she wore haircloth upon her loins, and fasted all the days of her life, except the sabbaths, and new moons, and the feasts of the house of Israel. 7 And she was exceedingly beautiful, and her husband left her great riches, and very many servants, and large possessions of herds of oxen and flocks of sheep. 8 And she was greatly renowned among all, because she feared the Lord very much, neither was there anyone that spoke an ill word of her.

9 When therefore she had heard that Ozias had promised that he would deliver up the city after the fifth day, she sent to the ancients Chabri and Charmi. 10 And they came to her, and she said to them: What is this word, by which Ozias hath consented to give up the city to the Assyrians, if within five days there come no aid to us? 11 And who are you that tempt the Lord? 12 This is not a word that may draw down mercy, but rather that may stir up wrath, and enkindle indignation. 13 You have set a time for the mercy of the Lord, and you have appointed him a day, according to your pleasure. 14 But forasmuch as the Lord is patient, let us be penitent for this same thing, and with many tears let us beg his pardon. 15 For God will not threaten like man, nor be inflamed to anger like the son of man. 16 And therefore let us humble our souls before him, and continuing in an humble spirit in his service, 17 let us ask the Lord with tears, that according to his will so he would show his mercy to us, that as our heart is troubled by their pride, so also we may glorify in our humility. 18 For we have not followed the sins of our fathers, who forsook their God, and worshiped strange gods. 19 For which crime they were given up to their enemies, to the sword, and to pillage, and to confusion; but we know no other God but him. 20 Let us humbly wait for his consolation; and the Lord our God will require our blood of the afflictions of our enemies, and he will humble all the nations that shall rise up against us, and bring them to disgrace.

Judith Inspires Courage. 21 And now, brethren, as you are the ancients among the people of God, and their very soul resteth upon you, comfort their hearts by your speech, that they may be mindful how our fathers were tempted that they might be proved, whether they worshiped their God truly. 22 i They must remember how our father Abraham was tempted, and being proved by many tribulations, was made the friend of God. 23 So Isaac, so Jacob, so Moses, and all that have pleased God, passed through many tribulations, remaining faithful. 24 But they that did not receive the trials with

8, 1: Simeon, the son of Ruben: in the Greek, it is the son of Israel. For Simeon the patriarch, from whom Judith descended, was not the son, but the brother of Ruben. It seems more probable that the Simeon and the Ruben here mentioned are not the patriarchs, but two of the descendants of the patriarch Simeon; and that the genealogy of Judith, recorded in this place, is not carried up so high as the patriarchs. No more than that of Elcana the father of Samuel, 1 Kgs 1, 1, and that of king Saul, 1 Kgs 9, 1.

the fear of the Lord, but uttered their impatience and the reproach of their murmuring against the Lord, [25] k were destroyed by the destroyer, and perished by serpents. [26] As for us therefore, let us not revenge ourselves for these things which we suffer. [27] But esteeming these very punishments to be less than our sins deserve, let us believe that these scourges of the Lord, with which like servants we are chastised, have happened for our amendment, and not for our destruction.

[28] And Ozias and the ancients said to her: All things which thou hast spoken are true, and there is nothing to be reprehended in thy words. [29] Now therefore pray for us, for thou art a holy woman, and one fearing God.

[30] And Judith said to them: As you know that what I have been able to say is of God, [31] so that which I intend to do prove ye if it be of God, and pray that God may strengthen my design. [32] You shall stand at the gate this night; and I will go out with my maidservant, and pray ye that, as you have said, in five days the Lord may look down upon his people Israel. [33] But I desire that you search not into what I am doing, and till I bring you word let nothing else be done but to pray for me to the Lord our God. [34] And Ozias the prince of Juda said to her: Go in peace, and the Lord be with thee to take revenge of our enemies. So returning they departed.

CHAPTER 9.

The Prayer of Judith. [1] And when they were gone, Judith went into her oratory, and putting on haircloth, laid ashes on her head; and falling down prostrate before the Lord, she cried to the Lord, saying: [2] O Lord God of my father Simeon, l who gavest him a sword* to execute vengeance against strangers, who had defiled by their uncleanness, and uncovered the virgin unto confusion, [3] and who gavest their wives to be made a prey and their daughters into captivity, and all their spoils to be divided to thy servants, who were zealous with thy zeal, assist, I beseech thee, O Lord God, me a widow. [4] For thou hast done the things of old, and hast devised one thing after another; and what thou hast designed hath been done. [5] For all thy ways are prepared, and in thy providence thou hast placed thy judgments. [6] m Look upon the camp of the Assyrians now, as thou wast pleased to look upon the camp of the Egyptians, when they pursued armed after thy servants, trusting in their chariots, and in their horsemen, and in a multitude of warriors. [7] But thou lookedst over their camp, and darkness wearied them. [8] The deep held their feet, and the waters overwhelmed them. [9] So may it be with these also, O Lord, who trust in their multitude, and in their chariots, and in their pikes, and in their shields, and in their arrows, and glory in their spears, [10] and know not that thou art our God, who destroyest wars from the beginning, and the Lord is thy name. [11] Lift up thy arm as from the beginning, and crush their power with thy power. Let their power fall in their wrath, who promise themselves to violate thy sanctuary, and defile the dwelling place of thy name, and to beat down with their sword the horn of thy altar. [12] Bring to pass, O Lord, that his pride may be cut off with his own sword. [13] Let him be caught in the net of his own eyes in my regard, and do thou strike him by the graces of the words of my lips.

[14] Give me constancy in my mind, that I may despise him; and fortitude, that I may overthrow him. [15] n For this will be a glorious monument for thy name, when he shall fall by the hand of a woman. [16] For thy power, O Lord, is not in a multitude, nor is thy pleasure in the strength of horses, nor from the beginning have the proud been acceptable to thee; but the prayer of the humble and the meek hath always pleased thee.

[17] O God of the heavens, creator of the waters, and Lord of the whole creation, hear me a poor wretch, making supplication to thee, and presuming of thy mercy. [18] Remember, O Lord, thy covenant, and put thou words in my mouth, and strengthen the resolution in my heart, that thy house may continue in thy holiness: [19] and all nations may acknowledge that thou art God, and there is no other besides thee.

Judith Appears before Holofernes. 1 And it came to pass, when she had ceased to cry to the Lord, that she rose from the place wherein she lay prostrate before the Lord. 2 And she called her maid, and going down into her house she took off her haircloth, and put away the garments of her widowhood. 3 And she washed her body, and anointed herself with the best ointment, and plaited the hair of her head, and put a bonnet upon her head, and clothed herself with the garments of her gladness; and put sandals on her feet, and took her bracelets, and lilies, and earlets, and rings, and adorned herself with all her ornaments. 4 And the Lord also gave her more beauty, because all this dressing did not proceed from sensuality, but from virtue. And therefore the Lord increased this her beauty, so that she appeared to all men's eyes incomparably lovely. 5 And she gave to her maid a bottle of wine to carry, and a vessel of oil, and parched corn, and dry figs, and bread and cheese, and went out.

6 And when they came to the gate of the city, they found Ozias and the ancients of the city waiting. 7 And when they saw her they were astonished, and admired her beauty exceedingly. 8 But they asked her no question, only they let her pass, saying: The God of our fathers give thee grace, and may he strengthen all the counsel of thy heart with his power, that Jerusalem may glory in thee, and thy name may be in the number of the holy and just. 9 And they that were there said, all with one voice: So be it, so be it. 10 But Judith praying to the Lord, passed through the gates, she and her maid.

11 And it came to pass, when she went down the hill, about break of day, that the watchmen of the Assyrians met her, and stopped her, saying: Whence comest thou? Or whither goest thou? 12 And she answered: I am a daughter of the Hebrews, and I am fled from them, because I knew* they would be made a prey to you, because they despised you, and would not of their own accord yield themselves, that they might find mercy in your sight. 13 For this reason I thought with myself, saying: I will go to the presence of the prince Holofernes, that I may tell him their secrets, and show him by what way he may take them, without the loss of one man of his army. 14 And when the men had heard her words, they beheld her face, and their eyes were amazed, for they wondered exceedingly at her beauty. 15 And they said to her: Thou hast saved thy life by taking this resolution, to come down to our lord. 16 And be assured of this, that when thou shalt stand before him, he will treat thee well, and thou wilt be most acceptable to his heart. And they brought her to the tent of Holofernes, telling him of her.

17 And when she was come into his presence, forthwith Holofernes was caught by his eyes. 18 And his officers said to him: Who can despise the people of the Hebrews, who have such beautiful women, that we should not think it worth our while for their sakes to fight against them? 19 And Judith seeing Holofernes sitting under a canopy, which was woven of purple and gold, with emeralds and precious stones, 20 after she had looked on his face, bowed down to him, prostrating herself to the ground. And the servants of Holofernes lifted her up, by the command of their master.

CHAPTER 11.

Judith's Speech to Holofernes. 1 Then Holofernes said to her: Be of good comfort, and fear not in thy heart, for I have never hurt a man that was willing to serve Nabuchodonosor the king. 2 And if thy people had not despised me, I would never have lifted up my spear against them. 3 But now tell me, for what cause hast thou left them, and why it hath pleased thee to come to us?

4 And Judith said to him: Receive the words of thy handmaid, for if thou wilt follow the words of thy handmaid, the Lord will do with thee a perfect thing. 5 For as Nabuchodonosor the king of the earth liveth, and his power liveth which is in thee for chastising of all straying souls; not only men serve him through thee, but also the beasts of the field obey him. 6 For the industry of thy mind is spoken of among all nations, and it is told through the whole world that thou only art excellent, and mighty in all his kingdom, and thy discipline is cried up in all provinces. [7] o It is known also what Achior said, nor are we ignorant of what thou hast commanded to be done to him. [8] For it is certain that our God is so offended with sins that he hath sent word by his prophets to the people, that he will deliver them up for their sins. [9] And because the children of Israel know they have offended their God, thy dread is upon them. [10] Moreover also a famine hath come upon them, and for drought of water they are already to be counted among the dead. [11] And they have a design even to kill their cattle, and to drink the blood of them. [12] And the consecrated things of the Lord their God which God forbade them to touch, in corn, wine, and oil, these have they purposed to make use of. And they design to consume the things which they ought not to touch with their hands. Therefore because they do these things, it is certain they will be given up to destruction. [13] And I thy handmaid knowing this, am fled from them, and the Lord hath sent me to tell thee these very things. [14] For I thy handmaid worship God even now that I am with thee, and thy handmaid will go out, and I will pray to God, [15] and he will tell me when he will repay them for their sins, and I will come and tell thee, so that I may bring thee through the midst of Jerusalem. And thou shalt have all the people of Israel, as sheep that have no shepherd; and there shall not so much as one dog bark against thee, [16] because these things are told me by the providence of God. [17] And because God is angry with them, I am sent to tell these very things to thee.

[18] And all these words pleased Holofernes and his servants, and they admired her wisdom, and they said one to another: [19] There is not such another woman upon earth in look, in beauty, and in sense of words. [20] And Holofernes said to her: God hath done well who sent thee before the people, that thou mightest give them into our hands. [21] And because thy promise is good, if thy God shall do this for me, he shall also be my God, and thou shalt be great in the house of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shall be renowned through all the earth.

CHAPTER 12.

Judith in the Company of the Assyrians. [1] Then he ordered that she should go in where his treasures were laid up, and bade her tarry there, and he appointed what should be given her from his own table. [2] And Judith answered him and said: Now I cannot eat of these things which thou commandest to be given me, lest sin come upon me; but I will eat of the things which I have brought. [3] And Holofernes said to her: If these things which thou hast brought with thee fail thee, what shall we do for thee? [4] And Judith said: As thy soul liveth, my lord, thy handmaid shall not spend all these things till God do by my hand that which I have purposed. And his servants brought her into the tent which he had commanded. [5] And when she was going in, she desired that she might have liberty to go out at night and before day to prayer, and to beseech the Lord. [6] And he commanded his chamberlains, that she might go out and in, to adore her God as she pleased, for three days. [7] And she went out in the nights into the valley of Bethulia, and washed herself in a fountain of water. [8] And as she came up, she prayed to the Lord the God of Israel, that he would direct her way to the deliverance of his people. [9] And going in, she remained pure in the tent, until she took her own meat in the evening.

[10] And it came to pass on the fourth day, that Holofernes made a supper for his servants, and said to Vagao his eunuch: Go, and persuade that Hebrew woman to consent of her own accord to dwell with me. [11] For it is looked upon as shameful among the Assyrians, if a woman mock a man, by doing so as to pass free from him.

[12] Then Vagao went in to Judith, and said: Let not my good maid be afraid to go in to my lord, that she may be honored before his face, that she may eat with him and drink wine and be merry. [13] And Judith answered him: Who am I, that I should gainsay my lord? [14] All that shall be good and best before his eyes, I will do. And whatsoever shall please him, that shall be best to me all the days of my life. [15] And she arose and dressed herself out with her garments, and going in she stood before his face. [16] And the heart of Holofernes was smitten, for he was burning with the desire of her. 17 And Holofernes said to her: Drink now, and sit down and be merry, for thou hast found favor before me. 18 And Judith said: I will drink my lord, because my life is magnified this day above all my days. 19 And she took and ate and drank before him what her maid had prepared for her. 20 And Holofernes was made merry on her occasion, and drank exceeding much wine, so much as he had never drunk in his life.

Judith Slays Holofernes. 1 And when it was grown late, his servants made haste to their lodgings, and Vagao shut the chamber doors, and went his way. 2 And they were all overcharged with wine. 3 And Judith was alone in the chamber. 4 But Holofernes lay on his bed, fast asleep, being exceedingly drunk. 5 And Judith spoke to her maid to stand without before the chamber, and to watch.

6 And Judith stood before the bed praying with tears, and the motion of her lips in silence, 7 saying: Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israel; and in this hour look on the works of my hands, that as thou hast promised, thou mayest raise up Jerusalem thy city; and that I may bring to pass that which I have purposed, having a belief that it might be done by thee. 8 And when she had said this, she went to the pillar that was at his bed's head, and loosed his sword that hung tied upon it. 9 And when she had drawn it out, she took him by the hair of his head, and said: Strengthen me, O Lord God, at this hour. 10 And she struck twice upon his neck, and cut off his head, and took off his canopy from the pillars, and rolled away his headless body. 11 And after a while she went out, and delivered the head of Holofernes to her maid, and bade her put it into her wallet.

Judith Returns to Bethulia. 12 And they two went out according to their custom, as it were to prayer, and they passed the camp, and having compassed the valley, they came to the gate of the city. 13 And Judith from afar off cried to the watchmen upon the walls: Open the gates for God is with us, who hath shown his power in Israel.

14 And it came to pass, when the men had heard her voice, that they called the ancients of the city. 15 And all ran to meet her from the least to the greatest, for they now had no hopes that she would come. 16 And lighting up lights they all gathered round about her. And she went up to a higher place, and commanded silence to be made. And when all had held their peace, 17 Judith said: Praise ye the Lord our God, who hath not forsaken them that hope in him. 18 And by me his handmaid he hath fulfilled his mercy, which he promised to the house of Israel. And he hath killed the enemy of his people by my hand this night. 19 Then she brought forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet, and showed it them, saying: Behold the head of Holofernes the general of the army of the Assyrians; and behold his canopy, wherein he lay in his drunkenness, where the Lord our God slew him by the hand of a woman. 20 But as the same Lord liveth, his angel hath been my keeper both going hence, and abiding there, and returning from thence hither. And the Lord hath not suffered me his handmaid to be defiled, but hath brought me back to you without pollution of sin, rejoicing for his victory, for my escape, and for your deliverance. 21 p Give all of you glory to him, because he is good, because his mercy endureth forever.

22 And they all adored the Lord, and said to her: The Lord hath blessed thee by his power, because by thee he hath brought our enemies to naught. 23 And Ozias the prince of the people of Israel, said to her: Blessed art thou, O daughter, by the Lord the most high God, above all women upon the earth. 24 Blessed be the Lord who made heaven and earth, who hath directed thee to the cutting off the head of the prince of our enemies, 25 because he hath so magnified thy name this day, that thy praise shall not depart out of the mouth of men who shall be mindful of the power of the Lord forever; for that thou hast not spared thy life, by reason of the distress and tribulation of thy people, but hast prevented our ruin in the presence of our God. 26 And all the people said: So be it, so be it.

27 And Achior being called for came, and Judith said to him: The God of Israel, to whom thou gavest testimony, that he revengeth himself of his enemies, he hath cut off the head of all the unbelievers this night by my hand. 28 And that thou mayest find that it is so, behold the head of Holofernes, who in the contempt of his pride despised the God of Israel, and threatened thee with death, saying: When the people of Israel shall be taken, I will command thy sides to be pierced with a sword. 29 Then Achior seeing the head of Holofernes, being seized with a great fear he fell on his face upon the earth, and his soul swooned away. 30 But after he had recovered his spirits he fell down at her feet, and reverenced her, and said: 31 Blessed art thou by thy God in every tabernacle of Jacob, for in every nation which shall hear thy name, the God of Israel shall be magnified on occasion of thee.

CHAPTER 14.

The Israelites Assault the Assyrians. 1 And Judith said to all the people: Hear me, my brethren, hang ye up this head upon our walls. 2 And as soon as the sun shall rise, let every man take his arms, and rush ye out, not as going down beneath, but as making an assault. 3 Then the watchmen must needs run to awake their prince for the battle. 4 And when the captains of them shall run to the tent of Holofernes, and shall find him without his head wallowing in his blood, fear shall fall upon them. 5 And when you shall know that they are fleeing, go after them securely, for the Lord will destroy them under your feet.

6 Then Achior seeing the power that the God of Israel had wrought, leaving the religion of the Gentiles, he believed God, and circumcised the flesh of his foreskin, and was joined to the people of Israel, with all the succession of his kindred until this present day.

7 And immediately at break of day, they hung up the head of Holofernes upon the walls, and every man took his arms, and they went out with a great noise and shouting. 8 And the watchmen seeing this, ran to the tent of Holofernes. 9 And they that were in the tent came, and made a noise before the door of the chamber to awake him, endeavoring by art to break his rest, that Holofernes might awake, not by their calling him, but by their noise. 10 For no man durst knock, or open and go into the chamber of the general of the Assyrians. 11 But when his captains and tribunes were come, and all the chiefs of the army of the king of the Assyrians, they said to the chamberlains: 12 Go in, and awake him, for the mice, coming out of their holes, have presumed to challenge us to fight.

13 Then Vagao going into his chamber, stood before the curtain, and made a clapping with his hands, for he thought that he was sleeping with Judith. 14 But when, with hearkening, he perceived no motion of one lying, he came near to the curtain, and lifting it up, and seeing the body of Holofernes lying upon the ground, without the head, weltering in his blood, he cried out with a loud voice, with weeping, and rent his garments. 15 And he went into the tent of Judith, and not finding her, he ran out to the people, 16 and said: One Hebrew woman hath made confusion in the house of king Nabuchodonosor, for behold Holofernes lieth upon the ground, and his head is not upon him. 17 Now when the chiefs of the army of the Assyrians had heard this, they all rent their garments, and an intolerable fear and dread fell upon them, and their minds were troubled exceedingly. 18 And there was a very great cry in the midst of their camp.

The Assyrians Are Routed. 1 And when all the army heard that Holofernes was beheaded, courage and counsel fled from them, and being seized with trembling and fear they thought only to save themselves by flight; 2 so that no one spoke to his neighbor, but hanging down the head, leaving all things behind, they made haste to escape from the Hebrews, who, as they heard, were coming armed upon them, and fled by the ways of the fields and the paths of the hills. 3 So the children of Israel seeing them fleeing, followed after them. And they went down sounding with trumpets and shouting after them. 4 And because the Assyrians were not united together, they went without order in their flight; but the children of Israel pursuing in one body, defeated all that they could find.

5 And Ozias sent messengers through all the cities and countries of Israel. 6 And every country, and every city, sent their chosen young men armed after them, and they pursued them with the edge of the sword until they came to the extremities of their confines. 7 And the rest that were in Bethulia went into the camp of the Assyrians, and took away the spoils, which the Assyrians in their flight had left behind them, and they were laden exceedingly. 8 But they that returned conquerors to Bethulia, brought with them all things that were theirs, so that there was no numbering of their cattle, and beasts, and all their moveables, insomuch that from the least to the greatest all were made rich by their spoils.

III: THE DELIVERANCE IS CELEBRATED

9 And Joachim the high priest came from Jerusalem to Bethulia with all his ancients to see Judith. 10 And when she was come out to him, they all blessed her with one voice, saying: Thou art the glory of Jerusalem, thou art the joy of Israel, thou art the honor of our people. 11 For thou hast done manfully, and thy heart has been strengthened, because thou hast loved chastity, and after thy husband hast not known any other. Therefore also the hand of the Lord hath strengthened thee, and therefore thou shalt be blessed forever. 12 And all the people said: So be it, so be it.

13 And thirty days were scarce sufficient for the people of Israel to gather up the spoils of the Assyrians. 14 But all those things that were proved to be the peculiar goods of Holofernes, they gave to Judith in gold, and silver, and garments and precious stones, and all household stuff, and they all were delivered to her by the people. 15 And all the people rejoiced, with the women, and virgins, and young men, playing on instruments and harps.

CHAPTER 16.

The Canticle of Judith. 1 Then Judith sung this canticle to the Lord, saying: 2 Begin ye to the Lord with timbrels, sing ye to the Lord with cymbals, tune unto him a new psalm, extol and call upon his name.

3 The Lord putteth an end to wars, the Lord is his name. 4 He hath set his camp in the midst of his people, to deliver us from the hand of all our enemies.

5 The Assyrian came out of the mountains from the north in the multitude of his strength. His multitude stopped up the torrents, and their horses covered the valleys.

6 He bragged that he would set my borders on fire, and kill my young men with the sword, to make my infants a prey, and my virgins captives.

7 But the almighty Lord hath struck him, and hath delivered him into the hands of a woman, and hath slain him. 8 For their mighty one did not fall by young men, neither did the sons of Titan strike him, nor tall giants oppose themselves to him; but Judith the daughter of Merari weakened him with the beauty of her face. 9 For she put off her the garments of widowhood, and put on her the garments of joy, to give joy to the children of Israel. 10 She anointed her face with ointment, and bound up her locks with a crown; she took a new robe to deceive him. 11 Her sandals ravished his eyes, her beauty made his soul her captive, with a sword she cut off his head.

12 The Persians quaked at her constancy, and the Medes at her boldness. 13 Then the camp of the Assyrians howled, when my lowly ones appeared, parched with thirst.

14 The sons of the damsels have pierced them through, and they have killed them like children fleeing away. They perished in battle before the face of the Lord my God.

15 Let us sing a hymn to the Lord, let us sing a new hymn to our God. 16 O Adonai, Lord, greatest art thou, and glorious in thy power, and no one can overcome thee.

17 q Let all thy creatures serve thee, because thou hast spoken, and they were made. Thou didst send forth thy spirit, and they were created, and there is no one that can resist thy voice.

18 The mountains shall be moved from the foundations with the waters. The rocks shall melt as wax before thy face. 19 But they that fear thee, shall be great with thee in all things.

20 Woe be to the nation that riseth up against my people, for the Lord almighty will take revenge on them, in the day of judgment he will visit them. 21 For he will give fire and worms into their flesh, that they may burn, and may feel forever.

22 And it came to pass after these

things, that all the people, after the victory, came to Jerusalem to adore the Lord; and as soon as they were purified, they all offered holocausts, and vows, and their promises. 23 And Judith offered for an anathema of oblivion* all the arms of Holofernes, which the people gave her, and the canopy that she had taken away out of his chamber. 24 And the people were joyful in the sight of the sanctuary, and for three months the joy of this victory was celebrated with Judith.

The Last Days of Judith. 25 And after those days every man returned to his house, and Judith was made great in Bethulia, and she was most renowned in all the land of Israel. 26 And chastity was joined to her virtue, so that she knew no man all the days of her life, after the death of Manasses her husband. 27 And on festival days she came forth with great glory. 28 And she abode in her husband's house a hundred and five years, and made her handmaid free, and she died, and was buried with her husband in Bethulia. 29 And all the people mourned for seven days. 30 And all the time of her life there was none that troubled Israel, nor many years after her death.

31 But the day of the festivity of this victory is received by the Hebrews in the number of holy days, and is religiously observed by the Jews from that time until this day.

16, 23: An anathema of oblivion: i.e., a gift or offering made to God by way of an everlasting monument, to prevent the oblivion of forgetting so great a benefit.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER

This Book takes its name from Esther, the Jewish Queen of the King of Persia, who saved her subjects from annihilation.

I: PERIL OF THE JEWS

CHAPTER 1.

The Disgrace of Queen Vasthi. 1 In the days of Assuerus, who reigned from India to Ethiopia over a hundred and twenty-seven provinces, 2 when he sat on the throne of his kingdom, the city Susan was the capital of his kingdom.

3 Now in the third year [a] of his reign he made a great feast for all the princes, and for his servants, for the most mighty of the Persians, and the nobles of the Medes, and the governors of the provinces in his sight, 4 that he might show the riches of the glory of his kingdom, and the greatness, and boasting of his power, for a long time, to wit, for a hundred and fourscore days.

5 And when the days of the feast were expired, he invited all the people that were found in Susan, from the greatest to the least; and commanded a feast to be made seven days in the court of the garden, and of the wood, which was planted by the care and the hand of the king. 6 And there were hung up on every side sky-colored, and green, and violet hangings, fastened with cords of silk and of purple, which were put into rings of ivory, and were held up with marble pillars. The beds also were of gold and silver, placed in order upon a floor paved with porphyry and white marble, which was embellished with painting of wonderful variety. 7 And they that were invited, drank in golden cups, and the meats were brought in divers vessels one after another. Wine also in abundance and of the best was presented, as was worthy of a king's magnificence. 8 Neither was there anyone to compel them to drink that were not willing, but as the king had appointed, who set over every table one of his nobles, that every man might take what he would. 9 Also Vasthi the queen made a feast for the women in the palace, where king Assuerus was used to dwell.

The Sorrow of the King. 10 Now on the seventh day, when the king was merry, and after very much drinking was well warmed with wine, he commanded Mauman, and Bazatha, and Harbona, and Bagatha, and Abgatha, and Zethar, and Charcas, the seven eunuchs that served in his presence, [11] to bring in queen Vasthi before the king, with the crown set upon her head, to show her beauty to all the people and the princes, for she was exceeding beautiful. [12] But she refused, and would not come at the king's commandment, which he had signified to her by the eunuchs. Whereupon the king, being angry, and inflamed with a very great fury, [13] asked the wise men, who according to the custom of the kings, were always near his person, and all he did was by their counsel, who knew the laws, and judgments of their forefathers [14] (now the chief and nearest him were, Charsena, and Sethar, and Admatha, and Tharsis, and Mares, and Marsana, and Mamuchan, seven princes of the Persians, and of the Medes, who saw the face of the king, and were used to sit first after him), [15] what sentence ought to pass upon Vasthi the queen, who had refused to obey the commandment of king Assuerus, which he had sent to her by the eunuchs.

[16] And Mamuchan answered, in the hearing of the king and the princes: Queen Vasthi hath not only injured the king, but also all the people and princes that are in all the provinces of king Assuerus. [17] For this deed of the queen will go abroad to all women, so that they will despise their husbands, and will say: King Assuerus commanded that queen Vasthi should come in to him, and she would not. [18] And by this example all the wives of the princes of the Persians and the Medes will slight the commandments of their husbands. Wherefore the king's indignation is just. [19] If it please thee, let an edict go out from thy presence, and let it be written according to the law of the Persians and of the Medes, which must not be altered, that Vasthi come in no more to the king, but another that is better than she, be made queen in her place. [20] And let this be published through all the provinces of thy empire (which is very wide), and let all wives, as well of the greater as of the lesser, give honor to their husbands.

[21] His counsel pleased the king and the princes. And the king did according to the counsel of Mamuchan. [22] And he sent letters to all the provinces of his kingdom, as every nation could hear and read, in divers languages and characters, that the husbands should be rulers and masters in their houses, and that this should be published to every people.

CHAPTER 2.

Esther Is Advanced To Be Queen. [1] After this, when the wrath of king Assuerus was appeased, he remembered Vasthi, and what she had done and what she had suffered. [2] And the king's servants and his officers said: Let young women be sought for the king, virgins and beautiful, [3] and let some persons be sent through all the provinces to look for beautiful maidens and virgins. And let them bring them to the city of Susan, and put them into the house of the women under the hand of Egeus the eunuch, who is the overseer and keeper of the king's women. And let them receive women's ornaments, and other things necessary for their use. [4] And whosoever among them all shall please the king's eyes, let her be queen instead of Vasthi. The word pleased the king; and he commanded it should be done as they had suggested.

[5] There was a man in the city of Susan, a Jew, named Mardochai, [b] the son of Jair, the son of Semei, the son of Cis, of the race of Jemini, [6] who had been carried away from Jerusalem at the time that Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon carried away [c] Jechonias king of Juda, [7] and he had brought up his brother's daughter Edissa, who by another name was called Esther. Now she had lost both her parents, and was exceeding fair and beautiful. And her father and mother being dead, Mardochai adopted her for his daughter.

[8] And when the king's ordinance was noised abroad, and according to his commandment many beautiful virgins were brought to Susan, and were delivered to Egeus the eunuch, Esther also among the rest of the maidens was delivered to him to be kept in the number of the women. [9] And she pleased him, and found favor in his sight. And he commanded the eunuch to hasten the women's ornaments, and to deliver to her, her part and seven of the most beautiful maidens of the king's house, and to adorn and deck out both her and her waiting maids. [10] And she would not tell him her people nor her country. For Mardochai had charged her to say nothing at all of that. [11] And he walked every day before the court of the house, in which the chosen virgins were kept, having a care for Esther's welfare, and desiring to know what would befall her.

12 Now when every virgin's turn came to go in to the king, after all had been done for setting them off to advantage, it was the twelfth month; so that for six months they were anointed with oil of myrrh, and for other six months they used certain perfumes and sweet spices. 13 And when they were going in to the king, whatsoever they asked to adorn themselves they received. And being decked out, as it pleased them, they passed from the chamber of the women to the king's chamber. 14 And she that went in at evening, came out in the morning, and from thence she was conducted to the second house, that was under the hand of Susagaz the eunuch, who had the charge over the king's concubines. Neither could she return any more to the king, unless the king desired it, and had ordered her by name to come.

The King Chooses Esther. 15 And as the time came orderly about, the day was at hand, when Esther, the daughter of Abihail the brother of Mardochai, whom he had adopted for his daughter, was to go in to the king. But she sought not women's ornaments, but whatsoever Egeus the eunuch the keeper of the virgins had a mind, he gave her to adorn her. For she was exceeding fair, and her incredible beauty made her appear agreeable and amiable in the eyes of all. 16 So she was brought to the chamber of king Assuerus the tenth month, which is called Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign. 17 And the king loved her more than all the women, and she had favor and kindness before him above all the women, and he set the royal crown on her head, and made her queen instead of Vasthi. 18 And he commanded a magnificent feast to be prepared for all the princes, and for his servants, for the marriage and wedding of Esther. And he gave rest to all the provinces, and bestowed gifts according to princely magnificence.

19 And when the virgins were sought the second time, and gathered together, Mardochai stayed at the king's gate. 20 Neither had Esther as yet declared her country and people, according to his commandment. For whatsoever he commanded, Esther observed. And she did all things in the same manner as she was wont at that time when he brought her up a little one.

21 At that time, therefore, when Mardochai abode at the king's gate, Bagathan and Thares, two of the king's eunuchs, who were porters, and presided in the first entry of the palace, were angry; and they designed to rise up against the king, and to kill him. 22 And Mardochai had notice of it, and immediately he told it to queen Esther, and she to the king in Mardochai's name, who had reported the thing unto her. 23 It was inquired into, and found out. And they were both hanged on a gibbet. And it was put in the histories, and recorded in the chronicles before the king.

CHAPTER 3.

The Decree against the Jews. 1 After these things, king Assuerus advanced Aman, the son of Amadathi, who was of the race of Agag. And he set his throne above all the princes that were with him. 2 And all the king's servants, that were at the doors of the palace, bent their knees, and worshiped Aman, for so the emperor had commanded them; only Mardochai did not bend his knee, nor worship him. 3 And the king's servants that were chief at the doors of the palace, said to him: Why dost thou alone not observe the king's commandment? 4 And when they were saying this often, and he would not hearken to them, they told Aman, desirous to know whether he would continue in his resolution, for he had told them that he was a Jew.

5 Now when Aman had heard this, and had proved by experience that Mardochai did not bend his knee to him, nor worship him, he was exceeding angry. 6 And he counted it nothing to lay his hands upon Mardochai alone, for he had heard that he was of the nation of the Jews, and he chose rather to destroy all the nation of the Jews that were in the kingdom of Assuerus.

7 In the first month (which is called Nisan) in the twelfth year of the reign of Assuerus, the lot was cast into an urn, which in Hebrew is called Phur, before Aman, on what day and what month the nation of the Jews should be destroyed. And there came out the twelfth month, which is called Adar. 8 And Aman said to king Assuerus: There is a people scattered through all the provinces of thy kingdom, and separated one from another, that use new laws and ceremonies, and moreover despise the king's ordinances. And thou knowest very well that it is not expedient for thy kingdom that they should grow insolent by impunity. 9 If it please thee, decree that they may be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents to thy treasures. 10 And the king took the ring that he used, from his own hand, and gave it to Aman, the son of Amadathi of the race of Agag, the enemy of the Jews, 11 and he said to him: As to the money which thou promisest, keep it for thyself; and as to the people, do with them as seemeth good to thee.

The Decree Is Promulgated. 12 And the king's scribes were called in the first month Nisan,on the thirteenth day of the same month. And they wrote, as Aman had commanded, to all the king's lieutenants, and to the judges of the provinces, and of divers nations, as every nation could read, and hear according to their different languages, in the name of king Assuerus. And the letters, sealed with his ring, 13 were sent by the king's messengers to all provinces, to kill and destroy all the Jews, both young and old, little children, and women, in one day, that is, on the thirteenth of the twelfth month, which is called Adar, and to make a spoil of their goods.

14 And the contents of the letters were to this effect, that all provinces might know and be ready against that day. 15 The couriers that were sent made haste to fulfill the king's commandment. And immediately the edict was hung up in Susan, the king and Aman feasting together, and all the Jews that were in the city weeping.

CHAPTER 4.

The Sorrow of Mardochai. 1 Now when Mardochai had heard these things, he rent his garments, and put on sackcloth, strewing ashes on his head. And he cried with a loud voice in the street in the midst of the city, showing the anguish of his mind. 2 And he came lamenting in this manner even to the gate of the palace, for no one clothed with sackcloth might enter the king's court. 3 And in all provinces, towns, and places, to which the king's cruel edict was come, there was great mourning among the Jews, with fasting, wailing, and weeping, many using sackcloth and ashes for their bed.

4 Then Esther's maids and her eunuchs went in, and told her. And when she heard it she was in a consternation. And she sent a garment, to clothe him, and to take away the sackcloth; but he would not receive it. 5 And she called for Athach the eunuch, whom the king had appointed to attend upon her, and she commanded him to go to Mardochai, and learn of him why he did this. 6 And Athach going out went to Mardochai, who was standing in the street of the city, before the palace gate. 7 And Mardochai told him all that had happened, how Aman had promised to pay money into the king's treasures, to have the Jews destroyed. 8 He gave him also a copy of the edict which was hanging up in Susan, that he should show it to the queen, and admonish her to go in to the king, and to entreat him for her people.

9 And Athach went back and told Esther all that Mardochai had said. 10 She answered him, and bade him say to Mardochai: 11 All the king's servants, and all the provinces that are under his dominion, know that whosoever, whether man or woman, cometh into the king's inner court, who is not called for, is immediately to be put to death without any delay; except the king shall hold out the golden sceptre to him, in token of clemency, that so he may live. How then can I go in to the king, who for these thirty days now have not been called unto him?

12 And when Mardochai had heard this, 13 he sent word to Esther again, saying: Think not that thou mayest save thy life only, because thou art in the king's house, more than all the Jews. 14 For if thou wilt now hold thy peace, the Jews shall be delivered by some other occasion; and thou and thy father's house shall perish. And who knoweth whether thou art not therefore come to the kingdom, that thou mightest be ready in such a time as this?

15 And again Esther sent to Mardochai in these words: 16 Go, and gather together

all the Jews whom thou shalt find in Susan, and pray ye for me. Neither eat nor drink for three days and three nights; and I with my handmaids will fast in like manner, and then I will go in to the king, against the law, not being called, and expose myself to death and to danger.

17 So Mardochai went, and did all that Esther had commanded him.

II: SALVATION OF THE JEWS

CHAPTER 5.

Esther Before the King. 1 And on the third day Esther put on her royal apparel, and stood in the inner court of the king's house, over against the king's hall. Now he sat upon his throne in the hall of the palace, over against the door of the house. 2 And when he saw Esther the queen standing, she pleased his eyes, and he held out towards her the golden sceptre, which he held in his hand. And she drew near, and kissed the top of his sceptre. 3 And the king said to her: What wilt thou, queen Esther? What is thy request? If thou shouldst even ask one half of the kingdom, it shall be given to thee. 4 But she answered: If it please the king, I beseech thee to come to me this day, and Aman with thee to the banquet which I have prepared. 5 And the king said forthwith: Call ye Aman quickly, that he may obey Esther's will. So the king and Aman came to the banquet which the queen had prepared for them.

6 And the king said to her, after he had drunk wine plentifully: What dost thou desire should be given thee? And for what thing askest thou? Although thou shouldst ask the half of my kingdom, thou shalt have it. 7 And Esther answered: My petition and request is this: 8 If I have found favor in the king's sight, and if it please the king to give me what I ask, and to fulfill my petition, let the king and Aman come to the banquet which I have prepared them, and tomorrow I will open my mind to the king.

9 So Aman went out that day joyful and merry. And when he saw Mardochai sitting before the gate of the palace, and that he not only did not rise up to honor him, but did not so much as move from the place where he sat, he was exceedingly angry. 10 But dissembling his anger, and returning into his house, he called together to him his friends, and Zares his wife. 11 And he declared to them the greatness of his riches, and the multitude of his children, and with how great glory the king had advanced him above all his princes and servants. 12 And after this he said: Queen Esther also hath invited no other to the banquet with the king but me; and with her I am also to dine tomorrow with the king. 13 And whereas I have all these things, I think I have nothing, so long as I see Mardochai the Jew sitting before the king's gate. 14 Then Zares his wife and the rest of his friends answered him: Order a great beam to be prepared, fifty cubits high, and in the morning speak to the king, that Mardochai may be hanged upon it, and so thou shalt go full of joy with the king to the banquet. The counsel pleased him, and he commanded a high gibbet to be prepared.

Aman Honors Mardochai. 1 That night the king passed without sleep, and he commanded the histories and chronicles of former times to be brought him. And when they were reading them before him, 2 they came to that place where it was written how Mardochai had discovered the treason of Bagathan and Thares the eunuchs, who sought to kill king Assuerus. 3 And when the king heard this, he said: What honor and reward hath Mardochai received for this fidelity? His servants and ministers said to him: He hath received no reward at all.* 4 And the king said immediately: Who is in the court? For Aman was coming into the inner court of the king's house to speak to the king, that he might order Mardochai to be hanged upon the gibbet which was prepared for him. 5 The servants answered: Aman standeth in the court, and the king said: Let him come in.

6 And when he was come in, he said to him: What ought to be done to the man whom the king is desirous to honor? But Aman thinking in his heart, and supposing the king would honor no other but himself, 7 answered: The man whom the king desireth to honor, 8 ought to be clothed with the king's apparel, and to be set upon the horse that the king rideth upon, and to have the royal crown upon his head. 9 And let the first of the king's princes and nobles hold his horse, and going through the street of the city, proclaim before him and say: Thus shall he be honored, whom the king hath a mind to honor. 10 And the king said to him: Make haste and take the robe and the horse, and do as thou hast spoken to Mardochai the Jew, who sitteth before the gates of the palace. Beware thou pass over any of those things which thou hast spoken. 11 So Aman took the robe and the horse, and arraying Mardochai in the street of the city, and setting him on the horse, went before him, and proclaimed: This honor is he worthy of, whom the king hath a mind to honor.

6, 3: No reward at all: he received some presents from the king, ch 12, 5; but these were so inconsiderable in the opinion of the courtiers, that they esteemed them as nothing at all.

12 But Mardochai returned to the palace gate. And Aman made haste to go to his house, mourning and having his head covered. 13 And he told Zares his wife and his friends all that had befallen him. And the wise men whom he had in counsel and his wife answered him: If Mardochai be of the seed of the Jews, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou canst not resist him, but thou shalt fall in his sight. 14 As they were yet speaking, the king's eunuchs came, and compelled him to go quickly to the banquet which the queen had prepared.

Esther Petitions for Her People. 1 So the king and Aman went in, to drink with the queen. 2 And the king said to her again the second day, after he was warm with wine: What is thy petition, Esther, that it may be granted thee? And what wilt thou have done? Although thou ask the half of my kingdom, thou shalt have it. 3 Then she answered: If I have found favor in thy sight, O king, and if it please thee, give me my life for which I ask, and my people for which I request. 4 For we are given up, I and my people, to be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish. And would God we were sold for bondmen and bondwomen! The evil might be borne with, and I would have mourned in silence; but now we have an enemy, whose cruelty redoundeth upon the king. 5 And king Assuerus answered and said: Who is this, and of what power, that he should do these things? 6 And Esther said: It is this Aman that is our adversary and most wicked enemy. Aman hearing this was forthwith astonished, not being able to bear the countenance of the king and of the queen. 7 But the king being angry rose up, and went from the place of the banquet into the garden set with trees. Aman also rose up to entreat Esther the queen for his life, for he understood that evil was prepared for him by the king.

8 And when the king came back out of the garden set with trees, and entered into the place of the banquet, he found Aman was fallen upon the bed on which Esther lay, and he said: He will force the queen also in my presence, in my own house. The word was not yet gone out of the king's mouth, and immediately they covered his face. 9 And Harbona, one of the eunuchs that stood waiting on the king, said: Behold the gibbet which he hath prepared for Mardochai, who spoke for the king, standeth in Aman's house, being fifty cubits high. And the king said to him: Hang him upon it. 10 So Aman was hanged on the gibbet, which he had prepared for Mardochai. And the king's wrath ceased.

Edict of Extermination Is Revoked. 1 On that day king Assuerus gave the house of Aman, the Jews' enemy, to queen Esther, and Mardochai came in before the king. For Esther had confessed to him that he was her uncle. 2 And the king took the ring which he had commanded to be taken again from Aman, and gave it to Mardochai. And Esther set Mardochai over her house. 3 And not content with these things, she fell down at the king's feet and wept, and speaking to him besought him that he would give orders that the malice of Aman the Agagite, and his most wicked devices which he had invented against the Jews, should be of no effect. 4 But he, as the manner was, held out the golden sceptre with his hand, which was the sign of clemency. And she arose up and stood before him, 5 and said: If it please the king, and if I have found favor in his sight, and my request be not disagreeable to him, I beseech thee, that the former letters of Aman the traitor and enemy of the Jews, by which he commanded that they should be destroyed in all the king's provinces, may be reversed by new letters. 6 For how can I endure the murdering and slaughter of my people? 7 And king Assuerus answered Esther the queen, and Mardochai the Jew: I have given Aman's house to Esther, and I have commanded him to be hanged on a gibbet, because he durst lay hands on the Jews. 8 Write ye therefore to the Jews, as it pleaseth you, in the king's name, and seal the letters with my ring. For this was the custom, that no man durst gainsay the letters which were sent in the king's name, and were sealed with his ring.

The New Edict. 9 Then the king's scribes and secretaries were called for (now it was the time of the third month which is called Siban) the three and twentieth day of the month, and letters were written, as Mardochai had a mind, to the Jews, and to the governors, and to the deputies, and to the judges, who were rulers over the hundred and twenty-seven provinces, from India even to Ethiopia: to province and province, to people and people, according to their languages and characters, and to the Jews, according as they could read and hear. 10 And these letters which were sent in the king's name, were sealed with his ring, and sent by posts: who were to run through all the provinces, to prevent the former letters with new messages. 11 And the king gave orders to them, to speak to the Jews in every city, and to command them to gather themselves together, and to stand for their lives, and to kill and destroy all their enemies with their wives and children and all their houses, and to take their spoil. 12 And one day of revenge was appointed through all the provinces, to wit, the thirteenth of the twelfth month Adar.

13 And this was the content of the letter, that it should be notified in all lands and peoples that were subject to the empire of king Assuerus, that the Jews were ready to be revenged of their enemies. 14 So the swift posts went out carrying the messages, and the king's edict was hung up in Susan.

15 And Mardochai going forth out of the palace, and from the king's presence, shone in royal apparel, to wit, of violet and sky color, wearing a golden crown on his head, and clothed with a cloak of silk and purple. And all the city rejoiced and was glad. 16 But to the Jews a new light seemed to rise, joy, honor, and dancing. 17 And in all peoples, cities, and provinces, whithersoever the king's commandments came, there was wonderful rejoicing, feasts and banquets, and keeping holy day: insomuch that many of other nations and religion joined themselves to their worship and ceremonies. For a great dread of the name of the Jews had fallen upon all.

CHAPTER 9.

The Jews Slay Their Enemies. 1 So on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which as we have said above is called Adar, when all the Jews were designed to be massacred, and their enemies were greedy after their blood, the case being altered, the Jews began to have the upper hand, and to revenge* themselves of their adversaries. 2 And they gathered themselves together in every city, and town, and place, to lay their hands on their enemies, and their persecutors. And no one durst withstand them, for the fear of their power had gone through every people. 3 And the judges of the provinces, and the governors, and lieutenants, and everyone in dignity that presided over every place and work, extolled the Jews for fear of Mardochai. 4 For they knew him to be prince of the palace, and to have great power. And the fame of his name increased daily, and was spread abroad through all men's mouths.

5 So the Jews made a great slaughter of their enemies, and killed them, repaying according to what they had prepared to do to them, 6 insomuch that even in Susan they killed five hundred men, besides the ten sons of Aman the Agagite, the enemy of the Jews, whose names are these: 7 Pharsandatha, and Delphon, and Esphatha, 8 and Phoratha, and Adalia, and Aridatha, 9 and Phermesta, and Arisai, and Aridai, and Jezatha. 10 And when they had slain them, they would not touch the spoils of their goods.

The Slaughter Is Continued. 11 And presently the number of them that were killed in Susan was brought to the king. 12 And he said to the queen: The Jews have killed five hundred men in the city of Susan, besides the ten sons of Aman. How many dost thou think they have slain in all the provinces? What askest thou more, and what wilt thou have me to command to be done? 13 And she answered: If it please the king, let it be granted to the Jews, to do tomorrow in Susan as they have done today, and that the ten sons of Aman may be hanged upon gibbets. 14 And the king commanded that it should be so done. And forthwith the edict was hung up in Susan, and the ten sons of Aman were hanged.

15 And on the fourteenth day of the month Adar the Jews gathered themselves together, and they killed in Susan three hundred men, but they took not their substance. 16 Moreover through all the provinces, which were subject to the king's dominion the Jews stood for their lives, and slew their enemies and persecutors, insomuch that the number of them that were killed amounted to seventy-five thousand, and no man took any of their goods.

17 Now the thirteenth day of the month Adar was the first day with them all of the slaughter, and on the fourteenth day they left off, which they ordained to be kept holy day, so that all times hereafter they should celebrate it with feasting, joy, and banquets. 18 But they that were killing in the city of Susan, were employed in the slaughter on the thirteenth and fourteenth day of the same month; and on the fifteenth day they rested. And therefore they appointed that day to be a holy day of feasting and gladness. 19 But those Jews that dwelt in towns not walled and in villages, appointed the fourteenth day of the month Adar for banquets and gladness, so as to rejoice on that day, and send one another portions of their banquets and meats.

The Prescriptions of Mardochai. 20 And Mardochai wrote all these things, and sent them comprised in letters to the Jews that abode in all the king's provinces, both those that lay near and those afar off, 21 that they should receive the fourteenth and fifteenth day of the month Adar for holy days, and always at the return of the year should celebrate them with solemn honor, 22 because on those days the Jews revenged themselves of their enemies, and their mourning and sorrow were turned into mirth and joy, and that these should be days of feasting and gladness, in which they should send one to another portions of meats, and should give gifts to the poor.

23 And the Jews undertook to observe with solemnity all they had begun to do at that time, which Mardochai by letters had commanded to be done. 24 For Aman, the son of Amadathi of the race of Agag, the enemy and adversary of the Jews, had devised evil against them, to kill them and destroy them, and had cast Phur, that is, the lot. 25 And afterwards Esther went in to the king, beseeching him that his endeavors might be made void by the king's letters; and the evil that he had intended against the Jews, might return upon his own head. And so both he and his sons were hanged upon gibbets. 26 And since that time these days are called Phurim, that is, of lots, because Phur, that is, the lot, was cast into the urn. And all things that were done, are contained in the volume of this epistle, that is, of this book. 27 And the things that they suffered, and that were afterwards changed, the Jews took upon themselves and their seed, and upon all that had a mind to be joined to their religion, so that it should be lawful for none to pass these days without solemnity which the writing testifieth, and certain times require, as the years continually succeed one another. 28 These are the days which shall never be forgot, and which all provinces in the whole world shall celebrate throughout all generations. Neither is there any city wherein the days of Phurim, that is, of lots, must not be observed by the Jews, and by their posterity, which is bound to these ceremonies.

29 And Esther the queen, the daughter of Abihail, and Mardochai the Jew, wrote also a second epistle, that with all diligence this day should be established a festival for the time to come. 30 And they sent to all the Jews that were in the hundred and twenty-seven provinces of king Assuerus, that they should have peace, and receive truth, 31 and observe the days of lots, and celebrate them with joy in their proper time, as Mardochai and Esther had appointed. And they undertook them to be observed, by themselves and by their seed, fasts, and cries, and the days of lots, 32 and all things which are contained in the history of this book, which is called Esther.

Assuerus' Greatness and Mardochai's Dignity. 1 And king Assuerus made all the land and all the islands of the sea tributary. 2 And his strength and his empire, and the dignity and greatness wherewith he exalted Mardochai, are written in the books of the Medes, and of the Persians: 3 and how Mardochai of the race of the Jews, was next after king Assuerus, and great among the Jews, and acceptable to the people of his brethren, seeking the good of his people, and speaking those things which were for the welfare of his seed.

4 Then Mardochai* said: God hath done these things. 5 I remember a dream* that I saw, which signified these same things; and nothing thereof hath failed. 6 The little fountain which grew into a river, and was turned into a light, and into the sun, and abounded into many waters, is Esther, whom the king married, and made queen. 7 But the two dragons are I and Aman. 8 The nations that were assembled are they that endeavored to destroy the name of the Jews. 9 And my nation is Israel, who cried to the Lord, and the Lord saved his people; and he delivered us from all evils, and hath wrought great signs and wonders among the nations. 10 And he commanded that there should be two lots, one of the people of God, and the other of all the nations. 11 And both lots came to the day appointed already from that time before God to all nations. 12 And the Lord remembered his people, and had mercy on his inheritance. 13 And these days shall be observed in the month of Adar on the fourteenth and fifteenth day of the same month with all diligence and joy of the people gathered into one assembly, throughout all the generations hereafter of the people of Israel.

CHAPTER 11.

The Dream of Mardochai. 1 In the fourth year of the reign of Ptolemy and Cleopatra, Dositheus, who said he was a priest, and of the Levitical race, and Ptolemy his son brought this epistle of Phurim, which they said Lysimachus the son of Ptolemy had interpreted in Jerusalem.

2 In the second year of the reign of Artaxerxes the great, in the first day of the month Nisan, Mardochai the son of Jair, the son of Semei, the son of Cis, of the tribe of Benjamin, 3 a Jew who dwelt in the city of Susan, a great man and among the first of the king's court, had a dream. 4 d Now he was of the number of the captives, whom Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon had carried away from Jerusalem with Jechonias king of Juda.

5 And this was his dream: Behold there were voices, and tumults, and thunders, and earthquakes, and a disturbance upon the earth. 6 e And behold two great dragons came forth ready to fight one against another. 7 And at their cry all nations were stirred up to fight against the nation of the just. 8 And that was a day of darkness and danger, of tribulation and distress, and great fear upon the earth. 9 And the nation of the just was troubled, fearing their own evils, and was prepared for death. 10 And they cried to God. And as they were crying, a little fountain grew into a very great river, and abounded into many waters. 11 The light and the sun rose up, and the humble were exalted, and they devoured the glorious.

12 And when Mardochai had seen this, and arose out of his bed, he was thinking what God would do. And he kept it fixed in his mind, desirous to know what the dream should signify.

CHAPTER 12.

Mardochai Detects the Conspiracy. 1 And f he abode at that time in the king's court with Bagatha and Thara the king's eunuchs, who were porters of the palace. 2 And when he understood their designs, and had diligently searched into their projects, he learned that they were about to lay violent hands on king Artaxerxes, and he told the king thereof. 3 Then the king had them both examined, and after they had confessed, commanded them to be put to death. 4 But the king made a record of what was done. And Mardochai also committed the memory of the thing to writing. 5 And the king commanded him to abide in the court of the palace, and gave him presents for the information. 6 But Aman the son of Amadathi the Bugite was in great honor with the king, and sought to hurt Mardochai and his people, because of the two eunuchs of the king who were put to death.

CHAPTER 13.

A Copy of Aman's Letter. 1 And this was the copy of the letter: Artaxerxes the great king who reigneth from India to Ethiopia, to the princes and governors of the hundred and twenty-seven provinces that are subject to his empire, greeting.

2 Whereas I reigned over many nations, and had brought all the world under my dominion, I was not willing to abuse the greatness of my power, but to govern my subjects with clemency and lenity, that they might live quietly without any terror, and might enjoy peace, which is desired by all men. 3 But when I asked my counsellors how this might be accomplished, one that excelled the rest in wisdom and fidelity, and was second after the king, Aman by name, 4 told me that there was a people scattered through the whole world, which used new laws, and acted against the customs of all nations, despised the commandments of kings, and violated by their opposition the concord of all nations. 5 Wherefore having learned this, and seeing one nation in opposition to all mankind using perverse laws, and going against our commandments, and disturbing the peace and concord of the provinces subject to us, 6 we have commanded that all whom Aman shall mark out, who is chief over all the provinces, and second after the king, and whom we honor as a father, shall be utterly destroyed by their enemies, with their wives and children; and that none shall have pity on them, on the fourteenth day of the twelfth month Adar of this present year; 7 that these wicked men going down to hell in one day, may restore to our empire the peace which they had disturbed.

Prayer of Mardochai. 8 But Mardochai besought the Lord, remembering all his works, 9 and said: O Lord, Lord, almighty King, for all things are in thy power, and there is none that can resist thy will, if thou determine to save Israel. 10 Thou hast made heaven and earth and all things that are under the cope of heaven. 11 Thou art Lord of all, and there is none that can resist thy majesty. 12 Thou knowest all things, and thou knowest that it was not out of pride and contempt, or any desire of glory, that I refused to worship the proud Aman. 13 (For I would willingly and readily for the salvation of Israel have kissed even the steps of his feet), 14 but I feared lest I should transfer the honor of my God to a man, and lest I should adore anyone except my God. 15 And now, O Lord, O King, O God of Abraham, have mercy on thy people, because our enemies resolve to destroy us, and extinguish thy inheritance. 16 Despise not thy portion, which thou hast redeemed for thyself out of Egypt. 17 Hear my supplication, and be merciful to thy lot and inheritance, and turn our mourning into joy, that we may live and praise thy name, O Lord, and shut not the mouths of them that sing to thee.

18 And all Israel with like mind and supplication cried to the Lord, because they saw certain death hanging over their heads.

CHAPTER 14.

The Prayer of Esther. 1 Queen Esther also, fearing the danger that was at hand, had recourse to the Lord. 2 And when she had laid away her royal apparel, she put on garments suitable for weeping and mourning. Instead of divers precious ointments, she covered her head with ashes and dung, and she humbled her body with fasts. And all the places in which before she was accustomed to rejoice, she filled with her torn hair.

3 And she prayed to the Lord the God of Israel, saying: O my Lord, who alone art our king, help me a desolate woman, who have no other helper but thee. 4 My danger is in my hands. 5 g I have heard of my father that thou, O Lord, didst take Israel from among all nations, and our fathers from all their predecessors, to possess them as an everlasting inheritance, and thou hast done to them as thou hast promised. 6 We have sinned

in thy sight, and therefore thou hast delivered us into the hands of our enemies, 7 for we have worshiped their gods. Thou are just, O Lord. 8 And now they are not content to oppress us with most hard bondage, but attributing the strength of their hands to the power of their idols, 9 they design to change thy promises, and destroy thy inheritance, and shut the mouths of them that praise thee, and extinguish the glory of thy temple and altar, 10 that they may open the mouths of Gentiles, and praise the strength of idols, and magnify forever a carnal king.

11 Give not, O Lord, thy sceptre to them that are not, lest they laugh at our ruin, but turn their counsel upon themselves, and destroy him that hath begun to rage against us. Remember, O Lord, and show thyself to us in the time of our tribulation, and give me boldness, O Lord, King of gods, and of all power. 13 Give me a well ordered speech in my mouth in the presence of the lion, and turn his heart to the hatred of our enemy, that both he himself may perish, and the rest that consent to him. 14 But deliver us by thy hand, and help me, who have no other helper but thee, O Lord, who hast the knowledge of all things. 15 And thou knowest that I hate the glory of the wicked, and abhor the bed of the uncircumcised, and of every stranger. 16 Thou knowest my necessity; that I abominate the sign of my pride and glory, which is upon my head in the days of my public appearance, and detest it as a menstruous rag, and wear it not in the days of my silence; 17 and that I have not eaten at Aman's table, nor hath the king's banquet pleased me, and that I have not drunk the wine of the drink offerings; 18 and that thy handmaid hath never rejoiced, since I was brought hither unto this day, but in thee, O Lord, the God of Abraham. 19 O God, who art mighty above all, hear the voice of them that have no other hope, and deliver us from the hand of the wicked, and deliver me from my fear.

Mardochai Exhorts Esther. 1 And he commanded her (no doubt but he was Mardochai) to go to the king, and petition for her people, and for her country. 2 Remember (said he) the days of thy low estate, how thou wast brought up by my hand, because Aman the second after the king hath spoken against us unto death. 3 And do thou call upon the Lord, and speak to the king for us, and deliver us from death. 4 And on the third day she laid away the garments she wore, and put on her glorious apparel. 5 And glittering in royal robes, after she had called upon God the ruler and savior of all, she took two maids with her, 6 and upon one of them she leaned, as if for delicateness and overmuch tenderness she were not able to bear up her own body. 7 And the other maid followed her lady, bearing up her train flowing on the ground. 8 But she with a rosy color in her face, and with gracious and bright eyes, hid a mind full of anguish, and exceeding great fear.

9 So going in she passed through all the doors in order, and stood before the king, where he sat upon his royal throne, clothed with his royal robes, and glittering with gold and precious stones, and he was terrible to behold. 10 And when he had lifted up his countenance, and with burning eyes had shown the wrath of his heart, the queen sunk down, and her color turned pale, and she rested her weary head upon her handmaid. 11 And God changed the king's spirit into mildness, and all in haste and in fear he leaped from his throne, and holding her up in his arms, till she came to herself, caressed her with these words: 12 What is the matter, Esther? I am thy brother, fear not. 13 Thou shalt not die, for this law is not made for thee, but for all others. 14 Come near then, and touch the sceptre. 15 And as she held her peace, he took the golden sceptre, and laid it upon her neck, and kissed her, and said: Why dost thou not speak to me? 16 She answered: [h] I saw thee, my lord, as an angel of God, and my heart was troubled for fear of thy majesty. 17 For thou, my lord, art very admirable, and thy face is full of graces. 18 And while she was speaking, she fell down again, and was almost in a swoon. 19 But the king was troubled, and all his servants comforted her.

2 Many j have abused unto pride the goodness of princes, and the honor that hath been bestowed upon them; 3 and not only endeavor to oppress the king's subjects, but not bearing the glory that is given them, take in hand to practice also against them that gave it. 4 Neither are they content not to return thanks for benefits received, and to violate in themselves the laws of humanity, but they think they can also escape the justice of God who seeth all things. 5 And they break out into so great madness as to endeavor to undermine by lies such as observe diligently the offices committed to them, and do all things in such manner as to be worthy of all men's praise; 6 while with crafty fraud they deceive the ears of princes that are well meaning, and judge of others by their own nature. 7 Now this is proved both from ancient histories, and by the things which are done daily, how the good designs of kings are depraved by the evil suggestions of certain men. 8 Wherefore we must provide for the peace of all provinces. 9 Neither must you think, if we command different things, that it cometh of the levity of our mind, but that we give sentence according to the quality and necessity of times, as the profit of the commonwealth requireth.

The Deeds of Aman. 10 Now that you may more plainly understand what we say, k Aman the son of Amadathi, a Macedonian both in mind and country, and having nothing of the Persian blood, but with his cruelty staining our goodness, was received being a stranger by us; 11 and found our humanity so great towards him that he was called our father, and was worshiped by all as the next man after the king. 12 But he was so far puffed up with arrogancy as to go about to deprive us of our kingdom and life. 13 For with certain new and unheard of devices he hath sought the destruction of Mardochai, by whose fidelity and good services our life was saved, and of Esther the partner of our kingdom, with all their nation, 14 thinking that after they were slain, he might work treason against us left alone without friends, and might transfer the kingdom of the Persians to the Macedonians. 15 But we have found that the Jews, who were by that most wicked man appointed to be slain, are in no fault at all, but contrariwise use just laws, 16 and are the children of the highest, and greatest and the ever living God, by whose benefit the kingdom was given both to our fathers and to us, and is kept unto this day.

17 Wherefore know ye that those letters which he sent in our name, are void and of no effect. 18 For which crime both he himself that devised it and all his kindred hang on gibbets before the gates of this city Susan: not we, but God repaying him as he deserved. 19 But this edict, which we now send, shall be published in all cities, that the Jews may freely follow their own laws. 20 And you shall aid them that they may kill those who had prepared themselves to kill them, on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is called Adar. 21 For the almighty God hath turned this day of sadness and mourning into joy to them. 22 Wherefore you shall also count this day among other festival days, and celebrate it with all joy, that it may be known also in times to come, 23 that all they who faithfully obey the Persians, receive a worthy reward for their fidelity; but they that are traitors to their kingdom, are destroyed for their wickedness. 24 And let every province and city that will not be partaker of this solemnity, perish by the sword and by fire, and be destroyed in such manner as to be made unpassable, both to men and beasts, for an example of contempt and disobedience.

THE BOOK OF JOB

The Book of Job, named after its protagonist, is an exquisite dramatic poem which treats of the problem of the sufferings of the innocent, and of retribution. The contents of the book, together with its artistic structure and elegant style, place it among the literary masterpieces of all time.

Job, an oriental chieftain, pious and upright, richly endowed in his own person and in domestic prosperity, suffers a sudden and complete reversal of fortune. He loses his property and his children; a loathsome disease afflicts his body; and sorrow oppresses his soul. Nevertheless, Job does not complain against God. When some friends visit him to condole with him, Job protests his innocence and does not understand why he is afflicted. He curses the day of his birth and longs for death to bring an end to his sufferings. The debate which ensues consists of three cycles of speeches. Job's friends insist that his plight can only be a punishment for personal wrongdoing and an invitation from God to repentance. Job rejects their inadequate explanation and even that of a younger friend who argues that suffering is a preventive as well as a cure for sin.

In response to Job's plea that he be allowed to see God and hear from Him the cause of his suffering, God answers, not by justifying His action before men, but by referring to His own omniscience and almighty power. Job is content with this. He recovers his attitude of humility and trust in God, which is deepened now and strengthened by his experience of suffering.

The author of the book and the time of its composition are not known. Its literary form, with speeches, prologue and epilogue disposed according to a studied plan, indicates that the purpose of the writing is didactic. The lesson is that even the just may suffer here, and their sufferings are a test of their fidelity. They shall be rewarded in the end. Man's finite mind cannot probe the depths of the divine omniscience that governs the world. The problems we encounter can be solved by a broader and deeper awareness of God's power, presence and wisdom.

The divisions of the Book of Job are as follows: I. Prologue (1, 1–2, 13). II. First Cycle of Speeches (3, 1–14, 22). III. Second Cycle of Speeches (15, 1–21, 34). IV. Third Cycle of Speeches (22, 1–28, 28). V. Job's Final Summary of His Cause (29, 1–31, 27). VI. Eliu's Speeches (32, 1–37, 24). VII. The Lord's Speech (38, 1–42, 6). VIII. Epilogue (42, 7–17).

I: PROLOGUE

CHAPTER 1.

Job's Wealth and Piety. 1 In the land of Us*there was a blameless and upright man named Job,[a] who feared God and avoided evil. 2*Seven sons and three daughters were born to him; 3 and he had seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen, five hundred she-asses, and a great number of work animals, so that he was greater than any of the men of the East.* 4 His sons used to take turns giving feasts, sending invitations to their three sisters to eat and drink with them. 5 And when each feast had run its course, Job would send for them and sanctify them, rising early and offering holocausts for every one of them. For Job said, "It may be that my sons have sinned and blasphemed God in their hearts." This Job did habitually.

6 [b] One day, when the [c] sons of God* came to present themselves before the Lord, Satan also came among them. 7 And the Lord said to Satan, "Whence do you come?" Then Satan answered the Lord and said [d] "From roaming the earth and patrolling it." 8 And the Lord said to Satan, "Have you noticed my servant Job, and that there is no one on earth like him, blameless and upright, fearing God and avoiding evil?" 9 But Satan answered the Lord and said, "Is it for nothing that Job is God-fearing? 10 Have you not surrounded him and his family and all that he has with your protection? You have blessed the work of his hands, and his livestock are spread over the land. 11 [e] But now put forth your hand and touch anything that he has, and surely he will blaspheme you to your face." 12 And the Lord said to Satan, "Behold, all that he has is in your power; only do not lay a hand upon his person." So Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord.

The First Trial. 13 And so one day, while his sons and his daughters were eating and drinking wine in the house of their eldest brother, 14 a messenger came to Job and said, "The oxen were plowing and the asses grazing beside them, [15] and the Sabeans* carried them off in a raid. They put the herdsmen to the sword, and I alone have escaped to tell you." [16] While he was yet speaking, another came and said, "Lightning* has fallen from heaven and struck the sheep and their shepherds and consumed them; and I alone have escaped to tell you." [17] While he was yet speaking, another came and said, "The Chaldeans formed three columns, seized the camels, carried them off, and put those tending them to the sword, and I alone have escaped to tell you." [18] While he was yet speaking, another came and said, "Your sons and daughters were eating and drinking wine in the house of their eldest brother, [19] when suddenly a great wind came across the desert and smote the four corners of the house. It fell upon the young people and they are dead; and I alone have escaped to tell you." [20] Then Job began to tear his cloak and cut off his hair. He cast himself prostrate upon the ground, [21] and said,

"Naked I came forth from my mother's womb,[f]
and naked shall I go back again.*
The Lord gave and the Lord has taken
away;
blessed be the name of the Lord!"

[22] In all this Job did not sin,[g] nor did he say anything disrespectful of God.

CHAPTER 2

The Second Trial. [1] Once again the sons of God[h] came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan also came with them. [2] And the Lord said to Satan, "Whence do you come?" And Satan answered the Lord and said, "From roaming the earth and patrolling it." [3] And the Lord said to Satan, "Have you noticed my servant Job, and that there is no one on earth like him, faultless and upright, fearing God and avoiding evil? [i] He still holds fast to his innocence although you incited me against him to ruin him without cause." [4] And Satan answered the Lord and said, "Skin for skin!* All that a man has will he give for his life. [5] [j] But now put forth your hand and touch his bone and his flesh, and surely he will blaspheme you to your face." [6] And the Lord said to Satan, "He is in your power; only spare his life." [7] So Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord and smote Job with severe boils from the soles of his feet to the crown of his head. [8] And he took a potsherd to scrape himself, as he sat among the ashes. [9] Then his wife said to him, [k] "Are you still holding to your innocence? Curse God and die."* [10] But he said to her, "Are even you going to speak as senseless women do? We accept good things from God; and should we not accept evil?" Through all this, Job said nothing sinful.[l]

Job's Three Friends. [11] Now when three of Job's friends heard of all the misfortune that had come upon him, they set out each one from his own place: Eliphaz from Theman, Baldad from Sue, and Sophar from Naama.* They met and journeyed together to give him sympathy and comfort. [12] But when, at a distance, they lifted up their eyes and did not recognize him, they began to weep aloud; they tore their cloaks and threw dust upon their heads. [13] Then they sat down upon the ground with him seven days and seven nights, but none of them spoke a word to him; for they saw how great was his suffering.

CHAPTER 3.

Job's Plaint. [1] After this, Job opened his mouth and cursed his day. [2] Job spoke out and said:

[3] Perish the day on which I was born,[m]
the night when they said, "The child is a boy!"
[4] May that day be darkness:
let not God above call for it,
nor light shine upon it!
[5] May darkness and gloom claim it,
clouds settle upon it,
the blackness of night affright it!
[6] May obscurity seize that day;
let it not occur among the days of the year,

nor enter into the count of the months!
7 May that night be barren;
let no joyful outcry greet it!
8 Let them curse it who curse the sea,
the appointed disturbers of Leviathan!*
9 May the stars of its twilight be darkened;
may it look for daylight, but have none,
nor gaze on the eyes of the dawn,
10 Because it kept not shut the doors of the womb
to shield my eyes from trouble!

11 Why did I not perish at birth,[n]
come forth from the womb and expire?
16 Or why was I not buried away like an untimely birth,*
like babes that have never seen the light?
12 Wherefore did the knees receive me?
or why did I suck at the breasts?

13 For then I should have lain down and been tranquil;
had I slept, I should then have been at rest 14 With kings and counselors of the earth who built where now there are ruins, 15 Or with princes who had gold and filled their houses with silver; 17 There* the wicked cease from troubling,
there the weary are at rest.
18 There the captives are at ease together,
and hear not the voice of the slave driver.
19 Small and great are there the same,
and the servant is free from his master.
20 Why is light given to the toilers,
and life to the bitter in spirit?
21 They wait for death and it comes not;
they search for it rather than for hidden treasures, 22 Rejoice in it exultingly,
and are glad when they reach the grave:
23 Men whose path is hidden from them,
and whom God has hemmed in!
24 For sighing comes more readily to me than food,
and my groans well forth like water.
25 For what I fear overtakes me,
and what I shrink from comes upon me.
26 I have no peace nor ease;
I have no rest, for trouble comes!

3, 16: This verse has been placed between vv 11 and 12 where it probably stood originally. There is reason to believe that here, as well as in several other places in Job, the original order of the poetic lines was accidentally disturbed in the early transmission of the text; so in Chapters 12-15; 19-21; 24-31; 34; 36; 38-42. The verse numbers given in such cases are always those of the current Hebrew text, though the arrangement may differ. The footnotes will advise the reader of the difficulties and provide him with further indications for following the progress of thought in the Book.

CHAPTER 4.

Eliphaz's First Speech. 1 Then spoke Eliphaz the Themanite, who said:

2 If someone attempts a word with you, will you mind?
For how can anyone refrain from speaking?
3 Behold, you have instructed many,
and have made firm their feeble hands.
4 Your words have upheld the stumbler;
you have strengthened his faltering knees.
5 But now that it comes to you, you are impatient;
when it touches yourself, you are dismayed.
6 Is not your piety a source of confidence,
and your integrity of life your hope?

7 Reflect now, what innocent person perishes?[o]
Since when are the upright destroyed?
8 As I see it, those who plow for mischief and sow trouble, reap the same.
9 By the breath of God they perish,[p]
and by the blast of his wrath they are consumed.
10 Though the lion* roars, though the king of beasts cries out,
yet the teeth of the young lions are broken;
11 The old lion perishes for lack of prey,
and the cubs of the lioness are scattered.

12 For a word was stealthily brought to me,*
and my ear caught a whisper of it.
13 In my thoughts during visions of the night,[q]
when deep sleep falls on men, 14 Fear came upon me, and shuddering,
that terrified me to the bones.
15 Then a spirit passed before me,
and the hair of my flesh stood up.
16 It paused, but its likeness I could not discern;
a figure was before my eyes,
and I heard a still voice:

17 "Can a man be righteous as against God?[r]
Can a mortal be blameless against his Maker?
18 Lo, he puts no trust in his servants,[s]
and with his angels he can find fault.
19 How much more with those that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust,
who are crushed more easily than the moth!
20 Morning or evening they may be shattered;
with no heed paid to it, they perish forever.
21 The pegs of their tent are plucked up;
they die without knowing wisdom."

CHAPTER 5.

1 Call now! Will anyone respond to you?
To which of the holy ones will you appeal?
2 Nay, impatience kills the fool
and indignation slays the simpleton.
3 I have seen a fool spreading his roots,[t]
but his household suddenly decayed.
4 His children shall be far from safety;
they shall be crushed at the gate* without a rescuer.
5 What they have reaped the hungry shall eat up;
[or God shall take it away by blight;]
and the thirsty shall swallow their substance.

6 For mischief comes not out of the earth,
nor does trouble spring out of the ground;
7 But man himself begets mischief,
as sparks* fly upward.
8 In your place, I would appeal to God,
and to God I would state my plea.
9 [*He does great things and inscrutable,
marvelous things without number;] 10 He gives rain upon the earth and sends water upon the fields;
11 [u] He sets up on high the lowly,
and those who mourn he exalts to safety.

12 He frustrates the plans of the cunning,
so that their hands achieve no success;
13 He catches the wise in their own ruses,[v]
and the designs of the crafty are routed.
14 They meet with darkness in the daytime,
and at noonday they grope as though it were night.
15 But the poor from the edge of the sword
and from the hand of the mighty, he saves.
16 Thus the unfortunate have hope,
and iniquity closes her mouth.

17 Happy is the man whom God reproves!
The Almighty's chastening do not reject.
18 For he wounds, but he binds up;
he smites, but his hands give healing.
19 Out of six troubles he will deliver you,
and at the seventh* no evil shall touch you.
20 In famine he will deliver you from death,
and in war from the threat of the sword;
21 From the scourge of the tongue you shall be hidden,
and shall not fear approaching ruin.

22 At destruction and want you shall laugh;
the beasts of the earth you need not dread.
23 You shall be in league with the stones of the field,
and the wild beasts shall be at peace with you.
24 And you shall know that your tent is secure;

CHAPTER 6.

Job's First Reply. 1 Then Job answered
and said:

2 Ah, could my anguish but be measured
and my calamity laid with it in the scales,
3 They would now outweigh the sands of
the sea!
Because of this I speak without restraint.
4 For the arrows of the Almighty pierce
me,[w]
and my spirit drinks in their poison;
the terrors of God are arrayed
against me.
5 Does the wild ass bray when he has grass?*
Does the ox low over his fodder?
6 Can a thing insipid be eaten without salt?
Is there flavor in the white of an egg?
7 I refuse to touch them;
they are loathsome food to me.
8 Oh, that I might have my request, and that God would grant what I long for:
9 Even that God would decide to crush
me,
that he would put forth his hand and
cut me off!
10 Then I should still have consolation and could exult through unremitting pain,
because I have not transgressed the commands of the Holy One.
11 What strength have I that I should endure?
and what is my limit that I should be patient?
12 Have I the strength of stones,
or is my flesh of bronze?
13 Have I no helper,[x]
and has advice deserted me?
14 A friend owes kindness to one in despair,
though he have forsaken the fear of the Almighty.
15 My brethren are undependable as a brook,
as streams that run dry in the wad-
ies;
16 Though they may be black with ice,
and absorb the snows,
17 Yet once they shrink, they vanish;
in the heat, they disappear from their place.
18 Caravans turn aside from their routes;
they go into the desert and perish.
19 The caravans of Thema* search,
the companies of Saba have hopes; 20 They are disappointed, though they were confident;
they come there and are frustrated.
21 It is thus that you have now become
for me;
you see a terrifying thing and are afraid.
22 Have I asked you to give me anything,
to offer a gift for me from your possessions,
23 Or to deliver me from the enemy,
or to redeem me from oppressors?
24 Teach me, and I will be silent;
prove to me wherein I have erred.
25 How sickly are your self-righteous words;
how unconvincing is your argument!
26 Do you consider your words as proof,
but the sayings of a desperate man as wind?
27 You would even cast lots for the orphan,
and would barter away your friend!
28 Come, now, give me your attention;
surely I will not lie to your face.
29 Think it over; let there be no injustice.
Think it over; I still am right.
30 Is there insincerity on my tongue,
or cannot my taste discern falsehood?

w Ps 87 (88), 17.—x Jb 19, 14f.

6, 5f: Job would not complain if his life were as pleasant to him as fodder to a hungry animal; but his life is as disagreeable as insipid food. White of an egg: thus the obscure Hebrew has been understood in Jewish tradition; some render it "mallow juice."

6, 19: Thema: in northwest Arabia. Saba: see note on Jb 1, 15.

CHAPTER 7.

1 [y] Is not man's life on earth a drudgery?*
Are not his days those of a hireling?
2 He is a slave who longs for the shade,
a hireling who waits for his wages.
3 So I have been assigned months of misery,
and troubled nights have been told off for me.
4 If in bed I say,
"When shall I arise?"
Then the night drags on;
I am filled with restlessness until the dawn.
5 My flesh is clothed with worms and scabs; [z]
my skin cracks and festers;
6 My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle;
they come to an end without hope.
7 Remember that my life is like the wind; [a]
I shall not see happiness again.
8 The eye that now sees me shall no more behold me;
as you look at me, I shall be gone.
9 As a cloud dissolves and vanishes, [b]
so he who goes down to the nether world shall come up no more.
10 He shall not again return to his house;
his place shall know him no more.
11 My own utterance I will not restrain;
I will speak in the anguish of my spirit;
I will complain in the bitterness of my soul.
12 *Am I the sea, or a monster of the deep,
that you place a watch over me?*
13 When I say, "My bed shall comfort me,
my couch shall ease my complaint," 14 Then you affright me with dreams
and with visions terrify me, 15 So that I should prefer choking
and death rather than my pains.
16 I waste away: I cannot live forever; [c]
let me alone, for my days are but a breath.
17 What is man, that you make much of him,
or pay him any heed?
18 You observe him with each new day [d]
and try him at every moment!
19 How long will it be before you look away from me,
and let me alone long enough to swallow my spittle?
20 Though I have sinned, what can I do to you,
O watcher of men?
Why have you set me up as an object of attack?
or why should I be a burden to you?
21 Why do you not pardon my offense,
or take away my guilt?
For soon I shall lie down in the dust;
and should you seek me I shall then be gone.

CHAPTER 8.

Baldad's First Speech. 1 Baldad the Sueite spoke out and said:

2 How long will you utter such things?
The words from your mouth are like a mighty wind!
3 Does God pervert judgment, [e]
and does the Almighty distort justice?
4 If your children have sinned against him and he has left them in the grip of their guilt, 5 Still, if you yourself have recourse to God
and make supplication to the Almighty, 6 Should you be blameless and upright, surely now he will awake for you and restore your rightful domain;
7 Your former state will be of little moment,
for in time to come you will flourish indeed.
8 If you inquire of the former generations,
and give heed to the experience of the fathers [f] 9 (As we are but of yesterday and have no knowledge, because our days on earth are but a shadow), [g]
10 Will they not teach you and tell you and utter their words of understanding?

7, 12-21: Job now speaks, not to his friends, but to God.

11 Can the papyrus grow up without mire?*
Can the reed grass flourish without water?
12 While it is yet green and uncut,
it withers quicker than any grass.
13 So is the end of everyone who forgets God,
and so shall the hope of the godless man perish.
14 His confidence is but a gossamer thread
and his trust is a spider's web.
15 He shall rely upon his family, but it shall not last;
he shall cling to it, but it shall not endure.
16 He is full of sap before sunrise,
and beyond his garden his shoots go forth;
17 About a heap of stones are his roots entwined;
among the rocks he takes hold.
18 Yet if one tears him from his place,
it will disown him: "I have never seen you!"
19 There he lies rotting beside the road,
and out of the soil another sprouts.
20 Behold, God will not cast away the upright;
neither will he take the hand of the wicked.
21 Once more will he fill your mouth with laughter,
and your lips with rejoicing.
22 They that hate you shall be clothed with shame,
and the tent of the wicked shall be no more.

CHAPTER 9.

Job's Second Reply. 1 Then Job answered and said:

2 I know well that it is so;
but how can a man be justified before God?
3 Should one wish to contend with him,
he could not answer him once in a thousand times.
4 God is wise in heart and mighty in strength;
who has withstood him and remained unscathed?
5 He removes the mountains before they know it;
he overturns them in his anger.
6 He shakes the earth out of its place,[b]
and the pillars beneath it tremble.
7 He commands the sun, and it rises not;
he seals up the stars.
8 He alone stretches out the heavens[i]
and treads upon the crests of the sea.
9 He made the Bear and Orion,
the Pleiades and the constellations of the south;
10 He does great things past finding out,
marvelous things beyond reckoning.
11 Should he come near me, I see him not;
should he pass by, I am not aware of him;
12 Should he seize me forcibly, who can say him nay?
Who can say to him, "What are you doing?"
13 He is God and he does not relent;
the helpers of Rahab* bow beneath him.
14 How much less shall I give him any answer,
or choose out arguments against him!
15 Even though I were right, I could not answer him,[j]
but should rather beg for what was due me.
16 If I appealed to him and he answered my call,
I could not believe that he would hearken to my words;
17 With a tempest he might overwhelm me,
and multiply my wounds without cause;
18 He need not suffer me to draw breath,
but might fill me with bitter griefs.
19 If it be a question of strength, he is mighty;
and if of judgment, who will call him to account?
20 Though I were right, my own mouth might condemn me;[k]
were I innocent, he might put me in the wrong.
21 Though I am innocent, I myself cannot know it;
I despise my life.
22 It is all one! therefore I say:
Both the innocent and the wicked he destroys.[l]

8, 11ff: As marsh plants need water, so man needs God. These verses are taken by some as a quotation from the teaching of the forefathers; cf v 10.

9, 13: Rahab: cf Jb 26, 12. See note on Ps 88 (89), 11.

23 When the scourge slays suddenly,
he laughs at the despair of the innocent.
24 The earth is given into the hands of the wicked;
he covers the faces of its judges.
If it is not he, who then is it?

25 My days are swifter than a runner,
they flee away; they see no happiness; [m] 26 They shoot by like skiffs of reed,
like an eagle swooping upon its prey.
27 If I say: I will forget my complaining,
I will lay aside my sadness and be of good cheer,
28 Then I am in dread of all my pains;
I know that you* will not hold me innocent.

29 If I must be accounted guilty,
why then should I strive in vain?
30 If I should wash myself with snow
and cleanse my hands with lye, 31 Yet you would plunge me in the ditch,
so that my garments would abhor me.

32 For he is not a man like myself, that I should answer him,
that we should come together in judgment.
33 Would that there were an arbiter between us, who could lay his hand upon us both 34 and withdraw his rod from me.
Would that his terrors did not frighten me;
35 that I might speak without being afraid of him.
Since this is not the case with me,
I loathe my life.[n]

CHAPTER 10.

1 I will give myself up to complaint;
I will speak from the bitterness of my soul.
2 I will say to God: Do not put me in the wrong!
Let me know why you oppose me.
3 Is it a pleasure for you to oppress,
to spurn the work of your hands,
and smile on the plan of the wicked?

4 Have you eyes of flesh?
Do you see as man sees?
5 Are your days as the days of a mortal,[o]
and are your years as a man's lifetime, 6 That you seek for guilt in me
and search after my sins,
7 Even though you know that I am not wicked,[p]
and that none can deliver me out of your hand?

8 Your hands have formed me and fashioned me;
will you then turn and destroy me?
9 Oh, remember that you fashioned me from clay! [q]
Will you then bring me down to dust again?
10 Did you not pour me out as milk,
and thicken me like cheese?
11 With skin and flesh you clothed me,
with bones and sinews knit me together.
12 Grace and favor you granted me,
and your providence has preserved my spirit.

13 Yet these things you have hidden in your heart;
I know that they are your purpose:
14 If I should sin, you would keep a watch against me,
and from my guilt you would not absolve me.
15 If I should be wicked, alas for me,
filled with ignominy and sodden with affliction!
If righteous, I dare not hold up my head;
16 should I raise it, you hunt me like a lion.
Repeatedly you show your wondrous power against me,
17 bringing new witnesses to confront me;
While you continue your displeasure with me,
in waves your troops come against me.

18 Why then did you bring me forth from the womb? [r]
I should have died and no eye have seen me.
19 I should be as though I had never lived;
I should have been taken from the womb to the grave.
20 Are not the days of my life few?
Let me alone, that I may recover a little

CHAPTER 11.

Sophar's First Speech. 1 And Sophar the Naamaite spoke out and said:

2 Should not the man of many words be answered,
or must the garrulous man necessarily be right?
3 Shall your babblings keep men silent,
and shall you deride and no one give rebuke?
4 Shall you say: "My teaching is pure,
and I am clean in your sight"?
5 But oh, that God would speak and open his lips against you 6 and declare to you the secrets of wisdom,
That so you might know God will require of you twofold for all your guilt.
7 Can you penetrate the designs of God?[t]
Dare you vie with the perfection of the Almighty?
8 It is higher than the heavens; what can you do?
It is deeper than the nether world; what can you know?
9 It is longer than the earth in measure,
and broader than the sea.
10 If he seize and imprison or call to judgment, who then can say him nay?
11 For he knows the worthlessness of men and sees iniquity; will he then ignore it?
12 Will empty man then gain understanding,
and the wild jackass[u] be made docile?
13 If you set your heart aright
and stretch out your hands toward him, 14 If you remove all iniquity from your conduct,
and let not injustice dwell in your tent, 15 Surely then you may lift up your face in innocence;
you may stand firm and unafraid.
16 For then you shall forget your misery,
or recall it like waters that have ebbed away.
17 Then your life shall be brighter than the noonday;
its gloom shall become as the morning.
18 And you shall be secure, because there is hope;
you shall look round you and lie down in safety,[v] 19 and you shall take your rest with none to disturb.
Many shall entreat your favor,
20 but the wicked, looking on, shall be consumed with envy.
Escape shall be cut off from them,
they shall wait to expire.

CHAPTER 12.

Job's Third Reply. 1 Then Job replied and said:

2 No doubt you are the intelligent folk,
and with you wisdom shall die!
3 But I have intelligence as well as you;[w]
for who does not know such things as these?
4 I have become the sport of my neighbors:*
"The one whom God answers when he calls upon him,
The just, the perfect man," is a laughing stock;[x]
"The one whom God had taken into his hand!"
5 The undisturbed esteem my downfall a disgrace
such as awaits unsteady feet;
6 Yet the tents of robbers are prosperous,
and those who provoke God are secure.
7 But now ask the beasts to teach you,
and the birds of the air to tell you;
8 Or the reptiles on earth to instruct you,
and the fish of the sea to inform you.
9 Which of all these does not know that the hand of God has done this?
10 In his hand is the soul of every living thing,[y]
and the life breath of all mankind.
11 Does not the ear judge words
as the mouth tastes food?[z] 12 So with old age is wisdom,[a]
and with length of days understanding.

13 With him are wisdom and might;
his are counsel and understanding.
14 If he breaks a thing down, there is no rebuilding; [b]
if he imprisons a man, there is no release.
15 He holds back the waters and there is drought; [c]
he sends them forth and they overwhelm the land.
16 With him are strength and prudence;
the misled and the misleaders are his.
18 He loosens the bonds imposed by kings and leaves but a waistcloth to bind the king's own loins.*
19 He sends counselors away barefoot,
17 and of judges he makes fools.
20 He silences the trusted adviser,
and takes discretion from the aged.
21 He breaks down the barriers of the streams
and lets their never-failing waters flow away.
22 The recesses of the darkness he discloses,
and brings the gloom forth to the light.
23 He makes nations great and he destroys them;
he spreads peoples abroad and he abandons them.
24 He takes understanding from the leaders of the land,
25 till they grope in the darkness without light;
he makes them stagger like drunken men.

CHAPTER 13.

1 Lo, all this my eye has seen;
my ear has heard and perceived it.
2 What you know, I also know; [d]
I fall not short of you.
3 But I would speak with the Almighty; [e]
I wish to reason with God.
4 You are glossing over falsehoods
and offering vain remedies, every one of you!
5 Oh, that you would be altogether silent!
This for you would be wisdom.
6 Hear now the rebuke I shall utter and listen to the reproof from my lips.
7 Is it for God that you speak falsehood?
Is it for him that you utter deceit?
8 Is it for him that you show partiality?
Do you play advocate on behalf of God?
9 Will it be well when he shall search you out?
Would you impose on him as one does on men?
10 He will openly rebuke you
if even in secret you show partiality.
11 Surely will his majesty affright you and the dread of him fall upon you.
12 Your reminders are ashy maxims,
your fabrications are mounds of clay.
13 Be silent, let me alone! that I may speak
and give vent to my feelings.
14 I will carry my flesh between my teeth,
and take my life in my hand.*
15 Slay me though he might, [f] I will wait for him;
I will defend my conduct before him.
16 And this shall be my salvation,
that no impious man can come into his presence.
17 Pay careful heed to my speech,
and give my statement a hearing.
18 Behold, I have prepared my case, [g]
I know that I am in the right.
19 If anyone can make a case against me,
then I shall be silent and die.
20 These things only do not use against me,*
then from your presence I need not hide:
21 Withdraw your hand far from me,
and let not the terror of you frighten me.
22 Then call me, and I will respond;
or let me speak first, and answer me.
23 What are my faults and my sins?
My misdeeds and my sins make known to me!
24 Why do you hide your face [h]
and consider me your enemy?
25 Will you harass a wind-driven leaf,
or pursue a withered straw?
26 For you draw up bitter indictments against me,

b Ap 3, 7.—c Gn 7, 11-24.—d Jb 12, 3; 15, 9.—e Jb 23, 4.—f Jb 27, 5.—g Jb 33, 9.—h Jb 19, 11; 33, 10.

12, 18: Waistcloth . . . loins: he reduces kings to the condition of slaves, who wear only a cloth wrapped about the waist.

13, 14: The second half of the verse is a common biblical expression for risking one's life; cf Jgs 12, 3; 1 Kgs 19, 5; 28, 21; Ps 118 (119), 109; the first half of the verse must have a similar meaning. Job is so confident of his innocence that he is willing to risk his life by going to judgment with God.

13, 20: From here to the end of chapter 14, Job pleads his case, addressing God rather than his three friends.

and punish in me the faults of my youth.
27 You put my feet in the stocks;
you watch all my paths
and trace out all my footsteps.

CHAPTER 14.

1 Man, born of woman,
is short-lived and full of trouble, i 2 Like a flower that springs up and fades, j
swift as a shadow that does not abide, 28 Even so he wastes away like a rotten thing;
like a garment that the moth has consumed.*
3 Upon such a one will you cast your eyes
so as to bring me into judgment before you?
4 Can a man be found who is clean of defilement? k
There is none, 5 however short his days.
You know the number of his months;
you have fixed the limit which he cannot pass.
6 Look away from him and let him be,
while, like a hireling, he completes his day.

7 For a tree there is hope,
if it be cut down, that it will sprout again
and that its tender shoots will not cease.
8 Even though its root grow old in the earth,
and its stump die in the dust,
9 Yet at the first whiff of water it may flourish again
and put forth branches like a young plant.
10 But when a man dies, all vigor leaves him; l
when a man expires, where then is he?
11 As when the waters of a lake fail,
or a stream grows dry and parches,
12 So men lie down and rise not again.
Till the heavens are no more, they shall not awake,
nor be roused out of their sleep. m

13 Oh, that you would hide me in the nether world
and keep me sheltered till your wrath is past;
would fix a time for me, and then remember me!
14 When a man has died, were he to live again,
all the days of my drudgery I would wait, n
until my relief should come.
15 You would call, and I would answer you;
you would esteem the work of your hands.
16 Surely then you would count my steps, o
and not keep watch for sin in me.
17 My misdeeds would be sealed up in a pouch,*
and you would cover over my guilt.

18 But as a mountain falls at last and its rock is moved from its place, 19 As waters wear away the stones
and floods wash away the soil of the land,
So you destroy the hope of man.
20 You prevail once for all against him and he passes on;
with changed appearance you send him away.
21 If his sons are honored, he is not aware of it;
if they are in disgrace, he does not know about them.
22 Only his own flesh pains him,
and his soul grieves for him.

III: SECOND CYCLE OF SPEECHES

CHAPTER 15.

Second Speech of Eliphaz. 1 Then Eliphaz the Themanite spoke and said:

2 Should a wise man answer with airy opinions,
or puff himself up with wind?
3 Should he argue in speech which does not avail,
and in words which are to no profit?
4 You in fact do away with piety,
and you lessen devotion toward God,
5 Because your wickedness instructs your mouth,
and you choose to speak like the crafty.

14, 28: This verse has been transposed from Ch 13.
14, 17: Sealed up in a pouch: hidden away and forgotten.

6 Your own mouth condemns you, not I;[p]
your own lips refute you.

7 Are you indeed the first-born of mankind,
or were you brought forth before the hills?
8 Are you privy to the counsels of God,[q]
and do you restrict wisdom to yourself?
9 What do you know that we do not know?[r]
What intelligence have you which we have not?
10 There are gray-haired old men among us more advanced in years than your father.
11 Are the consolations of God not enough for you,
and speech that deals gently with you?

12 Why do your notions carry you away,
and why do your eyes blink, 13 So that you turn your anger against God
and let such words escape your mouth!
14 What is a man that he should be blameless,[s]
one born of woman that he should be righteous?
15 If in his holy ones God places no confidence,[t]
and if the heavens are not clean in his sight, 16 How much less so is the abominable, the corrupt:
man, who drinks in iniquity like water!

17 I will show you, if you listen to me;
what I have seen I will tell — 18 What wise men relate and have not contradicted since the days of their fathers.
19 To whom alone the land was given,
when no foreigner moved among them.

20 The wicked man is in torment all his days,
and limited years are in store for the tyrant;
21 The sound of terrors is in his ears;
when all is prosperous, the spoiler comes upon him.
22 He despairs of escaping the darkness,
and looks ever for the sword;
23 A wanderer, food for the vultures,
he knows that his destruction is imminent.
24 By day the darkness fills him with dread;
distress and anguish overpower him.

25 Because he has stretched out his hand against God
and bade defiance to the Almighty, 26 One shall rush sternly upon him
with the stout bosses of his shields,
like a king prepared for the charge.
27 Because he enveloped himself in his crassness
and made a mask for his folly, 28 He shall dwell in ruinous cities,
in houses that are deserted,
That are crumbling into clay
29 with no shadow to lengthen over the ground.
He shall not be rich, and his possessions shall not endure;
31 for vain shall be his hopes.

30 A flame shall wither him up in his early growth,
and with the wind his blossoms shall disappear.
32 His stalk shall wither before its time,
and his branches shall be green no more.
33 He shall be like a vine that sheds its grapes unripened.
and like an olive tree casting off its bloom.
34 For the breed of the impious shall be sterile,[u]
and fire shall consume the tents of extortioners.
35 They conceive malice and bring forth emptiness;[v]
they give birth to failure.*

CHAPTER 16.

Job's Fourth Reply. 1 Then Job answered and said:

2 I have heard this sort of thing many times.[w]
Wearisome comforters are you all!
3 Is there no end to windy words?
Or what sickness have you that you speak on?

15, 35: They give birth to failure: their wicked plans yield nothing but futile results. Cf Ps 7, 15; Is 59, 4.

4 I also could talk as you do,
were you in my place.
I could declaim over you,
or wag my head at you;
5 I could strengthen you with talk,
or shake my head with silent lips.
6 If I speak, this pain I have will not be checked;
if I leave off, it will not depart from me.

7 But now that I am exhausted and stunned,
all my company has closed in on me.
8 My traducer speaks openly against me;
9 I am the prey his wrath assails,
he gnashes his teeth against me.
My enemies lord it over me;
10 their mouths are agape to bite me.
They smite me on the cheek insultingly;
they are all enlisted against me.
11 God has given me over to the impious;
into the clutches of the wicked he has cast me.

12 I was in peace, but he dislodged me;
he seized me by the neck and dashed me to pieces.
He has set me up for a target;
13 his arrows strike me from all directions,
He pierces my sides without mercy,
he pours out my gall upon the ground.
14 He pierces me with thrust upon thrust;
he attacks me like a warrior.
15 I have fastened sackcloth over my skin,
and have laid my brow in the dust.
16 My face is inflamed with weeping
and there is darkness over my eyes, 17 Although my hands are free from violence,
and my prayer is sincere.

18 O earth, cover not my blood,
nor let my outcry come to rest![x] 19 Even now, behold, my witness* is in heaven,
and my spokesman is on high.
20 My friends it is who wrong me;
before God my eyes drop tears,
21 That he may do justice for a mortal in his presence and decide between a man and his neighbor.
22 For my years are numbered now,
and I am on a journey from which I shall not return.

x Jb 30, 9.

16, 18: As the blood of those who were unjustly slain cries to heaven for vengeance (Gn 4, 10; Ez 24, 6-9), so Job's sufferings demand redress.

16, 19: Witness: refers either to God or, more probably, to Job's prayer.

17, 3: Addressed to God; v 10 to Job's friends.

CHAPTER 17.

1 My spirit is broken, my lamp of life extinguished;
my burial is at hand.
2 I am indeed mocked,
and, as their provocation mounts, my eyes grow dim.
3 Grant me one to offer you a pledge on my behalf:*
who is there that will give surety for me?
4 You darken their minds to knowledge;
therefore they do not understand.
5 My lot is described as evil,
6 and I am made a byword of the people;*
their object lesson I have become.
7 My eye has grown blind with anguish,
and all my frame is shrunken to a shadow.
8 Upright men are astonished at this,
and the innocent aroused against the wicked.
9 Yet the righteous shall hold to his way,
and he who has clean hands increase in strength.

10 But turn now, and come on again;
for I shall not find a wise man among you!
11 My days are passed away, my plans are at an end,
the cherished purposes of my heart.
12 Such men change the night into day;
where there is darkness they talk of approaching light.
13 If I look for the nether world as my dwelling,
if I spread my couch in the darkness,
14 If I must call corruption "my father,"
and the maggot "my mother" and "my sister," 15 Where then is my hope?
and my prosperity, who shall see?
16 Will they descend with me into the nether world?
Shall we go down together into the dust?

CHAPTER 18.

Baldad's Second Speech. 1 Then Baldad the Sueite replied and said:

2 When will you put an end to words?

Reflect, and then we can have discussion.
3 Why are we accounted like the beasts,
their equals in your sight?
4 You who tear yourself in your anger,*
shall the earth be neglected on your account [or the rock be moved out of its place]?
5 Truly the light of the wicked is extinguished;
no flame brightens his hearth.
6 The light is darkened in his tent;
in spite of him, his lamp goes out.[y] 7 His vigorous steps are hemmed in,
and his own counsel casts him down.
8 For he rushes headlong into a net,
and he wanders into a pitfall.
9 A trap seizes him by the heel,
and a snare lays hold of him.
10 A noose for him is hid on the ground,
and the toils for him on the way.
11 On every side terrors affright him;[z]
12 destruction is ready at his side.
13 The first-born of death* consumes his limbs;
14 terror conducts him to the king.*
He is plucked from the security of his tent;
15 over his abode brimstone is scattered.
16 Below, his roots dry up,
and above, his branches wither.
17 His memory perishes from the land,[a]
and he has no name on the earth.
18 He is driven from light into darkness,
and banished out of the world.
19 He has neither son nor grandson among his people,
nor any survivor where once he dwelt.
20 They who come after shall be appalled at his fate;
they who went before are struck with horror.
21 So is it then with the dwelling of the impious man,
and such is the place of him who knows not God!

CHAPTER 19.

Job's Fifth Reply. 1 Then Job answered and said:

2 How long will you vex my soul,
grind me down with words?
3 These ten times you have reviled me,
have assailed me without shame!
4 Be it indeed that I am at fault
and that my fault remains with me.
5 Even so, if you would vaunt yourselves against me
and cast up to me my reproach, 6 Know then that God has dealt unfairly with me,
and compassed me round with his net.
7 If I cry out "Injustice!" I am not heard.[b]
I cry for help, but there is no redress.
8 He has barred my way and I cannot pass;
he has veiled my path in darkness;
9 He has stripped me of my glory,
and taken the diadem from my brow.
10 He breaks me down on every side, and I am gone;
my hope he has uprooted like a tree.
11 His wrath he has kindled against me;
he counts me among his enemies.[c] 12 His troops advance as one man;
they build up their road to attack me,
and they encamp around my tent.
13 My brethren have withdrawn from me,[d]
and my friends are wholly estranged.
14 My kinsfolk and companions neglect me,
and my guests have forgotten me.
15 Even my handmaids treat me as a stranger;
I am an alien in their sight.
16 I call my servant, but he gives no answer, though in my speech I plead with him.
17 My breath is abhorred by my wife;[e]
I am loathsome to the men of my family.
18 The young children, too, despise me;
when I appear, they speak against me.
19 All my intimate friends hold me in horror;
those whom I loved have turned against me![f]

18, 4: Job himself is portrayed as having the heedless rage of wild beasts, despite which God does not forsake the usual course of Divine Providence.

18, 13: First-born of death: that is, disease, plague.

18, 14: The king: of the nether world, death; however, the Hebrew is obscure.

20 My bones cleave to my skin,
and I have escaped with my flesh between my teeth.*
21 Pity me, pity me, O you my friends,
for the hand of God has struck me!
22 Why do you hound me as though you were divine,*
and insatiably prey upon me?
23 Oh, would that my words were written down! g
Would that they were inscribed in a record:*
24 That with an iron chisel and with lead
they were cut in the rock forever!
25 But as for me, I know that my Vindicator lives,*
and that he will at last stand forth upon the dust h
27 Whom I myself shall see, and not another—26 and from my flesh I shall see God;
my inmost being is consumed with longing.
28 But you who say, "How shall we persecute him, seeing that the root of the matter is found in him?"
29 Be afraid of the sword for yourselves,
for these crimes deserve the sword;
that you may know that there is a judgment.

CHAPTER 20.

Sophar's Second Speech. 1 Then Sophar the Naamaite spoke and said:

3 A rebuke which puts me to shame I hear,
2 and because of this I am disturbed.
So now my thoughts provide me with an answer,
and from my understanding a spirit gives me a reply.
4 Do you not know this from olden time, since man was placed upon the earth,
5 That the triumph of the wicked is short and the joy of the impious but for a moment? i 6 Though his pride mount up to the heavens
and his head reach to the clouds, 7 Yet he perishes forever like the fuel of his fire,
and the onlookers say, "Where is he?" j 8 Like a dream he takes flight and is not found again;
he fades away like a vision of the night.
9 The eye which saw him does so no more;
nor shall his dwelling again behold him.
11 Though his frame is full of youthful vigor,
this shall lie with him in the dust.
12 Though wickedness is sweet in his mouth,
and he hides it under his tongue,
13 Though he retains it and will not let it go
but keeps it still within his mouth, 14 Yet in his stomach the fool shall turn;
it shall be venom of asps inside him.
15 The riches he swallowed he shall disgorge;
God shall compel his belly to disown them.
16 The poison of asps he shall drink in;
the viper's fangs shall slay him.
17 He shall see no streams of oil,*
no torrents of honey or milk.
18 Restoring his gains, he shall not enjoy them;
though his wealth increases, he shall not rejoice.
19 Because he has oppressed the poor,
and stolen a patrimony he had not built up,
21 Therefore his prosperity shall not endure,
10 and his hands shall yield up his riches.k
20 Though he has known no quiet in his greed,
his treasures shall not save him.l
22 When he abounds to overflowing, he shall be brought into straits,m and nought shall be left of his goods.

19, 20: With my flesh between my teeth: meaning perhaps that Job has been reduced to such an extremity that he scarcely has thin lips over his teeth. But the current Hebrew text of this line is probably corrupt.

19, 22: Divine: possessing God's attributes of judgment and authority to punish.

19, 23f: Job regards what he is about to say as so important that he wishes it recorded in a permanent manner.

19, 25. 27: The meaning of this passage is obscure because the original text has been poorly preserved and the ancient versions do not agree among themselves. It is certain that Job expresses his belief in a future vindication by God (called here in the Hebrew "Goel"), but the time and manner of this vindication are undefined. In the Vulgate Job is made to indicate a belief in physical resurrection after death, but the Hebrew and the other ancient versions are less specific.

20, 17: Oil: olive oil, one of the main agricultural products of Palestine, a land proverbially rich in honey and milk.

23 God shall send against him the fury of his wrath
and rain down his missiles of war upon him.
24 Should he escape the iron weapon,
the bow of bronze shall pierce him through;
25 The dart shall come out of his back;
terrors shall fall upon him.
26 Complete darkness is in store for him;
the fire which shall consume him needs not to be fanned.[n] 27 The heavens shall reveal his guilt,
and the earth shall rise up against him.
28 .....*
29 This is the portion of a wicked man,
and the heritage appointed him by God.[o]

CHAPTER 21.

Job's Sixth Reply. 1 Then Job made reply and said:

2 At least listen to my words,[p]
and let that be the consolation you offer.
3 Bear with me while I speak;
and after I have spoken, you can mock!
4 Is my complaint toward man?
And why should I not be impatient?
5 Look at me and be astonished,
put your hands over your mouths.
6 When I think of it, I am dismayed,
and horror takes hold on my flesh.
7 Why do the wicked survive,
grow old, become mighty in power?[q]
8 Their progeny is secure in their sight;
they see before them their kinsfolk and their offspring.
9 Their homes are safe and without fear,
nor is the scourge of God upon them.
10 Their bulls gender without fail;
their cows calve and do not miscarry.
11 These folk have infants numerous as lambs,
and their children dance.
12 They sing to the timbrel and harp,
and make merry to the sound of the flute.
13 They live out their days in prosperity,
and tranquilly go down to the nether world.[r] 14 Yet they say to God, "Depart from us,[s]
for we have no wish to learn your ways!
15 What is the Almighty that we should serve him?
and what gain shall we have if we pray to him?"[t] 16 If their happiness is not in their own hands and if the counsel of the wicked is repulsive to God,[u] 17 How often is the lamp of the wicked put out?
How often does destruction come upon them,
the portion he allots in his anger?
18 Let them be like straw before the wind,
and like chaff which the storm snatches away!
19 May God not store up the man's misery for his children;
let him requite the man himself so that he feels it, 20 Let his own eyes see the calamity,
and the wrath of the Almighty let him drink!
21 For what interest has he in his family after him,
when the number of his months is finished?
22 Can anyone teach God knowledge,
seeing that he judges those on high?*
23 One dies in his full vigor,
wholly at ease and content;
24 His figure is full and nourished,
and his bones are rich in marrow.
25 Another dies in bitterness of soul,
having never tasted happiness.
26 Alike they lie down in the dust,
and worms cover them both.
27 Behold, I know your thoughts,
and the arguments you rehearse against me.
28 For you say, "Where is the house of the magnate,
and where the dwelling place of the wicked?"
29 Have you not asked the wayfarers
and do you not recognize their monuments?
30 Nay, the evil man is spared calamity when it comes;
32 and on the day he is carried to the grave

20, 28: In the Vulgate this obscure and seemingly misplaced verse reads: "The offspring of his house shall be exposed; he shall be pulled down in the day of God's wrath."

21, 22: Those on high: the angels.

31 Who will charge him with his conduct to his face,
and for what he has done who will repay him?
33 Sweet to him are the clods of the valley,
and over him the funeral mound keeps watch,
While all the line of mankind follows him,
and the countless others who have gone before.
34 How then can you offer me vain comfort,
while in your answers perfidy remains?

IV: THIRD CYCLE OF SPEECHES

CHAPTER 22.

Eliphaz's Third Speech. 1 Then Eliphaz the Themanite answered and said:

2 Can a man be profitable to God? v
Though to himself a wise man be profitable,
3 Is it of advantage to the Almighty if you are just? w
Or is it a gain to him if you make your ways perfect?
4 Is it because of your piety that he reproves you—that he enters with you into judgment?
5 Is not your wickedness manifold?
Are not your iniquities endless?

6 You have unjustly kept your kinsmen's goods in pawn,*
left them stripped naked of their clothing. x
7 To the thirsty you have given no water to drink,
and from the hungry you have withheld bread;
8 As if the land belonged to the man of might,
and only the privileged were to dwell in it.
9 You have sent widows away empty-handed,
and the resources of orphans you have destroyed. y
10 Therefore snares are round about you, z
and a sudden terror causes you dismay, 11 Or darkness, in which you cannot see;
a deluge of waters covers you.

12 Does not God, in the heights of the heavens, a behold the stars, high though they are?
13 Yet you say, "What does God know? b
Can he judge through the thick darkness?
14 Clouds hide him, so that he cannot see;
he walks upon the vault of the heavens!"

15 Do you indeed keep to the ancient way trodden by worthless men, 16 Who were snatched away before their time;
whose foundations a flood swept away?
17 These men said to God, "Depart from us!"
and, "What can the Almighty do to us?"
18 [Yet he had filled their houses with good things! c
But far be from me the mind of the impious!]*
19 The just look on and are gladdened, and the innocent deride them: d 20 "Truly these have been destroyed where they stood,
and such as were left, fire has consumed!"

21 Come to terms with him to be at peace.
In this shall good come to you:
22 Receive instruction from his mouth,
and lay up his words in your heart.
23 If you return to the Almighty, you will be restored;
if you put iniquity far from your tent, 24 And treat raw gold like dust,
and the fine gold of Ophir* as pebbles from the brook, 25 Then the Almighty himself shall be your gold and your sparkling silver.

26 For then you shall delight in the Almighty
and you shall lift up your face toward God.

22, 6ff: This criticism of Job by Eliphaz is altogether untrue, but it is made to dramatize the latter's argument that God always acts justly when He causes someone to suffer.

22, 18: A gloss, taken partly from Jb 21, 16.

22, 24: Ophir: cf note to Ps 44 (45), 10.

27 You shall entreat him and he will hear you,[e]
and your vows you shall fulfill.
28 When you make a decision, it shall succeed for you,
and upon your ways the light shall shine.
29 For he brings down the pride of the haughty,
but the man of humble mien he saves.[f]
30 God delivers him who is innocent;
you shall be delivered through cleanness of hands.[g]

CHAPTER 23.

Job's Seventh Reply. 1 Again Job answered and said:

2 Though I know my complaint is bitter,
his hand is heavy upon me in my groanings.
3 Oh, that today I might find him,
that I might come to his judgment seat!
4 I would set out my cause before him,
and fill my mouth with arguments;
5 I would learn the words with which he would answer,
and understand what he would reply to me.
6 Even should he contend against me with his great power,
yet, would that he himself might heed me!
7 There the upright man might reason with him,
and I should once and for all preserve my rights.

8 But if I go to the east, he is not there;
or to the west, I cannot perceive him;
9 Where the north enfolds him, I behold him not;
by the south he is veiled, and I see him not.
10 Yet he knows my way;
if he proved me, I should come forth as gold.[h] 11 My foot has always walked in his steps;
his way I have kept and have not turned aside.
12 From the commands of his lips I have not departed;
the words of his mouth I have treasured in my heart.
13 But he has decided, and who can say him nay?
What he desires, that he does.[i] 14 For he will carry out what is appointed for me;
and many such things may yet be in his mind.
15 Therefore am I dismayed before him;
when I take thought, I fear him.
16 Indeed God has made my courage fail;
the Almighty has put me in dismay.
17 Yes, would that I had vanished in darkness,
and that thick gloom were before me to conceal me.

CHAPTER 24.

1 Why are not times set by the Almighty,
and why do his friends not see his days?*
2 The wicked remove landmarks;
they steal away herds and pasture them.
3 The asses of orphans they drive away;
they take the widow's ox for a pledge.
4 They force the needy off the road;
all the poor of the land are driven into hiding.
5 Like wild asses in the desert, these go forth
to their task of seeking food;
The steppe provides food for the young among them;
6 they harvest at night in the untilled land.

7 They pass the night naked, without clothing,
for they have no covering against the cold,
8 They are drenched with the rain of the mountains,
and for want of shelter they cling to the rock.
11 Between the rows they press out the oil;
they glean in the vineyard of the wicked.
They tread the wine presses, yet suffer thirst,

24, 1: Why does not God favor His friends by the speedy punishment of His enemies? (The text and order of verses in this chapter are not certain; note the omission of v 9 which duplicates words of vv 2-4)

10 and famished are those who carry the sheaves.
12 From the dust the dying groan,
and the souls of the wounded cry out [yet God does not treat it as unseemly].

13 There are those who are rebels against the light; j
they know not its ways;
they abide not in its paths.
14 When there is no light the murderer rises,
to kill the poor and needy.
15 The eye of the adulterer watches for the twilight; k
he says, "No eye will see me."
In the night the thief roams about,
and he puts a mask over his face;
16 in the dark he breaks into houses.
By day they shut themselves in;
none of them know the light,
17 for daylight they regard as darkness.*

* * *

18 Their portion in the land is accursed,
20 and wickedness is splintered like wood.
19. 21 .....
22 To him who rises without assurance of his life
23 he gives safety and support.
He sustains the mighty by his strength,
and his eyes are on their ways.
24 They are exalted for a while, and then they are gone;
they are laid low and, like all others,
are gathered up;
like ears of grain they shrivel.

* * *

25 If this be not so, who will confute me,
and reduce my argument to nought?

CHAPTER 25.

Baldad's Third Speech. 1 Then Baldad the Sueite answered and said:

2 Dominion and awsomeness are his who brings about harmony in his heavens.
3 Is there any numbering of his troops?*
Yet to which of them does not his light extend?
4 How can a man be just in God's sight, l
or how can any woman's child be innocent?
5 Behold, even the moon is not bright and the stars are not clear in his sight.
6 How much less man, who is but a maggot,
the son of man, who is only a worm? m

CHAPTER 26.

Job's Reply. 1 Then Job spoke again and said:*

2 What help you give to the powerless,
what strength to the feeble arm!
3 How you counsel, as though he had no wisdom;
how profuse is the advice you offer!
4 With whose help have you uttered those words,
and whose is the breath that comes forth from you? n
5 The shades* beneath writhe in terror, o
the waters, and their inhabitants.
6 Naked before him is the nether world,*
and Abaddon has no covering. p
7 He stretches out the North* over empty space,
and suspends the earth over nothing at all;
8 He binds up the waters in his clouds,
yet the cloud is not rent by their weight;
9 He holds back the appearance of the full moon
by spreading his clouds before it;
10 He has marked out a circle* on the surface of the deep q
as the boundary of light and darkness.

24, 17: The asterisks which follow this verse mark off a passage (vv 18-24) which cannot be ascribed to Job with certainty. Vv 17-24 are in general poorly preserved; and much of vv 18-21 have not been translated because they are quite obscure. St. Jerome renders these verses as follows: (18) "He is light upon the face of the water, cursed be his portion on the earth; let him not walk by the way of vineyards. (19) Let him pass from the snow waters to excessive heat, and his sin even to hell. (20) Let mercy forget him; may worms be his sweetness; let him be remembered no more, but be broken in pieces as an unfruitful tree. (21) For he has fed the barren that bears not, and to the widow he has done no good."

25, 3: His troops: the heavenly hosts, the stars or the angels. His light: compare the phrase "rebels against the light," in Jb 24, 13.

26, 1-14: This is probably to be read as Job's reply to Sophar's speech in Jb 27, 7-21. It would thus lead up to the poem of ch 28.

26, 5: Shades: the dead in Sheol, the nether world; cf Ps 6, 6; 87 (88), 11.

26, 6: Nether world: cf note to Ps 6, 6. Abaddon: Hebrew for "(place of) destruction," a synonym for nether world; cf Jb 28, 22; Ap 9, 11.

26, 7: The North: used here as a synonym for the firmament, the heavens; cf Is 14, 13.

26, 10: Circle: the horizon of the ocean which serves as the boundary for the activity of light and darkness.

11 The pillars of the heavens tremble [r]
and are stunned at his thunderous rebuke;
2 By his power he stirs up the sea,
and by his might he crushes Rahab;*
3 His breath cleaves the waters;
his hand pierces the fleeing [s] dragon.*
14 Lo, these are but the outlines of his ways,
and how faint is the word we hear!

CHAPTER 27.

Job's Reply

2 As God lives,* who withholds my deserts,[t]
the Almighty, who has made bitter my soul, 3 So long as I still have life in me
and the breath of God is in my nostrils, 4 My lips shall not speak falsehood,
nor my tongue utter deceit!
5 Far be it from me to account you right;
till I die I will not renounce my innocence.[u] 6 My justice I maintain and I will not relinquish it;
my heart does not reproach me for any of my days.

11 I will teach you the manner of God's dealings,
and the way of the Almighty I will not conceal.
12 Behold, you yourselves have all seen it;
why then do you spend yourselves in idle words!

7 Let my enemy be as the wicked*
and my adversary as the unjust!
8 For what can the impious man expect when he is cut off,
when God requires his life?
9 Will God then attend to his cry
when calamity comes upon him?
10 Will he then delight in the Almighty
and call upon him constantly?

13 This is the portion of a wicked man from God,
the inheritance an oppressor receives from the Almighty: [v]
14 Though his children be many, the sword is their destiny.
His offspring shall not be filled with bread.
15 His survivors, when they die, shall have no burial,
and their widows shall not be mourned.

16 Though he heap up silver like dust
and store away mounds of clothing, 17 What he has stored the just man shall wear,
and the innocent shall divide the silver.
18 He builds his house as of cobwebs,
or like a booth put up by the vinekeeper.
19 He lies down a rich man, one last time;
he opens his eyes and nothing remains to him.[w] 20 Terrors rush upon him by day;
at night the tempest carries him off.
21 The storm wind seizes him and he disappears;
it sweeps him out of his place.*

CHAPTER 28.

1 There is indeed a mine for silver,*
and a place for gold which men refine.
2 Iron is taken from the earth,
and copper is melted out of stone.
4 .....
5 The earth, though out of it comes forth bread,
is in fiery upheaval underneath.*

26, 12: Rahab: cf Jb 9, 13; see note on Ps 88 (89), 11.

26, 13: The fleeing dragon: the same term occurs in Is 27, 1 in apposition to the Leviathan; see note on Jb 3, 8.

27, 2-6: This is probably to be read as Job's reply to Baldad's speech of Jb 25, 1-6. In the current Hebrew text the heading for this chapter (27, 1, here omitted) is identical with 29, 1; we should expect rather such a heading as in 21, 1; 23, 1; 26, 1.

27, 7-21: This is probably to be read as Sophar's third speech. The asterisks are present to indicate it is not likely that the sacred writer intended these words to be ascribed to Job.

27, 21: The Hebrew has two more verses: v 22, "He hurls it against him relentlessly, though from its stroke he strives to flee," which does not fit the present context; and v 23, which is a variant form of v 21.

28, 1-28: Note the changed order of verses, and the omission of the textually uncertain v 4.

This chapter contains a beautifully vivid description of that Wisdom which is beyond the attainment of creatures; known only to God, it is reflected in the order and majesty of His creation. Man, however, can, in a way, participate in this Wisdom by fearing the Lord and avoiding evil. Scholars are not agreed regarding the authorship of this passage, but the traditional belief has been that it was written by the author of the Book of Job. Perhaps, however, its present position was not the original one. It may even have been first conceived as an independent poem.

28, 5: The earth . . . upheaval underneath: perhaps the occurrence of volcanoes may have led the ancients to this conclusion.

6 Its stones are the source of sapphires,
and there is gold in its dust.

12 But whence can wisdom be obtained,
and where is the place of understanding? [x] 13 Man knows nothing to equal it, nor is it to be had in the land of the living.
15 Solid gold cannot purchase it,
nor can its price be paid with silver.[y] 16 It cannot be bought with gold of Ophir,*
with the precious onyx or the sapphire.
17 Gold or crystal cannot equal it,
nor can golden vessels reach its worth.
18 Neither coral nor jasper should be thought of;
it surpasses pearls and 19 Arabian topaz.

20 Whence, then, comes wisdom,
and where is the place of understanding?
21 It is hid from the eyes of any beast;
from the birds of the air it is concealed.
7 The path to it no bird of prey knows,
nor has the hawk's eye seen that path.
8 The proud beasts have not trodden it,
nor has the lion gone that way.
14 The abyss declares, "It is not in me";
and the sea says, "I have it not."
22 Abaddon* and Death say,
"Only by rumor have we heard of it."

23 God knows the way to it; [z]
it is he who is familiar with its place.
24 For he beholds the ends of the earth and sees all that is under the heavens.
9 He sets his hand to the flinty rock,
and overturns the mountains at their foundations.
10 He splits channels in the rocks;
his eyes behold all that is precious.
11 He probes the wellsprings of the streams,
and brings hidden things to light.

25 He has weighed out the wind,
and fixed the scope of the waters;
3 He has set a boundary for the darkness;
to the farthest confines he penetrates.
26 When he made rules for the rain and a path for the thunderbolts,[a] 27 Then he saw wisdom and appraised it, gave it its setting, knew it through and through.
28 And to man he said:
Behold, the fear of the Lord is wisdom;
and avoiding evil is understanding.[b]

V: JOB'S FINAL SUMMARY OF HIS CAUSE

CHAPTER 29.

1 Job took up his theme anew and said:

2 Oh, that I were as in the months past!
as in the days when God watched over me,[c] 3 While his lamp shone above my head,
and by his light I walked through darkness;
4 As I was in my flourishing days,
when God sheltered my tent;
5 When the Almighty was yet with me,
and my children were round about me;
6 When my footsteps were bathed in milk,
and the rock flowed with streams of oil.*

7 Then when I went forth to the gate of the city and set up my seat in the square, 8 The young men saw me and withdrew,
while the elders rose up and stood;
9 The chief men refrained from speaking and covered their mouths with their hands;
10 The voice of the princes was silenced,
and their tongues stuck to the roofs of their mouths.
21 For me they listened and waited;
they were silent for my counsel.

22 Once I spoke, they said no more,
but received my pronouncement drop by drop.
23 They waited for me as for the rain;
they drank in my words like the late rains.
24 When I smiled on them they were reassured;

25 mourners took comfort from my cheerful glance.
I chose out their way and presided;
I took a king's place in the armed forces.

11 Whoever heard of me blessed me;
those who saw me commended me.
12 For I rescued the poor who cried out for help,
the orphans, and the unassisted;
13 The blessing of those in extremity came upon me,
and the heart of the widow I made joyful.
14 I wore my honesty like a garment;
justice was my robe and my turban.
15 I was eyes to the blind,
and feet to the lame was I; 16 I was a father to the needy;
the rights of the stranger I studied, 17 And I broke the jaws of the wicked man;
from his teeth I forced the prey.

18 Then I said: "In my own nest I shall grow old;
I shall multiply years like the phoenix.*
19 My root is spread out to the waters;
the dew rests by night on my branches.
20 My glory is fresh within me,
and my bow is renewed in my hand!"

CHAPTER 30.

1 But now they hold me in derision
who are younger in years than I; [d]
Whose fathers I should have disdained
to rank with the dogs of my flock.
2 To me the strength of their hands meant nought;
their vigor had perished through want and hunger.
3 They fled to dry and barren ground,[e]
a land of waste and desolation.
4 They plucked saltwort* and shrubs;
the roots of the broom plant were their food.
5 They were banished from among men,
with an outcry like that against a thief,
6 To dwell on the slopes of the wadies,
in caves of sand and stone;
7 Among the bushes they raised their raucous cry;
under the nettles they huddled together.
8 Irresponsible, nameless men,
they were driven out of the land.

9 Yet now they sing of me in mockery;
I am become a byword among them.[f]
10 They abhor me, they stand aloof from me,
they do not hesitate to spit in my face!
11 Indeed, they have loosed their bonds;
they lord it over me,
and have thrown off restraint in my presence.
12 To subvert my paths they rise up;
they build their approaches for my ruin.
13 To destroy me, they attack with none to stay them;
14 as through a wide breach they advance.
Amid the uproar they come on in waves;
15 over me rolls the terror.

My dignity is borne off on the wind,
and my welfare vanishes like a cloud.
16 One with great power lays hold of my clothing;*
by the collar of my tunic he seizes me:
19 He has cast me into the mire;
I am leveled with the dust and ashes.
20 I cry to you, but you do not answer me; [g]
you stand off and look at me, 21 Then you turn upon me without mercy
and with your strong hand you buffet me.
22 You raise me up and drive me before the wind;
I am tossed about by the tempest.

23 Indeed I know you will turn me back in death
to the destined place of everyone alive.[h]

d Jb 12, 4; 19, 18.—e Jb 24, 5f.—f Jb 17, 6.—g Jb 19, 7.—h Heb 9, 27.

29, 18: Phoenix: a bird which in ancient fable renewed its youth. This is apparently the original meaning intended by the Greek, which was later understood to mean the "palm tree." Some render the Hebrew as "sand."

30, 4: Saltwort: found in salt marshes and very sour to the taste; eaten by the extremely poor as a cooked vegetable. Broom plant: the juniper or brushwood; cf Ps 119 (120), 4; a figure of bitterness and poverty, because of its bitter-tasting roots which are practically inedible.

30, 18-23: Job here refers to God's stern treatment of him.

24 Yet should not a hand be held out to help a wretched man in his calamity?
25 Or have I not wept for the hardships of others;
was not my soul grieved for the destitute? i 26 Yet when I looked for good, then evil came;
when I expected light, then came darkness.

16 My soul ebbs away from me;
27 within me is a seething that will not be stilled.
17 My gnawing pains take no rest by night;
days of affliction have come upon me.
28 I go about in gloom, without the sun;
I rise up in public to voice my grief.
29 I have become the brother of jackals,
companion to the ostrich.
30 My blackened skin falls away from me;
the heat scorches my very frame.
31 My harp is turned to mourning,
and my reed pipe to sounds of weeping.

CHAPTER 31.

2 But what is man's lot from God above,
his inheritance from the Almighty on high?
3 Is it not calamity for the unrighteous,
and woe for evildoers?
4 Does he not see my ways,
and number all my steps? j
6 Let God weigh me in the scales of justice;
thus will he know my innocence! k

5 If I have walked in falsehood*
and my foot has hastened to deceit;
7 If my steps have turned out of the way,
and my heart has followed my eyes,
or any stain clings to my hands,
8 Then may I sow, but another eat of it,
or may my planting be rooted up!

38 If my land has cried out against me
till its very furrows complained;
39 If I have eaten its produce without payment and grieved the hearts of its tenants;
40 Then let the thistles grow instead of wheat
and noxious weeds instead of barley!

1 If I have made an agreement with my eyes*
and entertained any thoughts against a maiden; 9 If my heart has been enticed toward a woman,
and I have lain in wait at my neighbor's door;
10 Then may my wife grind for another,
and may others cohabit with her!
11 For that would be heinous,
a crime to be condemned; l
12 A fire that should burn down to the abyss
till it consumed all my possessions to the roots! m

13 Had I refused justice to my manservant or to my maid, when they had a claim against me, 14 What then should I do when God rose up;
what could I answer when he demanded an account?
15 Did not he who made me in the womb make him?
Did not the same One fashion us before our birth?

16 Have I denied anything to the poor, n or allowed the eyes of the widow to languish 17 While I ate my portion alone,
with no share in it for the fatherless, 18 Though like a father God has reared me from my youth,
guiding me even from my mother's womb?

19 What wanderer have I seen without clothing,
or poor man without covering, 20 Whose limbs have not blessed me
when warmed with the fleece of my sheep?
21 If I have raised my hand against the innocent
because I saw that I had supporters at the gate,* 22 Then may my arm fall from the shoulder,
my forearm be broken at the elbow!
23 For the dread of God will be upon me,
and his majesty will overpower me.

31, 5-34: Job's final protestation of his innocence.
31, 1. 9: Note the gradation: avoidance of sinful glances and thoughts against a maiden; desire for another's wife.
31, 21: Gate: cf note on Jb 5, 4; Ru 4, 1.

24 Had I put my trust in gold or called fine gold my security; 25 Or had I rejoiced that my wealth was great,
or that my hand had acquired abundance—26 Had I looked upon the sun as it shone,[o]
or the moon in the splendor of its progress,* 27 And had my heart been secretly enticed
to waft them a kiss with my hand;
28 This too would be a crime for condemnation,
for I should have denied God above.[p]

29 Had I rejoiced at the destruction of my enemy or exulted when evil fell upon him,[q] 30 Even though I had not suffered my mouth to sin
by uttering a curse against his life—

31 Had not the men of my tent exclaimed,
"Who has not been fed with his meat!"*
32 Because no stranger lodged in the street,
but I opened my door to wayfarers—

33 Had I, out of human weakness, hidden my sins and buried my guilt in my bosom*
34 Because I feared the noisy multitude and the scorn of the tribes terrified me—
then I should have remained silent,
and not come out of doors!

35 Oh, that I had one to hear my case,
and that my accuser would write out his indictment![r] 36 Surely, I should wear it on my shoulder*
or put it on me like a diadem;
37 Of all my steps I should give him an account;
like a prince* I should present myself before him.

This is my final plea; let the Almighty answer me!

The words of Job are ended.

VI: ELIU'S SPEECHES

CHAPTER 32.

1 Then the three men ceased to answer Job, because he was righteous[s] in his own eyes. 2[t] But the anger of Eliu,* son of Barachel the Buzite, of the family of Ram, was kindled. He was angry with Job for considering himself rather than God to be in the right. 3[u] He was angry also with the three friends because they had not found a good answer and had not condemned Job. 4 But since these men were older than he, Eliu bided his time before addressing Job. 5 When, however, Eliu saw that there was no reply in the mouths of the three men, his wrath was inflamed. 6 So Eliu, son of Barachel the Buzite, spoke out and said:

I am young and you are very old;
therefore I held back and was afraid to declare to you my knowledge.
7 Days should speak, I thought,
and many years teach wisdom![v] 8 But it is a spirit in man,[w]
the breath of the Almighty, that gives him understanding.
9 It is not those of many days who are wise,
nor the aged who understand the right.
10 Therefore I say, hearken to me;
let me too set forth my knowledge!

11 Behold, I have waited for your discourses,
and have given ear to your arguments.
12 Yes, I followed you attentively
as you searched out what to say;
And behold, there is none who has convicted Job,
not one of you who could refute his statements.

o Dt 4, 19.—p Dt 17, 2-7.—q Prv 24, 17.—r Jb 19, 23; 23, 3-7.—s Jb 33, 9.—t Jb 13, 18; 27, 6; 34, 5; 35, 2.—u Jb 22, 5.—v Jb 12, 12.—w Jb 33, 4.

31, 26ff: Job never sinned by worshiping the sun or the moon; waft them a kiss: an act of idolatrous worship.

31, 31: The members of his household will testify to his hospitality.

31, 33f: Job's present protest is made, not in spite of hidden sins which he had been unwilling to disclose, but out of genuine innocence.

31, 36: Shoulder: i.e., boldly, proudly.

31, 37: Prince: not as a frightened criminal. Final plea: literally, "tau," the last letter of the Hebrew alphabet; in the current Hebrew text this line is in v 35, while the following one ends v 40.

32, 2: Eliu means "My God is He." This speaker was from Buz, which, according to Jer 25, 23, was near Theman and Dedan. A young man, he impetuously and impatiently upbraids Job for his boldness toward God, and the three friends for not successfully answering Job. He undertakes to defend God's absolute justice and to explain more clearly why there is suffering. While fundamentally his position is the same as that of the three friends, he does locate more definitely, though not perfectly, the place of suffering in the divine plan.

13 Yet do not say, "We have met wisdom.*
God may vanquish him but not man!
14 For had he addressed his words to me,
I should not then have answered him as you have done.

15 They are dismayed, they make no more reply;
words fail them.
16 Must I wait? Now that they speak no more,
and have ceased to make reply,
17 I too will speak my part;
I also will show my knowledge!

18 For I am full of matters to utter;
the spirit within me compels me.
19 Like a new wineskin with wine under pressure,
my bosom is ready to burst.
20 Let me speak and obtain relief;
let me open my lips, and make reply.
21 I would not be partial to anyone,
nor give flattering titles to any.
22 For I know nought of flattery;
if I did, my Maker would soon take me away.

CHAPTER 33.

1 Therefore, O Job, hear my discourse,
and hearken to all my words.
2 Behold, now I open my mouth;
my tongue and my voice form words.
3 I will state directly what is in my mind,
my lips shall utter knowledge sincerely;
4 For the spirit of God has made me,
the breath of the Almighty keeps me alive.[x]

5 If you are able, refute me;
draw up your arguments and stand forth.
6 Behold I, like yourself, have been taken from the same clay by God.[y]
7 Therefore no fear of me should dismay you,
nor should my presence weigh heavily upon you.

8 But you have said in my hearing,
as I listened to the sound of your words:
9 "I am clean and without transgression;
I am innocent; there is no guilt in me.[z]
10 Yet he invents pretexts against me and reckons me as his enemy.[a] 11 He puts my feet in the stocks;
he watches all my ways!" [b]

12 In this you are not just, let me tell you;
for God is greater than man.
13 Why, then, do you make complaint against him
that he gives no account of his doings? [c] 14 For God does speak, perhaps once, or even twice, though one perceive it not.

15 In a dream, in a vision of the night,
[when deep sleep falls upon men]
as they slumber in their beds, 16 It is then he opens the ears of men
and as a warning to them, terrifies them;
17 By turning man from evil
and keeping pride away from him, 18 He withholds his soul from the pit
and his life from passing to the grave.

19 Or a man is chastened on his bed by pain
and unceasing suffering within his frame, 20 So that to his appetite food becomes repulsive,
and his senses reject the choicest nourishment.[d] 21 His flesh is wasted so that it cannot be seen,
and his bones, once invisible, appear;
22 His soul draws near to the pit,
his life to the place of the dead.

23 If then there be for him an angel,*
one out of a thousand, a mediator,
To show him what is right for him
and bring the man back to justice, 24 He will take pity on him and say,
"Deliver him from going down to the pit;
I have found him a ransom."

25 Then his flesh shall become soft as a boy's;
he shall be again as in the days of his youth.
26 He shall pray and God will favor him;
he shall see God's face with rejoicing.[e] 27 He shall sing before men and say,

x Jb 32, 8.—y Jb 31, 15.—z Jb 10, 7; 13, 18; 27, 5f; 29, 14; 32, 1; 34, 5.—a Jb 13, 24; 19, 11.—b Jb 13, 27; 31, 4.—c Jb 31, 35.—d Jb 6, 7.—e Jb 22, 26-29.

32, 13: Met wisdom: in Job's arguments.

33, 23: Angel: one of the thousands who stand between God and man as intermediaries, reminding man of his duties and giving God an account of their fulfillment.

"I sinned and did wrong,
yet he has not punished me accordingly.
28 He delivered my soul from passing to the pit,
and I behold the light of life."

29 Lo, all these things God does,
twice, or thrice, for a man, 30 Bringing back his soul from the pit
to the light, in the land of the living.
31 Be attentive, O Job; listen to me!
Be silent and I will speak.
32 If you have aught to say, then answer me.
Speak out! I should like to see you justified.
33 If not, then do you listen to me;
be silent while I teach you wisdom.

CHAPTER 34.

1 Then Eliu continued and said:

2 Hear, O wise men, my discourse,
and you that have knowledge, hear me!
3 For the ear tests words,
as the taste does food.[f]
4 Let us discern for ourselves what is right;
let us learn between us what is good.
5 For Job has said, "I am innocent,
but God has taken what is my due.[g] 6 Notwithstanding my right I am set at nought;
in my wound the arrow rankles, sinless though I am."[h]

7 What man is like Job?
He drinks in blasphemies like water,
8 Keeps company with evildoers
and goes along with wicked men, 9 When he says, "It profits a man nought that he is pleasing to God."[i]

10 Therefore, men of understanding, hearken to me:
far be it from God to do wickedness;
far from the Almighty to do wrong![j] 11 Rather, he requites men for their conduct,
and brings home to a man his way of life.
12 Surely, God cannot act wickedly,
the Almighty cannot violate justice.[k] 13 Who gave him government over the earth, or who else set all the land in its place?[l] 14 If he were to take back his spirit to himself, withdraw to himself his breath, 15 All flesh would perish together,
and man would return to the dust.[m]

16 Now, do you, O Job, hear this!
Hearken to the words I speak!
17 Can an enemy of justice indeed be in control,
or will you condemn the supreme Just One, 18 Who says to a king, "You are worthless!"
and to nobles, "You are wicked!"
19 Who neither favors the person of princes,
nor respects the rich more than the poor?
For they are all the work of his hands;[n]
20 in a moment they die, even at midnight.[o]
He brings on nobles, and takes them away,
removing the powerful without lifting a hand;
21 For his eyes are upon the ways of man,
and he beholds all his steps.

22 There is no darkness so dense that evildoers can hide in it.
25 Therefore he discerns their works;
he turns at night and crushes them.
23 For he forewarns no man of his time to come before God in judgment.
24 Without a trial he breaks the mighty,[p]
and sets others in their stead, 27 Because they turned away from him
and heeded none of his ways, 28 But caused the cries of the poor to reach him,
so that he heard the plea of the afflicted.

29 If he remains tranquil, who then can condemn?*
If he hides his face, who then can behold him?
30 .....
31 When anyone says to God,
"I was misguided; I will offend no more.

34, 26. 29f: The extant Hebrew text of these verses contains several added phrases which either represent duplication or are very obscure.

32 Teach me wherein I have sinned;
if I have done wrong, I will do so no more," 33 Would you then say that God must punish,
since you reject what he is doing?
It is you who must choose, not I;
speak, therefore, what you know.

34 Men of understanding will say to me,
every wise man who hears my views:
35 "Job speaks without intelligence,
and his words are without sense." q
36 Let Job be tried to the limit,
since his answers are those of the impious;
37 For he is adding rebellion to his sin
by brushing off our arguments
and addressing many words to God.

CHAPTER 35.

1 Then Eliu proceeded and said:

2 Do you think it right to say,
"I am just rather than God?" r 3 To say, "What does it profit me;
what advantage have I more than if I had sinned?" s 4 I have words for a reply to you* and your three companions as well.
5 Look up to the skies and behold;
regard the heavens high above you.
6 If you sin, what injury do you do to God?
Even if your offenses are many, how do you hurt him?
7 If you are righteous, what do you give him,
or what does he receive from your hand? t
8 Your wickedness can affect only a man like yourself;
and your justice only a fellow human being.

9 In great oppression men cry out;
they call for help because of the power of the mighty, 10 Saying, "Where is God, my Maker,
who has given visions in the night,
11 Taught us rather than the beasts of the earth,
and made us wise rather than the birds of the heavens?"
12 Though thus they cry out, he answers not against the pride of the wicked.

13 But it is idle to say God does not hear or that the Almighty does not take notice.
14 Even though you say that you see him not,*
the case is before him; with trembling should you wait upon him.
15 But now that you have done otherwise,
God's anger punishes,
nor does he show concern that a man will die.
16 Yet Job to no purpose opens his mouth,
and without knowledge multiplies words. u

CHAPTER 36.

1 Eliu proceeded further and said:

2 Wait yet a little and I will instruct you,
for there are still words to be said on God's behalf.
3 I will bring my knowledge from afar,
and to my Maker I will accord the right.
4 For indeed, my theme cannot fail me:
the one perfect in knowledge I set before you.

5 Behold, God rejects the obstinate in heart;*
he preserves not the life of the wicked.
6 He withholds not the just man's rights,
but grants vindication to the oppressed. v
7 And with kings upon thrones
he sets them, exalted forever. w

8 Or if they are bound with fetters
and held fast by bonds of affliction, 9 Then he makes known to them what they have done
and their sins of boastful pride.
10 He opens their ears to correction
and exhorts them to turn back from evil.

11 If they obey and serve him,
they spend their days in prosperity,
their years in happiness.

35, 4: A reply to you: Eliu refers to Job's statement that the innocent suffer as much as the wicked, and especially to Eliphaz's words in Jb 22, 2f.

35, 14f: The text here is uncertain. It seems to indicate that Job should have realized God's indifference is only apparent, and that, because he has not done so, God will punish him.

36, 5-21: Perhaps this section should be read between vv 6 and 7 of ch 34.

12 But if they obey not, they perish;
they die for lack of knowledge.*
13 The impious in heart lay up anger for themselves;
they cry not for help when he enchains them;
14 Therefore they expire in youth,
and perish among the reprobate.*
15 But he saves the unfortunate through their affliction,
and instructs them through distress.
16-20 ..... *
21 Take heed, turn not to evil;
for you have preferred carousal to affliction.
22 Behold, God is sublime in his power.
What teacher is there like him?
23 Who prescribes for him his conduct, or who can say, "You have done wrong"?[x] 24 Remember, you should extol his work,
which men have praised in song.
25 All men contemplate it;
man beholds it from afar.
26 Lo, God is great beyond our knowledge;
the number of his years is past searching out.
27 He holds in check the waterdrops
that filter in rain through his mists, 28 Till the skies run with them and the showers rain down on mankind.
31 For by these* he nourishes the nations,
and gives them food in abundance.
29. 30 Lo! he spreads the clouds in layers
as the carpeting of his tent.*
32 In his hands he holds the lightning,
and he commands it to strike the mark.
33 His thunder speaks for him
and incites the fury of the storm.

CHAPTER 37.

1 At this my heart trembles
and leaps out of its place, 2 To hear his angry voice*
as it rumbles forth from his mouth!
3 Everywhere under the heavens he sends it,
with his lightning, to the ends of the earth.
4 Again his voice roars—
the majestic sound of his thunder.
5 He does great things beyond our knowing;
wonders past our searching out.
6 For he says to the snow, "Fall to the earth";
likewise to his heavy, drenching rain.
7 He shuts up all mankind indoors;
8 the wild beasts take to cover
and remain quietly in their dens.
9 Out of its chamber* comes forth the tempest;
from the north winds, the cold.
10 With his breath God brings the frost,
and the broad waters become congealed.[y] 11 With hail, also, the clouds are laden,
as they scatter their flashes of light.
12 He it is who changes their rounds,*
according to his plans,
in their task upon the surface of the earth,
13 whether for punishment or mercy, as he commands.
14 Hearken to this, O Job!
Stand and consider the wondrous works of God!
15 Do you know how God lays his commands upon them,
and makes the light shine forth from his clouds?
16 Do you know how the clouds are banked,
the wondrous work of him who is perfect in knowledge?
17 You, whom the streams of water fail
when a calm from the south comes over the land,

x Jb 34, 10; Is 40, 13.—y Ps 147 (148), 17.

36, 12: Knowledge: practical wisdom in serving God, which they lack because they refused it when warned (cf v 10).

36, 14: Reprobate: cf Dt 23, 18f.

36, 16-20: The Hebrew text here is in disorder. The Vulgate has: "(16) Therefore he will give you most ample salvation from the narrow mouth which has no foundations beneath it; but the repose of your table will be filled with fatness. (17) Your case has been judged as that of the wicked; case and judgment you will receive. (18) Let no wrath, then, overcome you, that you oppress anyone; nor let numerous gifts mislead you. (19) Lay down your greatness without tribulation, and all who are mighty in strength. (20) Do not draw out the night, that people may go in place of them."

36, 31: These: refers to the showers of v 28, if the verse order indicated above is correct.

36, 29f: Because of the uncertainty of the text, no translation of these verses has received unanimous approval from exegetes.

37, 2: Voice: the thunder.

37, 9: Chamber: where it was popularly believed storms were kept enclosed.

37, 12: Their rounds: of rain (36, 27), of clouds (36, 29f), of lightning and thunder (36, 32f), of snow (37, 6), of winds (37, 9).

18 Do you spread out with him the firmament of the skies, hard as a brazen mirror?*
19 Teach us then what we shall say to him;
we cannot, for the darkness, make our plea.
20 Will he be told about it when I speak,
or when a man says he is being destroyed?*
21 Nay, rather, it is as the light which men see not while it is obscured among the clouds,
till the wind comes by and sweeps the clouds away.*
22 From the North the splendor comes,*
surrounding God's awesome majesty!
23 The Almighty! we cannot discover him,
pre-eminent in power and judgment;
his great justice owes no one an accounting.
24 Therefore men revere him,
though none can see him, however wise their hearts.

VII: THE LORD'S SPEECH

CHAPTER 38.

1 Then the Lord* addressed Job out of the storm and said:
2 Who is this that obscures divine plans
with words of ignorance?
3 Gird up your loins* now, like a man;
I will question you, and you tell me the answers! [z]
4 Where were you when I founded the earth?
Tell me, if you have understanding.
5 Who determined its size; do you know?
Who stretched out the measuring line for it?
6 Into what were its pedestals sunk,
and who laid the cornerstone,
7 While the morning stars sang in chorus
and all the sons of God* shouted for joy?
8 And who shut within doors the sea,
when it burst forth from the womb; [a] 9 When I made the clouds its garment and thick darkness its swaddling bands?
10 When I set limits for it and fastened the bar of its door, 11 And said: Thus far shall you come but no farther,
and here shall your proud waves be stilled!
12 Have you ever in your lifetime commanded the morning and shown the dawn its place 13 For taking hold of the ends of the earth,
till the wicked are shaken from its surface?
14 The earth is changed as is clay by the seal,
and dyed as though it were a garment;
15 But from the wicked the light is withheld,
and the arm of pride is shattered.
16 Have you entered into the sources of the sea,
or walked about in the depths of the abyss?
17 Have the gates of death been shown to you,
or have you seen the gates of darkness?
18 Have you comprehended the breadth of the earth?
Tell me, if you know all:
19 Which is the way to the dwelling place of light,
and where is the abode of darkness,
20 That you may take them to their boundaries
and set them on their homeward paths?
21 You know, because you were born before them,
and the number of your years is great!*

z Jb 40, 2.—a Gn 1, 9.

37, 18: The firmament . . . mirror: the ancients thought of the sky as a ceiling above which were the "upper waters" (cf Gn 1, 6f; 7, 11); when this ceiling became as hard as metal, the usual rain failed to fall on the earth (cf Lv 26, 19; Dt 28, 23).

37, 20: Will an angel bring this to God's attention?

37, 21: Even though God seems not to know our circumstances, He does know them, just as surely as the sun shines, unseen by man, behind the clouds.

37, 22: Now the storms of doubt and ignorance disappear, and from the North, used here as a symbol for God's mysterious abode, comes the splendor of the manifestation of God's majestic ways.

38, 1: Now the Lord enters the debate and addresses two discourses (38 — 39 and 40 — 41) to Job, in which He speaks of His wisdom and power, which are altogether beyond the capacity of Job, who therefore should never dare to demand a reason for the divine actions. Out of the storm: frequently the background of the appearances of the Lord in the Old Testament; cf Pss 17 (18); 49 (50); Na 1, 3; Hb 3.

38, 3: Gird up your loins: prepare for combat — figuratively, be ready to defend yourself in debate.

38, 7: Sons of God: angels; cf Jb 1, 6.

38, 21: Divine irony.

22 Have you entered the storehouse of the snow,
and seen the treasury of the hail 23 Which I have reserved for times of stress,
for the days of war* and of battle?
24 Which way to the parting of the winds,
whence the east wind spreads over the earth?
25 Who has laid out a channel for the downpour
and for the thunderstorm a path 26 To bring rain to no man's land,
the unpeopled wilderness;
27 To enrich the waste and desolate ground
till the desert blooms with verdure?
28 Has the rain a father;
or who has begotten the drops of dew?
29 Out of whose womb comes the ice,
and who gives the hoarfrost its birth in the skies, 30 When the waters lie covered as though with stone that holds captive the surface of the deep?
31 Have you fitted a curb to the Pleiades,*
or loosened the bonds of Orion?
32 Can you bring forth the Mazzaroth in their season,
or guide the Bear with its train?
33 Do you know the ordinances of the heavens;
can you put into effect their plan on the earth?
34 Can you raise your voice among the clouds,
or veil yourself in the waters of the storm?*
35 Can you send forth the lightnings on their way,
or will they say to you, "Here we are"?*
37 Who counts the clouds in his wisdom?
Or who tilts the water jars of heaven 38 So that the dust of earth is fused into a mass
and its clods made solid?
39 Do you hunt the prey for the lioness
or appease the hunger of her cubs, 40 While they crouch in their dens,
or lie in wait in the thicket?
41 Who provides nourishment for the ravens
when their young ones cry out to God,[b] and they rove abroad without food?

CHAPTER 39.

1 Do you know about the birth of the mountain goats,
watch for the birth pangs of the hinds,
2 Number the months that they must fulfill,
and fix the time of their bringing forth?
3 They crouch down and bear their young;
they deliver their progeny in the desert.
4 When their offspring thrive and grow,
they leave and do not return.
5 Who has given the wild ass his freedom,
and who has loosed him from bonds?
6 I have made the wilderness his home
and the salt flats his dwelling.
7 He scoffs at the uproar of the city,
and hears no shouts of a driver.
8 He ranges the mountains for pasture,
and seeks out every patch of green.
9 Will the wild ox consent to serve you,
and to pass the nights by your manger?
10 Will a rope bind him in the furrow,
and will he harrow the valleys after you?
11 Will you trust him for his great strength and leave to him the fruits of your toil?
12 Can you rely on him to thresh out your grain and gather in the yield of your threshing floor?
36 Who puts wisdom in the heart,
and gives the cock its understanding?*

b Ps 146 (147), 9.

38, 22f: Hail. . . of war: thus God used a hailstorm to rout Josue's foes in the battle of Gabaon; cf Jos 10, 11; Sir 46, 5.

38, 31f: Pleiades . . . Orion . . . Bear: cf Jb 9, 9. Mazzaroth: it is uncertain what astronomical group is meant by this Hebrew word; perhaps a southern constellation (cf Jb 9, 9).

38, 34: Veil yourself . . . storm: wrap yourself in a cloud, as God comes in a theophany; cf Ps 17 (18), 12.

38, 35: Here we are: at your service.

39, 36: Understanding: the reflection of divine Wisdom discernible in the created animal instincts of the cock. This verse has been transposed from ch 38.

13 The wings of the ostrich* beat idly;
her plumage is lacking in pinions.
14 When she leaves her eggs on the ground*
and deposits them in the sand, 15 Unmindful that a foot may crush them,
that the wild beasts may trample them, 16 She cruelly disowns her young and ruthlessly makes nought of her brood; 17 For God has withheld wisdom from her
and has given her no share in understanding.
18 Yet in her swiftness of foot
she makes sport of the horse and his rider.

19 Do you give the horse his strength,*
and endow his neck with splendor?
20 Do you make the steed to quiver
while his thunderous snorting spreads terror?
21 He jubilantly paws the plain and rushes in his might against the weapons.
22 He laughs at fear and cannot be deterred;
he turns not back from the sword.
23 Around him rattles the quiver,
flashes the spear and the javelin.
24 Frenzied and trembling he devours the ground;
he holds not back at the sound of the trumpet,
25 but at each blast he cries, "Aha!"
Even from afar he scents the battle,
the roar of the chiefs and the shouting.

26 Is it by your discernment that the hawk soars,
that he spreads his wings toward the south?
27 Does the eagle fly up at your command to pass the night at his lofty nest?
28 The pinnacle of the cliffs is his stronghold;
29 from thence he watches for his prey;
his eyes behold it afar off.

c Mt 24, 28; Lk 17, 37.—d Jb 38, 3.

39, 13: The wings of the ostrich cannot raise her from the ground, but they help her to run swiftly.
39, 14ff: It was popularly believed that, because the ostrich laid her eggs on the sand, she cruelly abandoned them; cf Lam 4, 3.
39, 19-25: The famous description of a war horse.
40, 15: Behemoth: according to the common interpretation, the hippopotamus; yet it may well be another term for Leviathan, the crocodile; cf v 25.

30 His young ones greedily drink blood;
where the slain are, there is he.[c]

CHAPTER 40.

1 The Lord then said to Job:

2 Will we have arguing with the Almighty by the critic?
Let him who would correct God give answer![d]

3 Then Job answered the Lord and said:

4 Behold, I am of little account; what can I answer you?
I put my hand over my mouth.
5 Though I have spoken once, I will not do so again;
though twice, I will do so no more.

6 Then the Lord addressed Job out of the storm and said:

7 Gird up your loins now, like a man.
I will question you, and you tell me the answers!
8 Would you refuse to acknowledge my right?
Would you condemn me that you may be justified?

9 Have you an arm like that of God,
or can you thunder with a voice like his?
10 Adorn yourself with grandeur and majesty,
and array yourself with glory and splendor.
11 Let loose the fury of your wrath;
12 tear down the wicked and shatter them.
Bring down the haughty with a glance;
13 bury them in the dust together;
in the hidden world imprison them.
14 Then will I too acknowledge that your own right hand can save you.

15 See, besides you I made Behemoth,*
that feeds on grass like an ox.
16 Behold the strength in his loins,
and his vigor in the sinews of his belly.
17 He carries his tail like a cedar;
the sinews of his thighs are like cables.
18 His bones are like tubes of bronze;
his frame is like iron rods.

19 He came at the beginning of God's ways,

and was made the taskmaster of his fellows;
20 For the produce of the mountains is brought to him,
and of all wild animals he makes sport.
21 Under the lotus trees he lies,
in coverts of the reedy swamp.
22 The lotus trees cover him with their shade;
all about him are the poplars on the bank.
23 If the river grows violent, he is not disturbed;
he is tranquil though the torrent surges about his mouth.*

25 Can you lead about Leviathan* with a hook,
or curb his tongue with a bit?
26 Can you put a rope into his nose,
or pierce through his cheek with a gaff?
27 Will he then plead with you, time after time,
or address you with tender words?
28 Will he make an agreement with you that you may have him as a slave forever?
29 Can you play with him, as with a bird?
Can you put him in leash for your maidens?
30 Will the traders bargain for him?
Will the merchants* divide him up?

31 Can you fill his hide with barbs,
or his head with fish spears?
32 Once you but lay a hand upon him,
no need to recall any other conflict!

CHAPTER 41.

2 Is he not relentless when aroused;
who then dare stand before him?*
1 Whoever might vainly hope to do so need only see him to be overthrown.
3 Who has assailed him and come off safe—
Who under all the heavens?

4 I need hardly mention his limbs,
his strength, and the fitness of his armor.
5 Who can strip off his outer garment,
or penetrate his double corselet?
6 Who can force open the doors of his mouth,
close to his terrible teeth?
7 Rows of scales are on his back,
tightly sealed together;
8 They are fitted each so close to the next
that no space intervenes;
9 So joined one to another
that they hold fast and cannot be parted.

10 When he sneezes, light flashes forth;
his eyes are like those of the dawn.
11 Out of his mouth go forth firebrands;
sparks of fire leap forth.
12 From his nostrils issues steam,
as from a seething pot or bowl.
13 His breath sets coals afire;
a flame pours from his mouth.

14 Strength abides in his neck,
and terror leaps before him.
15. 16 His heart is hard as stone;
his flesh, as the lower millstone.
17 When he rises up, the mighty are afraid;
the waves of the sea fall back.*

18 Should the sword reach him, it will not avail;
nor will the spear, nor the dart, nor the javelin.
19 He regards iron as straw,
and bronze as rotten wood.
20 The arrow will not put him to flight;
slingstones used against him are but straws.
21 Clubs he esteems as splinters;
he laughs at the crash of the spear.

22 His belly is sharp as pottery fragments;
he spreads like a threshing sledge upon the mire.
23 He makes the depths boil like a pot;
the sea he churns like perfume in a kettle.
24 Behind him he leaves a shining path;
you would think the deep had the hoary head of age.
25 Upon the earth there is not his like,
intrepid he was made.
26 All, however lofty, fear him;
he is king over all proud beasts.

40, 24: This verse is omitted in the translation because it seems out of place here and duplicates parts of vv 26 and 28.

40, 25: Leviathan here is the crocodile. But cf Jb 3, 8.

40, 30: Merchants: literally, "Chanaanites," whose reputation for trading was so widespread that their name came to be used for merchants; cf Prv 31, 24. The meaning of this verse is that the crocodile is too powerful a creature to be sold like common fish.

41, 2: Before him: some read, "before me," i.e., God; also in v 3.

41, 17: The text here is uncertain.

CHAPTER 42.

1 Then Job answered the Lord and said:

2 I know that you can do all things,*
and that no purpose of yours can be hindered.
3 I have dealt with great things that I do not understand;
things too wonderful for me, which I cannot know.[e] 5 I had heard of you by word of mouth,
but now my eye has seen you.
6 Therefore I disown what I have said,
and repent in dust and ashes.

VIII: EPILOGUE

Job's Restoration. 7 And it came to pass after the Lord had spoken these words to Job, that the Lord said to Eliphaz the Themanite, "I am angry with you and with your two friends;* for you have not spoken rightly concerning me, as has my servant Job. 8 Now, therefore, take seven bullocks and seven rams, and go to my servant Job, and offer up a holocaust for yourselves; and let my servant Job pray for you;* for his prayer I will accept, not to punish you severely. For you have not spoken rightly concerning me, as has my servant Job." 9 Then Eliphaz the Themanite, and Baldad the Sueite, and Sophar the Naamaite, went and did as the Lord had commanded them. And the Lord accepted the intercession of Job.

10 Also, the Lord restored the prosperity of Job, after he had prayed for his friends; the Lord even gave to Job twice as much as he had before. 11 Then all his brethren and his sisters came to him, and all his former acquaintances, and they dined with him in his house. They condoled with him and comforted him for all the evil which the Lord had brought upon him; and each one gave him a piece of money* and a gold ring.

12 f Thus the Lord blessed the latter days of Job more than his earlier ones. For he had fourteen thousand sheep, six thousand camels, a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she-asses. 13 And he had seven sons and three daughters, 14 of whom* he called the first Jemima, the second Cassia, and the third Ceren-happuch. 15 In all the land no other women were as beautiful as the daughters of Job; and their father gave them an inheritance* among their brethren. 16 After this, Job lived a hundred and forty years;* and he saw his children, his grandchildren, and even his great-grandchildren.[g] 17 Then Job died, old and full of years.

e Jb 34, 35; 35, 16; 38, 2—f Jb 1, 3.—g Jb 5, 25f.

42, 2-6: In the current Hebrew text, this final utterance of Job is interrupted by words ascribed to God (vv 3f) which are in large part a duplication of Jb 38, 2f.

42, 7: The three friends of Job (Eliu is ignored in the Epilogue) are criticized by the Lord because they had (even though in good faith) leveled false charges against him.

42, 8: Job becomes the intercessor for his friends, as were other great Old Testament characters, e.g., Abraham and Moses, and as our Lord would be, whom he prefigured. Seven: a symbolic number.

42, 11: A piece of money: the term is the same as that used in Gn 33, 19; Jos 24, 32. Gold ring: for the nose or ear.

42, 14: Job's daughters had names symbolic of their charms: Jemima, dove; Cassia, precious perfume [cf Ps 44 (45), 9]; Ceren-happuch, cosmetic jar—more precisely a container for a black powder that was used like modern mascara.

42, 15: Ordinarily daughters did not inherit property unless there were no sons; cf Nm 27, 1-11.

42, 16: As his other rewards were twice as much as he had before (v 10), so Job's hundred and forty years were double the expected span of life; cf Ps 89 (90), 10.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS

The Book of Psalms, or Psalter, is a collection of religious songs, traditionally listed as 150. This number, however, is only approximately correct, for several psalms contain two or more originally independent songs, while others, which were originally a single unit, have been broken up into two or more psalms. Moreover, certain psalms and parts of psalms occur more than once in this collection.

The present collection is divided into five "books," perhaps in imitation of the five Books of the Pentateuch. But internal evidence shows that there existed at an earlier period more numerous, smaller collections which were gradually gathered together to form the present Psalter.

In form and subject matter the psalms are most varied. Some were composed for liturgical use in the temple; others, for private reading. In some psalms the singer is an individual; in others, the community. One of the most common types is that of supplication to God for His help in various spiritual and temporal needs. But hymns of thanksgiving and of praise are also numerous. Less frequent are poems written primarily to discuss some problem or to teach some lesson.

Prefixed to most of the psalms are certain words and phrases which offer traditional information about the psalm, such as the tone in which it is to be sung, the musical instruments which are to accompany its singing, the historical circumstances connected in some way with its composition, the name of its author, and so forth. These "titles," as they are called, were added, at least in most cases, by later writers. It cannot be proved that they were divinely inspired. They have some value, however, as representing ancient tradition. They are printed here in smaller type.

About half of the psalms are attributed in these "titles" to David. The Davidic authorship of some of these is confirmed in the New Testament and, at least in these cases, cannot prudently be called into question. Some other psalms are attributed to certain groups of temple-singers known as "the sons of Core" and "the sons of Asaph." One psalm each is ascribed to Moses, Solomon, Heman and Ethan. About a third of the psalms have no author's name prefixed to them. Although some of the psalms appear to have been composed during the early post-exilic period (the fifth and fourth centuries B.C.), it cannot be demonstrated that any psalms are as late as the Machabean age.

I: THE FIRST BOOK — Psalms 1-40

PSALM 1*

True Happiness

I

1 Happy the man who follows not the counsel of the wicked
Nor walks in the way* of sinners,
nor sits in the company of the insolent,
2 But delights in the law of the Lord
and meditates on his law day and night.[a] 3 He is like a tree planted near running water,[b]
That yields its fruit in due season,
and whose leaves never fade.
[Whatever he does, prospers.]

II

4 Not so the wicked, not so;
they are like chaff which the wind drives away.
5 Therefore in judgment the wicked shall not stand,
nor shall sinners, in the assembly of the just.
6 For the Lord watches over the way of the just,[c]
but the way of the wicked vanishes.

PSALM 2*

The Universal Reign of the Messias

I

1 Why do the nations rage[d]
and the peoples utter folly?
2 The kings of the earth rise up,
and the princes conspire together
against the Lord and against his anointed:*
3 "Let us break their fetters and cast their bonds from us!"

II

4 He who is throned in heaven laughs;
the Lord derides them.
5 Then in anger he speaks to them;
he terrifies them in his wrath:
6 "I myself have set up my king
on Sion, my holy mountain."

III

7 I will proclaim the decree of the Lord:
The Lord said to me, "You are my son;
this day I have begotten you.[e]
8 Ask of me and I will give you the nations for an inheritance
and the ends of the earth for your possession.
9 You shall rule them with an iron rod;
you shall shatter them like an earthen dish."[f]

a Jos 1, 8.—b Jer 17, 8.—c Ps 36 (37), 18.—d If: Acts 4, 25ff.—e Acts 13, 33; Heb 1, 5.—f Ap 2, 27; 12, 5; 19, 15.

Ps 1: A preface to the whole Book of Psalms; it outlines the lot of the good and of the wicked.

1, 1: The way: a common biblical term for "manner of living" or moral conduct.

Ps 2: A Messianic psalm, i.e., it refers to the Messias, Christ. The psalmist depicts the revolt of the nations against God and His anointed Son (1-3), God's answer (4-6), the Messianic decree (7-9), and the warning given to the rebels (10-12).

2, 2: Anointed: in Hebrew, Mashiah (whence the word "Messias"), which the Greek translated as Christos. Among the Hebrews both the kings (Jgs 9, 8; 1 Kgs 9, 16; 16, 12f) and the high priests (Lv 8, 12; Nm 3, 3) received the power of their office by being anointed with oil.

IV

10 And now, O kings, give heed;
take warning, you rulers of the earth.
11 Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice before him;
with trembling 12 pay homage to him,*
Lest he be angry and you perish from the way,
when his anger blazes suddenly.
Happy are all who take refuge in him!

PSALM 3*

Trust in God in Time of Danger

1 A psalm of David, when he fled from his son Absalom.g

I

2 O Lord, how many are my adversaries!
Many rise up against me!
3 Many are saying of me,
"There is no salvation for him in God."
4 But you, O Lord, are my shield;
my glory, you lift up my head!

II

5 When I call out to the Lord,
he answers me from his holy mountain.
6 When I lie down in sleep,
I wake again, for the Lord sustains me.
7 I fear not the myriads of people
arrayed against me on every side.

8 Rise up, O Lord!
Save me, my God!
For you strike all my enemies on the cheek;
the teeth of the wicked you break.
9 Salvation is the Lord's!
Upon your people be your blessing!

PSALM 4*

Joyful Confidence in God

1 For the leader;* with stringed instruments. A psalm of David.

I

2 When I call, answer me, O my just God
you who relieve me when I am in distress;
Have pity on me, and hear my prayer!

II

3 Men of rank, how long will you be dull of heart?
Why do you love what is vain and seek after falsehood?
4 Know that the Lord does wonders for his faithful one;
the Lord will hear me when I call upon him.
5 Tremble,* and sin not;
reflect, upon your beds, in silence.h
6 Offer just sacrifices,
and trust in the Lord.

III

7 Many say, "Oh, that we might see better times!"
O Lord, let the light of your countenance shine upon us!
8 You put gladness into my heart,
more than when grain and wine abound.
9 As soon as I lie down, I fall peacefully asleep,
for you alone, O Lord,
bring security to my dwelling.

PSALM 5*

Prayer for Divine Help

1 For the leader; with wind instruments. A psalm of David.

I

2 Hearken to my words, O Lord, attend to my sighing.
3 Heed my call for help,
my king and my God!
To you I pray, 4 O Lord;
at dawn you hear my voice;
at dawn I bring my plea expectantly before you.

II

5 For you, O God, delight not in wickedness;

g 2 Kgs 15, 13ff.—h Eph 4, 26.

2, 11f: And rejoice before him; with trembling pay homage to him: a shorter reading, "pay homage to him with trembling," may have been the original. Pay homage: literally, "kiss his feet."

Ps 3: The psalmist surrounded by enemies, implores God's help (2-4), arouses himself to trust in God (5-7), and prays for himself and the people (8f).

Ps 4: The psalmist begs God's aid (2), admonishes the incredulous worldlings to put their trust in God (3-6), and reaffirms his own confidence in Him (7-9).

4, 1: For the leader: very many of the psalms have this phrase prefixed to them. It probably signifies that they were copied from a collection which once belonged "to the choirmaster." Cf 1 Par 15, 21.

4, 5: An admonition not to utter rash words against the Lord, even in distress or affliction; the right conduct, after silent acceptance of trials, is proposed in v 6. Tremble: the Hebrew verb means, "to be deeply moved" with any emotion; in the present context, "with fear or dismay." The Greek understood it as, "to be moved with anger," and thus it is quoted in Eph 4, 26.

Ps 5: At dawn the psalmist calls upon God (2-4), who hates sinners (5-7); trusting in divine guidance for himself (8f), he asks God to punish the wicked (10f) and protect the just (12f).

no evil man remains with you;
6 the arrogant may not stand in your sight.
You hate all evildoers;
7 you destroy all who speak falsehood;
The bloodthirsty and the deceitful
the Lord abhors.[i]

III

8 But I, because of your abundant kindness,
will enter your house;
I will worship at your holy temple
in fear of you, 9 O Lord;
Because of my enemies, guide me in your justice;
make straight your way before me.*

IV

10 For in their mouth there is no sincerity;
their heart teems with treacheries.
Their throat is an open grave;*
they flatter with their tongue.
11 Punish them, O God;
let them fall by their own devices;
For their many sins, cast them out because they have rebelled against you.[j]

V

12 But let all who take refuge in you be glad and exult forever.
Protect them, that you may be the joy
of those who love your name.
13 For you, O Lord, bless the just man;
you surround him with the shield of your good will.

PSALM 6*

Prayer in Time of Distress

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments, "upon the eighth." A psalm of David.

I

2 O Lord, reprove me not in your anger,
nor chastise me in your wrath.[k]
3 Have pity on me, O Lord, for I am languishing;
heal me, O Lord, for my body is in terror;
4 My soul, too, is utterly terrified;
but you, O Lord, how long . . . ?*

II

5 Return, O Lord, save my life;
rescue me because of your kindness,
6 For among the dead no one remembers you;[l]
in the nether world* who gives you thanks?

III

7 I am wearied with sighing;
every night I flood my bed with weeping;
I drench my couch with my tears.
8 My eyes are dimmed with sorrow;
they have aged because of all my foes.

IV

9 Depart from me, all evildoers,[m]
for the Lord has heard the sound of my weeping;
10 The Lord has heard my plea;
the Lord has accepted my prayer.
11 All my enemies shall be put to shame in utter terror;
they shall fall back in sudden shame.[n]

PSALM 7*

An Appeal to the Divine Judge

1 A plaintive song of David, which he sang to the Lord because of Chus the Benjaminite.

I

2 O Lord, my God, in you I take refuge;
save me from all my pursuers and rescue me,
3 Lest I become like the lion's prey,
to be torn to pieces, with no one to rescue me.

II

4 O Lord, my God, if I am at fault in this,*
if there is guilt on my hands,
5 If I have repaid my friend with evil,

i Wis 14, 9.—j Rom 3, 13.—k Ps 37 (38), 2.—l Ps 29 (30), 10; 87 (88), 11f; 113 (114), 17; Is 38, 18.—m Ps 118 (119), 115; Mt 7, 23; Lk 13, 27.—n Pss 34 (35), 4; 39 (40), 15.

5, 9: The Greek reads, "Make straight my way before you."

5, 10: An open grave: while they feign words of friendship, their hidden thoughts, the words in their throat, i.e., in their heart, are murderous, ready to swallow up men to death. Cf Jer 5, 16.

Ps 6: The first of the Penitential Psalms. In his affliction the psalmist begs God for mercy (2-4); praying to be saved from death (5f), he describes his misery (7f); then, certain of being heard, he rejects all fellowship with sinners (9-11).

6, 4: How long: an elliptical exclamation for, "How long will it be before you answer my prayer?" Cf Ps 12 (13), 2ff.

6, 6: The ancient concept of the abode of the dead (the nether world, in Hebrew, Sheol) supposed no activity or lofty emotion among the deceased, who were pictured as surrounded by the darkness of oblivion. The Hebrews shared in this common idea almost to the time of Christ, when God revealed a clearer notion of the hereafter. Cf Wis 3.

Ps. 7: Slandered by his enemies, the psalmist prays for help against them (2f), as he swears that he is innocent (4-6) and calls upon God, the just judge of the world, to defend him (7-10); confident of God's justice (11-14), he foretells the punishment of his calumniators (15-17), and promises a thanksgiving sacrifice (18).

7, 4: At fault in this: in these accusations made against the psalmist.

I who spared* those who without cause were my foes—
6 Let the enemy pursue and overtake me;
let him trample my life to the ground,
and lay my glory in the dust.

III

7 Rise up, O Lord, in your anger;
rise against the fury of my foes;
wake to the judgment you have decreed.
8 Let the assembly of the peoples surround you;
above them on high be enthroned.
9 [The Lord judges the nations.]
Do me justice, O Lord, because I am just,
and because of the innocence that is mine.[o] 10 Let the malice of the wicked come to an end,
but sustain the just,
O searcher of heart and soul, O just God.[p]

IV

11 A shield before me is God,
who saves the upright of heart;
12 A just judge is God,
a God who punishes day by day.
13 Unless they be converted, God will sharpen his sword;
he will bend and aim his bow, 14 Prepare his deadly weapons against them,
and use fiery darts for arrows.

V

15 He who conceived iniquity and was pregnant with mischief, brings forth failure.[q]
16 He has opened a hole, he has dug it deep,
but he falls into the pit which he has made.[r] 17 His mischief shall recoil upon his own head;
upon the crown of his head his violence shall rebound.
18 I will give thanks to the Lord for his justice, and sing praise to the name of the Lord Most High.

7, 5: I who spared: cf David's generous treatment of Saul (1 Kgs 24, 11; 26, 9).

Ps 8: After contrasting man's finite nature with God's infinite majesty (2-5), the psalmist extols the dignity and power to which God has raised man (6-10).

8, 6: The angels: in Hebrew, elohim, which is the ordinary word for "God" or "the gods"; hence, some translate, "a little less than godlike." Cf Pss 44 (45), 7; 57 (58), 2; 81 (82), 1; 96 (97), 7. But the ancient versions generally understood the term as referring to the heavenly spirits. Cf Ps 137 (138), 1. In Heb 2, 9 this passage is shown to be eminently fulfilled in the God-man Jesus Christ. Cf 1 Cor 15, 27 also, where St. Paul applies to Christ the words, putting all things under his feet.

8, 10: The verse with which this psalm begins is repeated as a refrain at the end.

PSALM 8*

The Majesty of God and the Dignity of Man

1 For the leader; "upon the gittith." A psalm of David.

2 O Lord, our Lord,
how glorious is your name over all the earth!
You have exalted your majesty above the heavens.
3 Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings
you have fashioned praise[s] because of your foes,
to silence the hostile and the vengeful.
4 When I behold your heavens, the work of your fingers,
the moon and the stars which you set in place—
5 What is man that you should be mindful of him, or the son of man that you should care for him?[t]

II

6 You have made him little less than the angels,*
and crowned him with glory and honor.
7 You have given him rule over the works of your hands,[u] putting all things under his feet:
8 All sheep and oxen,
yes, and the beasts of the field,
9 The birds of the air, the fishes of the sea,
and whatever swims the paths of the seas.
10 O Lord, our Lord,
how glorious is your name over all the earth!*

PSALM 9A*

Thanksgiving for the Overthrow of Hostile Nations

[1] For the leader, according to Muth labben. A psalm of David.

I

[2] I will give thanks to you, O Lord, with all my heart;
I will declare all your wondrous deeds.
[3] I will be glad and exult in you;
I will sing praise to your name, Most High,
[4] Because my enemies are turned back,
overthrown and destroyed before you.

II

[5] For you upheld my right and my cause, seated on your throne, judging justly.
[6] You rebuked the nations and destroyed the wicked;
their name you blotted out forever and ever.
[7] The enemies are ruined completely forever;
the remembrance of the cities you uprooted has perished.

III

[8] But the Lord sits enthroned forever;
he has set up his throne for judgment.
[9] He judges the world with justice;
he governs the peoples with equity.[v]
[10] The Lord is a stronghold for the oppressed,
a stronghold in times of distress.
[11] They trust in you who cherish your name,
for you forsake not those who seek you, O Lord.

IV

[12] Sing praise to the Lord enthroned in Sion;
proclaim among the nations his deeds;
[13] For the avenger of blood has remembered;
he has not forgotten the cry of the afflicted.

V

[14] Have pity on me, O Lord, see how I am afflicted by my foes, you who have raised me up from the gates of death, [15] That I may declare all your praises and, in the gates of the daughter of Sion,* rejoice in your salvation.

VI

[16] The nations are sunk in the pit they have made;
in the snare they set, their foot is caught;
[17] In passing sentence, the Lord is manifest;
the wicked are trapped by the work of their own hands.*

VII

[18] To the nether world the wicked shall turn back,
all the nations that forget God.
[19] For the needy shall not always be forgotten,
nor shall the hope of the afflicted forever perish.
[20] Rise, O Lord, let not man prevail;
let the nations be judged in your presence.
[21] Strike them with terror, O Lord;
let the nations know that they are but men.

PSALM 9B (10)

Prayer for Help against Oppressors

I

[1] Why, O Lord, do you stand aloof?
Why hide in times of distress?
[2] Proudly the wicked harass the afflicted,
who are caught in the devices the wicked have contrived.

II

[3] For the wicked man glories in his greed,
and the covetous blasphemes, sets the Lord at nought.
[4] The wicked man boasts, "He will not avenge it";
"There is no God," sums up his thoughts.

v Pss 95 (96), 10; 97 (98), 9.

Ps 9 of the Vulgate consists of two parts (A and B), each of which forms a separate psalm (Ps 9 and 10) in the current Hebrew text. In favor of the original unity of this psalm is its acrostic character, now partially lost in the poorly preserved text: the first letter of each stanza (of two couplets apiece) originally followed the order of the Hebrew alphabet consecutively throughout both halves of the psalm. Those who consider the two halves as separate psalms point to their somewhat diverse subject matter, the prayer in the first being mainly against the enemies of Israel, that in the second mainly against the wicked within Israel. However, as in all alphabetical psalms, there is not much logical sequence between the verses.

9A, 15: The daughter of Sion: or "daughter Sion"; Hebrew idiom for "the city of Sion."

9A, 17: God's honor and glory are vindicated when He judges and punishes the wicked.

5 His ways are secure at all times;
your judgments are far from his mind;*
all his foes he scorns.
6 He says in his heart, "I shall not be disturbed;
from age to age I shall be without misfortune."

7 His mouth is full of cursing, guile and deceit;
under his tongue are mischief and iniquity.[w]
8 He lurks in ambush near the villages;
in hiding he murders the innocent;
his eyes spy upon the unfortunate.
9 He waits in secret like a lion in his lair;
he lies in wait to catch the afflicted;
he catches the afflicted and drags them off in his net.
10 He stoops and lies prone till by his violence fall the unfortunate.
11 He says in his heart, "God has forgotten;
he hides his face, he never sees."[x]

III

12 Rise, O Lord! O God, lift up your hand!
Forget not the afflicted!
13 Why should the wicked man despise God,
saying in his heart, "He will not avenge it"?
14 You do see, for you behold misery and sorrow,
taking them in your hands.
On you the unfortunate man depends;
of the fatherless you are the helper.
15 Break the strength of the wicked and of the evildoer;
punish their wickedness; let them not survive.

IV

16 The Lord is king forever and ever;
the nations have perished out of his land.
17 The desire of the afflicted you hear, O Lord;
strengthening their hearts, you pay heed
18 To the defense of the fatherless and the oppressed, that man, who is of earth, may terrify no more.

PSALM 10 (11)*

Unshaken Confidence in God

1 For the leader. Of David.

I

In the Lord I take refuge; how can you say to me,
"Flee to the mountain like a bird!
2 For, see, the wicked bend the bow;
they place the arrow on the string
to shoot in the dark at the upright of heart.
3 When the pillars* are overthrown,
what can the just man do?"

II

4 The Lord is in his holy temple;
the Lord's throne is in heaven.
His eyes behold,
his searching glance is on mankind.
5 The Lord searches the just and the wicked;
the lover of violence he hates.
6 He rains upon the wicked fiery coals and brimstone;[y]
a burning blast is their allotted cup.*
7 For the Lord is just, he loves just deeds;
the upright shall see his face.

PSALM 11 (12)*

Prayer against Evil Tongues

1 For the leader; "upon the eighth." A psalm of David.

I

2 Help, O Lord! for no one now is dutiful;
faithfulness has vanished from among men.
3 Everyone speaks falsehood to his neighbor;
with smooth lips they speak; and double heart.

w Rom 3, 14.—x Pss 72 (73), 11; 93 (94), 7.—y Gn 19, 24.

Ps 9B, 5: Are far from his mind: the current Hebrew text may be read, "are lofty beyond him."

Ps 10 (11): While fainthearted friends advise flight in the present peril (1-3), the psalmist reaffirms his confidence in the all-knowing Lord who gives just retribution to both the good and the wicked (4-7).

10, 3: The pillars: usually understood as "the foundations of public order." Cf Ps 81 (82), 5.

10, 6: Allotted cup: the cup which God gives men to drink is a common biblical figure for the destiny He assigns them. Cf Pss 15 (16), 5; 22 (23), 5; 74 (75), 9; Mt 20, 22; 26, 39; Ap 14, 10.

Ps 11 (12): The psalmist prays for help against the deceit (2f) and pride (4f) of the wicked; God's promises (6) fill him with confidence (7-9).

II

4 May the Lord destroy all smooth lips,
every boastful tongue,
5 Those who say, "We are heroes with
our tongues;
our lips are our own; who is lord
over us?"

III

6 "Because they rob the afflicted, and
the needy sigh,*
now will I arise," says the Lord;
"I will grant safety to him who longs
for it."

IV

7 The promises of the Lord are sure,
like tried silver, freed from dross,
sevenfold refined.
8 You, O Lord, will keep us and preserve us always from this generation,
9 While about us the wicked strut and in high place are the basest of men.

PSALM 12 (13)*

Prayer of One in Sorrow

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2 How long, O Lord? Will you utterly forget me?
How long will you hide your face
from me?
3 How long shall I harbor sorrow in my soul,
grief in my heart day after day?
How long will my enemy triumph
over me?
4 Look, answer me, O Lord, my God!

II

Give light to my eyes that I may not sleep in death
5 lest my enemy say, "I have overcome him";
Lest my foes rejoice at my downfall
6 though I trusted in your kindness.
Let my heart rejoice in your salvation.
let me sing of the Lord, "He has been good to me."

PSALM 13 (14)*

A Lament over Widespread Corruption

1 For the leader. Of David.

I

The fool says in his heart,[z]
"There is no God."
Such are corrupt; they do abominable deeds;
there is not one who does good.
2 The Lord looks down from heaven
upon the children of men,
to see if there be one who is wise
and seeks God.
3 All alike have gone astray; they have become perverse;
there is not one who does good, not even one.*

II

4 Will all these evildoers never learn,
they who eat up my people just as they eat bread?
They have not called upon the Lord;
5 then they shall be in great fear,
for God is with the just generation.
6 You would confound the plans of the afflicted,
but the Lord is their refuge.

III

7 Oh, that out of Sion would come the salvation of Israel!
When the Lord restores the well-being of his people, then shall Jacob exult and Israel be glad.

PSALM 14 (15)*

The Guest of God

1 A psalm of David.

I

O Lord, who shall sojourn in your tent?
Who shall dwell on your holy mountain?

II

2 He who walks blamelessly and does
justice;
who thinks the truth in his heart
3 and slanders not with his tongue;
Who harms not his fellow man, nor takes up a reproach against his neighbor;
4 By whom the reprobate is despised,
while he honors those who fear the Lord;

z 1-7: Ps 52 (53), 2-7.

11, 6-9: The Hebrew text is obscure in part, and the versions differ; the above translation follows the revised Latin Psalter.

Ps 12 (13): Oppressed by foes, the psalmist laments his desolation (2-4a) and prays for God's help (4b-6).

Ps 13 (14): Bewailing the widespread corruption of the godless (1-3), the psalmist foretells their punishment (4-6), as he prays for his people (7). This psalm is repeated in almost identical form as Ps 52 (53).

13, 3: Here many Greek and Latin texts insert the Old Testament quotations which were first combined in Rom 3, 13-18.

Ps 14 (15): Lists the moral qualities which he should possess who would enter the Lord's sanctuary worthily; the social virtues of justice and charity are especially emphasized.

Who, though it be to his loss, changes
not his pledged word;
5 who lends not his money at usury
and accepts no bribe against the innocent.

III

He who does these things
shall never be disturbed.

PSALM 15 (16)*

God the Supreme Good

1 A miktam of David.

I

Keep me, O God, for in you I take refuge;
2 I say to the Lord, "My Lord are you.
Apart from you I have no good."
3 How wonderfully has he made me cherish
the holy ones who are in his land!
4 They multiply their sorrows
who court other gods.
Blood libations to them I will not pour out,
nor will I take their names* upon my lips.
5 O Lord, my allotted portion and my cup,
you it is who hold fast my lot.*
6 For me the measuring lines have fallen on pleasant sites;
fair to me indeed is my inheritance.

II

7 I bless the Lord who counsels me;
even in the night my heart exhorts me.
8 I set the Lord ever before me; [a]
with him at my right hand I shall not be disturbed.
9 Therefore my heart is glad and my soul rejoices,
my body, too, abides in confidence;
10 Because you will not abandon my soul to the nether world,
nor will you suffer your faithful one to undergo corruption.*
11 You will show me the path to life,
fullness of joys in your presence,
the delights at your right hand forever.

a 8-11: Acts 2, 25-28.

Ps 15 (16): Pledging his loyalty to God, the psalmist proclaims his hostility toward the idolaters and his friendship toward the faithful in Israel (1-6); therefore he is aware of the constant presence of God, who will keep him in this blessed union by granting him bodily resurrection and everlasting life (7-11).

15, 4: Take their names: the pious Israelite not only refrained from praying to false gods and from swearing by them; he would not even mention their names. Cf Os 2, 17.

15, 5: In the worship of the true God the psalmist finds his best inheritance.

15, 10: To undergo corruption: some non-Catholics render this: "to see the grave," understanding this to mean that God will not let the psalmist die in the present circumstances. But the Hebrew word shahath means not only "the pit," "the grave," but also "corruption." In the latter sense the ancient Greek version rendered this passage, and it was thus quoted by St. Peter (Acts 2, 25-32) and St. Paul (Acts 13, 35-37), both of whom interpret this as referring to Christ's Resurrection. In their literal sense, these words are not true of David, but only of Christ; therefore this psalm is strictly Messianic.

Ps 16 (17): Certain of his innocence, the psalmist appeals to God's just judgment (1-5), imploring His help against the enemies (6-9) who persecute him (10-12); these worldlings shall be punished, but the psalmist shall enjoy God's presence hereafter (13-15).

PSALM 16 (17)*

Prayer against Persecutors

1 A prayer of David.

I

Hear, O Lord, a just suit;
attend to my outcry;
hearken to my prayer from lips without deceit.
2 From you let my judgment come;
your eyes behold what is right.
3 Though you test my heart, searching it in the night,
though you try me with fire, you shall find no malice in me.
My mouth has not transgressed 4 after the manner of man;
according to the words of your lips
I have kept the ways of the law.
5 My steps have been steadfast in your paths,
my feet have not faltered.

II

6 I call upon you, for you will answer me, O God;
incline your ear to me; hear my word.
7 Show your wondrous kindness,
O savior of those who flee
from their foes to refuge at your right hand.
8 Keep me as the apple of your eye;
hide me in the shadow of your wings
9 from the wicked who use violence against me.

III

My ravenous enemies beset me;
10 they shut up their cruel hearts,
their mouths speak proudly.
11 Their steps even now surround me;
crouching to the ground, they fix their gaze,

12 Like lions hungry for prey,
like young lions lurking in hiding.

IV

13 Rise, O Lord, confront them and cast them down;
rescue me by your sword from the wicked,
14 by your hand, O Lord, from mortal men:
From mortal men whose portion in life is in this world,
where with your treasures you fill their bellies.
Their sons are enriched
and bequeath their abundance to their little ones.
15 But I in justice shall behold your face;
on waking,* I shall be content in your presence.

PSALM 17 (18)*

Thanksgiving for Help and Victory

1 For the leader. Of David, the servant of the Lord, who sang to the Lord the words of this song when the Lord had rescued him from the grasp of all his enemies and from the hand of Saul.

I A

2 I love you, O Lord, my strength,[b]
3 O Lord, my rock, my fortress, my deliverer.
My God, my rock of refuge,
my shield, the horn of my salvation,* my stronghold!
4 Praised be the Lord, I exclaim,
and I am safe from my enemies.

II

5 The breakers of death surged round about me,[c]
the destroying floods overwhelmed me;*
6 The cords of the nether world enmeshed me.[d]
the snares of death overtook me.
7 In my distress I called upon the Lord
and cried out to my God;
From his temple* he heard my voice,
and my cry to him reached his ears.

III

8 The earth swayed and quaked;*
the foundations of the mountains trembled
and shook when his wrath flared up.
9 Smoke rose from his nostrils,
and a devouring fire from his mouth that kindled coals into flame.
10 And he inclined the heavens and came down,[e]
with dark clouds under his feet.
11 He mounted a cherub* and flew,
borne on the wings of the wind.
12 And he made darkness the cloak about him;
dark, misty rain-clouds his wrap.[f] 13 From the brightness of his presence coals were kindled to flame.
14 And the Lord thundered from heaven,
the Most High gave forth his voice;
15 He sent forth his arrows to put them to flight,
with frequent lightnings he routed them.
16 Then the bed of the sea appeared,
and the foundations of the world were laid bare,
At the rebuke of the Lord,
at the blast of the wind of his wrath.
17 He reached out from on high and grasped me;
he drew me out of the deep waters.
18 He rescued me from my mighty enemy
and from my foes, who were too powerful for me.
19 They attacked me in the day of my calamity,
but the Lord came to my support.
20 He set me free in the open,
and rescued me, because he loves me.

b 2-51: 2 Kgs 22, 2-51.—c Ps 114 (116A), 3; Jon 2, 3.—d Jon 2, 3.—e Ps 143 (144), 5.—f Ps 96 (97), 2.

16, 15: On waking: to a new life after death. Death is often compared to sleep. Cf Ps 75 (76), 6; Dn 12, 2.

Ps 17 (18): This psalm of thanksgiving is also given, with a few small variants, in 2 Kgs 22. In both places it is attributed to David. Two main sections can be distinguished. In the first part, after an introductory stanza of praise to God (2-4), the royal psalmist describes the peril he was in (5-7), and then poetically depicts, under the form of a theophany, God's intervention in his behalf (8-20), concluding with an acknowledgment of God's justice (21-31). In the second part, God is praised for having prepared the psalmist for war (32-35), given him victory over his enemies (36-39), whom he put to flight (40-43), and bestowed on him dominion over many peoples (44-46). The whole psalm ends with a paean of grateful praise (47-51).

17, 3: The horn of my salvation: my strong savior. The horn, the dreadful weapon of an enraged bull, was a symbol of strength. Cf Lk 1, 69.

17, 5f: These verses are to be understood figuratively.

17, 7: His temple: His heavenly abode.

17, 8ff: God's intervention is graphically portrayed under the figures of an earthquake (8, 16) and a thunderstorm (9-15). Cf Jgs 5, 4f; Pss 28 (29); 96 (97), 2-6; Hb 3.

17, 11: He mounted a cherub: since God makes the winds His messengers, or "angels" [Ps 103 (104), 4], He is also spoken of poetically as riding on the storm clouds, or on the angelic creatures called cherubim. His earthly throne on the Ark of the Covenant was likewise formed by two winged cherubim. Cf Ex 37, 7-9. In both senses the Lord is enthroned upon the cherubim. Cf Ps 79 (80), 2; 98 (99), 1.

IV

21 The Lord rewarded me according to my justice;
according to the cleanness of my hands he requited me;
22 For I kept the ways of the Lord
and was not disloyal to my God;
23 For his ordinances were all present to me,
and his statutes I put not from me, 24 But I was wholehearted toward him,
and I was on my guard against guilt.
25 And the Lord requited me according to my justice,
according to the cleanness of my hands in his sight.
26 Toward the faithful you are faithful,*
toward the wholehearted you are wholehearted, 27 Toward the sincere you are sincere,
but toward the crooked you are astute;
28 For lowly people you save
but haughty eyes you bring low;
29 You indeed, O Lord, give light to my lamp;*
O my God, you brighten the darkness about me;
30 For with your aid I run against an armed band,
and by the help of my God I leap over a wall.
31 God's way is unerring,
the promise of the Lord is fire-tried;
he is a shield to all who take refuge in him.

B

I

32 For who is God except the Lord?
Who is a rock, save our God?
33 The God who girded me with strength
and kept my way unerring; 34 Who made my feet swift as those of hinds
and set me on the heights,* 35 Who trained my hands for war
and my arms to bend a bow of brass.[g]

II

36 You have given me your saving shield;
your right hand has upheld me,
and you have stooped to make me great.
37 You made room for my steps;
unwavering was my stride.
38 I pursued my enemies and overtook them,
nor did I turn again till I made an end of them.
39 I smote them and they could not rise;
they fell beneath my feet.

III

40 And you girded me with strength for war;
you subdued my adversaries beneath me.
41 My enemies you put to flight before me,
and those who hated me you destroyed.
42 They cried for help—but no one saved them;
to the Lord—but he answered them not.
43 I ground them fine as the dust before the wind;
like the mud in the streets I trampled them down.

IV

44 You rescued me from the strife of the people;
you made me head over nations;
A people I had not known became my slaves;
45 as soon as they heard me they obeyed.
The foreigners fawned and cringed before me;
46 they staggered forth from their fortresses.

C

47 The Lord live! And blessed be my Rock!
Extolled be God my savior.
48 O God, who granted me vengeance,
who made peoples subject to me
49 and preserved me from my enemies,
Truly above my adversaries you exalt me
and from the violent man you have rescued me.
50 Therefore I will proclaim you, O Lord, among the nations,
and I will sing praise to your name,[h] 51 You who gave great victories to your king
and showed kindness to your anointed,
to David and his posterity forever.

g Ps 143 (144), 1.—h Rom 15, 9.

17, 26f: Men are treated by God in the same way they treat Him and their fellow men.

17, 29: Light to my lamp: a figure of life and happiness. Cf 3 Kgs 11, 36.

17, 34: The heights: a natural stronghold, safe from attack. Cf Ps 60 (61), 3; Hb 3, 19.

PSALM 18 (19)*

God's Glory in the Heavens and in the Law

[1] For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

A

[2] The heavens declare the glory of God,
and the firmament proclaims his handiwork.
[3] Day pours out the word* to day,
and night to night imparts knowledge; [4] Not a word* nor a discourse
whose voice is not heard;
[5] Through all the earth* their voice resounds,
and to the ends of the world, their message.[i]

II

He has pitched a tent there for the sun,
[6] which comes forth like the groom from his bridal chamber and like a giant,* joyfully runs its course.
[7] At one end of the heavens it comes forth,
and its course is to their other end;
nothing escapes its heat.

B

[8] The law of the Lord is perfect,*
refreshing the soul;
The decree of the Lord is trustworthy,
giving wisdom to the simple.
[9] The precepts of the Lord are right,
rejoicing the heart;
The command of the Lord is clear,
enlightening the eye;
[10] The fear of the Lord is pure,
enduring forever;
The ordinances of the Lord are true,
all of them just;
[11] They are more precious than gold,
than a heap of purest gold;
Sweeter also than syrup
or honey from the comb.

II

[12] Though your servant is careful of them,
very diligent in keeping them,
[13] Yet who can detect failings?
Cleanse me from my unknown faults!
[14] From wanton sin especially, restrain your servant;
let it not rule over me.
Then shall I be blameless and innocent of serious sin [15] Let the words of my mouth and the thought of my heart find favor before you,
O Lord, my rock and my redeemer.

PSALM 19 (20)*

Prayer for the King in Time of War

[1] For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

[2] The Lord answer you in time of distress;
the name of the God of Jacob defend you!
[3] May he send you help from the sanctuary,
from Sion may he sustain you.
[4] May he remember all your offerings
and graciously accept your holocaust.
[5] May he grant you what is in your heart and fulfill your every plan.
[6] May we shout for joy at your victory
and raise the standards in the name of our God.
The Lord grant all your requests!

II

[7] Now I know that the Lord has given victory to his anointed, that he has answered him from his holy heaven
with the strength of his victorious right hand.

i Rom 10, 18.

Ps 18 (19): Consists of two distinct parts, perhaps originally two independent psalms. The first section presents the heavenly firmament, especially the sun, as singing the glories of the Creator (2-7). In the second section the psalmist praises God's moral law (8-11) and prays for grace to keep it (12-15).

18, 3: Day pours out the word: as if under divine inspiration, each day proclaims to the next the message of God's grandeur.

18, 4: Not a word: this message is so clear that the hearts and minds of all men cannot help but hear it. However, some commentators interpret the passage to mean, "Although no physical sound is heard, yet the heavens have a language of their own that is understood throughout the world."

18, 5: Through all the earth: these two lines are applied in Rom 10, 18 to the preachers of the Gospel. There: in the heavens, below the horizon.

18, 6: A giant: literally, "a powerful man"; used also in the sense of "a champion," "a hero," and here perhaps, "an athlete."

18, 8-10: Six synonyms are used for the same idea, divine law. Cf Ps 118 (119).

Ps 19 (20): Psalms 19 (20) and 20 (21) are complementary, having a similar structure. The former, sung before the battle, expresses good wishes for the king (2-6), with assurance of victory (7-9). The latter, sung after the battle, thanks God for the victory (2-8) and again invokes God's blessing on the king (9-13). Both psalms end with a refrain sung by the people.

8 Some are strong in chariots; some, in horses;
but we are strong in the name of the Lord, our God.*
9 Though they bow down and fall,
yet we stand erect and firm.
10 O Lord, grant victory to the king,
and answer us when we call upon you.

PSALM 20 (21)

Thanksgiving and Prayers for the King

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2 O Lord, in your strength the king is glad;
in your victory how greatly he rejoices!
3 You have granted him his heart's desire;
you refused not the wish of his lips.
4 For you welcomed him with goodly blessings,
you placed on his head a crown of pure gold.
5 He asked life of you: you gave him
length of days forever and ever.
6 Great is his glory in your victory;
majesty and splendor you conferred upon him.
7 For you made him a blessing forever;
you gladdened him with the joy of your presence.
8 For the king trusts in the Lord,
and through the kindness of the Most High he stands unshaken.

II

9 May your hand reach all your enemies,*
may your right hand reach your foes!
10 Make them burn as though in a fiery furnace,
when you appear.
May the Lord consume them in his anger;
let fire devour them.
11 Destroy their fruit from the earth
and their posterity from among men.
12 Though they intend evil against you,
devising plots, they cannot succeed, 13 For you shall put them to flight;
you shall aim your shafts against them.
14 Be extolled, O Lord, in your strength!
We will sing, chant the praise of your might.

PSALM 21 (22)*

Passion and Triumph of the Messias

1 For the leader; according to "The hind of the dawn." A psalm of David.

I A

2 My God, my God, why have you forsaken me,[j]
far from my prayer,* from the words of my cry?
3 O my God, I cry out by day, and you answer not;
by night, and there is no relief for me.*
4 Yet you are enthroned in the holy place,
O glory of Israel!
5 In you our fathers trusted;
they trusted, and you delivered them.
6 To you they cried, and they escaped;
in you they trusted, and they were not put to shame.
7 But I am a worm, not a man!
the scorn of men, despised by the people.
8 All who see me scoff at me;
they mock me with parted lips,* they wag their heads:[k] 9 "He relied on the Lord; let him deliver him,*
let him rescue him, if he loves him."[l]

j Mt 27, 46; Mk 15, 34.—k Mt 27, 39; Mk 15, 29.—l Mt 27, 43.

19, 8: The pious place their trust, not in material means, but in the help of God whom they invoke. Cf 1 Kgs 17, 45; Is 31, 1; 36, 9.

20, 9ff: These words are addressed to the king.

Ps 21 (22): Psalm 21 (22) is one of the most important of the Messianic psalms. Our Lord Himself on the cross repeated its first line, and several other verses are directly quoted, or at least alluded to, in the New Testament as pertaining to His Passion. Of no other person is this touching description of spiritual and physical suffering so eminently true as it is of Jesus Christ. Hence, the entire psalm has been traditionally interpreted in the Catholic Church as referring to Him. The psalmist, therefore, speaks in Christ's name when in the first section (2-22) he describes the Messias' dereliction (2-6), opprobrium (7-9) and physical sufferings (13-19), together with His unshaken confidence in the heavenly Father (10-12. 20-22); and in the second part, the fruits of His Redemption: the grateful praise of the redeemed (23-27), the conversion of the Gentiles (28-30d), and the glory of God and His beloved Son (30e-32).

21, 2: Far from my prayer: when he prays, God seems too distant to hear his cry.

21, 3: There is no relief for me: the Hebrew phrase here is obscure; the revised Latin Psalter renders it, "You heed me not."

21, 8: Parted lips: a sign of scorn. They wag their heads: another gesture of derision; it was indulged in by Christ's enemies on Calvary.

21, 9: These words were spoken, in unwitting fulfillment of the prophecy, by the Jews at our Lord's crucifixion. Cf Mt 27, 42. If he loves him: the natural sense seems to be, "If God loves the sufferer"; but some understand it as, "Since he (the sufferer) has loved him (the Lord)."

10 You have been my guide* since I was first formed,
my security at my mother's breast.
11 To you I was committed* at birth,
From my mother's womb you are my God.

12 Be not far from me, for I am in distress;
be near, for I have no one to help me. (II)
13 Many bullocks surround me;
the strong bulls of Basan* encircle me.
14 They open their mouths against me like ravening and roaring lions.

15 I am like water poured out;
all my bones are racked.
My heart has become like wax melting away within my bosom.
16 My throat is dried up like baked clay,
my tongue cleaves to my jaws;
to the dust of death you have brought me down.

17 Indeed, many dogs surround me,
a pack of evildoers closes in upon me;
They have pierced my hands* and my feet;
18 I can count all my bones.
They look on and gloat over me;
19 they divide my garments among them,*
and for my vesture they cast lots.[m]

III

20 But you, O Lord, be not far from me;
O my help, hasten to aid me.
21 Rescue my soul from the sword,
my loneliness* from the grip of the dog.
22 Save me from the lion's mouth;
from the horns of the wild bulls,
my wretched life.

B

I

23 I will proclaim your name to my brethren;*
in the midst of the assembly I will praise you: [n] 24 "You who fear the Lord, praise him;
all you descendants of Jacob, give glory to him;
revere him, all you descendants of Israel!

25 For he has not spurned nor disdained
the wretched man in his misery,
Nor did he turn his face away from him,
but when he cried out to him, he heard him."
26 So by your gift will I utter praise in the vast assembly;
I will fulfill my vows before those who fear him.
27 The lowly shall eat their fill;
they who seek the Lord shall praise him:
"May your hearts be ever merry!"*

II

28 All the ends of the earth shall remember and turn to the Lord;
All the families of the nations
shall bow down before him.
29 For dominion is the Lord's,
and he rules the nations.
30 To him alone shall bow down*
all who sleep in the earth;
Before him shall bend
all who go down into the dust. (III)
And to him my soul shall live;
31 my descendants shall serve him.
Let the coming generation be told of the Lord 32 that they may proclaim to a people yet to be born
the justice he has shown.

m Jn 19, 24.—n Heb 2, 12.

21, 10: My guide: so in the revised Latin Psalter, but the meaning of the Hebrew is uncertain.

21, 11: To you I was committed: literally, "upon you I was thrown." Some see in this a reference to the ancient custom of placing a newborn baby upon its father's lap, so that he might acknowledge its paternity. But more probably the meaning is simply, "I was given to your care."

21, 13: Basan: a fertile grazing land east of the Jordan, famous for its strong cattle. Cf Dt 32, 14; Ez 39, 18; Am 4, 1. The various beasts mentioned here are, of course, to be understood figuratively, as signifying cruel persecutors.

21, 17: They have pierced my hands: so in the ancient versions. The current Hebrew text reads, "Like the lion my hands," which hardly makes good sense. This passage finds its complete fulfillment in the nailing of Christ's hands and feet to the cross.

21, 19: Explicitly cited in Jn 19, 24 as a prophecy fulfilled in the dividing of our Lord's garments by the soldiers on Calvary.

21, 21: My loneliness: his desolate soul. Cf Ps 34 (35), 17.

21, 23: The transition from deepest sorrow to the great joy of the Risen Savior. The language of vv 23-27 is based on the custom whereby a person who offered a thanksgiving sacrifice in the temple would recount to his fellow worshipers the favor received from God and then invite them to share in his sacrificial banquet.

21, 27: May your hearts be ever merry: addressed to the lowly. Cf Ps 68 (69), 33.

21, 30f: The Hebrew text is poorly preserved here. The translation given above follows the revised Latin Psalter in restoring the text to accord with the ancient versions.

PSALM 22 (23)*

The Lord, Shepherd and Host

[1] A psalm of David.

I

The Lord is my shepherd,* I shall not want.
[2] In verdant pastures he gives me repose;
Beside restful waters he leads me;
[3] he refreshes my soul.
He guides me in right paths
for his name's sake.
[4] Even though I walk in the dark valley
I fear no evil; for you are at my side
With your rod and your staff*
that give me courage.

II

[5] You spread the table before me
in the sight of my foes;
You anoint my head with oil;*
my cup overflows.
[6] Only goodness and kindness follow me
all the days of my life;
And I shall dwell in the house of the Lord
for years to come.

o Ps 49 (50), 12; 1 Cor 10, 26.—p Ps 14 (15), 1-5.—q Pss 85 (86), 4; 142 (143), 8.—r Ps 85 (86), 11.

Ps 22 (23): God's loving care for His devoted servant is here portrayed under the figures of a shepherd's solicitude for his sheep (1-4) and a host's generosity toward his guest (5f).

22, 1: The idea of God as the Good Shepherd of His flock is common in both the Old and the New Testament. Cf especially Jn 10, 11-18.

22, 4: Your rod and your staff: to guide and defend the sheep.

22, 5: Oil: a perfumed ointment, used especially at banquets. Cf Mt 26, 7; Lk 7, 37. 46; Jn 12, 3.

Ps 23 (24): After a strophe in praise of God's universal dominion (1f), the psalm lays down the moral requirements for assisting at divine worship (3-6), and then gives the words which were sung when the Ark, representing God's presence, was carried into Sion or into the temple (7-10). From the dialogue structure it seems probable that this psalm was composed for liturgical use, to be sung by alternating choirs. Cf 2 Kgs 6, 12ff.

23, 2: According to the ancient notion of the world, the earth was regarded as a flat disk resting on a vast underground sea, "the deep." Cf Ps 32 (33), 7.

23, 3-6: Psalm 14 (15) is similar in structure and content: a question, an answer giving the conditions, and a conclusion.

23, 7. 9: Your lintels: literally, "your heads." The doorway is pictured as too low for the great God to enter. The gates and portals are either those of the temple or of the ancient citadel of the Jebusites.

Ps 24 (25): An alphabetic psalm. Cf Ps 9. The thoughts are rather loosely connected, but the first part (1-7) is principally a prayer for guidance and pardon; the second (8-15), a meditation on God's goodness toward the just; the third (16-22), a prayer for protection and consolation.

24, 5: And for you I wait all the day: perhaps the third line of v 7 should be inserted immediately after these words. Elsewhere in this psalm there are two lines apiece for each letter of the Hebrew alphabet.

PSALM 23 (24)*

The Lord's Solemn Entry into Sion

[1] A psalm of David.

I

The Lord's are the earth and its fullness; o
the world and those who dwell in it.
[2] For he founded it upon the seas
and established it upon the rivers.*

II

[3] Who can ascend the mountain of the Lord? p or who may stand in his holy place?*
[4] He whose hands are sinless, whose heart is clean,
who desires not what is vain,
nor swears deceitfully to his neighbor.
[5] He shall receive a blessing from the Lord,
a reward from God his savior.
[6] Such is the race that seeks for him,
that seeks the face of the God of Jacob.

III

[7] Lift up, O gates, your lintels;*
reach up, you ancient portals,
that the king of glory may come in!
[8] Who is this king of glory?
The Lord, strong and mighty,
the Lord, mighty in battle.
[9] Lift up, O gates, your lintels;
reach up, you ancient portals,
that the king of glory may come in!
[10] Who is this king of glory?
The Lord of hosts; he is the king of glory.

PSALM 24 (25)*

Prayer for Guidance and Help

[1] Of David.

I

To you I lift up my soul,
O Lord, [2] my God. q
In you I trust; let me not be put to shame,
let not my enemies exult over me.
[3] No one who waits for you shall be put to shame;
those shall be put to shame who heedlessly break faith.
[4] Your ways, O Lord, make known to me; r teach me your paths, [5] Guide me in your truth and teach me,
for you are God my savior,
and for you I wait all the day.*

6 Remember that your compassion, O Lord,
and your kindness are from of old.
7 The sins of my youth and my frailties remember not;
in your kindness remember me,
because of your goodness, O Lord.

II

8 Good and upright is the Lord;
thus he shows sinners the way.
9 He guides the humble to justice,
he teaches the humble his way.
10 All the paths of the Lord are kindness and constancy toward those who keep his covenant and his decrees.
11 For your name's sake, O Lord,
you will pardon my guilt, great as it is.
12 When a man fears the Lord,
he shows him the way he should choose.
13 He abides in prosperity,
and his descendants inherit the land.
14 The friendship of the Lord is with those who fear him,
and his covenant, for their instruction.
15 My eyes are ever toward the Lord,
for he will free my feet from the snare.

III

16 Look toward me, and have pity on me,
for I am alone and afflicted.
17 Relieve the troubles of my heart,
and bring me out of my distress.
18 Put an end to my affliction and my suffering,*
and take away all my sins.
19 Behold, my enemies are many,
and they hate me violently.
20 Preserve my life, and rescue me;
let me not be put to shame, for I take refuge in you.
21 Let integrity and uprightness preserve me,
because I wait for you, O Lord.
22 Redeem Israel, O God,
from all its distress!*

PSALM 25 (26)*

Prayer of an Innocent Man

1 Of David.

I

Do me justice, O Lord! for I have walked in integrity, and in the Lord I trust without wavering.
2 Search me, O Lord, and try me;
test my soul and my heart.

II

3 For your kindness is before my eyes,
and I walk in your truth.
4 I stay not with worthless men,
nor do I consort with hypocrites.
5 I hate the assembly of evildoers,
and with the wicked I will not stay.
6 I wash my hands* in innocence,[s]
and I go around your altar, O Lord, 7 Giving voice to my thanks,
and recounting all your wondrous deeds.
8 O Lord, I love the house in which you dwell,
the tenting-place of your glory.

III

9 Gather not my soul with those of sinners,
nor with men of blood my life.
10 On their hands are crimes,
and their right hands are full of bribes.
11 But I walk in integrity;
redeem me, and have pity on me.
12 My foot stands on level ground;*
in the assemblies I will bless the Lord.

s Ps 72 (73), 13.

24, 18f: The wording and the order of these verses are not wholly free from doubt.

24, 22: This final verse is an addition to the original psalm. The tau of v 21 is the last letter of the Hebrew alphabet. In Ps 33 (34) and 36 (37) also, an extra verse is found at the end.

Ps 25 (26): Protesting his innocence (1f), the psalmist enumerates his virtues (3-8), that God may not condemn him with the wicked (9-12).

25, 6: I wash my hands: although the washing of hands was a liturgical act (Ex 30, 19. 21; 40, 31), here it is probably to be understood figuratively, as in Is 1, 16. The words from here to the end of the psalm are recited at Mass, at the "Lavabo" or washing of hands. Cf Ps 72 (73), 13.

25, 12: On level ground: in safety, where there is no danger of tripping and falling; here used figuratively. Some join the two lines of this verse to read, "When my feet stand on level ground . . . I will bless the Lord." In the assemblies: in the temple, where the psalmist will offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving.

PSALM 26 (27)*

Trust in God

[1] Of David.

I

A

The Lord is my light and my salvation;
whom should I fear?
The Lord is my life's refuge;
of whom should I be afraid?
[2] When evildoers come at me
to devour my flesh,*
My foes and my enemies
themselves stumble and fall.
[3] Though an army encamp against me,
my heart will not fear;
Though war be waged upon me,
even then will I trust.

II

[4] One thing I ask of the Lord;
this I seek:
To dwell in the house of the Lord
all the days of my life,[t]
That I may gaze on the loveliness of the Lord
and contemplate his temple.*
[5] For he will hide me in his abode
in the day of trouble;
He will conceal me in the shelter of his tent,
he will set me high upon a rock.
[6] Even now my head is held high above my enemies on every side.
And I will offer in his tent
sacrifices with shouts of gladness;
I will sing and chant praise to the Lord.

B

[7] Hear, O Lord, the sound of my call;
have pity on me, and answer me.
[8] Of you my heart speaks; you my glance seeks;
your presence, O Lord, I seek.
[9] Hide not your face from me;
do not in anger repel your servant.
You are my helper: cast me not off;
forsake me not, O God my savior.
[10] Though my father and mother forsake me,
yet will the Lord receive me.

II

[11] Show me, O Lord, your way,
and lead me on a level path,*
because of my adversaries.
[12] Give me not up to the wishes of my foes;
for false witnesses have risen up against me,
and such as breathe out violence.
[13] I believe that I shall see the bounty of the Lord
in the land of the living.*
[14] Wait for the Lord with courage;
be stouthearted, and wait for the Lord.

t Pss 22 (23), 6; 60 (61), 5; 64 (65), 5.—u Pss 29 (30), 4; 87 (88), 5; 142 (143), 7; Prv 1, 12.

Ps 26 (27): Asserting his boundless confidence that God will rescue him (1-3), the psalmist longs for the shelter of the temple where, united with the Lord, he will be safe from his enemies (4-6). The second half seems originally to have been an independent psalm. Here the psalmist prays that he may not be abandoned by God (7-10), asks for guidance and protection (11f), and ends on a note of confidence (13f).

26, 2: To devour my flesh: to destroy me completely. Cf Ps 13 (14), 4; Mi 3, 3.

26, 4: Contemplate his temple: the meaning of the Hebrew is not quite certain. Some render it as, "visit his temple at dawn."

26, 11: A level path: see note on Ps 25 (26), 12.

26, 13: In the land of the living: the meaning is, "While I am still living here on earth." But these words may also be used in an accommodated sense, as the Church uses them in the Office of the Dead, to mean, "In heaven, where there is true life."

Ps 27 (28): Consists of a prayer asking that the psalmist may not be punished with the wicked (1-5), followed by anticipated thanksgiving to God for having heard him (6f), and ending with an intercession for the king and the nation (8f).

27, 2: Your holy shrine: the innermost part of the temple, the Holy of Holies, containing the Ark of the Lord.

27, 4f: Since the wicked have no care for God, He will have no care for them.

PSALM 27 (28)*

Petition and Thanksgiving

[1] Of David.

I

To you, O Lord, I call;
O my Rock, be not deaf to me,
Lest, if you heed me not,
I become one of those going down into the pit.[u]
[2] Hear the sound of my pleading, when I cry to you, lifting up my hands toward your holy shrine.*
[3] Drag me not away with the wicked,
with those who do wrong,
Who speak civilly to their neighbors
though evil is in their hearts.
[4] Repay them for their deeds,*
for the evil of their doings.
For the work of their hands repay them;
give them their deserts.
[5] Because they consider not the deeds of the Lord nor the work of his hands,
may he tear them down and not build them up.

II

6 Blessed be the Lord,
for he has heard the sound of my pleading;
7 the Lord is my strength and my shield.
In him my heart trusts, and I find help;
then my heart exults, and with my song I give him thanks.

III

8 The Lord is the strength of his people,
the saving refuge of his anointed.
9 Save your people, and bless your inheritance;
feed them, and carry them forever!

PSALM 28 (29)*

God's Majesty in the Storm

1 A psalm of David.

I

Give to the Lord, you sons of God,*
give to the Lord glory and praise,[v]
2 Give to the Lord the glory due his name;
adore the Lord in holy attire.

II

3 The voice of the Lord* is over the waters,
the God of glory thunders,
the Lord, over vast waters.
4 The voice of the Lord is mighty;
the voice of the Lord is majestic.
5 The voice of the Lord breaks the cedars,
the Lord breaks the cedars of Lebanon.
6 He makes Lebanon leap* like a calf and Sarion like a young wild bull.
7 The voice of the Lord strikes fiery flames;
8 the voice of the Lord shakes the desert,
the Lord shakes the wilderness of Cades.*
9 The voice of the Lord twists the oaks
and strips the forests,
and in his temple all say, "Glory!"

III

10 The Lord is enthroned above the flood;
the Lord is enthroned as king forever.
11 May the Lord give strength to his people;
may the Lord bless his people with peace!

PSALM 29 (30)*

Thanksgiving for Deliverance from Death

1 A psalm. A song for the dedication of the temple.* Of David.

2 I will extol you, O Lord, for you drew me clear and did not let my enemies rejoice over me.

A

3 O Lord, my God,
I cried out to you and you healed me.
4 O Lord, you brought me up from the nether world;
you preserved me from among those going down into the pit.[w]
5 Sing praise to the Lord, you his faithful ones,
and give thanks to his holy name.
6 For his anger lasts but a moment;
a lifetime, his good will.
At nightfall, weeping enters in,
but with the dawn, rejoicing.

B

I

7 Once, in my security, I said,
"I shall never be disturbed."
8 O Lord, in your good will you had endowed me with majesty and strength;

v If: Ps 95 (96), 7-9 —w Ps 27 (28), 1.

Ps 28 (29): After an invocation to praise the Lord (1f), this striking psalm describes a magnificent theophany, the revelation of God's majesty in a terrific thunderstorm (3-10), and ends with a prayer for the people (11).

28, 1: Sons of God: although this phrase sometimes refers to the angels, as in Jb 1, 6; 2, 1; 38, 7, here it seems rather to mean "godly, virtuous men"; in Ps 95 (96), 7ff, a very similar invocation is addressed to the families of nations. Cf Ps 88 (89), 7.

28, 3: The voice of the Lord: the thunder and the thunderbolt, the sound of which is here attributed directly to God.

28, 6: He makes Lebanon leap: the mountains are pictured as trembling with fear; perhaps an earthquake is meant. Cf Ps 113A (114), 4. 6f. Sarion: the Phoenician name for Mount Hermon. Cf Dt 3, 9. Several expressions in this psalm are also found in the Chanaanite texts written in the fifteenth century B.C. at Ugarit, in the north of Phoenicia.

28, 8: The wilderness of Cades: formerly identified with the oasis of Cades in the northern part of the Sinai peninsula. Cf Nm 20, 1. More probably, however, it was north of Palestine, for it is also mentioned in one of the Ugaritic texts, and in the present context seems to be in the neighborhood of Lebanon and Hermon.

Ps 29 (30): The psalmist, after announcing his theme (2), thanks God for having restored him to health when sickness was about to bring him to the grave (3-6). He then gives the details of what had occurred: confident of robust health, he was suddenly stricken with some disease (7f), but he cried to the Lord for help (9-11), and his prayer was heard (12f).

29, 1: For the dedication of the temple: a later adaptation of this psalm.

but when you hid your face I was terrified.

II

9 To you, O Lord, I cried out;
with the Lord I pleaded:
10 "What gain would there be from my lifeblood,
from my going down into the grave?
Would dust give you thanks [x]
or proclaim your faithfulness?*
11 Hear, O Lord, and have pity on me;
O Lord, be my helper."

III

12 You changed my mourning into dancing;
you took off my sackcloth* and clothed me with gladness, 13 That my soul might sing praise to you without ceasing;
O Lord, my God, forever will I give you thanks.

PSALM 30 (31)*

Prayer in Distress and Thanksgiving for Escape

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2 In you, O Lord, I take refuge; [y]
let me never be put to shame.
In your justice rescue me,
3 incline your ear to me,
make haste to deliver me!
Be my rock of refuge,
a stronghold to give me safety.
4 You are my rock and my fortress;
for your name's sake you will lead and guide me.
5 You will free me from the snare they set for me,
for you are my refuge.
6 Into your hands [z] I commend my spirit;*
you will redeem me, O Lord, O faithful God.
7 You hate those who worship vain idols,
but my trust is in the Lord.
8 I will rejoice and be glad of your kindness,
when you have seen my affliction
and watched over me in my distress, 9 Not shutting me up in the grip of the enemy
but enabling me to move about at large.

II

10 Have pity on me, O Lord, for I am in distress;
with sorrow my eye is consumed; my soul also, and my body.
11 For my life is spent with grief
and my years with sighing;
My strength has failed through affliction,
and my bones are consumed.
12 For all my foes I am an object of reproach,
a laughingstock to my neighbors, and a dread to my friends;
they who see me abroad flee from me.
13 I am forgotten like the unremembered dead;
I am like a dish that is broken.*
14 I hear the whispers of the crowd,[a] that frighten me from every side,*
as they consult together against me,
plotting to take my life.
15 But my trust is in you, O Lord;
I say, "You are my God."
16 In your hands is my destiny; rescue me from the clutches of my enemies and my persecutors.
17 Let your face shine upon your servant;
save me in your kindness.
18 O Lord, let me not be put to shame, for I call upon you;
let the wicked be put to shame; let them be reduced to silence in the nether world.
19 Let dumbness strike their lying lips that speak insolence against the just in pride and scorn.

x Ps 6, 6.—y 2-4: Ps 70 (71), 1-3.—z Lk 23, 46.—a Jer 20, 10.

29, 10: See note on Ps 6, 6.

29, 12: Sackcloth: worn in times of mourning and penance. Cf 2 Kgs 3, 31; 3 Kgs 21, 27; Pss 34 (35), 13; 68 (69), 12.

Ps 30 (31): In the first two sections (2-19) the psalmist describes in pathetic words his extreme misery and affliction, while with unshaken confidence in God's goodness he prays for heavenly aid. The third section (20-25) is a typical hymn of thanksgiving. If it was originally joined to the preceding verses and not an independent psalm, it must be considered as an anticipated acknowledgment of favors the psalmist hopes to receive.

30, 6: Into your hands I commend my spirit: our Lord made these words His own as He died on the cross. Cf Lk 23, 46. Hence the whole psalm may be fittingly considered as an expression of Christ's feelings of anguish, joined with filial confidence in His heavenly Father, during His bitter Passion.

30, 13: Like a dish that is broken: a common comparison for something ruined and useless. Cf Is 30, 14; Jer 19, 11; 22, 28.

30, 14: That frighten me from every side: literally, "terror from round about." This phrase occurs several times also in Jeremias. Cf Jer 6, 25; 20, 3. 10; 46, 5; 49, 29. There are certain other marks of similarity between this psalm and the writings of that prophet.

20 How great is the goodness, O Lord,
which you have in store for those who fear you,
And which, toward those who take refuge in you,
you show in the sight of men.

21 You hide them in the shelter of your presence
from the plottings of men;
You screen them within your abode
from the strife of tongues.

22 Blessed be the Lord whose wondrous kindness
he has shown me in a fortified city.

23 Once I said in my anguish,
"I am cut off from your sight";
Yet you heard the sound of my pleading
when I cried out to you.

24 Love the Lord, all you his faithful ones!
The Lord keeps those who are constant,
but more than requites those who act proudly.

25 Take courage and be stouthearted,
all you who hope in the Lord.

PSALM 31 (32)*

Remission of Sin

1 Of David. A maskil.

I

Happy is he whose fault is taken away,[b]
whose sin is covered.

2 Happy the man to whom the Lord imputes not guilt,
in whose spirit there is no guile.*

II

3 As long as I would not speak,* my bones wasted away
with my groaning all the day,

4 For day and night your hand was heavy upon me;
my strength was dried up as by the heat of summer.

5 Then I acknowledged my sin to you,
my guilt I covered not.
I said, "I confess my faults to the Lord,"
and you took away the guilt of my sin.*

6 For this shall every faithful man pray to you in time of stress.
Though deep waters overflow, they shall not reach him.

7 You are my shelter; from distress you will preserve me;
with glad cries of freedom you will ring me round.

III

8 I will instruct you and show you the way you should walk;
I will counsel you, keeping my eye on you.

9 Be not senseless like horses or mules:
with bit and bridle their temper must be curbed,
else they will not come near you.*

IV

10 Many are the sorrows of the wicked,
but kindness surrounds him who trusts in the Lord.

11 Be glad in the Lord and rejoice, you just;
exult, all you upright of heart.

PSALM 32 (33)*

Praise of the Lord's Power and Providence

I

1 Exult, you just, in the Lord;
praise from the upright is fitting.

2 Give thanks to the Lord on the harp;
with the ten-stringed lyre chant his praises.

3 Sing to him a new song;
pluck the strings skillfully, with shouts of gladness.

b 1f: Rom 4, 7f.

Ps 31 (32): The second of the Penitential Psalms, and a favorite of St. Augustine's. The psalmist describes the blessedness of having one's sins forgiven by God (1f), as well as his own spiritual consolation when he confessed his sins (3-7); he then exhorts others to be submissive to God's will (8f), and to confide with joy in His goodness (10f).

31, 2: No guile: no hypocrisy in acknowledging his sins.

31, 3: I would not speak: I refused at first to confess my sins.

31, 5: St. Augustine's comment is that, even before the sin is acknowledged by the penitent's lips, God hears the cry of his heart. Pardon at once follows sincere contrition. Cf 2 Kgs 12, 13.

31, 9: The Hebrew text of this verse is obscure, and is variously interpreted.

Ps 32 (33): A hymn of praise in which the just are invited to chant the glories of God (1-3), because He is ever faithful to His promises (4f), the all-powerful Creator (6f), and the wise and mighty Ruler of the world (8-12), who sees and knows all things (13-15) and who alone is the source of victory and salvation (16-19). The hymn concludes with an expression of confidence in God's goodness (20-22).

4 For upright is the word of the Lord,
and all his works are trustworthy.
5 He loves justice and right;
of the kindness of the Lord the earth is full.

II

6 By the word of the Lord the heavens were made;
by the breath of his mouth all their host.*
7 He gathers the waters of the sea as in a flask;
in cellars he confines the deep.*

III

8 Let all the earth fear the Lord;
let all who dwell in the world revere him.
9 For he spoke, and it was made;
he commanded, and it stood forth.
10 The Lord brings to nought the plans of nations;
he foils the designs of peoples.
11 But the plan of the Lord stands forever;
the design of his heart, through all generations.
12 Happy the nation whose God is the Lord,[c]
the people he has chosen for his own inheritance.

IV

13 From heaven the Lord looks down;
he sees all mankind.
14 From his fixed throne he beholds
all who dwell on the earth, 15 He who fashioned the heart of each,
he who knows all their works.

V

16 A king is not saved by a mighty army,
nor is a warrior delivered by great strength.
17 Useless is the horse for safety;
great though its strength, it cannot provide escape.
18 But see, the eyes of the Lord are upon those who fear him,
upon those who hope for his kindness, 19 To deliver them from death
and preserve them in spite of famine.

VI

20 Our soul waits for the Lord,
who is our help and our shield, 21 For in him our hearts rejoice;
in his holy name we trust.
22 May your kindness, O Lord, be upon us who have put our hope in you.

c Ps 143 (144), 15.—d 1 Kgs 21, 1-22, 1.—e Lk 1, 53.

32, 6: All their host: by a common figure, the countless stars of the sky are viewed as a vast army. Cf 2 Esd 9, 6; Is 40, 26; 45, 12; Jer 33, 22.

32, 7: The ancients marveled at the power which kept the mighty seas from overwhelming the dry land. According to pagan mythology, this was achieved by a fierce battle in which the heavenly gods triumphed over the gods of the deep. For the Lord, however, this is as simple as putting water into a bottle; He can store away the immense subterranean ocean as easily as a man stores wine in his cellar.

Ps 33 (34): An alphabetic psalm having no apparent connection with the events mentioned in v 1. After an exhortation to glorify the Lord (2-4), the psalmist sings his grateful praise to God for having rescued him from danger (5-11), and concludes with an admonition to fear the Lord and keep His commandments (12-23).

33, 1: It was at the court of the Philistine King Achis that David feigned insanity after he had departed from the priest Abimelech. Some early scribe appears to have confused these two names here.

33, 7: When the afflicted man called out, the Lord heard: some render the passage, "Here is an afflicted man who called out, and the Lord heard him." The psalmist himself would then be this afflicted man.

33, 9: Taste and see: figurative language for, "know by experience."

PSALM 33 (34)*

Praise of God, the Protector of the Just

1 Of David, when he feigned madness before Abimelech,* who forced him to depart.[d]

I

2 I will bless the Lord at all times;
his praise shall be ever in my mouth.
3 Let my soul glory in the Lord;
the lowly will hear me and be glad.
4 Glorify the Lord with me,
let us together extol his name.

II

5 I sought the Lord, and he answered me
and delivered me from all my fears.
6 Look to him that you may be radiant with joy,
and your faces may not blush with shame.
7 When the afflicted man called out, the Lord heard,*
and from all his distress he saved him.
8 The angel of the Lord encamps around those who fear him, and delivers them.
9 Taste and see* how good the Lord is;
happy the man who takes refuge in him.
10 Fear the Lord, you his holy ones,
for nought is lacking to those who fear him.
11 The great grow poor and hungry;
but those who seek the Lord want for no good thing.[e]

III

12 Come, children,* hear me;
I will teach you the fear of the Lord.
13 Which of you desires life,[f]
and takes delight in prosperous days?
14 Keep your tongue from evil
and your lips from speaking guile;
15 Turn from evil, and do good;
seek peace, and follow after it.
16 The Lord has eyes for the just,[g]
and ears for their cry.
17 The Lord confronts the evildoers,
to destroy remembrance of them from the earth.
18 When the just cry out, the Lord hears them,
and from all their distress he rescues them.
19 The Lord is close to the brokenhearted;
and those who are crushed in spirit he saves.
20 Many are the troubles of the just man,
but out of them all the Lord delivers him;
21 He watches over all his bones;
not one of them shall be broken.
22 Vice slays the wicked,
and the enemies of the just pay for their guilt.
23 But the Lord redeems the lives of his servants;
no one incurs guilt who takes refuge in him.

PSALM 34 (35)*

Prayer for Help against Unjust Enemies

1 Of David.

I

Fight, O Lord, against those who fight me;
war against those who make war upon me.*
2 Take up the shield and buckler,
and rise up in my defense.
3 Brandish the lance, and block the way
in the face of my pursuers;
Say to my soul,
"I am your salvation."
4 Let those be put to shame and disgraced
who seek my life;
Let those be turned back and confounded
who plot evil against me.
5 Let them be like chaff before the wind,
with the angel of the Lord driving them on.
6 Let their way be dark and slippery,
with the angel of the Lord pursuing them.

II

7 For without cause they set their snare for me,
without cause they dug a pit against my life.
8 Let ruin come upon them unawares,
and let the snare they have set catch them;
into the pit they have dug let them fall.
9 But I will rejoice in the Lord,
I will be joyful because of his salvation.
10 All my being shall say,
"O Lord, who is like you,[h]
The rescuer of the afflicted man from those too strong for him,
of the afflicted and the needy from their despoilers?"
11 Unjust witnesses have risen up;
things I knew not of, they lay to my charge.
12 They have repaid me evil for good,
bringing bereavement to my soul.

III

13 But I, when they were ill, put on sackcloth;*
I afflicted myself with fasting
and poured forth prayers within my bosom.*
14 As though it were a friend of mine, or a brother, I went about;
like one bewailing a mother, I was bowed down in mourning.
15 Yet when I stumbled they were glad and gathered together;

33, 12: Children: in Hebrew wisdom literature a rabbi or teacher customarily addresses his disciples in this way.

Ps 34 (35): Calling upon God to defend him (1-6), the psalmist describes the wickedness (7-12) and ingratitude (13-16) of his enemies, and then reiterates his plea for divine assistance (17-28).

34, 1-3: The martial language is purely figurative; the psalmist's enemies are not actually armed against him, but rather are those who have falsely accused him of serious crimes. Cf vv 11. 21.

34, 13. 15. 17: In several places the Hebrew text of these verses is obscure and their translation somewhat uncertain.

34, 13: And poured forth prayers within my bosom: literally, "my prayers returned upon my bosom." Some take this to mean that he prayed with deeply bowed head so that his voice reverberated against his chest; but more probably it refers to the saying of silent prayers which remained within his heart.

they gathered together striking me unawares.
They tore at me without ceasing;
16 they put me to the test; they mocked me,
gnashing their teeth at me.

IV

17 O Lord, how long will you look on?
Save me from the roaring beasts; from the lions, my only life.
18 I will give you thanks in the vast assembly,
in the mighty throng I will praise you.
19 Let not my unprovoked enemies rejoice over me;
let not my undeserved* foes wink knowingly.
20 For civil words they speak not,
but against the peaceful in the land they fashion treacherous speech.
21 And they open wide their mouths against me, saying, "Aha, aha! We saw him with our own eyes!"
22 You, O Lord, have seen; be not silent;
Lord, be not far from me!
23 Awake, and be vigilant in my defense; in my cause, my God and my Lord.
24 Do me justice, because you are just, O Lord;
my God, let them not rejoice over me.
25 Let them not say in their hearts, "Aha! This is what we wanted!"
Let them not say, "We have swallowed him up!"
26 Let all be put to shame and confounded who are glad at my misfortune.
Let those be clothed with shame and disgrace
who glory over me.
27 But let those shout for joy and be glad who favor my just cause;
And may they ever say, "The Lord be glorified;
he wills the prosperity of his servant!"
28 Then my tongue shall recount your justice,
your praise, all the day.

i Rom 3, 18.—j Jn 4, 14.

34, 19: Unprovoked . . . undeserved: he has never given them a just reason for hating and persecuting him.

Ps 35 (36): The thought of man's wickedness, which leads him to forget or ignore the just punishments due to his sins (2-5), is here contrasted with God's loving care for mankind (6-10). Hence, the psalmist prays to be delivered from wicked men (11-13).

35, 2: Speaks: the Hebrew word used here is used elsewhere only of the Lord speaking to His inspired prophets. Hence the sense here is, "It is the sinfulness in man's heart that inspires, or instigates, him to wickedness."

35, 3: Hated: punished by God.

35, 7: Like the mountains of God: as immense as the loftiest mountains.

35, 10: In your light we see light: light is the symbol of goodness and happiness; hence, "Through your goodness we enjoy true happiness."

PSALM 35 (36)*

Human Wickedness and Divine Providence

1 For the leader. Of David, the servant of the Lord.

I

2 Sin speaks* to the wicked man in his heart;
there is no dread of God before his eyes,[i] 3 For he beguiles himself with the thought that his guilt will not be found out or hated.*
4 The words of his mouth are empty and false;
he has ceased to understand how to do good.
5 He plans wickedness in his bed;
he sets out on a way that is not good, with no repugnance for evil.

II

6 O Lord, your kindness reaches to heaven;
your faithfulness, to the clouds.
7 Your justice is like the mountains of God;*
your judgments, like the mighty deep;
man and beast you save, O Lord.
8 How precious is your kindness, O God!
The children of men take refuge in the shadow of your wings.
9 They have their fill of the prime gifts of your house;
from your delightful stream you give them to drink.
10 For with you is the fountain of life,[j]
and in your light we see light.*

III

11 Keep up your kindness toward your friends,
your just defense of the upright of heart.
12 Let not the foot of the proud overtake me
nor the hand of the wicked disquiet me.

13 See how the evildoers have fallen;
they are thrust down and cannot rise.

PSALM 36 (37)*

The Fate of Sinners and the Reward of the Just

1 Of David.

Be not vexed over evildoers,
nor jealous of those who do wrong;
2 For like grass they quickly wither,
and like green herbs they wilt.

3 Trust in the Lord and do good,
that you may dwell in the land* and enjoy security.
4 Take delight in the Lord,
and he will grant you your heart's requests.

5 Commit to the Lord your way;
trust in him, and he will act.
6 He will make justice dawn for you like the light;
bright as the noonday shall be your vindication.

7 Leave it to the Lord,
and wait for him;
Be not vexed at the successful path
of the man who does malicious deeds.

8 Give up your anger, and forsake wrath;
be not vexed, it will only harm you.
9 For evildoers shall be cut off,
but those who wait for the Lord shall possess the land.

10 Yet a little while, and the wicked man shall be no more;
though you mark his place he will not be there.
11 But the meek shall possess the land,[k]
they shall delight in abounding peace.

12 The wicked man plots against the just
and gnashes his teeth at them;
13 But the Lord laughs at him,
for he sees that his day is coming.

14 A sword the wicked draw; they bend their bow
to bring down the afflicted and the poor,
to slaughter those whose path is right.
15 But their swords shall pierce their own hearts,
and their bows shall be broken.

16 Better is the scanty store of the just than the great wealth of the wicked, 17 For the power of the wicked shall be broken,
but the Lord supports the just.

18 The Lord watches over the lives of the wholehearted;
their inheritance lasts forever.
19 They are not put to shame in an evil time;
in days of famine they have plenty.

20 But the wicked perish,
and the enemies of the Lord, like the beauty of the meadows,
vanish; like smoke they vanish.

21 The wicked man borrows and does not repay;
the just man is kindly and gives,
22 But those whom he blesses shall possess the land,
while those he curses shall be cut off.

23 By the Lord are the steps of a man made firm,
and he approves his way.
24 Though he fall, he does not lie prostrate,
for the hand of the Lord sustains him.

25 Neither in my youth, nor now that I am old,
have I seen a just man forsaken nor his descendants begging bread.
26 All the day he is kindly and lends,
and his descendants shall be blessed.

27 Turn from evil and do good,
that you may abide forever;
28 For the Lord loves what is right,
and forsakes not his faithful ones.

Criminals are destroyed,
and the posterity of the wicked is cut off.
29 The just shall possess the land
and dwell in it forever.

30 The mouth of the just man tells of wisdom

k Mt 5, 4.

Ps 36 (37): Psalm 36 (37) treats of the problem of evil: why the wicked seem to prosper while the good suffer. The answer of the psalmist is that this seeming injustice is short-lived. God will reward the good and punish the wicked even here on earth. Since this is an alphabetic psalm, these thoughts are repeated without much logical sequence throughout the whole psalm.

36, 3. 9. 11. 22. 29. 34: The land: the Promised Land, Palestine, which however is a type or figure of heaven. Cf Heb 11, 9f. 13-16. Therefore, when our Lord in the Beatitudes (Mt 5, 4) quoted v 11 of this psalm, He meant it in the sense of, "The meek shall possess the kingdom of heaven."

and his tongue utters what is right.
31 The law of his God is in his heart,[l]
and his steps do not falter.

32 The wicked man spies on the just,
and seeks to slay him.
33 The Lord will not leave him in his power
nor let him be condemned when he is on trial.

34 Wait for the Lord,
and keep his way;
He will promote you to ownership of the land;
when the wicked are destroyed, you shall look on.

35 I saw a wicked man, fierce,
and stalwart as a flourishing, age-old tree.
36 Yet as I passed by, lo! he was no more;
I sought him, but he could not be found.

37 Watch the wholehearted man, and mark the upright;
for there is a future for the man of peace.
38 Sinners shall all alike be destroyed;
the future of the wicked* shall be cut off.

39 The salvation of the just is from the Lord;
he is their refuge in time of distress.
40 And the Lord helps them and delivers them;
he delivers them from the wicked and saves them,
because they take refuge in him.

PSALM 37 (38)*

Prayer of an Afflicted Sinner

1 A psalm of David.m For remembrance.*

I

2 O Lord, in your anger punish me not,
in your wrath chastise me not; n
3 For your arrows have sunk deep in me,
and your hand has come down upon me.
4 There is no health in my flesh because of your indignation;
there is no wholeness in my bones because of my sin,
5 For my iniquities have overwhelmed me;
they are like a heavy burden, beyond my strength.

II

6 Noisome and festering are my sores because of my folly, 7 I am stooped and bowed down profoundly;
all the day I go in mourning,
8 For my loins are filled with burning pains;
there is no health in my flesh.
9 I am numbed and severely crushed;
I roar with anguish of heart.

10 O Lord, all my desire is before you;
from you my groaning is not hid.
11 My heart throbs; my strength forsakes me;
the very light of my eyes has failed me.
12 My friends and my companions stand back because of my affliction;
my neighbors stand afar off.
13 Men lay snares for me seeking my life;
they look to my misfortune, they speak of ruin,
treachery they talk of all the day.

III

14 But I am like a deaf man, hearing not,
like a dumb man who opens not his mouth.
15 I am become like a man who neither hears nor has in his mouth a retort.
16 Because for you, O Lord, I wait;
you, O Lord, my God, will answer 17 When I say, "Let them not be glad on my account who, when my foot slips, glory over me."

IV

18 For I am very near to falling,
and my grief is with me always.
19 Indeed, I acknowledge my guilt;
I grieve over my sin.
20 But my undeserved enemies are strong;
many are my foes without cause.
21 Those who repay evil for good harass* me for pursuing good.
22 Forsake me not, O Lord;
my God, be not far from me!

1 Is 51, 7.—m Ps 69 (70), 1.—n Ps 6, 2.

36, 37f: A future for the man of peace . . . the future of the wicked: in his own life and in his offspring.

Ps 37 (38): The third of the Penitential Psalms. Acknowledging that his sickness is a punishment for his sins (2-5), the psalmist describes his misery (6-13), which he is patiently bearing with trust in God (14-17), whose pardon and help he implores (18-23).

37, 1: For remembrance: or, "For the memorial sacrifice." Cf Lv 2, 2. 9. 16; 5, 12; Is 66, 3.

37, 21: Harass: the Hebrew expression, from which the word "Satan" is derived, signifies either "to harass" or "to slander." Cf Ps 108 (109), 4.

23 Make haste to help me,
O Lord my salvation!

PSALM 38 (39)*

The Brevity and Vanity of Life

1 For the leader, for Idithun.o A psalm of David.

I

2 I said, "I will watch my ways,
so as not to sin with my tongue;
I will set a curb on my mouth."
While the wicked man was before me
3 I kept dumb and silent;
I refrained from rash speech.
But my grief was stirred up;
4 hot grew my heart within me;
in my thoughts, a fire blazed forth.
I spoke out with my tongue:

II

5 Let me know, O Lord, my end
and what is the number of my days,
that I may learn how frail I am.
6 A short span you have made my days,
and my life is as nought before you;
only a breath is any human existence.
7 A phantom only, man goes his ways;
like vapor only are his restless pursuits;
he heaps up stores, and knows not who will use them.

III

8 And now, for what do I wait, O Lord?
In you is my hope.
9 From all my sins deliver me;
a fool's taunt let me not suffer.

IV

10 I was speechless and opened not my mouth,
because it was your doing;
11 Take away your scourge from me;
at the blow of your hand I wasted away.
12 With rebukes for guilt you chasten man;
you dissolve like a cobweb all that is dear to him;
only a breath is any man.
13 Hear my prayer, O Lord;
to my cry give ear;
to my weeping be not deaf!
For I am but a wayfarer before you,
a pilgrim like all my fathers.
14 Turn your gaze from me, that I may find respite ere I depart and be no more.*

PSALM 39 (40)*

Gratitude and Prayer for Help

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I A

2 I have waited, waited for the Lord,
and he stooped toward me and heard my cry.
3 He drew me out of the pit of destruction,
out of the mud of the swamp;
He set my feet upon a crag;
he made firm my steps.
4 And he put a new song* into my mouth,
a hymn to our God.
Many shall look on in awe
and trust in the Lord.

II

5 Happy the man who makes the Lord his trust;
who turns not to idolatry
or to those who stray after falsehood.
6 How numerous have you made,
O Lord, my God, your wondrous deeds!
And in your plans for us
there is none to equal you;
Should I wish to declare or to tell them,
they would be too many to recount.

III

7 Sacrifice or oblation you wished not,*
but ears open to obedience you gave me.p

o 1 Par 11, 41; Pss 61 (62), 1; 76 (77), 1.—p 7-9: Heb 10, 5-7.

Ps 38 (39): Although he had resolved not to complain (2-4), the psalmist, like Ecclesiastes, laments the brevity and vanity of life (5-7); yet his hope is in the Lord (8f), to whom he prays for pardon and health (10-14).

38, 14: And be no more: here on earth. The psalmist naturally shared the common belief in a certain kind of life in the nether world after death. Job also complained in a similar strain of the brevity of life and the finality of death, while asserting at the same time his faith in a future life. Cf Jb 3, 13-19.

Ps 39 (40): Psalm 39 (40) consists of two distinct parts, probably once independent psalms. In the first section (2-11) the psalmist thanks God for having rescued him from the danger of death (2-4), and praises the Lord for His goodness toward all who trust in Him (5f); to do God's will is the best sacrifice, he says (7-9), as he offers up this hymn of thanksgiving among the worshipers in the temple (10f). The second section (12-18), which is the same as Ps 69 (70), is a typical supplication of one afflicted and persecuted.

39, 4: A new song: the hymn of thanksgiving in vv 5-11. Many hymns of praise and thanksgiving are thus described because they represent a complete change from the attitude of lamentation.

39, 7-9: Obedience is better than sacrifice. Cf 1 Kgs 15, 22; Is 1, 10-20; Mi 6, 6-8. In Heb 10, 5-7 this passage, according to the somewhat different form of the ancient Greek version, is quoted and most fittingly applied to Christ, whose sacrifice of perfect obedience immeasurably surpasses the liturgical sacrifices of the Old Law.

Holocausts or sin-offerings you sought not;
8 then said I, "Behold I come;
in the written scroll it is prescribed for me, 9 To do your will, O my God, is my delight,
and your law is within my heart!"
10 I announced your justice in the vast assembly;
I did not restrain my lips, as you, O Lord, know.
11 Your justice I kept not hid within my heart;
your faithfulness and your salvation I have spoken of;
I have made no secret of your kindness and your truth
in the vast assembly.

I B

12 Withhold not, O Lord, your compassion from me;
may your kindness and your truth ever preserve me.
13 For all about me are evils beyond reckoning;
my sins so overcome me that I cannot see;
They are more numerous than the hairs of my head,
and my heart fails me.

II

14 Deign, O Lord, to rescue me; q
O Lord, make haste to help me.
15 Let all be put to shame and confusion who seek to snatch away my life.
Let them be turned back in disgrace who desire my ruin.
16 Let them be dismayed in their shame who say to me, "Aha, aha!"
17 But may all who seek you exult and be glad in you,
And may those who love your salvation say ever, "The Lord be glorified."

q Ps 69 (70), 2-6.—r Ps 54 (55), 14f; Jn 13, 18.

Ps 40 (41): After speaking in general terms about the merciful man obtaining God's mercy (2-4), the psalmist recounts how he had once prayed for that mercy when, in his sickness, he was reviled and persecuted even by his friends (5-11); therefore he now acknowledges with gratitude that God has heard his prayer (12-13).

40, 3: In the form of a prayer, "May the Lord keep," etc., this verse is employed in the liturgy of the Church as an invocation for the pope.

40, 10: These words were cited by our Lord at the Last Supper in regard to Judas, the perfect fullfilment of this type of treacherous friend. Cf Jn 13, 18.

40, 14: Doxology closing the First Book of the Psalter. It is not part of the psalm to which it is appended.

18 Though I am afflicted and poor,
yet the Lord thinks of me.
You are my help and my deliverer;
O my God, hold not back!

PSALM 40 (41)*

Thanksgiving after Sickness

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2 Happy is he who has regard for the lowly and the poor;
in the day of misfortune the Lord will deliver him.
3 The Lord will keep and preserve him;*
he will make him happy on the earth,
and not give him over to the will of his enemies.
4 The Lord will help him on his sickbed,
he will take away all his ailment when he is ill.

II

5 Once I said, "O Lord, have pity on me;
heal me, though I have sinned against you.
6 My enemies say the worst of me:
'When will he die and his name perish?'
7 When one comes to see me, he speaks without sincerity;
his heart stores up malice;
when he leaves he gives voice to it outside.
8 All my foes whisper together against me;
against me they imagine the worst:
9 'A malignant disease fills his frame';
and 'Now that he lies ill, he will not rise again.'
10 Even my friend who had my trust and partook of my bread, has raised his heel against me.r* (III) 11 But you, O Lord, have pity on me, and raise me up, that I may repay them."
12 That you love me I know by this,
that my enemy does not triumph over me, 13 But because of my integrity you sustain me
and let me stand before you forever.

* * *

14 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel,*
from all eternity and forever. Amen. Amen.

PSALM 41 (42)*
Desire for God and His Temple

[1] For the leader. A maskil of the sons of Core.

I

[2] As the hind longs for the running waters,
so my soul longs for you, O God.*
[3] Athirst is my soul for God, the living God.
When shall I go and behold the face of God?*
[4] My tears are my food day and night,
as they say to me day after day,
"Where is your God?"*
[5] Those times I recall,
now that I pour out my soul within me,
When I went with the throng
and led them in procession to the house of God, Amid loud cries of joy and thanksgiving,
with the multitude keeping festival.
[6] Why are you so downcast, O my soul?
Why do you sigh within me?
Hope in God! For I shall again be thanking him,
in the presence of my savior and my God.

II

[7] Within me my soul is downcast;
so will I remember you
From the land of the Jordan* and of Hermon, from Mount Misar.
[8] Deep calls unto deep*
in the roar of your cataracts;
All your breakers and your billows
pass over me.
[9] By day the Lord bestows his grace,
and at night I have his song,
a prayer to my living God.*
[10] I sing to God, my Rock:
"Why do you forget me?
Why must I go about in mourning,
with the enemy oppressing me?"
[11] It crushes my bones that my foes mock me,
as they say to me day after day,
"Where is your God?"
[12] Why are you so downcast, O my soul?
Why do you sigh within me?
Hope in God! For I shall again be thanking him,
in the presence of my savior and my God.

PSALM 42 (43)

III

[1] Do me justice, O God, and fight my fight against a faithless people;
from the deceitful and impious man rescue me.
[2] For you, O God, are my strength.
Why do you keep me so far away?
Why must I go about in mourning,
with the enemy oppressing me?
[3] Send forth your light and your fidelity;
they shall lead me on
And bring me to your holy mountain,
to your dwelling-place.
[4] Then will I go in to the altar of God,*
the God of my gladness and joy;
Then will I give you thanks upon the harp,
O God, my God!
[5] Why are you so downcast, O my soul?
Why do you sigh within me?
Hope in God! For I shall again be thanking him,
in the presence of my savior and my God.

Ps 41 (42): Psalms 41-42 (42-43) represent respectively two thirds and one third of what was originally a single psalm. Each of the three parts ends in an identical refrain (41, 6. 12; 42, 5). The psalmist is in exile north of Palestine, far from Jerusalem. Homesick for the solemn services of the temple, he keeps up his courage by an ardent hope and an unshaken trust in God. The high lyrical style of this psalm makes it one of the finest poems in the Bible.

41, 2: O God: in the Second Book of the Psalms the proper name for God, Yahweh, "The Lord," was changed in almost all places by some early scribe to read, Elohim, "God." Thus we have the strange phrase, "O God, my God," instead of the original, "O Lord, my God," e.g., in Ps 42 (43), 4.

41, 3: Go and behold the face of God: a Hebrew idiom meaning, "Visit the temple." Cf Ex 23, 17.

41, 4: Where is your God?: God gives no evidence of coming to his aid.

41, 8: Deep calls unto deep: the re-echoing roar of stormy waters. The figure of affliction as a raging sea is common. Cf Pss 17 (18), 5; 68 (69), 2ff. 15f; Jon 2, 3-6. Here, however, the thought may also have been suggested by the cataracts of the upper Jordan.

41, 9: My living God: literally, "the God of my life"; hence some understand it as, "the God who gives me life." Perhaps Ps 41 (42), 3 also was originally, "the God of my life." Ps 42 (43), 4.

42, 4: To the altar of God: because of these words the Church uses Ps 42 (43) at the beginning of Holy Mass.

PSALM 43 (44)*

Israel's Past Glory and Present Need

[1] For the leader. A maskil of the sons of Core.

I

[2] O God, our ears have heard,
our fathers have declared to us,[s]
The deeds you did in their days,
in days of old:
[3] How with your own hand you rooted out the nations and planted them; [t]
you smashed the peoples, but for them you made room.
[4] For not with their own sword did they conquer the land,
nor did their own arm make them
victorious,
But it was your arm and your right hand
and the light of your countenance,
in your love for them.
[5] You are my king and my God,
who bestowed victories on Jacob.
[6] Our foes through you we struck down;
through your name we trampled
down our adversaries.
[7] For not in my bow did I trust,
nor did my sword save me;
[8] But you saved us from our foes,
and those who hated us you put to shame.
[9] In God we gloried day by day;
your name we praised always.

II

[10] Yet now you have cast us off and put us in disgrace,
and you go not forth with our armies.
[11] You have let us be driven back by our foes;
those who hated us plundered us at will,
[12] You marked us out as sheep to be slaughtered;
among the nations you scattered us.[u] [13] You sold your people for no great price;
you made no profit from the sale of
them.
[14] You made us the reproach of our neighbors,
the mockery and the scorn of those around us.[v]
[15] You made us a byword among the nations,
a laughingstock among the peoples.
[16] All the day my disgrace is before me,
and shame covers my face [17] At the voice of him who mocks and blasphemes,
and in the presence of the enemy
and the avenger.

III

[18] All this has come upon us, though we have not forgotten you,
nor have we been disloyal to your covenant;
[19] Our hearts have not shrunk back, nor our steps turned aside from your path,
[20] Though you thrust us down into a place of misery
and covered us over with darkness.
[21] If we had forgotten the name of our God
and stretched out our hands to a strange god,
[22] Would not God have discovered this?
For he knows the secrets of the heart.
[23] Yet for your sake we are being slain
all the day;
we are looked upon as sheep to be slaughtered.[w]

IV

[24] Awake! Why are you asleep, O Lord?
Arise! Cast us not off forever!
[25] Why do you hide your face, forgetting our woe and our oppression?
[26] For our souls are bowed down to the dust,
our bodies are pressed to the earth.
[27] Arise, help us!
Redeem us for your kindness' sake.

s Ps 77 (78), 3.—t Ps 79 (80), 9.—u Lv 26, 33; Dt 4, 27.—v Pss 78 (79), 4; 79 (80), 7.—w Rom 8, 36.

Ps 43 (44): A supplication of the community, reminding God of His past favors to Israel (2-9) in contrast to the present sad state of affairs, when the nation suffers from military defeat (10-17) and seems abandoned by Him (18-23); therefore the people cry out to Him to come to their aid (24-27). The historical circumstances of the psalm cannot be determined with certainty. The occasion may have been the invasion of the Assyrians under Sennacherib at the time of King Ezechias (4 Kgs 18-19), or the calamities which followed on the defeat of King Josias and the invasion of the Babylonians (4 Kgs 23, 29—25, 26), or the time of national degradation during the Persian period, the fifth to the fourth century B.C. But there are no compelling reasons to put this psalm as late as the Machabean times.

PSALM 44 (45)*

Nuptial Ode for the Messianic King

[1] For the leader; according to "Lilies." A maskil of the sons of Core. A love song.

I

[2] My heart overflows with a goodly theme;
as I sing my ode to the king,
my tongue is nimble as the pen of a skillful scribe.

II

[3] Fairer in beauty are you than the sons of men;*
grace is poured out upon your lips;
thus God has blessed you forever.
[4] Gird your sword upon your thigh, O mighty one!
In your splendor and your majesty ride on triumphant [5] In the cause of truth and for the sake of justice;
and may your right hand show you wondrous deeds.
[6] Your arrows are sharp; peoples are subject to you;
the king's enemies lose heart.
[7] Your throne, O God,* stands forever and ever; x
a tempered rod is your royal scepter.
[8] You love justice and hate wickedness;
therefore God, your God, has anointed you with the oil of gladness above your fellow kings.
[9] With myrrh and aloes and cassia your robes are fragrant;
from ivory palaces string music brings you joy.
[10] The daughters of kings come to meet you;
the queen takes her place at your right hand in gold of Ophir.*

III

[11] Hear, O daughter, and see; turn your ear, forget your people and your father's house.
[12] So shall the king desire your beauty;
for he is your lord, and you must worship him.*
[13] And the city of Tyre is here with gifts;
the rich among the people seek your favor.*
[14] All glorious is the king's daughter as she enters;
her raiment is threaded with spun gold.
[15] In embroidered apparel she is borne in to the king;
behind her the virgins of her train are brought to you.
[16] They are borne in with gladness and joy;
they enter the palace of the king.

IV

[17] The place of your fathers your sons shall have;
you shall make them princes through all the land.
[18] I will make your name memorable through all generations;
therefore shall nations praise you forever and ever.

PSALM 45 (46)*

God the Refuge of Israel

[1] For the leader. A song of the sons of Core; according to "Virgins."

I

[2] God is our refuge and our strength,
an ever-present help in distress.
[3] Therefore we fear not, though the earth be shaken.*
and mountains plunge into the depths of the sea;

x 7f: Heb 1, 8f.

Ps 44 (45): After a dedicatory prologue (2), the psalmist sings the praises of the royal bridegroom (3-10) and his bride (11f); he then describes the wedding procession (13-16) and wishes the king illustrious offspring (17f). The occasion of this epithalamium may have been the marriage of some prince of the Davidic dynasty, perhaps Solomon, with a foreign princess who was apparently from Tyre. But Catholic tradition, in keeping with the inspired interpretation given in Heb 1, 8f, has always understood this psalm as referring, at least in a typical sense, to Christ and His bride, the Church. Cf Eph 5, 25ff.

44, 3: Fairer . . . than the sons of men: i.e., than other men; or, "Fairest among the sons of men."

44, 7: Your throne, O God: the Hebrew king was called Elohim, "God," not in the polytheistic sense common among the ancient pagans, but as meaning "godlike," or, "taking the place of God." Cf Pss 57 (58), 2; 81 (82), 1. 6. Of Christ alone can this passage be understood in its full literal sense. Some, however, amend the text to read, "Your throne is the throne of God." Cf 1 Par 29, 23, where Solomon's throne is referred to as "the throne of the Lord."

44, 10: Ophir: a region on the coast of southern Arabia or eastern Africa, famous for its gold. Cf 3 Kgs 9, 28; 10, 11. 22; Jb 22, 24.

44, 12: Worship him: pay him homage and be submissive to him.

44, 13: Your favor: in the current Hebrew text this is read as addressed to the bride, but it should probably be understood as referring to the king. The you in v 15 certainly signifies the king.

Ps 45 (46): A hymn of victory whose dominant note is the refrain, The Lord of hosts is with us. The first strophe (2-4) sings of Israel's unshaken trust in the Lord; the second (5-8), of God's protection over Sion; the third (9-12), of His victory over war itself.

45, 3f: Figurative language for social and political upheavals.

4 Though its waters rage and foam
and the mountains quake at its surging.
The Lord of hosts is with us;
our stronghold is the God of Jacob.

II

5 There is a stream* whose runlets gladden the city of God,
the holy dwelling of the Most High.
6 God is in its midst; it shall not be disturbed;
God will help it at the break of dawn.
7 Though nations are in turmoil, kingdoms totter,
his voice resounds, the earth melts away,
8 The Lord of hosts is with us;
our stronghold is the God of Jacob.

III

9 Come! behold the deeds of the Lord,
the astounding things he has wrought on earth:
10 He has stopped wars to the end of the earth:
the bow he breaks; he splinters the spears;
he burns the shields with fire.
11 Desist! and confess that I am God,
exalted among the nations, exalted upon the earth.
12 The Lord of hosts is with us;
our stronghold is the God of Jacob.

45, 5: There is a stream: merely a symbol of divine favors. Jerusalem is not situated on a river, and its natural water supply is very meager.

Ps 46 (47): A hymn calling on all the nations of the earth to acknowledge the God of Israel as the only true God (2-5); when the Lord manifests Himself as King of all (6f), the whole earth will proclaim His dominion (8-10). This prophecy finds its fulfillment only in the universal kingship of Christ.

46, 10: With the people of the God of Abraham: perhaps, with the ancient versions, to be read simply, "With the God of Abraham." By the princes of the peoples and the guardians of the earth are probably meant the angelic spirits who watch over the various nations. Cf Dt 32, 8-9; Dn 10, 13.

Ps. 47 (48): A hymn of thanksgiving sung in the temple after Jerusalem had successfully withstood an attack launched by a league of hostile kings. It is uncertain which of the many attacks on Jerusalem is referred to here. This magnificent paean of triumph first praises God as Israel's true bulwark (2-4); then, briefly recounting how the enemies' attack was repulsed (5-8), the psalmist proclaims the Lord as the author of this great victory (9-12); finally, the people are invited to gaze with wonder on the strong fortifications of the city (13-15).

47, 3: "The recesses of the North": in Palestine and Syria, a traditional name for the earthly abode of God. Cf Is 14, 13.

PSALM 46 (47)*

The Lord the King of All Nations

1 For the leader. A psalm of the sons of Core.

I

2 All you peoples, clap your hands,
shout to God with cries of gladness,
3 For the Lord, the Most High, the awesome,
is the great king over all the earth.
4 He brings peoples under us;
nations under our feet.
5 He chooses for us our inheritance,
the glory of Jacob, whom he loves.

II

6 God mounts his throne amid shouts of joy;
the Lord, amid trumpet blasts.
7 Sing praise to God, sing praise;
sing praise to our king, sing praise.

III

8 For king of all the earth is God;
sing hymns of praise.
9 God reigns over the nations,
God sits upon his holy throne.
10 The princes of the peoples are gathered together with the people of the God of Abraham.*
For God's are the guardians of the earth;
he is supreme.

PSALM 47 (48)*

Thanksgiving for Jerusalem's Deliverance

1 A psalm of the sons of Core; a song.

I

2 Great is the Lord and wholly to be praised
in the city of our God.
His holy mountain, 3 fairest of heights,
is the joy of all the earth;
Mount Sion, "the recesses of the north,"*
is the city of the great King.
4 God is with her castles;
renowned is he as a stronghold.

II

5 For lo! the kings assemble,
they come on together;
6 They also see, and at once are stunned,
terrified, routed;
7 Quaking seizes them there;
anguish, like a woman's in labor,

8 As though a wind from the east
were shattering ships of Tharsis.*

III

9 As we had heard,* so have we seen in the city of the Lord of hosts,
In the city of our God;
God makes it firm forever.
10 O God, we ponder your kindness
within your temple.
11 As your name, O God, so also your praise reaches to the ends of the earth.
Of justice your right hand is full;
12 let Mount Sion be glad,
Let the cities of Juda rejoice,
because of your judgments.

IV

13 Go about Sion, make the round;
count her towers.
14 Consider her ramparts,
examine her castles,
That you may tell a future generation
15 that such is God,
Our God forever and ever;
he will guide us.*

PSALM 48 (49)*

The Vanity of Worldly Riches

1 For the leader. A psalm of the sons of Core.

2 Hear this, all you peoples;
hearken, all who dwell in the world,
3 Of lowly birth or high degree,
rich and poor alike.
4 My mouth shall speak wisdom;
prudence shall be the utterance of my heart.
5 My ear is intent upon a proverb; [y]
I will set forth my riddle* to the music of the harp.

I

6 Why should I fear in evil days
when my wicked ensnarers ring me round?
7 They trust in their wealth;
the abundance of their riches is their boast.
8 Yet in no way can a man redeem himself,*
or pay his own ransom to God;
9 Too high is the price to redeem one's life; he would never have enough
10 to remain alive always and not see destruction.
11 For he can see that wise men die,
and likewise the senseless and the stupid pass away,[z]
leaving to others their wealth.
12 Tombs are their homes forever,
their dwellings through all generations,
though they have called lands by their names.
13 Thus man, for all his splendor,
does not abide;
he resembles the beasts that perish.

II

14 This is the way of those whose trust is folly,
the end of those contented with their lot:
15 Like sheep they are herded into the nether world;
death is their shepherd, and the upright rule over them.
Quickly their form is consumed;
the nether world is their palace.
16 But God will redeem me from the power of the nether world
by receiving me.[a]

III

17 Fear not when a man grows rich,
when the wealth of his house becomes great, 18 For when he dies, he shall take none of it;
his wealth shall not follow him down.[b]
19 Though in his lifetime he counted himself blessed,
"They will praise you for doing well for yourself,"

y Ps 77 (78), 2; Mt 13, 35.—z Eccl 2, 14. 16.—a Pss 85 (86), 13; 102 (103), 4; 114 (116 A), 8.—b Eccl 5, 15f; Sir 11, 19f.

47, 8: Ships of Tharsis: large ocean-going vessels, named after the distant land or port of Tharsis, probably ancient Tartessus in southern Spain, although other identifications have been proposed. Cf Is 2, 16; 60, 9; Jon 1, 3. Here the phrase is merely part of the figure and does not imply that the hostile kings came by boat.

47, 9: As we had heard of the wonders that God did in the days of our forefathers, so have we seen similar wonders now with our own eyes.

47, 15: He will guide us: "through the ages" should perhaps be added, with some ancient sources.

Ps 48 (49): A sapiential psalm, treating of the problem as to why the wicked prosper. Here the answer is that wealth cannot save anyone from death, but for the good there is the hope of blessedness after death. Cf Pss 36 (37); 72 (73). After inviting all to listen to his wise words (2-5), the psalmist teaches that we should not envy the unjust rich, who must all die and leave their wealth behind (6-13. 17-21); they shall be brought to nought, but God will save the just (14-16).

48, 5: My riddle: this enigma, the problem of evil.

48, 8f: No man is rich enough to buy God off in order to save himself from death.

20 He shall join the circle of his forebears who shall never more see light.
21 Man, for all his splendor, if he have not prudence, resembles the beasts that perish.

PSALM 49 (50) *

The Acceptable Sacrifice

1 A psalm of Asaph.

I

God the Lord* has spoken and summoned the earth,
from the rising of the sun to its setting.
2 From Sion, perfect in beauty,
God shines forth.
3 May our God come and not be deaf to us!
Before him is a devouring fire;
around him is a raging storm.[c]
4 He summons the heavens from above, and the earth, to the trial of his people: [d] 5 "Gather my faithful ones before me,
those who have made a covenant with me by sacrifice."
6 And the heavens proclaim his justice;
for God himself is the judge.

II

7 "Hear, my people, and I will speak;
Israel, I will testify against you;
God, your God, am I.[e]
8 Not for your sacrifices do I rebuke you, for your holocausts are before me always.
9 I take from your house no bullock,
no goats out of your fold.
10 For mine are all the animals of the forests,
beasts by the thousand on my mountains.
11 I know all the birds of the air,
and whatever stirs in the plains, belongs to me.
12 If I were hungry, I should not tell you,
for mine are the world and its fullness.[f] 13 Do I eat the flesh of strong bulls, or is the blood of goats my drink?
14 Offer to God praise as your sacrifice and fulfill your vows to the Most High;
15 Then call upon me in time of distress;
I will rescue you, and you shall glorify me."

III

16 But to the wicked man God says:
"Why do you recite my statutes,
and profess my covenant with your mouth, 17 Though you hate discipline
and cast my words behind you?
18 When you see a thief, you keep pace with him,
and with adulterers you throw in your lot.
19 To your mouth you give free rein for evil,
you harness your tongue to deceit.
20 You sit speaking against your brother;
against your mother's son you spread rumors.
21 When you do these things, shall I be deaf to it?
Or think you that I am like yourself?*
I will correct you by drawing them up before your eyes.

IV

22 "Consider this, you who forget God, lest I rend you and there be no one to rescue you.
23 He that offers praise as a sacrifice glorifies me;
and to him that goes the right way I will show the salvation of God."

c Ex 19, 16-18; Dt 5, 22f.—d Dt 4, 26; 31, 28; 32, 1.—e Ex 20, 2.—f Ps 23 (24), 1.—g 2 Kgs 12, 1.

Ps 49 (50): Like the prophets of old, the psalmist shows the worthlessness of external worship when it is divorced from true morality. God calls a solemn assembly (1-6), in which He tells His people He does not need their liturgical sacrifices but wants of them the true sacrifice of prayer (7-15); He then rebukes the hypocritical sinner (16-21), for without true worship, joined with true morality, there can be no salvation (22f).

49, 1: God the Lord: the Hebrew text has two synonyms for God (El and Elohim) before the word Yahweh (the Lord). A translation cannot adequately render this.

49, 21: That I am like yourself: perhaps the original was, "that I, the Lord, am like yourself."

Ps 50 (51): The fourth and most famous of the Penitential Psalms. The psalmist begs pardon for his sins (3f), which he sincerely confesses (5-8); he prays to be restored to grace and purity (9-14); in return, he will make God's mercy known to others and will offer Him the sacrifice of a contrite heart (15-19). An added strophe asks for the restoration of Jerusalem (20f).

PSALM 50 (51) *

The Miserere: Prayer of Repentance

1 For the leader. A psalm of David, 2 when Nathan the prophet came to him after his sin with Bethsabee.[g]

A

3 Have mercy on me, O God, in your goodness;

in the greatness of your compassion
wipe out my offense.
4 Thoroughly wash me from my guilt
and of my sin cleanse me.

B

I

5 For I acknowledge my offense,
and my sin is before me always:
6 "Against you only have I sinned,*
and done what is evil in your sight"—
That you may be justified in your sentence,
vindicated when you condemn.[h]
7 Indeed, in guilt was I born,*
and in sin my mother conceived me;[i] 8 Behold, you are pleased with sincerity of heart,
and in my inmost being you teach me wisdom.

II

9 Cleanse me of sin with hyssop,* that I may be purified;
wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.
10 Let me hear the sounds of joy and gladness;
the bones you have crushed shall rejoice.
11 Turn away your face from my sins,
and blot out all my guilt.

III

12 A clean heart create for me, O God,
and a steadfast spirit renew within me.
13 Cast me not out from your presence,
and your holy spirit take not from me.
14 Give me back the joy of your salvation,
and a willing spirit sustain in me.

IV

15 I will teach transgressors your ways,
and sinners shall return to you.
16 Free me from blood guilt,* O God, my saving God;
then my tongue shall revel in your justice.
17 O Lord, open my lips,
and my mouth shall proclaim your praise.
18 For you are not pleased with sacrifices;*
should I offer a holocaust, you would not accept it.[j] 19 My sacrifice, O God, is a contrite spirit;
a heart contrite and humbled, O God, you will not spurn.

C

20 Be bountiful, O Lord, to Sion in your kindness*
by rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem;
21 Then shall you be pleased with due sacrifices,
burnt offerings and holocausts;
then shall they offer up bullocks on your altar.

PSALM 51 (52)*

The Deceitful Tongue

1 For the leader. A maskil of David, 2 when Doeg the Edomite went and told Saul, "David went to the house of Ahimelech."

I

3 Why do you glory in evil,
you champion of infamy?
All the day 4 you plot harm;
your tongue is like a sharpened razor, you practiced deceiver!
5 You love evil rather than good,
falsehood rather than honest speech.
6 You love all that means ruin,
you of the deceitful tongue!

II

7 God himself shall demolish you;
forever he shall break you;
He shall pluck you from your tent,
and uproot you from the land of the living.

h Rom 3, 4.—i Jb 14, 4; 15, 14.—j Pss 39 (40), 7; 49 (50), 8-13.

50, 6: Against you only have I sinned: although sin may also be an injustice against a fellow man, yet the very essence of sin consists in its being an offense against God. That you may be justified: this refers to v 5 and gives the reason why the psalmist confesses his sins: when men see God punishing him, they will know that he is receiving his deserts.

50, 7: The penitent offers the fact of his innate sinfulness partly as a mitigating circumstance and partly as a humble acknowledgment of his profound corruption. Catholic tradition sees in this passage a foreshadowing of the basic Christian doctrine of original sin, which was not clearly revealed before the time of Christ. Cf Rom 5, 12-19; Eph 2, 3.

50, 9: Hyssop: a small bush whose many woody twigs made a natural sprinkler. It was prescribed in the Mosaic Law as an instrument for scattering sacrificial blood or lustral water on persons to be ritually cleansed. Cf Ex 12, 22; Lv 14, 4; Nm 19, 18. These ceremonies were made symbols of purification; here the psalmist prays that God may effectively "un-sin" him, as the Hebrew literally means.

50, 16: Blood guilt: the guilt of murder. This is in keeping with the traditional ascription of this psalm to David. Cf 2 Kgs 11, 6f; 12, 9.

50, 18: Not pleased with sacrifices: the mere offering of ritual sacrifice apart from good dispositions is not acceptable to God. Cf Ps 49 (50). Others explain that the Mosaic Law prescribes no sacrifice to expiate sins of adultery and murder, such as David was guilty of.

50, 20f: These two verses were added to the psalm some time after the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonians.

Ps 51 (52): The psalmist inveighs against his deceitful enemy (3-6), foretelling the divine punishment in store for him (7) when God avenges the just (8-11).

III

8 The just shall look on with awe;
then they shall laugh at him:
9 "This is the man who made not
God the source of his strength,
But put his trust in his great wealth,
and his strength in harmful plots."
10 But I, like a green olive tree
in the house of God,*
Trust in the kindness of God
forever and ever.
11 I will thank you always for what you have done,
and proclaim the goodness of your name
before your faithful ones.

PSALM 52 (53)*

Lament over Widespread Corruption

1 For the leader; according to Mahalath. A maskil of David.

I

2 The fool says in his heart,[k]
"There is no God."
Such are corrupt; they do abominable deeds;
there is not one who does good.
3 God looks down from heaven upon the children of men to see if there be one who is wise and seeks God.
4 All alike have gone astray; they have become perverse;
there is not one who does good, not even one.[l]

II

5 Will all these evildoers never learn,
they who eat up my people just as they eat bread,
who call not upon God?
6 There they were in great fear,
where no fear was,
For God has scattered the bones of your besiegers;*
they are put to shame, because God has rejected them.

III

7 Oh, that out of Sion would come the salvation of Israel!
When God restores the well-being of his people,
then shall Jacob exult and Israel be glad.

PSALM 53 (54)*

Confident Prayer in Great Peril

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments. A maskil of David, 2 when the Ziphites went and said to Saul, "David is hiding among us." [m]

I

3 O God, by your name* save me,
and by your might defend my cause.
4 O God, hear my prayer;
hearken to the words of my mouth.
5 For háughty men have risen up against me,
and fierce men seek my life;
they set not God before their eyes.

II

6 Behold, God is my helper;
the Lord sustains my life.
7 Turn back the evil upon my foes;
in your faithfulness destroy them.
8 Freely will I offer you sacrifice;
I will praise your name, O Lord, for its goodness, 9 Because from all distress you have rescued me,
and my eyes look down upon my enemies.

PSALM 54 (55)*

Complaint against Enemies and a Disloyal Companion

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments. A maskil of David.

I

2 Hearken, O God, to my prayer;
turn not away from my pleading;
3 give heed to me, and answer me.
I rock with grief, and am troubled
4 at the voice of the enemy and the clamor of the wicked.
For they bring down evil upon me,
and with fury they persecute me.
5 My heart quakes within me;
the terror of death has fallen upon me.

k 2-6: Ps 13 (14), 1-5.—l Rom 3, 12.—m 1 Kgs 23, 19f; 26, 1.

51, 10: The just will flourish as unshaken in the house of God as a green olive tree which is well rooted in the soil. The words do not imply that olive trees grew in the courts of the temple. Cf Pss 91 (92), 14; 127 (128), 3.

Ps 52 (53): With a few slight differences this is the same as Ps 13 (14).

52, 6: God has scattered the bones of your besiegers: a reference, perhaps, to the annihilation of Sennacherib's army before the walls of Jerusalem. Cf 4 Kgs 19, 35.

Ps 53 (54): The psalmist implores God's assistance against foes that seek his life (3-5) and, confident of this aid, promises a sacrifice of thanksgiving (6-9).

53, 3: By your name: through the power of the Lord. God's name is His nature as revealed to man; hence this term is frequently used as practically synonymous with God Himself, His majesty, power, etc.

Ps 54 (55): Vividly describing his fear and his longing to flee (2-9), the psalmist bewails the disorders about him, especially the treachery of a former friend (10-15); full of confidence in God, he prays for the overthrow of the wicked and his own deliverance (16-24).

6 Fear and trembling come upon me.
and horror overwhelms me,
7 And I say, "Had I but wings like a dove,
I would fly away and be at rest.
8 Far away I would flee;
I would lodge in the wilderness.
9 I would hasten to find shelter
from the violent storm and the tempest."

II

10 Engulf them, O Lord; divide their counsels,*
for in the city I see violence and strife;
11 day and night they prowl about upon its walls.
Evil and mischief are in its midst;
12 [treachery is in its midst;*]
oppression and fraud never depart from its streets.
13 If an enemy had reviled me,
I could have borne it;
If he who hates me had vaunted himself against me,
I might have hidden from him.
14 But you, my other self,
my companion and my bosom friend!
15 You, whose comradeship I enjoyed;
at whose side I walked in procession in the house of God!

III

16 Let death surprise them;
let them go down alive to the nether world,*
for evil is in their dwellings, in their very midst.
17 But I will call upon God,
and the Lord will save me.
18 In the evening, and at dawn, and at noon,
I will grieve and moan,
and he will hear my voice.
19 He will give me freedom and peace
from those who war against me,
for many there are who oppose me.
20 God will hear me and will humble them
from his eternal throne;
For improvement is not in them,
nor do they fear God.
21 Each one lays hands on his associates,
and violates his pact.
22 Softer than butter is his speech,
but war is in his heart;
His words are smoother than oil,
but they are drawn swords.
23 Cast your care upon the Lord,
and he will support you; [n]
never will he permit the just man to be disturbed.
24 And you, O God, will bring them down into the pit of destruction;
Men of blood and deceit shall not live out half their days.
But I trust in you, O Lord.

PSALM 55 (56)*

Trust in God, the Helper in Need

1 For the leader; according to Jonath . . . rehokim. A miktam of David, when the Philistines held him in Geth.[o]

I

2 Have pity on me, O God, for men trample upon me;
all the day they press their attack against me.
3 My adversaries trample upon me all the day;
yes, many fight against me.
O Most High, 4 when I begin to fear,
in you will I trust.
5 In God, in whose promise I glory,
in God I trust without fear;
what can flesh do against me?

II

6 All the day they molest me in my efforts;
their every thought is of evil against me.
7 They gather together in hiding,
they watch my steps.
As they have waited for my life,
8 because of their wickedness keep them in view:
in your wrath bring down the peoples, O God.
9 My wanderings you have counted;
my tears are stored in your flask;*
are they not recorded in your book?
10 Then do my enemies turn back,

n 1 Pt 5, 7.—o 1 Kgs 21, 10.

54, 10: Divide their counsels: some see here an allusion to the story of the tower of Babel. Cf Gn 11, 1-9.

54, 12: Treachery is in its midst: apparently this is merely a variant reading of the preceding line.

54, 16: Go down alive to the nether world: die a sudden death. Perhaps there is an allusion here to the death of Core and his fellow rebels. Cf Nm 16, 31ff.

Ps 55 (56): The psalmist prays for help against his enemies (2-4) and bewails their machinations (6-10); in a twice-repeated refrain (5. 11) he expresses his confidence in God, to whom he vows a thanksgiving sacrifice (13).

55, 9: My tears are stored in your flask: a quaint figure to express that God knows the psalmist's weeping and will requite it, for He is carefully collecting all his tears in a bottle.

when I call upon you;
now I know that God is with me.
11 In God, in whose promise I glory,
12 in God I trust without fear;
what can flesh do against me?

III

13 I am bound, O God, by vows to you;
your thank offerings I will fulfill.[p] 14 For you have rescued me from death,
my feet, too, from stumbling;
that I may walk before God in the light of the living.

PSALM 56 (57)*

Confident Prayer for Deliverance

1 For the leader. (Do not destroy!*) A miktam of David, when he fled away from Saul into the cave.[q]

I

2 Have pity on me, O God; have pity on me,
for in you I take refuge.
In the shadow of your wings I take refuge,
till harm pass by.
3 I call to God the Most High,
to God, my benefactor.
4 May he send from heaven and save me;
may he make those a reproach who trample upon me;
may God send his kindness and his faithfulness.
5 I lie prostrate in the midst of lions which devour men;
Their teeth are spears and arrows,
their tongue is a sharp sword.
6 Be exalted above the heavens, O God;
above all the earth be your glory!

II

7 They have prepared a net for my feet;
they have bowed me down;
They have dug a pit before me,
but they fall into it.
8 My heart is steadfast, O God; my heart is steadfast;*
I will sing and chant praise.
9 Awake, O my soul; awake, lyre and harp!
I will wake the dawn.*
10 I will give thanks to you among the peoples, O Lord,
I will chant your praise among the nations,
11 For your kindness towers to the heavens,
and your faithfulness to the skies.
12 Be exalted above the heavens, O God;
above all the earth be your glory!

PSALM 57 (58)*

Against Unjust Judges

1 For the leader. (Do not destroy!) A miktam of David.

I

2 Do you indeed like gods* pronounce justice
and judge fairly, you men of rank?
3 Nay, you willingly commit crimes;
on earth you look to the fruits of extortion.
4 From the womb the wicked are perverted;
astray from birth have the liars gone.
5 Theirs is poison like a serpent's,
like that of a stubborn snake that stops its ears,*
6 That it may not hear the voice of enchanters
casting cunning spells.

II

7 O God, smash their teeth in their mouths;
the jaw-teeth of the lions, break, O Lord!
8 Let them vanish like water flowing off;
when they draw the bow, let their arrows be headless shafts.
9 Let them dissolve like a melting snail,*

p Ps 48 (49), 16.—q 1 Kgs 22, 1; 24, 1-3; Ps 141 (142), 1.

Ps 56 (57): Each of the two equal strophes contains a prayer for help, accompanied by joyful trust in God (2-5. 7-11), and each strophe ends with the same refrain to God's glory (6. 12).

56, 1: Do not destroy: here and in the next two psalms, as well as in Ps 74 (75), this is probably a mere annotation by some early scribe who wished to keep his copy from being discarded.

56, 8-12: With a few small variations these verses appear again at the beginning of Ps 107 (108).

56, 9: I will wake the dawn: by a bold figure of speech the psalmist imagines that the sound he makes at night with his singing and music will arouse a new day to life.

Ps 57 (58): The psalmist rebukes certain unjust judges (2-6), and invokes God's punishment upon them (7-12).

57, 2: Like gods: literally: "O gods!" Here, as also in Ps 81 (82), judges are called "gods" in the sense of "possessing god-like power," or of "taking God's place in pronouncing judgment." See note on Ps 44 (45), 7.

57 5f: Two figures derived from snake life are here skillfully combined: the harm done by these wicked judges is as deadly as a serpent's venom, and these men are as unresponsive to God's teachings as certain stubborn snakes are to the music of the snake charmer.

57, 9: Like a melting snail: the Hebrew is not entirely certain, but if the text is correct, it would seem that the ancients thought a snail "melted" or gradually wasted away to nothing—an idea derived, perhaps, from the sight of the trail of slime a snail leaves behind as it moves along and from the fact that dead snails are soon but empty shells.

like an untimely birth that never sees the sun.
10 Unexpectedly, like a thorn-bush,
or like thistles, let the whirlwind carry them away.*
11 The just man shall be glad when he sees vengeance;
he shall bathe his feet in the blood of the wicked.*
12 And men shall say, "Truly there is a reward for the just;
truly there is a God who is judge on earth!"

PSALM 58 (59)*

Against Bloodthirsty Enemies

1 For the leader. (Do not destroy!) A miktam of David when Saul sent men to watch his house and put him to death.r

I

2 Rescue me from my enemies, O my God;
from my adversaries defend me.
3 Rescue me from evildoers;
from bloodthirsty men save me.
4 For behold, they lie in wait for my life;
mighty men come together against me.
Not for any offense or sin of mine, O Lord;
5 for no guilt of mine they hurry to take up arms.
Rouse yourself to see it, and aid me,
6 for you are the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel.
Arise, punish all the nations;
have no pity on any worthless traitors.

7 Each evening they return, they snarl like dogs
and prowl about the city.
8 Though they bay with their mouths,
and blasphemies are on their lips—
"Who is there to listen?"*— 9 You, O Lord, laugh at them;
you deride all the nations.
10 O my strength! for you I watch;
for you, O God, are my stronghold,
11 my gracious God!

II

May God come to my aid;
may he show me the fall of my foes.
12 O God, slay them, lest they beguile my people;
shake them by your power, and bring them down,
O Lord our shield!
13 By the sin of their mouths and the word of their lips
let them be caught in their arrogance,
for the lies they have told under oath.
14 Consume them in wrath; consume, till they are no more;
that men may know that God is the ruler of Jacob,
yes, to the ends of the earth.

15 Each evening they return, they snarl like dogs
and prowl about the city;
16 They wander about as scavengers;
if they are not filled, they howl.
17 But I will sing of your strength and revel at dawn in your kindness;
You have been my stronghold,
my refuge in the day of distress.
18 O my strength! your praise will I sing;
for you, O God, are my stronghold,
my gracious God!

PSALM 59 (60)*

Prayer after Defeat in Battle

1 For the leader; according to "The Lily of . . ." A miktam of David (for teaching), 2 when he fought against Aram Naharaim and Aram Soba; and Joab, coming back, killed twelve thousand Edomites in the "valley of salt."s

I

3 O God, you have rejected us and broken our defenses;
you have been angry; rally us!
4 You have rocked the country and split it open;
repair the cracks in it, for it is tottering.
5 You have made your people feel hardships;

r 1 Kgs 19, 11.—s 2 Kgs 8, 3ff. 8; 10, 6ff; 1 Par 18, 12f.

57, 10: The Hebrew text of this verse is obscure and is variously reconstructed.

57, 11: He shall bathe his feet in the blood: by the figure of hyperbole, victorious soldiers may be said to wade through the blood of the vanquished. Cf Ps 67 (68), 24; Is 63, 1-6.

Ps 58 (59): In each of the two similar strophes (2-6. 11b-14) the psalmist beseeches God to defend him against his wicked enemies. In the two similar refrains (7-11a. 15-18) he compares the wicked to ravenous dogs.

58, 8: Who is there to listen?: this is their blasphemy, that they say, "God does not even hear of our wickedness."

Ps 59 (60): Bewailing a military disaster, the psalmist first thanks God for having saved at least a part of the army (3-7); then, recalling God's promise to subjugate the neighboring nations (8-10), he puts his trust in the Lord's strong assistance (11-14).

you have given us stupefying wine.
6 You have raised for those who fear you
a banner
to which they may flee out of bowshot 7 That your loved ones may escape;[t]
help us by your right hand, and answer us!*

II

8 God promised in his sanctuary:
"Exultantly I will apportion Sichem,
and measure off* the valley of Socchoth.
9 Mine is Galaad, and mine Manasse;
Ephraim is the helmet for my head;
Juda, my scepter;*
10 Moab shall serve as my washbowl;*
upon Edom I will set my shoe;
I will triumph over Philistia."

III

11 Who will bring me into the fortified city?*
Who will lead me into Edom?
12 Have not you, O God, rejected us,
so that you go not forth, O God, with our armies?
13 Give us aid against the foe,
for worthless is the help of men.
14 Under God we shall do valiantly;
it is he who will tread down our foes.

PSALM 60 (61)*

Prayer of the King in Exile

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments. Of David.

t 7-14: Ps 107(108), 7-14.

59, 7-14: These verses occur again as the second half of Ps 107 (108).

59, 8: I will apportion . . . and measure off: God will claim these places as His own. The valley of Socchoth: probably the lower stretch of the Jaboc valley. Cf Gn 32, 23; 33, 17.

59, 9: Juda, my scepter: an allusion to the Blessing of Jacob. Cf Gn 49, 10.

59, 10: Moab shall serve as my washbowl: the Moabites shall perform menial service for Israel; probably there is also an allusion to the "basin" of the Dead Sea, which formed the western border of Moab. Upon Edom I will set my shoe: God will use Edom as His footstool; thus the ancient kings treated their conquered enemies. Cf Ps 109 (110), 1. Some render, "Upon Edom I will throw my shoe," and understand this casting of a shoe on conquered territory as a sign of possession.

59, 11: The fortified city: perhaps Bosra, the impregnable capital of Edom. Cf Is 34, 6; 63, 1; Am 1, 12.

Ps 60 (61): Far away from Jerusalem, the psalmist longs for God's help and the shelter of His abode (2-5); confident of being heard, he prays for the king (6-9). This may be interpreted as a prayer of David when he had to flee from Jerusalem during the rebellion of Absalom. Cf 2 Kgs 15-19.

Ps 61 (62): The keynote of trust in God is struck in the twice-repeated refrain (2f. 6f); though attacked by his enemies, (4f), the psalmist asserts his unshaken confidence in the Lord (8f), for true strength comes not from earthly power but from God's grace (10-13).

61, 5: My place on high: a place of safety such as a fortress set on a cliff.

I

2 Hear, O God, my cry;
listen to my prayer!
3 From the earth's end I call to you
as my heart grows faint.
You will set me high upon a rock; you will give me rest,
4 for you are my refuge,
a tower of strength against the enemy.
5 Oh, that I might lodge in your tent forever, take refuge in the shelter of your wings!

II

6 You indeed, O God, have accepted my vows;
you granted me the heritage of those who fear your name.
7 Add to the days of the king's life;
let his years be many generations;
8 Let him sit enthroned before God forever;
bid kindness and faithfulness preserve him.
9 So will I sing the praises of your name forever,
fulfilling my vows day by day.

PSALM 61 (62)*

Trust in God Alone

1 For the leader; 'al Idithun. A psalm of David.

I

2 Only in God is my soul at rest;
from him comes my salvation.
3 He only is my rock and my salvation,
my stronghold; I shall not be disturbed at all.
4 How long will you set upon a man and all together beat him down as though he were a sagging fence, a battered wall?
5 Truly from my place on high* they plan to dislodge me;
they delight in lies;
They bless with their mouths,
but inwardly they curse.

II

6 Only in God be at rest, my soul,
for from him comes my hope.
7 He only is my rock and my salvation,
my stronghold; I shall not be disturbed.

8 With God is my safety and my glory,
he is the rock of my strength; my refuge is in God.
9 Trust in him at all times, O my people!
Pour out your hearts before him;
God is our refuge!

III

10 Only a breath are mortal men;
an illusion are men of rank;
In a balance they prove lighter,
all together, than a breath.
11 Trust not in extortion; in plunder take no empty pride;
though wealth abound, set not your heart upon it.
12 One thing God said; these two things* which I heard:
that power belongs to God, 13 and yours, O Lord, is kindness;
and that you render to everyone according to his deeds.[u]

PSALM 62 (63)*

Ardent Longing for God

1 A psalm of David, when he was in the wilderness of Juda.[v]

I

2 O God, you are my God whom I seek;
for you my flesh pines and my soul thirsts
like the earth, parched, lifeless and without water.
3 Thus have I gazed toward you in the sanctuary
to see your power and your glory, 4 For your kindness is a greater good than life;
my lips shall glorify you.

II

5 Thus will I bless you while I live;
lifting up my hands, I will call upon your name.
6 As with the riches of a banquet shall my soul be satisfied,
and with exultant lips my mouth shall praise you.
7 I will remember you upon my couch,
and through the night-watches I will meditate on you:
8 That you are my help,
and in the shadow of your wings I shout for joy.
9 My soul clings fast to you;
your right hand upholds me.

III

10 But they shall be destroyed who seek my life,
they shall go into the depths of the earth;
11 They shall be delivered over to the sword,
and shall be the prey of jackals.*
12 The king, however, shall rejoice in God;
everyone who swears by him shall glory,
but the mouths of those who speak falsely shall be stopped.

PSALM 63 (64)*

Treacherous Conspirators Punished by God

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2 Hear, O God, my voice in my lament;
from the dread enemy preserve my life.
3 Shelter me against the council of malefactors,
against the tumult of evildoers,
4 Who sharpen their tongues like swords,
who aim like arrows their bitter words,
5 Shooting from ambush at the innocent man,
suddenly shooting at him without fear.
6 They resolve on their wicked plan;
they conspire to set snares,
saying, "Who will see us?"
7 They devise a wicked scheme,
and conceal the scheme they have devised;
deep are the thoughts of each heart.

II

8 But God shoots his arrows at them;
suddenly they are struck.
9 He brings them down by their own tongues;
all who see them nod their heads.*
10 And all men fear and proclaim the work of God,

u Mt 16, 27; Rom 2, 6.—v 1 Kgs 24.

61, 12f: One thing . . . two things: such use of progressive numbers is a device of Hebrew poetry. Cf Am 1, 3; Prv 6, 16-19; 30, 15. 18. 21.

Ps 62 (63): Homesick for God's sanctuary (2-4), the psalmist holds fast to the Lord in spirit (5-9), confident that his enemies will be destroyed while the king and his loyal followers will triumph (10-12).

62, 11: The prey of jackals: their dead bodies shall be devoured by wild animals. Lack of proper burial was dreaded by the ancients.

Ps 63 (64): The psalmist prays for God's help against deceitful foes who secretly plot against him (2-7); God will repay them with exemplary punishment (8-11).

63, 9: Nod their heads: a gesture of derision. Cf Pss 21 (22), 8; 43 (44), 15; 108 (109), 25.

and ponder what he has done.
11 The just man is glad in the Lord and takes refuge in him;
in him glory all the upright of heart.

PSALM 64 (65)*

Thanksgiving for God's Blessings.

1 For the leader. A psalm of David. A song.

I

2 To you we owe our hymn of praise,
O God, in Sion;
To you must vows* be fulfilled,
you who hear prayers.
3 To you all flesh must come*
4 because of wicked deeds.
We are overcome by our sins;
it is you who pardon them.
5 Happy the man you choose, and bring to dwell in your courts.
May we be filled with the good things of your house,
the holy things of your temple!

II

6 With awe-inspiring deeds of justice you answer us,
O God our savior,
The hope of all the ends of the earth and of the distant seas.
7 You set the mountains in place by your power,
you who are girt with might;
8 You still the roaring of the seas,
the roaring of their waves and the tumult of the peoples.
9 And the dwellers at the earth's ends are in fear at your marvels;
the farthest east and west you make resound with joy.

III

10 You have visited the land and watered it;
greatly have you enriched it.
God's watercourses are filled;
you have prepared the grain.
11 Thus have you prepared the land:
drenching its furrows,
breaking up its clods,
Softening it with showers,
blessing its yield.
12 You have crowned the year with your bounty,
and your paths overflow with a rich harvest;*
13 The untilled meadows overflow with it,
and rejoicing clothes the hills.
14 The fields are garmented with flocks
and the valleys blanketed with grain.
They shout and sing for joy.

PSALM 65 (66)*

Praise of God, Israel's Deliverer

1 For the leader. A psalm; a song.

Shout joyfully to God, all you on earth,
2 sing praise to the glory of his name;
proclaim his glorious praise.
3 Say to God, "How tremendous are your deeds!
for your great strength your enemies fawn upon you.*
4 Let all on earth worship and sing praise to you,
sing praise to your name!"

I

5 Come and see the works of God,
his tremendous deeds among men.
6 He has changed the sea into dry land;
through the river they passed on foot;w
therefore let us rejoice in him.
7 He rules by his might forever;
his eyes watch the nations;
rebels may not exalt themselves.
8 Bless our God, you peoples,
loudly sound his praise;
9 He has given life to our souls,
and has not let our feet slip.
10 For you have tested us, O God!
You have tried us as silver is tried by fire;
11 You have brought us into a snare;
you laid a heavy burden on our backs.
12 You let men ride over our heads;
we went through fire and water,

w Ex 14, 21f.

Ps. 64 (65): A hymn of thanksgiving, sung by the community for a bountiful harvest. Humbly acknowledging that they are unworthy of God's favors (2-5), the people praise Him for His power over all the earth (6-9), and thank Him for the rains which produced such abundant crops (10-14).

64, 2: Vows: the Israelites were accustomed to promise sacrifices in the temple if their prayers were heard.

64, 3: To you all flesh must come: all men must have recourse to God's mercy.

64, 12: Your paths overflow with a rich harvest: literally "Your wagon-wheel tracks drip with oil."

Ps 65 (66): There are two distinct parts here, which perhaps originally were two independent psalms. The first part (1-12) is a hymn of the community praising God's omnipotence as revealed throughout history, especially at the Exodus (5-7), and now in the recent restoration of the nation from some calamity (8-12). The second part (13-20) is the thanksgiving hymn of an individual fulfilling his vows in the temple (13-15) and recounting how the Lord had heard his prayer (16-20).

65, 3: Fawn upon you: pay an unwilling tribute of praise. Cf Pss 17 (18), 45; 80 (81), 16.

but you have led us out to refreshment.

II

13 I will bring holocausts to your house;
to you I will fulfill the vows 14 Which my lips uttered
and my words promised in my distress.
15 Holocausts of fatlings I will offer you,
with burnt offerings of rams;
I will sacrifice oxen and goats.
16 Hear now, all you who fear God, while I declare what he has done for me.
17 When I appealed to him in words,
praise was on the tip of my tongue.*
18 Were I to cherish wickedness in my heart,
the Lord would not hear;
19 But God has heard;
he has hearkened to the sound of my prayer.
20 Blessed be God who refused me not my prayer or his kindness!

PSALM 66 (67)*

Harvest Prayer That All Men May Worship God

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments. A psalm; a song.

I

2 May God have pity on us and bless us;[x]
may he let his face shine upon us.*
3 So may your way be known upon earth;
among all nations, your salvation.
4 May the peoples praise* you, O God;
may all the peoples praise you!

II

5 May the nations be glad and exult
because you rule the peoples in equity;
the nations on the earth you guide.
6 May the peoples praise you, O God;
may all the peoples praise you!

III

7 The earth has yielded its fruits;
God, our God, has blessed us.
8 May God bless us,
and may all the ends of the earth fear him!

PSALM 67 (68)*

God's Triumphal Procession

1 For the leader. A psalm of David; a song.

I

2 God arises; his enemies are scattered,[y]
and those who hate him flee before him.*
3 As smoke is driven away, so are they driven;
as wax melts before the fire,
so the wicked perish before God.
4 But the just rejoice and exult before God;
they are glad and rejoice.

II

5 Sing to God, chant praise to his name,
extol him who rides upon the clouds,*
Whose name is the Lord;[z]
exult before him.
6 The father of orphans and the defender of widows is God in his holy dwelling.

x Nm 6, 24f.—y Nm 10, 35.—z Ex 15, 3.

65, 17: Praise was on the tip of my tongue: literally, "praise was under my tongue." Even while the psalmist was praying aloud for help, he was already thanking God silently for having heard his prayer.

Ps 66 (67): The refrain (4. 6 and perhaps originally after 8) calls on all the nations of the earth to praise the Lord, because He blesses Israel (2f), governs all peoples wisely (5), and bestows an abundant harvest (7). Israel's hope of seeing the Lord acknowledged as the only God by all the nations was based on, and found its sole fulfillment in, the promise of the Messias. Cf Gn 12, 2f.

66, 2: These words are similar to the priestly blessing of Nm 6, 22-27.

66, 4. 6: Praise: the Hebrew means more exactly, "give grateful praise"; hence according to the context, it is often translated, "give thanks."

Ps 67 (68): One of the most magnificent but, at the same time, one of the most difficult hymns of the Psalter. In several places the Hebrew text is poorly preserved. It was written to be sung as the Ark of the Covenant was carried in solemn procession into the temple. Beginning with the ancient war cry of Israel, which was used when the Ark was carried into battle (2), the opening strophe proclaims the defeat of the wicked and the triumph of the just (3f). After general praise of God's goodness (5-7), the Lord's victorious march from Egypt to Sinai (8-11) and the conquest of the Promised Land (12-15) are briefly and poetically recounted; reference is then made to God's choice of Sion for His dwelling (16-19), as well as to all His victories (20-24); finally, with a description of the present procession serving as an interlude (25-28), God is implored to spread His mighty rule (29-30) until the earth sings His glory (33-36).

67, 2: What is here stated as a fact is given in the form of a prayer in Nm 10, 35.

67, 5: Extol him who rides upon the clouds: the meaning of the Hebrew is not entirely certain. The revised Latin Psalter has, "Lay a road for him who rides through the desert." However, the expression "The Rider of the Clouds" as a divine epithet is very ancient, since it occurs in Chanaanite literature even before the time of Moses, and it is not uncommon in the Old Testament. Cf Dt 33, 26; Pss 17 (18), 10ff; 67 (68), 34; Is 19, 1; Hb 3, 8.

7 God gives a home to the forsaken;
he leads forth prisoners to prosperity;
only rebels remain in the parched land.

III

8 O God, when you went forth at the head of your people,[a]
when you marched through the wilderness, 9 The earth quaked; it rained from heaven at the presence of God,
at the presence of God, the God of Israel.
[This is Sinai.]
10 A bountiful rain you showered down, O God, upon your inheritance;
you restored the land when it languished;
11 Your flock settled in it;
in your goodness, O God, you provided it for the needy.

IV

12 The Lord gives the word;
women bear the glad tidings, a vast army:*
13 "Kings and their hosts are fleeing, fleeing,
and the household shall divide the spoils.
14 Though you rested among the sheepfolds,*
the wings of the dove shone with silver,
and her pinions with a golden hue.
15 While the Almighty dispersed the kings there, snow fell on Salmon."

V

16 High the mountains of Basan;
rugged the mountains of Basan.
17 Why look you jealously, you rugged mountains,
at the mountain God has chosen* for his throne,
where the Lord himself will dwell forever?
18 The chariots of God are myriad, thousands on thousands;
the Lord advances from Sinai to the sanctuary.
19 You have ascended on high,* taken captives,[b]
received men as gifts—
even rebels; the Lord God enters his dwelling.

VI

20 Blessed day by day be the Lord,
who bears our burdens; God, who is our salvation.
21 God is a saving God for us;
the Lord, my Lord, controls the passageways of death.
22 Surely God crushes the heads of his enemies,
the hairy crowns of those who stalk about in their guilt.
23 The Lord said: "I will fetch them back from Basan;
I will fetch them back from the depths of the sea,
24 So that you will bathe your feet in blood;
the tongues of your dogs will have their share of your enemies."

VII

25 They view your progress, O God,
the progress of my God, my King, into the sanctuary;
26 The singers lead, the minstrels follow,
in their midst the maidens play on timbrels.
27 In your choirs bless God;
bless the Lord, you of Israel's wellspring!
28 There is Benjamin, the youngest, leading them;
the princes of Juda in a body,
the princes of Zabulon, the princes of Nephthali.

VIII

29 Show forth, O God, your power,
the power, O God, with which you took our part;
30 For your temple in Jerusalem
let the kings bring you gifts.
31 Rebuke the wild beast of the reeds,*

a 8f: Jgs 5, 4f.—b Eph 4, 8.

67, 12: The Israelite women took an active part in celebrating a victory. Cf Ex 15, 20; 1 Kgs 18, 6f.

67, 14f: The Hebrew text of these verses is very obscure. The translation given above follows the revised Latin Psalter. The dove: perhaps a figure of the victorious army of Israel. Cf Ps 73 (74), 19. Snow fell: either literally, or figuratively of the fallen enemy lying as thick as snowflakes on the battlefield. Salmon: probably a mountain in the Hauran or in Basan. The historical event referred to is uncertain. Cf Nm 21, 33ff; Dt 3, 1-10.

67, 17: The mountain God has chosen: Mount Sion.

67, 19: Ascended on high: to the divine throne, either on Sion or in heaven. Received men as gifts: St. Paul quotes this somewhat freely according to the Greek version as, "He gave gifts to men," and then applies it to Christ bestowing His charismatic graces on the Church after His ascension into heaven. Cf Eph 4, 8.

67, 31: The wild beast of the reeds: most probably Egypt. Cf Ez 29, 2ff. Bars of silver: tribute from the foreign nations brought to Sion.

the herd of strong bulls and the bullocks, the nations.
Let them prostrate themselves with bars of silver;
scatter the peoples who delight in war.
32 Let nobles come from Egypt;
let Ethiopia extend its hands to God.

IX

33 You kingdoms of the earth, sing to God, chant praise to the Lord
34 who rides* on the heights of the ancient heavens.
Behold, his voice resounds, the voice of power:
35 "Confess the power of God!"
Over Israel is his majesty;
his power is in the skies.
36 Awesome in his sanctuary is God, the God of Israel;
he gives power and strength to his people.
Blessed be God!

PSALM 68 (69)*

A Cry of Anguish in Great Distress

1 For the leader; according to "Lilies." Of David.

I

2 Save me, O God,
for the waters* threaten my life;
3 I am sunk in the abysmal swamp
where there is no foothold;
I have reached the watery depths;
the flood overwhelms me.
4 I am wearied with calling,
my throat is parched;
My eyes have failed
with looking for my God.
5 Those outnumber the hairs of my head
who hate me without cause.* [c]
Too many for my strength
are they who wrongfully are my enemies.
Must I restore what I did not steal?

II

6 O God, you know my folly,
and my faults* are not hid from you.
7 Let not those who wait for you be put to shame through me,
O Lord, God of hosts.
Let not those who seek you blush for me,
O God of Israel,
8 Since for your sake I bear insult,
and shame covers my face.
9 I have become an outcast to my brothers,
a stranger to my mother's sons,
10 Because zeal for your house consumes me,*
and the insults of those who blaspheme you fall upon me.[d] 11 I humbled myself with fasting,
and this was made a reproach to me.
12 I made sackcloth my garment,
and I became a byword for them.
13 They who sit at the gate gossip about me,
and drunkards make me the butt of their songs.

III

14 But I pray to you, O Lord,
for the time of your favor, O God!
In your great kindness answer me
with your constant help.
15 Rescue me out of the mire; may I not sink!
may I be rescued from my foes,
and from the watery depths.
16 Let not the flood-waters overwhelm me,
nor the abyss swallow me up,
nor the pit close its mouth over me.
17 Answer me, O Lord, for bounteous is your kindness;
in your great mercy turn toward me.
18 Hide not your face from your servant;
in my distress, make haste to answer me.
19 Come and ransom my life;
as an answer for my enemies, redeem me.
20 You know my reproach, my shame and my ignominy:

c Jn 15, 25.—d Jn 2, 17; Rom 15, 3.

Ps 68 (69): A lamentation similar to Ps 21 (22). The psalmist describes his extreme misery (2-5) and unmerited disgrace (6-13), imploring God to vindicate him (14-22) and punish his enemies (23-29); in return he will offer God a sacrifice of praise (30-35). As in Ps 50 (51), two verses were added at the end foretelling the restoration of Israel from exile in Babylon (36f). Since several passages are quoted in the New Testament in reference to Christ, Catholic tradition has always considered this psalm as at least indirectly Messianic.

68, 2: The waters: a common metaphor for affliction. Cf Pss 17 (18), 5; 41 (42), 8; 87 (88), 8.

68, 5: Who hate me without cause: according to our Lord's own statement these words were fully verified in the hatred His enemies bore Him. Cf Jn 15, 25.

68, 6: My folly, and my faults: the psalmist is guilty, he admits, of certain sins, but not of the grave crimes his enemies charge him with. This verse cannot be interpreted in a Messianic sense except in so far as Christ took upon Himself the sins of the world.

68, 10: Zeal for your house consumes me: eminently fulfilled in Christ's cleansing of the temple. Cf Jn 2, 17. The insults of those who blaspheme you fall upon me: cited by St. Paul as an example of our Lord's unselfishness. Cf Rom 15, 3.

before you are all my foes.
21 Insult has broken my heart, and I am weak,
I looked for sympathy, but there was none;
for comforters, and I found none.
22 Rather they put gall in my food,[e]
and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.*

IV

23 Let their own table* be a snare before them,[f]
and a net for their friends.
24 Let their eyes grow dim so that they cannot see,
and keep their backs always feeble.
25 Pour out your wrath upon them;
let the fury of your anger overtake them.
26 Let their encampment become desolate;[g]
in their tents let there be no one to dwell.*
27 For they kept after him whom you smote,
and added to the pain of him you wounded.
28 Heap guilt upon their guilt,
and let them not attain to your reward.
29 May they be erased from the book of the living,
and not be recorded with the just!

V

30 But I am afflicted and in pain;
let your saving help, O God, protect me.
31 I will praise the name of God in song,
and I will glorify him with thanksgiving;
32 This will please the Lord more than oxen
or bullocks with horns and divided hooves:
33 "See, you lowly ones, and be glad;
you who seek God, may your hearts be merry!
34 For the Lord hears the poor,
and his own who are in bonds he spurns not.
35 Let the heavens and the earth praise him,
the seas and whatever moves in them!"
36 For God will save Sion
and rebuild the cities of Juda.
They shall dwell in the land and own it, 37 and the descendants of his servants shall inherit it,
and those who love his name shall inhabit it.

e Mt 27, 34, 48; Mk 15, 23.—f 23f: Rom 11, 9f.—g Acts 1, 20.—h 2-6: Ps 39 (40), 14-18.

68, 22: A prophecy fulfilled in the bitter drink given to Christ on the cross. Cf Jn 19, 28. Gall: the Hebrew word probably signifies the juice of some bitter and poisonous plant.

68, 23: Table: a mere tablecloth spread on the ground, on which one might trip.

68, 26: Applied to Judas in Acts 1, 20.

Ps 69 (70): Almost identical with Ps 39 (40), 14-18.

Ps 70 (71): The aged psalmist, who has always put his trust in the Lord, implores His aid (1-7) now that he is afflicted and persecuted (9-13); each of these two sections ends with a promise of grateful praise (8, 14-16): almost all of the third section (17-24) likewise describes the same confident expectation of being heard by God.

PSALM 69 (70)*

Prayer for Divine Help

1 For the leader; of David. For remembrance.
2 Deign, O God, to rescue me;[h]
O Lord, make haste to help me.
3 Let them be put to shame and confounded
who seek my life.
Let them be turned back in disgrace
who desire my ruin.
4 Let them retire in their shame
who say to me, "Aha, aha!"
5 But may all who seek you exult and be glad in you,
And may those who love your salvation
say ever, "God be glorified!"
6 But I am afflicted and poor;
O God, hasten to me!
You are my help and my deliverer;
O Lord, hold not back!

PSALM 70 (71)*

Humble Prayer in Time of Old Age

I

1 In you, O Lord, I take refuge;
let me never be put to shame.
2 In your justice rescue me, and deliver me;
incline your ear to me, and save me.
3 Be my rock of refuge,
a stronghold to give me safety,
for you are my rock and my fortress.
4 O my God, rescue me from the hand of the wicked,
from the grasp of the criminal and the violent.
5 For you are my hope, O Lord;
my trust, O God, from my youth.

6 On you I depend from birth;
from my mother's womb you are my strength;*
constant has been my hope in you.
7 A portent* am I to many,
but you are my strong refuge!
8 My mouth shall be filled with your praise,
with your glory day by day.

II

9 Cast me not off in my old age;
as my strength fails, forsake me not,
10 For my enemies speak against me,
and they who keep watch against my life take counsel together.
11 They say, "God has forsaken him;
pursue and seize him,
for there is no one to rescue him." 12 O God, be not far from me;
my God, make haste to help me.
13 Let them be put to shame and consumed who attack my life;
let them be wrapped in ignominy and disgrace who seek to harm me.
14 But I will always hope
and praise you ever more and more.
15 My mouth shall declare your justice,
day by day your salvation,
though I know not their extent.*
16 I will treat of the mighty works of the Lord;
O God, I will tell of your singular justice.

III

17 O God, you have taught me from my youth,
and till the present I proclaim your wondrous deeds;
18 And now that I am old and gray,
O God, forsake me not Till I proclaim your strength to every generation that is to come.
19 Your power and your justice,
O God, reach to heaven.
You have done great things;
O God, who is like you?
20 Though you have made me feel many bitter afflictions,
you will again revive me;
from the depths of the earth you will once more raise me.
21 Renew your benefits toward me,
and comfort me over and over.
22 So will I give you thanks with music on the lyre,
for your faithfulness, O my God!
I will sing your praises with the harp,
O Holy One of Israel!
23 My lips shall shout for joy
as I sing your praises;
My soul also, which you have redeemed,
24 and my tongue day by day shall discourse on your justice.
How shamed and how disgraced
are those who sought to harm me!

PSALM 71 (72)*

The Kingdom of the Messias

1 Of Solomon.

I

O God, with your judgment endow the king,
and with your justice, the king's son;*
2 He shall govern your people with justice
and your afflicted ones with judgment.*
3 The mountains shall yield peace for the people,
and the hills justice.
4 He shall defend the afflicted among the people,
save the children of the poor,
and crush the oppressor.

II

5 May he endure as long as the sun,
and like the moon through all generations.
6 He shall be like rain coming down on the meadow,

70, 6: My strength: the exact meaning of the Hebrew is uncertain. The revised Latin Psalter still retains "my protector" of the older Latin version.

70, 7: A portent: many marvel that the psalmist is so afflicted, looking on him as cursed by God. Cf Dt 28, 46. Some commentators, however, understand this as, "Many marvel at my invincible confidence in God and at the great graces He bestows on me."

70, 15: Though I know not their extent: the psalmist admits that God's acts of kindness toward him are more numerous than he himself realizes.

Ps 71 (72): A song of good wishes for the king, perhaps composed originally for the coronation ceremonies of one of David's successors. But some of the expressions cannot be understood of any earthly monarch except as pure hyperbole. They find their complete fulfillment only in Christ. Hence the traditional interpretation rightly treats the psalm as Messianic, at least in a typical sense. The earthly king is here a type or figure of Christ the King. The Hebrew verbs seem to vary between the future and the jussive. Some commentators render them all in the future. The thoughts here expressed concern the king's just rule (1-4), his long and glorious reign (5-7), his universal dominion (8-11), his defense of the poor and oppressed (12-14), and the prosperity of his kingdom (15-17).

71, 1: The king . . . the king's son: the same individual is meant; his father was also a king.

71, 2: With judgment: he shall procure their rights for them.

like showers watering the earth.
7 Justice shall flower in his days,
and profound peace, till the moon be no more.

III

8 May he rule from sea to sea,
and from the River to the ends of the earth.*
9 His foes shall bow before him,
and his enemies shall lick the dust.
10 The kings of Tharsis and the Isles* shall offer gifts; i
the kings of Arabia and Saba shall bring tribute.
11 All kings shall pay him homage,
all nations shall serve him.

IV

12 For he shall rescue the poor man when he cries out, and the afflicted when he has no one to help him.
13 He shall have pity for the lowly and the poor;
the lives of the poor he shall save.
14 From fraud and violence he shall redeem them,
and precious shall their blood be in his sight.

V

15 May he live to be given the gold of Arabia,
and to be prayed for continually;
day by day shall they bless him.
16 May there be an abundance of grain upon the earth;
on the tops of the mountains the crops shall rustle like Lebanon;
the city dwellers shall flourish like the verdure of the fields.
17 May his name be blessed forever;
as long as the sun his name shall remain.
In him shall all the tribes of the earth be blessed;*
all the nations shall proclaim his happiness.

* * *

18 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel,*
who alone does wondrous deeds. j 19 And blessed forever be his glorious name;
may the whole earth be filled with his glory.
Amen. Amen.
20 The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended.*

1 Ps 67 (68), 30.—j 18f: Pss 40 (41), 14; 88 (89), 53; 105 (106), 48.

71, 8: Indicates the boundaries of the civilized world at that time: from the Mediterranean Sea to the Persian Gulf (the "Eastern Sea"), and from the Euphrates (the River) to the islands and lands of southwestern Europe, then considered the ends of the earth.

71, 10: Tharsis and the Isles: the far west. Cf Ps 47 (48), 8. Arabia and Saba: the far south. Cf 3 Kgs 10, 1.

71, 17: In him . . . be blessed: either, "Because of him all men shall receive God's blessings," or, "All men shall use his name in giving a blessing, saying, 'May you be as blessed as this king.' " Cf Gn 48, 20.

71, 18f: The doxology at the end of the Second Book of the Psalms; a later addition. Cf Ps 40 (41), 14.

71, 20: This note shows that Ps 71 (72) once constituted the end of a certain collection of Davidic psalms. It does not exclude the possibility of some other Davidic psalms being incorporated in the following collections.

Ps 72 (73): Like Pss 36 (37) and 48 (49), this sapiential psalm is concerned with the problem of why the wicked seem to prosper. After showing how dangerous the thought of such apparent injustice may be (1-3), the psalmist sets forth the difficulty in clear terms by describing the earthly happiness of the wicked who blaspheme God with seeming impunity (4-12), whereas the good apparently suffer in vain (13-16); the only solution, as he has learned from God Himself, lies in the hereafter (17), where the fortunes of the prosperous sinner will suddenly be reversed (18-22) while the good will enjoy God's presence forever (23-28).

72, 9: They set their mouthings in place of heaven: literally, "They set their mouths in heaven," which seems to mean, "They speak as if they were God." The revised Latin Psalter renders it, "They attack heaven with their mouths."

III: THE THIRD BOOK — Psalms 72-88

PSALM 72 (73)*

The False Happiness of the Wicked

1 A psalm of Asaph.

How good God is to the upright;
the Lord, to those who are clean of heart!
2 But, as for me, I almost lost my balance;
my feet all but slipped,
3 Because I was envious of the arrogant
when I saw them prosper though they were wicked.

I

4 For they are in no pain;
their bodies are sound and sleek;
5 They are free from the burdens of mortals,
and are not afflicted like the rest of men.
6 So pride adorns them as a necklace;
as a robe violence enwraps them.
7 Out of their crassness comes iniquity;
their fancies overflow their hearts.
8 They scoff and speak evil;
outrage from on high they threaten.
9 They set their mouthings in place of heaven,*
and their pronouncements roam the earth:

10 "So he brings his people to such a pass
that they have not even water!"*
11 And they say, "How does God know?"
And, "Is there any knowledge in the Most High?"
12 Such, then, are the wicked;
always carefree, while they increase in wealth.

II

13 Is it but in vain I have kept my heart clean
and washed my hands as an innocent man? [k]
14 For I suffer affliction day after day and chastisement with each new dawn.
15 Had I thought, "I will speak as they do,"
I had been false to the fellowship of your children.
16 Though I tried to understand this
it seemed to me too difficult, 17 Till I entered the sanctuary of God*
and considered their final destiny.

III

18 You set them, indeed, on a slippery road;
you hurl them down to ruin.
19 How suddenly they are made desolate!
They are completely wasted away
amid horrors.
20 As though they were the dream of one who had awakened, O Lord,
so will you, when you arise,* set at nought these phantoms.
21 Because my heart was embittered*
and my soul was pierced, 22 I was stupid and understood not;
I was like a brute beast in your presence.

IV

23 Yet with you I shall always be;
you have hold of my right hand;
24 With your counsel you guide me,
and in the end you will receive me in glory.
25 Whom else have I in heaven?
And when I am with you, the earth delights me not.
26 Though my flesh and my heart waste
away,
God is the rock of my heart and my portion forever.
27 For indeed, they who withdraw from
you perish;
you destroy everyone who is unfaith-
ful to you.
28 But for me, to be near God is my
good;
to make the Lord God my refuge.
I shall declare all your works
in the gates of the daughter of Sion.

PSALM 73 (74)*

Prayer in Time of National Calamity

1 A maskil of Asaph.

I

Why, O God, have you cast us off forever?*
Why does your anger smolder against
the sheep of your pasture?
2 Remember your flock which you built up of old,
the tribe you redeemed as your inheritance,
Mount Sion, where you took up your abode.[l]
3 Turn your steps toward the utter ruins;
toward all the damage the enemy has done in the sanctuary.
4 Your foes roar triumphantly in your shrine;
they have set up their tokens of victory.
5 They are like men coming up with axes to a clump of trees;*
6 and now with chisel and hammer
they hack at all its paneling.
7 They set your sanctuary on fire;
the place where your name abides
they have razed and profaned.[m] 8 They said in their hearts, "Let us destroy them;
burn all the shrines of God in the land."

k Ps 25 (26), 6.—l Pss 67 (68), 17; 131 (132), 13.—m 4 Kgs 25, 8f; Ps 78 (79), 1.

72, 10: This verse is defective in the current Hebrew text. The translation given above understands it as one of the blasphemies uttered by the wicked, ridiculing God's justice. The revised Latin Psalter understands it as said by the psalmist himself, "So my people turn to them, and they suck up water in abundance."

72, 17: I entered the sanctuary of God: in spirit the psalmist penetrated God's heavenly sanctuary.

72, 20: When you arise: in judgment. The Lord seems to act as if He were asleep. Cf Ps 77 (78), 65. The temporary injustice will prove to be but a bad dream.

72, 21f: The psalmist reverts to the time when he was scandalized by the prosperity of the wicked.

Ps 73 (74): A lamentation over the destruction of the temple. The event referred to is probably the taking of Jerusalem by the Babylonians in 587 B.C. The psalmist graphically describes the frightful havoc and desolation in the temple as he implores God to be mindful of His people (1-11); then, recalling the glorious deeds the Lord has done of old (12-17), he humbly reminds God that His own honor is at stake in the fate of His chosen people (18-23).

73, 1: Forever: this word seems to imply that the disaster is already of long duration.

73, 5: The Hebrew text of this verse is rather obscure.

9 Deeds on our behalf* we do not see;
there is no prophet now,[n]
and no one of us knows how long . . .
10 How long, O God, shall the foe blaspheme?
Shall the enemy revile your name forever?
11 Why draw back your hand
and keep your right hand idle beneath your cloak?

II

12 Yet, O God, my king from of old,
you doer of saving deeds on earth, 13 You stirred up the sea by your might;*
you smashed the heads of the dragons in the waters.
14 You crushed the heads of Leviathan,
and made food of him for the dolphins.
15 You released the springs and torrents;
you brought dry land out of the primeval waters.
16 Yours is the day, and yours the night;
you fashioned the moon and the sun.[o] 17 You fixed all the limits of the land;
summer and winter you made.

18 Remember how the enemy has blasphemed you, O Lord,
and how a stupid people has reviled your name.
19 Give not to the vulture* the life of your dove;
be not forever unmindful of the lives of your afflicted ones.
20 Look to your covenant,
for the hiding places in the land and the plains are full of violence.
21 May the humble not retire in confusion;
may the afflicted and the poor praise your name.
22 Arise, O God; defend your cause;
remember how the fool blasphemes you day after day.
23 Be not unmindful of the voice of your foes;
the uproar of those who rebel against you is unceasing.

n Lam 2, 9.—o Gn 1, 14-19.—p Jer 25, 15-29.

73, 9: Deeds on our behalf: literally, "our signs," which probably means, "signs done for us," wonderful exploits such as God performed for the Israelites during the Exodus. There is no prophet now: Jeremias and Ezechiel may have been dead, or at least may not have been in Jerusalem. There is no need, because of these words, to fix the date of this psalm as late as Machabean times. Cf Lam 2, 9.

73, 13-17: These verses were probably borrowed from some much older hymn. The imagery used here to describe God's creative power at the beginning of the world may have been taken over in part from the ancient Chanaanite literature. The dragons . . . Leviathan: mythological monsters. Cf Is 27, 1. Here they are the personification of the watery chaos at the beginning of creation. Cf Ps 88 (89), 11.

73, 19: The vulture: the ferocious foes. Your dove: Israel. Cf Ps 67 (68), 14.

Ps 74 (75): After an introductory verse of praise sung by the community (2), the word of the Lord is heard, foretelling the condemnation of the proud (3-5); the psalmist then repeats and develops the same thought (6-9), praising God for this victory over the sinners (10f).

74, 5f. 11: Horns: the symbol of power. See note on Ps 17 (18), 3.

74, 7: The sentence is intentionally left incomplete; for the sense, add, "does justice come." The desert: the south. The mountains: the north.

74, 9: A cup: see note on Ps 10 (11), 6. Here it is "the cup of God's wrath," the punishment He inflicts on sinners. Cf Is 51, 17; Jer 25, 15-29; 49, 12; Ez 23, 31ff. Spiced: literally, "a mixed drink"; spices or drugs were put into wine to make it more intoxicating. Cf Is 5, 22; Prv 9. 2. 5.

PSALM 74 (75)*

God the Just Judge of the Wicked

1 For the leader. (Do not destroy!) A psalm of Asaph; a song.

I

2 We give you thanks, O God, we give thanks,
and we invoke your name; we declare your wondrous deeds.

II

3 "When I seize the appointed time,
I will judge with equity.
4 Though the earth and all who dwell in it quake,
I have set firm its pillars.
5 I say to the boastful: Boast not;
and to the wicked: Lift not up your horns."*
6 Lift not up your horns against the Most High;
speak not haughtily against the Rock.
7 For neither from the east nor from the west,
neither from the desert nor from the mountains*—
8 But God is the judge;
one he brings low; another he lifts up.
9 For a cup* is in the Lord's hand,[p]
full of spiced and foaming wine,
And he pours out from it; even to the dregs they shall drain it;
all the wicked of the earth shall drink.

III

10 But as for me, I will exult forever;
I will sing praise to the God of Jacob.
11 And I will break off the horns of all the wicked;

the horns of the just shall be lifted up.

PSALM 75 (76)*

Thanksgiving for the Overthrow of Israel's Foes

1 For the leader; a psalm with stringed instruments. A song of Asaph.

I

2 God is renowned in Juda;
in Israel great is his name.
3 In Salem* is his abode;
his dwelling is in Sion.
4 There he shattered the flashing shafts of the bow,
shield and sword, and weapons of war.

II

5 Resplendent you came, O powerful One,
from the everlasting mountains.*
6 Despoiled are the stouthearted;
they sleep their sleep;*
the hands of all the mighty ones have failed.
7 At your rebuke, O God of Jacob,
chariots and steeds lay stilled.

III

8 You are terrible; and who can withstand you for the fury of your anger?
9 From heaven you made your intervention heard;
the earth feared and was silent
10 When God arose for judgment,
to save all the afflicted of the earth.

IV

11 For wrathful Edom shall glorify you,
and the survivors of Hamath* shall keep your festivals.
12 Make vows to the Lord, your God, and fulfill them;
let all round about him bring gifts to the terrible Lord 13 Who checks the pride* of princes,
who is terrible to the kings of the earth.

PSALM 76 (77)*

Lament and Comfort in Time of Distress

1 For the leader; 'al Idithun. A psalm of Asaph.

I

2 Aloud to God I cry;
aloud to God, to hear me;
3 on the day of my distress I seek the Lord.
By night my hands are stretched out without flagging;
my soul refuses comfort.
4 When I remember God, I moan;
when I ponder, my spirit grows faint.
5 You keep my eyes watchful;
I am troubled and cannot speak.
6 I consider the days of old;
the years long past 7 I remember.[q]
In the night I meditate in my heart;
I ponder, and my spirit broods:
8 "Will the Lord reject forever
and nevermore be favorable?
9 Will his kindness utterly cease,
his promise fail for all generations?
10 Has God forgotten pity?
Does he in anger withhold his compassion?"
11 And I say, "This is my sorrow, that the right hand of the Most High* is changed."
12 I remember the deeds of the Lord;
yes, I remember your wonders of old.
13 And I meditate on your works;
your exploits I ponder.

II

14 O God, your way is holy;[r]
what great god is there like our God?
15 You are the God who works wonders;
among the peoples you have made known your power.
16 With your strong arm you redeemed your people,

q Dt 32, 7; Ps 142 (143), 5.—r 14f: Ex 15, 11; Ps 85 (86), 10.

Ps 75 (76): A hymn of triumph in which Jerusalem's victory is attributed primarily to God (2-4). He has overwhelmed the enemy (5-7) and avenged the oppressed (8-10); to Him, therefore, sacrifices of thanksgiving are due (11-13).

75, 3: Salem: Jerusalem. Perhaps on account of its allusion to the Hebrew word for peace, this ancient form of the city's name was chosen here. Cf Gn 14, 18; Heb 7, 1f.

75, 5: From the everlasting mountains: from the temple on Mount Sion, the "ancient," age-old fortress of the Jebusites. Cf Ps 23 (24), 7. 9.

75, 6: Their sleep: of death.

75, 11: Edom . . . Hamath: the words are not certain. No hostile league of Edom and Hamath against Jerusalem is recorded. The current Hebrew text may perhaps be rendered, "For the wrath of man must be turned to your praise, and the survivors of fury shall keep your festivals."

75, 13: Checks the pride: or perhaps, "Cuts short the courage"; literally, "Shortens (or cuts off) the spirit." The Syriac version renders this as, "Humbles the pride"; the Greek version as, "Cuts off the life."

Ps 76 (77): The first section (2-13) is a lamentation in which the psalmist bewails, probably not his own misfortune, but rather the seeming abandonment of his nation by God; the second section (14-21) is in the tones of a typical hymn of praise, which the psalmist perhaps borrowed from an older hymn, in order to contrast the present situation with God's glorious deeds in the past, particularly in the Exodus.

76, 11: The right hand of the Most High: God's strong guidance and protection. Cf Pss 16 (17), 7; 17 (18), 36; Is 41, 10.

the sons of Jacob and Joseph.
17 The waters saw you, O God;
the waters saw you and shuddered;
the very depths were troubled.
18 The clouds poured down water;
the skies gave forth their voice;
your arrows also sped abroad.
19 Your thunder resounded in the whirlwind;
your lightning illumined the world;
the earth quivered and quaked.
20 Through the sea was your way,
and your path through the deep waters,
though your footsteps were not seen.
21 You led your people like a flock
under the care of Moses and Aaron.[s]

PSALM 77 (78)*

God's Goodness despite Israel's Ingratitude

1 A maskil of Asaph.
Hearken, my people, to my teaching;
incline your ears to the words of my mouth.
2 I will open my mouth in a parable,[t]
I will utter mysteries from of old.*
3 What we have heard and know,
and what our fathers have declared to us,[u]
4 We will not hide from their sons;
we will declare to the generation to come
The glorious deeds of the Lord and his strength and the wonders that he wrought.
5 He set it up as a decree in Jacob,
and established it as a law in Israel,
That what he commanded our fathers
they should make known to their sons;
6 So that the generation to come might know,
their sons yet to be born,
That they too may rise and declare to their sons
7 that they should put their hope in God
And not forget the deeds of God
but keep his commands,
8 And not be like their fathers,
a generation wayward and rebellious,
A generation that kept not its heart steadfast
nor its spirit faithful toward God.

I

9 The sons of Ephraim,* ordered ranks of bowmen, retreated in the day of battle.
10 They kept not the covenant with God;
according to his law they would not walk;
11 And they forgot his deeds,
the wonders he had shown them.
12 Before their fathers he did wondrous things,
in the land of Egypt, in the plain of Soan.*
13 He cleft the sea and brought them through,
and he made the waters stand as in a mound.[v] 14 He led them with a cloud by day,
and all night with a glow of fire.[w] 15 He cleft the rocks in the desert[x]
and gave them water in copious floods.
16 He made streams flow from the crag
and brought the waters forth in rivers.

II

17 But they sinned yet more against him,
rebelling against the Most High in the wasteland,[y] 18 And they tempted God in their hearts[z]
by demanding the food they craved.
19 Yes, they spoke against God, saying,
"Can God spread a table in the desert?
20 For when he struck the rock, waters gushed forth,
and the streams overflowed;
Can he also give bread
and provide meat for his people?"

Ps 77 (78): A didactic psalm, drawing salutary lessons from Israel's history. Cf Pss 105 (106); 106 (107). After an elaborate introduction on the importance of handing down the tradition of God's dealings with His people (1-8), the psalmist teaches that the Northern Kingdom of Israel became disloyal to God (9-11), just as did their forefathers for whom God had worked wonders in the Exodus (12-16) and in the journey through the wilderness (17-31); these ancestors were punished for giving mere lip service to God (32-39) although they had witnessed His power in the plagues of Egypt (40-51) and in the journey to the Promised Land (52-55); so also God rejected their descendants, the Israelites of the Northern Kingdom (56-64) and chose Juda and the house of David (65-72).

77, 2: This verse is applied by St. Matthew to our Lord's teaching in parables (Mt 13, 35). A parable: the Hebrew word mashal signifies properly, "a comparison," then any saying in which some deeper meaning lies, to be understood by means of the hidden comparison; here the entire psalm is a mashal. Mysteries from of old: the meanings which the psalmist sees hidden in the ancient history of his ancestors.

77, 9: Ephraim: the most important of the northern tribes of Israel; hence here, as often, the Northern Kingdom in general.

77, 12. 43: Soan: a city in the delta of the Nile, the capital of Egypt at the time of the Exodus.

21 Then the Lord heard and was enraged;
and fire blazed up against Jacob,
and anger rose against Israel,[a] 22 Because they believed not God
nor trusted in his help.
23 Yet he commanded the skies above and the doors of heaven he opened; 24 He rained manna upon them for food
and gave them heavenly bread.[b] 25 The bread of the mighty* was eaten by men;
even a surfeit of provisions he sent them.
26 He stirred up the east wind in the heavens,[c]
and by his power brought on the south wind.
27 And he rained meat upon them like dust,
and, like the sand of the sea, winged fowl, 28 Which fell in the midst of their camp round about their tents.
29 So they ate and were wholly surfeited;
he had brought them what they craved.
30 They had not given over their craving,
and their food was still in their mouths, 31 When the anger of God rose against them
and slew their best men,
and laid low the young men of Israel.

III

32 Yet for all this they sinned still more
and believed not in his wonders.
33 Therefore he quickly ended their days
and their years with sudden destruction.
34 While he slew them they sought him
and inquired after God again, 35 Remembering that God was their Rock and the Most High God, their redeemer.
36 But they flattered him with their mouths
and lied to him with their tongues, 37 Though their hearts were not steadfast toward him,
nor were they faithful to his covenant.
38 Yet he, being merciful, forgave their sin
and destroyed them not;
Often he turned back his anger
and let none of his wrath be roused.
39 He remembered that they were flesh,
a passing breath that returns not.

IV

40 How often they rebelled against him in the desert
and grieved him in the wilderness!
41 Again and again they tempted God
and provoked the Holy One of Israel.
42 They remembered not his hand
nor the day he delivered them from the foe, 43 When he wrought his signs in Egypt[d]
and his marvels in the plain of Soan, 44 And changed into blood their streams—
their running water, so that they could not drink;
45 He sent among them flies that devoured them
and frogs that destroyed them.
46 He gave their harvest to the caterpillar,
the fruits of their toil to the locust.
47 He killed their vines with hail and their sycamores with frost.
48 He gave over to the hail their beasts
and their flocks to the lightning.
49 He loosed against them his fierce anger,
wrath and fury and strife,
a detachment of messengers of doom.
50 When he measured* the course of his anger
he spared them not from death,
and delivered their beasts to the plague.
51 He smote every first-born in Egypt,
the first fruits of manhood in the tents of Ham;
52 But his people he led forth like sheep
and guided them like a herd in the desert.[e] 53 He led them on secure and unafraid,
while he covered their enemies with the sea.
54 And he brought them to his holy land,
to the mountains his right hand had won.[f] 55 And he drove out nations before them;
he distributed their inheritance by lot,
and settled the tribes of Israel in their tents.

77, 25: The mighty: the angels, according to the Greek version and Wis 16, 20. Cf Ps 102 (103), 20.

77, 50: Measured: with his eye, surveyed.

V

56 But they tempted and rebelled against God the Most High,
and kept not his decrees.
57 They turned back and were faithless
like their fathers;
they recoiled like a treacherous bow.
58 They angered him with their high places
and with their idols roused his jealousy.[g] 59 God heard and was enraged
and utterly rejected Israel.
60 And he forsook the tabernacle in Silo,[h]
the tent where he dwelt among men.
61 And he surrendered his strength into captivity,
his glory into the hands of the foe.
62 He abandoned his people to the sword
and was enraged against his inheritance.
63 Fire consumed their young men,
and their maidens were not betrothed.
64 Their priests fell by the sword,
and their widows sang no dirges.

VI

65 Then the Lord awoke, as wakes from sleep
a champion overcome with wine;
66 And he put his foes to flight*
and cast them into everlasting disgrace.
67 And he rejected the tent of Joseph,
and the tribe of Ephraim he chose not;
68 But he chose the tribe of Juda,
Mount Sion which he loved.
69 And he built his shrine like heaven,
like the earth which he founded forever.
70 And he chose David, his servant,[i]
and took him from the sheepfolds; 71 From following the ewes he brought him
to shepherd Jacob, his people,
and Israel, his inheritance.
72 And he tended them with a sincere
heart,
and with skillful hands he guided
them.

PSALM 78 (79)*

The Destruction of Jerusalem and Its Temple

1 A psalm of Asaph.

I

O God, the nations have come into your inheritance;
they have defiled your holy temple,
they have laid Jerusalem in ruins.
2 They have given the corpses of your servants[j]
as food to the birds of heaven,
the flesh of your faithful ones to the beasts of the earth.
3 They have poured out their blood like water
round about Jerusalem,
and there is no one to bury them.*
4 We have become the reproach of our
neighbors,
the scorn and derision of those around us.[k]

II

5 O Lord, how long? Will you be angry
forever?
Will your jealousy burn like fire?
6 Pour out your wrath upon the nations that acknowledge you not,[l]
upon the kingdoms that call not upon your name;
7 For they have devoured Jacob and laid waste his dwelling.
8 Remember not against us the iniquities
of the past;
may your compassion quickly come
to us,
for we are brought very low.

III

9 Help us, O God our savior,
because of the glory of your name;
Deliver us and pardon our sins
for your name's sake.
10 Why should the nations say,
"Where is their God?"

g Lv 26, 30.—h 1 Kgs 4, 3-11; Jer 7, 12-15; 26, 6-9.—i 70f: 1 Kgs 16, 10-13; 2 Kgs 7, 8; 2 Par 6, 6.—j 2f: 1 Mc 7, 17.—k Ps 43 (44), 14.—l 6f: Jer 10, 25.

77, 66: He put his foes to flight: literally, "He struck his foes back," or, "in the back"; some commentators see in this an allusion to 1 Kgs 5, 6. 9.

Ps 78 (79): A lamentation of the people over the havoc wrought by the enemy in Jerusalem. The situation may well have been the capture of the city by the Babylonians in 587 B.C. Cf Ps 73 (74). Here the people bewail the destruction and slaughter in the city (1-4), and pray God to avenge them and pardon their sins (5-8) for the sake of His own honor and glory (9f); if He frees the captive Jews and punishes their enemies, they will offer Him eternal thanks (11-13).

78, 2f: The flesh . . . to bury them: these four lines are quoted somewhat freely in 1 Mc 7, 17 as describing the treacherous slaughter of sixty pious Jews in Jerusalem during the Machabean wars. But this does not prove that the psalm was written at such a late period.

Let it be known among the nations in our sight
that you avenge the shedding of your servants' blood.

IV

11 Let the prisoners' sighing come before you;
with your great power free those doomed to death.
12 And repay our neighbors sevenfold into their bosoms*
the disgrace they have inflicted on you, O Lord.
13 Then we, your people and the sheep of your pasture,
will give thanks to you forever;
through all generations we will declare your praise.

PSALM 79 (80)*

Prayer for the Restoration of the Lord's Vineyard

1 For the leader; according to "Lilies." Eduth. A psalm of Asaph.

I

2 O shepherd of Israel, hearken,
O guide of the flock of Joseph!
From your throne upon the cherubim, shine forth [m]
3 before Ephraim, Benjamin and Manasse.
Rouse your power,
and come to save us.
4 O Lord of hosts, restore us;
if your face shine upon us,* then we shall be safe.

II

5 O Lord of hosts, how long will you burn with anger
while your people pray?
6 You have fed them with the bread of tears
and given them tears to drink in ample measure.
7 You have left us to be fought over by our neighbors,
and our enemies mock us.[n]
8 O Lord of hosts, restore us;
if your face shine upon us, then we shall be safe.

III

9 A vine* from Egypt you transplanted;
you drove away the nations and planted it.
10 You cleared the ground for it,
and it took root and filled the land.
11 The mountains were hidden in its shadow;
by its branches, the cedars of God.*
12 It put forth its foliage to the Sea,*
its shoots as far as the River.

IV

13 Why have you broken down its walls,
so that every passer-by plucks its fruit, 14 The boar from the forest lays it waste,
and the beasts of the field feed upon it?
15 Once again, O Lord of hosts,
look down from heaven, and see;
Take care of this vine,
16 and protect what your right hand has planted
[the son of man* whom you yourself made strong].

V

17 Let those who would burn it* with fire or cut it down perish before you at your rebuke.
18 May your help be with the man of your right hand,
with the son of man whom you yourself made strong.
19 Then we will no more withdraw from you;
give us new life, and we will call upon your name.
20 O Lord of hosts, restore us
if your face shine upon us, then we shall be safe.

m Ex 25, 22; 1 Kgs 4, 4; 2 Kgs 6, 2.—n Ps 43 (44), 14.

78, 12: Into their bosoms: the ample folds at the front of full-length garments were used in accepting gifts or rewards of grain. Cf Lk 6, 38. The same figure is used here for full (sevenfold) punishment.

Ps 79 (80): The Lord's help is besought for Israel, especially for the northern tribes (2f), for they are sorely oppressed by their enemies (5-7); they were once God's well-tended vine (9-12), but now this vineyard is devastated (13-16); therefore His saving help is implored (17-19). The refrain after the first, second and fifth stanzas (4. 8. 20) perhaps stood originally after the third and fourth stanzas also.

79, 4: If your face shine upon us: if God brighten their lives with His gracious smile.

79, 9: A vine: a frequent metaphor for Israel. Cf Is 5, 1-7; 27, 2f; Jer 2, 21; Os 10, 1; Mt 21, 33.

79, 11: The cedars of God: the giant cedars of Lebanon, considered as especially planted by God. Cf Nm 24, 6.

79, 12: The Sea: the Mediterranean. The River: the Euphrates. Cf Ps 71 (72), 8.

79, 16: The son of man: this line is presumably an accidental duplication of the similar line in v 18.

79, 17: Let those who would burn it: this line, as here translated, is a reconstruction; but the two halves of the Hebrew line do not properly belong together.

PSALM 80 (81)*

Festive Song with an Admonition to Fidelity

[1] For the leader; "upon the gittith." Of Asaph.

A

[2] Sing joyfully to God our strength;
acclaim the God of Jacob.
[3] Take up a melody, and sound the timbrel,
the pleasant harp and the lyre.
[4] Blow the trumpet* at the new moon,
at the full moon, on our solemn feast;[o]
[5] For it is a statute in Israel,
an ordinance of the God of Jacob, [6] Who made it a decree for Joseph when he came forth from the land of Egypt.

B

I

An unfamiliar speech I hear:*
[7] "I relieved his shoulder of the burden;
his hands were freed from the basket.*
[8] In distress you called, and I rescued you;
Unseen, I answered you in thunder;
I tested you at the waters of Meriba.[p]
[9] Hear, my people, and I will admonish you;
O Israel, will you not hear me?
[10] There shall be no strange god among you[q]
nor shall you worship any alien god.
[11] I, the Lord, am your God who led you forth from the land of Egypt;
open wide your mouth, and I will fill it.*

II

[12] "But my people heard not my voice,
and Israel obeyed me not;
[13] So I gave them up to the hardness of their hearts;
they walked according to their own counsels.
[14] If only my people would hear me,
and Israel walk in my ways, [15] Quickly would I humble their enemies;
against their foes I would turn my hand.
[16] Those who hated the Lord would seek to flatter me,
but their fate would endure forever,
[17] While Israel I would feed with the best of wheat, and with honey from the rock* I would fill them."[r]

Ps 80 (81): Two distinct sections. The first section (2-6a) is a short song sung on the Feast of Tabernacles. The second section (6b-17) is a divine oracle in which the Lord reminds the people that it was He who led them out of Egypt and commanded them at that time to worship no other God but Him (7-11); He has punished them for their disobedience, but will now give them victory and prosperity if they obey Him (12-17).

80, 4: Blow the trumpet: to assemble the people for the feast. This custom was observed on various feasts, but it was especially prescribed for the first day of each month, that is, for the feast of the new moon, and in particular for the first day of the seventh month, during which month the Feast of Tabernacles, a very solemn feast, was celebrated on the fifteenth day, the full moon. Cf Lv 23, 24. 34-43; Nm 10, 10; 29, 1. 12.

80, 6: An unfamiliar speech I hear: these words are uttered by a prophet, who then continues to speak in God's name.

80, 7: A reference to the liberation of Israel from slavery in Egypt. The basket: for carrying clay to make bricks. Cf Ex 1, 14.

80, 11: Open wide your mouth, and I will fill it: God tells the people that, no matter how great their desires, He will fulfill them.

80, 17: Honey . . . rock: extreme abundance. Cf Jl 3, 18.

Ps 81 (82): The psalmist presents God Himself (1) rebuking the unjust judges (2-4) and passing sentences on them (5-7). A short prayer for universal justice concludes the psalm (8). Cf Is 3, 13ff for a similar judgment scene.

81, 1: The gods: human judges, who are "godlike" in their prerogative of establishing justice on earth. Cf Ps 57 (58), 2.

81, 5: The foundations of the earth: the very basis of law and order. Cf Ps 10 (11), 3.

81, 6: I said: You are gods: our Lord's own comment on these words is, "He called them gods to whom the word of God was addressed." Cf Jn 10, 34.

PSALM 81 (82)*

Judgment against Wicked Judges

[1] A psalm of Asaph.

God arises in the divine assembly;
he judges in the midst of the gods.*

I

[2] "How long will you judge unjustly and favor the cause of the wicked?
[3] Defend the lowly and the fatherless;
render justice to the afflicted and the destitute.
[4] Rescue the lowly and the poor;
from the hand of the wicked deliver them.

II

[5] "They know not, neither do they understand;
they go about in darkness;
all the foundations of the earth* are shaken.
[6] I said: [s]You are gods,*
all of you sons of the Most High;

7 Yet like men* you shall die,
and fall like any prince."
8 Rise, O God; judge the earth,
for yours are all the nations.*

PSALM 82 (83)*

Prayer against a Hostile Alliance

1 A song; a psalm of Asaph.

I

2 O God, do not remain unmoved;
be not silent, O God, and be not still!
3 For behold, your enemies raise a tumult,
and they who hate you lift up their heads.
4 Against your people they plot craftily;
they conspire against those whom you protect.
5 They say, "Come, let us destroy their nation;
let the name of Israel be remembered no more!"

6 Yes, they consult together with one mind,
and against you they are allied:
7 The tents of Edom and the Ismaelites,*
Moab and the Agarenes,
8 Gebal and Ammon and Amalec,
Philistia with the inhabitants of Tyre;
9 The Assyrians, too, are leagued with them;
they are the forces of the sons of Lot.

II

10 Deal with them as with Madian;*
as with Sisara and Jabin at the torrent Cison, 11 Who perished at Endor;
they became dung on the ground.
12 Make their nobles like Oreb and Zeb;
all their chiefs like Zebee and Salmana,
13 Who said, "Let us take for ourselves the dwelling place of God."

14 O my God, make them like leaves in a whirlwind, like chaff before the wind.
15 As a fire raging in a forest,
as a flame setting the mountains ablaze, 16 So pursue them with your tempest
and rout them with your storm.
17 Darken their faces with disgrace,
that men may seek your name, O Lord.
18 Let them be shamed and put to rout forever;
let them be confounded and perish, 19 Knowing that you alone are the Lord,
the Most High over all the earth.

PSALM 83 (84)*

Desire for the Sanctuary

1 For the leader; "upon the gittith." A psalm of the sons of Core.

I

2 How lovely is your dwelling place,
O Lord of hosts!
3 My soul yearns and pines
for the courts of the Lord.
My heart and my flesh
cry out for the living God.
4 Even the sparrow finds a home,*
and the swallow a nest
in which she puts her young—
Your altars, O Lord of hosts,
my king and my God!

II

5 Happy they who dwell in your house!
continually they praise you.
6 Happy the men whose strength you are!*
their hearts are set upon the pilgrimage:
7 When they pass through the arid valley,
they make a spring of it;

81, 7: Like men: like the rest of men.

81, 8: This verse can be fittingly understood as addressed to Christ, to whom all judgment has been given. Cf Jn 5, 22.

Ps 82 (83): The psalmist prays for divine aid against a powerful league of hostile nations (2-5), which he enumerates (6-9), asking God to overcome them as He did Israel's enemies of old (10-13), and to destroy them completely (14-19).

82, 7ff: Apart from the Assyrians, all the nations listed here were neighbors of Israel. The Agarenes were a seminomadic people of the desert regions east of Ammon and Moab. Cf 1 Par 5, 10. 19f. Gebal was a mountain region south of the Dead Sea. History knows of no occasion when all these peoples were leagued together against Israel. Perhaps their names are used here poetically as figures of the hostile Gentiles in general.

82, 10ff: For the historical events here referred to, see Jgs 4-8.

Ps 83 (84): Although similar in style and general content to Ps 41-42 (42-43), this seems to be one of the "Pilgrim Songs" sung on the journeys to the temple for the annual feasts. The psalmist expresses his ardent longing to visit the house of the Lord (2-4), describing the happiness of those who dwell there at all times or who at least have the privilege of going there as pilgrims (5-8); hence he prays that this privilege may be his (9-13).

83, 4: Since in God's providence even "the birds of the air have nests" (Mt 8, 20), all the more will the Lord welcome His pious pilgrims to the shelter of His sanctuary and the refuge of His altars.

83, 6ff: The Hebrew text of these two verses is obscure in several places.

the early rain clothes it with generous growth.
8 They go from strength to strength;
they shall see the God of gods in Sion.

III

9 O Lord of hosts, hear my prayer;
hearken, O God of Jacob!
10 O God, behold our shield,*
and look upon the face of your anointed.
11 I had rather one day in your courts
than a thousand elsewhere;
I had rather lie at the threshhold of the house of my God
than dwell in the tents of the wicked.
12 For a sun and a shield is the Lord God;
grace and glory he bestows;
The Lord withholds no good thing
from those who walk in sincerity.
13 O Lord of hosts,
happy the men who trust in you!

PSALM 84 (85)*

Prayer for Complete Restoration

1 For the leader. A psalm of the sons of Core.

I

2 You have favored, O Lord, your land;
you have restored the well-being of Jacob.
3 You have forgiven the guilt of your people;
you have covered all their sins.
4 You have withdrawn all your wrath;
you have revoked your burning anger.[t]

II

5 Restore us, O God our savior,
and abandon your displeasure against us.
6 Will you be ever angry with us,
prolonging your anger to all generations?
7 Will you not instead give us life;
and shall not your people rejoice in you?
8 Show us, O Lord, your kindness,
and grant us your salvation.

III

9 I will hear what God proclaims;*
the Lord—for he proclaims peace
To his people, and to his faithful ones,
and to those who put in him their hope.
10 Near indeed is his salvation to those who fear him,
glory* dwelling in our land.
11 Kindness and truth shall meet;*
justice and peace shall kiss.
12 Truth shall spring out of the earth,
and justice shall look down from heaven.
13 The Lord himself will give his benefits;
our land shall yield its increase.
14 Justice shall walk before him,
and salvation, along the way of his steps.

PSALM 85 (86)*

Prayer in Time of Distress

1 A prayer of David.

I

Incline your ear, O Lord; answer me,
for I am afflicted and poor.
2 Keep my life, for I am devoted to you;
save your servant who trusts in you.
3 You are my God; have pity on me, O Lord,
for to you I call all the day.
4 Gladden the soul of your servant,
for to you, O Lord, I lift up my soul;
5 For you, O Lord, are good and forgiving,
abounding in kindness to all who call upon you.[u]
6 Hearken, O Lord, to my prayer and attend to the sound of my pleading.
7 In the day of my distress I call upon you,
for you will answer me.

t Ps 13 (14), 7.—u Jl 2, 13.

83, 10: Our shield: the king. Cf Ps 88 (89), 19.

Ps 84 (85): After thanking God for the blessings so far received (2-4), the people beseech Him to remove the hardships which they still suffer (5-8); then a prophet tells them of the coming happiness which the Lord has revealed to him (9-14). The situation suggests the conditions in Judea during the early post-exilic period, fifth century B.C.; the thoughts are likewise similar to those expressed by the post-exilic prophets. Cf Ag 1, 5-11; 2, 6-9; Mal 3, 13-21.

84, 9: The prophet listens for God's revelation. Cf Hb 2, 1.

84, 10: Glory: the glory of the Lord which departed from Jerusalem when the temple was destroyed. Cf Ez 11, 23. Now it returns to the Holy Land. Cf Ag 2, 9.

84, 11-14: The social virtues are here poetically personified as courtiers of the returning king.

Ps 85 (86): A supplication for help (1-7. 11-17), divided in the middle by a short hymn of praise (8-10). Several of the verses occur in similar form in various other psalms, and they are here joined together with no close logical sequence.

II

8 There is none like you among the gods,* O Lord,
and there are no works like yours.[v] 9 All the nations you have made shall come and worship you, O Lord,[w]
and glorify your name.
10 For you are great, and you do wondrous deeds;
you alone are God.

III

11 Teach me, O Lord, your way that I may walk in your truth;
direct my heart that it may fear your name.
12 I will give thanks to you, O Lord my God,
with all my heart,
and I will glorify your name forever.
13 Great has been your kindness toward me;
you have rescued me from the depths of the nether world.[x] 14 O God, the haughty have risen up against me,
and the company of fierce men seeks my life,
nor do they set you before their eyes.
15 But you, O Lord, are a God merciful and gracious,
slow to anger, abounding in kindness and fidelity.
16 Turn toward me, and have pity on me;
give your strength to your servant,
and save the son of your handmaid.
17 Grant me a proof of your favor,
that my enemies may see, to their confusion,
that you, O Lord, have helped and comforted me.

PSALM 86 (87)*

Sion the Home of All Nations

1 A psalm of the sons of Core. A song.

His foundation upon the holy mountains
2 the Lord loves:
The gates* of Sion,
more than any dwelling of Jacob.
3 Glorious things are said of you,
O city of God!
4 I tell of Egypt* and Babylon
among those that know the Lord;
Of Philistia, Tyre, Ethiopia:
"This man was born there."
5 And of Sion they shall say:*
"One and all were born in her;
And he who has established her
is the Most High Lord."
6 They shall note, when the peoples are enrolled:
"This man was born there."
7 And all shall sing, in their festive dance:
"My home is within you."

PSALM 87 (88)*

Lament and Prayer in Affliction

1 A song; a psalm of the sons of Core. For the leader; according to Mahalath. For singing; a maskil of Heman the Ezrahite.

I

2 O Lord, my God, by day I cry out;
at night I clamor in your presence.
3 Let my prayer come before you;
incline your ear to my call for help,
4 For my soul is surfeited with troubles
and my life draws near to the nether world.
5 I am numbered with those who go down into the pit;[y]
I am a man without strength.
6 My couch* is among the dead,
like the slain who lie in the grave,
Whom you remember no longer
and who are cut off from your care.
7 You have plunged me into the bottom of the pit,
into the dark abyss.
8 Upon me your wrath lies heavy,
and with all your billows you overwhelm me.

v Ex 15, 11; Ps 88 (89), 7.—w Za 14, 16.—x Ps 29 (30), 4.—y Ps 27 (28), 1.

85, 8: The gods: those whom the pagans call "gods." In v 10 the psalmist clearly denies their reality. Cf Ex 15, 11; Dt 4, 7. Some translate the word elohim here not as "gods" but as "angels."

Ps 86 (87): A song of Sion, extolling the holy city as the spiritual home of all nations of the earth.

86, 2: The gates: the city itself, a common Hebrew idiom.

86, 4: Egypt: literally, "Rahab," the name of an ocean monster; here used poetically for Egypt. Cf Ps 88 (89), 11; Is 30, 7.

86, 5: Of Sion they shall say: most manuscripts of the Greek version read, " 'Mother Sion,' they shall say." St. Paul is probably alluding to this reading when in Gal 4, 26 he speaks of "Jerusalem which is our mother."

Ps 87 (88): The supplication of a desolate man in mortal illness. The psalmist complains that God seems to have abandoned him (2-9); he reminds the Lord that, if he dies, he can no longer praise Him (10-13), and bitterly bewails his misery (14-19).

87, 6: My couch: the meaning of the Hebrew is uncertain. Who lie in the grave: Hebrew thought would lead us to expect, "who are deprived of any grave," and this may have been the original reading. Cf Ps 62 (63), 11.

9 You have taken my friends away from me;
you have made me an abomination to them;
I am imprisoned, and I cannot escape.

II

10 My eyes have grown dim through affliction;
daily I call upon you, O Lord;
to you I stretch out my hands.
11 Will you work wonders for the dead?[z]
Will the shades arise to give you thanks?*
12 Do they declare your kindness in the grave,
your faithfulness among those who have perished?
13 Are your wonders made known in the darkness,
or your justice in the land of oblivion?

III

14 But I, O Lord, cry out to you;
with my morning prayer I wait upon you.
15 Why, O Lord, do you reject me;
why hide from me your face?
16 I am afflicted and in agony from my youth;
I am dazed with the burden of your dread.
17 Your furies have swept over me;
your terrors have cut me off.
18 They encompass me like water all the day;
on all sides they close in upon me.
19 Companion and neighbor you have taken away from me;
my only friend is darkness.

z 11-13: Ps 6, 6; Is 38, 18; Bar 2, 17.—a 2 Kgs 7, 16; Ps 131 (132), 11.—b 7ff: Ex 15, 11; Ps 85 (86), 8.

87, 11ff: See note on Ps 6, 6.

Ps 88 (89): An exilic or post-exilic psalm, but composed in part from older sources. Having announced his theme — God's covenant with David — (2-5), the psalmist first sings the praise of the Lord in phrases reminiscent of much older hymns (6-19). The divine promises to David, as narrated in 2 Kgs 7, 8-16, are then retold here at considerable length (20-38), in order to contrast these with the present sad state of affairs (39-46), when God seems to have forgotten His promises (47-52).

88, 2: The favors of the Lord: the promises of an everlasting dynasty which God made to David through the prophet Nathan. Cf v 50.

88, 6. 8: The holy ones: the heavenly spirits, called the sons of God in v 7.

88, 11: Rahab: a mythological sea monster whose name is used in the Bible merely as a poetical personification of the primeval chaos of Gn 1, 2. 6f. Here it is a symbol of God's dominion over the sea and over all rebellious creatures. Cf Jb 9, 13; 26, 12; Ps 73 (74), 13f; Is 51, 9.

88, 13: North and south: in Hebrew, saphon and yamin, which some retain here as proper nouns, the names of mountains sacred to the ancients, in order to have a better parallelism with the two mountains Thabor and Hermon, in the second half of the verse. "Saphon" is indeed mentioned elsewhere in a similar sense. Cf Ps 47 (48), 3; Is 14, 13. However, no "Mount Yamin" is known; perhaps it may be taken here as a synonym for Sinai.

PSALM 88 (89)*

Prayer for the Fulfillment of God's Promises to David

1 A maskil of Ethan the Ezrahite.

I

2 The favors of the Lord* I will sing forever;
through all generations my mouth shall proclaim your faithfulness.
3 For you have said, "My kindness is established forever";
in heaven you have confirmed your faithfulness:
4 "I have made a covenant with my chosen one,
I have sworn to David my servant:
5 Forever will I confirm your posterity and establish your throne for all generations."[a]

II

6 The heavens proclaim your wonders, O Lord,
and your faithfulness, in the assembly of the holy ones.*
7 For who in the skies can rank with the Lord?[b]
Who is like the Lord among the sons of God?
8 God is terrible in the council of the holy ones;
he is great and awesome beyond all round about him.
9 O Lord, God of hosts, who is like you?
Mighty are you, O Lord, and your faithfulness surrounds you.
10 You rule over the surging of the sea;
you still the swelling of its waves.
11 You have crushed Rahab* with a mortal blow;
with your strong arm you have scattered your enemies.
12 Yours are the heavens, and yours is the earth;
the world and its fullness you have founded;
13 North and south* you created;
Thabor and Hermon rejoice at your name.
14 Yours is a mighty arm;
strong is your hand, exalted your right hand.

15 Justice and judgment are the foundation of your throne;
kindness and truth go before you.
16 Happy the people who know the joyful shout;*
in the light of your countenance, O Lord, they walk.
17 At your name they rejoice all the day,
and through your justice they are exalted.
18 For you are the splendor of their strength,
and by your favor our horn* is exalted.
19 For to the Lord belongs our shield,
and to the Holy One of Israel, our king.

III

20 Once you spoke in a vision,[c]
and to your faithful ones* you said:
"Of a stripling I have made a champion;
over the people I have set a youth.
21 I have found David, my servant;
with my holy oil I have anointed him,[d] 22 That my hand may be always with him,
and that my arm may make him strong.
23 "No enemy shall deceive him,
nor shall the wicked afflict him.
24 But I will crush his foes before him
and those who hate him I will smite.
25 My faithfulness and my kindness shall be with him,
and through my name shall his horn be exalted.
26 I will set his hand upon the sea,*
his right hand upon the rivers.
27 "He shall say of me, 'You are my father,
my God, the Rock, my savior.'
28 And I will make him the first-born, highest of the kings of the earth.
29 Forever I will maintain my kindness toward him,
and my covenant with him stands firm.
30 I will make his posterity endure forever
and his throne as the days of heaven.*
31 "If his sons forsake my law*
and walk not according to my ordinances,[e] 32 If they violate my statutes
and keep not my commands, 33 I will punish their crime with a rod
and their guilt with stripes.
34 Yet my kindness I will not take from him,
nor will I belie my faithfulness.
35 "I will not violate my covenant;
the promise of my lips I will not alter.
36 Once, by my holiness, have I sworn;
I will not be false to David.
37 His posterity shall continue forever,
and his throne shall be like the sun before me;
38 Like the moon, which remains forever—
a faithful witness in the sky."

IV

39 Yet you have rejected and spurned[f]
and been enraged at your anointed.
40 You have renounced the covenant with your servant,
and defiled his crown in the dust.
41 You have broken down all his walls;
you have laid his strongholds in ruins.
42 All who pass by the way have plundered him;
he is made the reproach of his neighbors.
43 You have exalted the right hands of his foes,
you have gladdened all his enemies.
44 You have turned back his sharp sword
and have not sustained him in battle.
45 You have deprived him of his luster
and hurled his throne to the ground.*

c 20-38: 2 Kgs 7, 4. 8-16; 1 Par 17, 3. 7-14.—d Acts 13, 22.—e 31-33: Lv 26, 14-33.—f 39-46: Ps 43 (44), 10-25.

88, 16: The joyful shout: one of the characteristic features of Israelite public worship of God.

88, 18. 25: Horn: a symbol of strength. See note on Ps 17 (18), 3.

88, 20: Your faithful ones: Nathan and David.

88, 26: The sea: the Mediterranean to the west. The rivers: the Euphrates and its tributaries to the east.

88, 30: As the days of heaven: as steadfast as the sun in the sky. Cf Ps 71 (72), 5. 17 and vv 37f of this psalm.

88, 31-38: Note that God's promises are in part provisional and in part absolute. Inasmuch as David's descendants failed to carry out the conditions of the covenant, God did not fulfill His promises to them. But as absolute promises they find complete fulfillment in the Son of God who is also the Son of David.

88, 45: The Hebrew text of this verse is somewhat obscure.

46 You have shortened the days of his youth;
you have covered him with shame.

V

47 How long, O Lord? Will you hide yourself forever?
Will your wrath burn like fire?
48 Remember how short my life is;
how frail you created all the children of men!
49 What man shall live, and not see death,
but deliver himself from the power of the nether world?
50 Where are your ancient favors, O Lord,
which you pledged to David by your faithfulness?
51 Remember, O Lord, the insults to your servants:
I bear in my bosom all the accusations of the nations
52 With which your enemies have reviled, O Lord, with which they have reviled your anointed on his way!

* * *

53 Blessed be the Lord forever.[g]
Amen, and amen!*

IV: THE FOURTH BOOK — Psalms 89-105

PSALM 89 (90)*

God's Eternity and Man's Frailty

1 A prayer of Moses, the man of God.

I

O Lord, you have been our refuge through all generations.
2 Before the mountains were begotten
and the earth and the world were brought forth, from everlasting to everlasting you are God.[b] 3 You turn man back to dust, saying, "Return,* O children of men."
4 For a thousand years in your sight
are as yesterday, now that it is past, or as a watch of the night.*
5 You make an end of them in their sleep;
the next morning they are like the changing grass,*
6 Which at dawn springs up anew,
but by evening wilts and fades.*

II

7 Truly we are consumed by your anger,
and by your wrath we are put to rout.
8 You have kept our iniquities before you,
our hidden sins in the light of your scrutiny.
9 All our days have passed away in your indignation;
we have spent our years like a sigh.
10 Seventy is the sum of our years,
or eighty, if we are strong,[i]
And most of them are fruitless toil,
for they pass quickly and we drift away.
11 Who knows the fury of your anger
or your indignation toward those who should fear you?

III

12 Teach us to number our days aright,
that we may gain wisdom of heart.
13 Return, O Lord! How long?
Have pity on your servants!
14 Fill us at daybreak with your kindness,
that we may shout for joy and gladness all our days.
15 Make us glad, for the days when* you afflicted us,
for the years when we saw evil.
16 Let your work be seen by your servants
and your glory by their children;
17 And may the gracious care of the Lord our God be ours;
prosper the work of our hands for us!*
[Prosper the work of our hands!]

g Pss 40 (41), 14; 71 (72), 18f; 105 (106), 48.—h Ps 92 (93), 2; Hb 1, 12.—i Sir 18, 7; Is 65, 20.

88, 53: The doxology at the end of the Third Book of the Psalms; it is not a part of the preceding psalm.

Ps 89 (90): A meditation on the brevity and misery of life. The psalmist contrasts God's eternity with man's short span of life on earth (1-6), and sees in suffering and death the punishment for sin (7-11); he prays God to grant him some respite of happiness before death (12-17).

89, 3: Saying, "Return . . . ": one word of God is enough to reduce man to the dust from which he was created. There is an allusion here to the sentence passed on Adam after the fall. Cf Gn 2, 7; 3, 19.

89, 4: A watch of the night: the Hebrews divided the night into three sentry periods or "watches." Cf Jgs 7, 19.

89, 5: The Hebrew text is obscure and variously translated. The revised Latin Psalter renders it, "You make an end of them; they become like sleep at dawn."

89, 6: The transitory nature of grass under the scorching sun of the Orient was proverbial. Cf Pss 102 (103), 15f; 128 (129), 6; Is 40, 6ff.

89, 15: For the days when: either, "as a recompense for the days when," or, "for as many days as."

89, 17: Prosper the work of our hands: the second occurrence of these words is probably an accidental repetition.

PSALM 90 (91)*

Security under God's Protection

I

1 You who dwell in the shelter of the Most High,
who abide in the shadow of the Almighty,
2 Say to the Lord, "My refuge and my fortress,
my God, in whom I trust." j
3 For he will rescue you from the snare of the fowler,
from the destroying pestilence.
4 With his pinions he will cover you,
and under his wings you shall take refuge;
his faithfulness is a buckler and a shield.
5 You shall not fear the terror of the night
nor the arrow that flies by day;
6 Not the pestilence that roams in darkness
nor the devastating plague at noon.
7 Though a thousand fall at your side,
ten thousand at your right side,
near you it shall not come.
8 Rather with your eyes* shall you behold
and see the requital of the wicked, 9 Because you have the Lord for your refuge;
you have made the Most High your stronghold.
10 No evil shall befall you,
nor shall affliction come near your tent, 11 For to his angels he has given command about you,*
that they guard you in all your ways. k 12 Upon their hands they shall bear you up, lest you dash your foot against a stone.
13 You shall tread upon the asp and the viper;
you shall trample down the lion and the dragon.

II

14 Because he clings to me, I will deliver him;
I will set him on high because he acknowledges my name.
15 He shall call upon me, and I will answer him;
I will be with him in distress;
I will deliver him and glorify him;
16 with length of days I will gratify him
and will show him my salvation.

PSALM 91 (92)*

Praise of God's Just Government of Mankind

1 A psalm; a song for the Sabbath day.

I

2 It is good to give thanks to the Lord,
to sing praise to your name, Most High,
3 To proclaim your kindness at dawn
and your faithfulness throughout the night, 4 With ten-stringed instrument and lyre,
with melody upon the harp.
5 For you make me glad, O Lord, by your deeds;
at the works of your hands I rejoice.

II

6 How great are your works, O Lord! l
How very deep are your thoughts!
7 A senseless man knows not,
nor does a fool understand this.
8 Though the wicked flourish like grass
and all evildoers thrive, 9 They are destined for eternal destruction;
while you, O Lord, are the Most High forever.

III

10 For behold, your enemies, O Lord,
for behold, your enemies shall perish;
all evildoers shall be scattered.

j 2 Kgs 22, 3; Ps 17 (18), 3.—k Mt 4, 6; Lk 4, 10f.—l Ps 103 (104), 24.

Ps 90 (91): By means of various metaphors the psalmist indicates the benefits of trusting in God (1-13); in the epilogue God Himself speaks, confirming the psalmist's words (14-16).

90, 8: Rather with your eyes: the pious man will be a spectator of these plagues and afflictions without being struck himself.

90, 11f: These words were quoted by Satan when he tempted Christ to presumption against God's providence. This promise would not be true if we should put ourselves unnecessarily into danger. His angels: the doctrine of guardian angels is common in the Old Testament. Cf Gn 24, 7; Ex 23, 20; Ps 33 (34), 8.

Ps 91 (92): A hymn extolling God's just deeds (2-5); the wicked fail to understand them (6-9), but they will receive their due punishment (10-12), whereas the just will be rewarded with blessedness (13-16).

11 You have exalted my horn like the wild bull's;*
you have anointed me with rich oil.
12 And my eye has looked down upon my foes,
and my ears have heard of the fall of my wicked adversaries.

IV

13 The just man shall flourish like the palm tree,
like the cedar of Lebanon shall he grow.
14 They that are planted* in the house of the Lord shall flourish in the courts of our God.
15 They shall bear fruit even in old age; vigorous and sturdy shall they be,
16 Declaring how just is the Lord, my Rock, in whom there is no wrong.

PSALM 92 (93)*

The Glory of the Lord's Kingdom

1 The Lord is king,* in splendor robed;
robed is the Lord and girt about with strength;
And he has made the world firm, not to be moved.
2 Your throne stands firm from of old;
from everlasting you are, O Lord.[m]

3 The floods lift up,* O Lord,
the floods lift up their voice;
the floods lift up their tumult.
4 More powerful than the roar of many waters,
more powerful than the breakers of the sea—
powerful on high is the Lord.
5 Your decrees are worthy of trust indeed;
holiness befits your house,
O Lord, for length of days.

PSALM 93 (94)*

A Warning to Israel's Oppressors

A

I

1 God of vengeance, Lord,
God of vengeance, show yourself.
2 Rise up, judge of the earth;
render their deserts to the proud.
3 How long, O Lord, shall the wicked,
how long shall the wicked glory,
4 Mouthing insolent speeches,
boasting, all the evildoers?

II

5 Your people, O Lord, they trample down,
your inheritance they afflict.
6 Widow and stranger they slay,
the fatherless they murder,
7 And they say, "The Lord sees not;
the God of Jacob perceives not."[n]

III

8 Understand, you senseless ones among the people;
and, you fools, when will you be wise?
9 Shall he who shaped the ear not hear?
or he who formed the eye not see?
10 Shall he who instructs nations not chastise,
he who teaches men knowledge?
11 The Lord knows the thoughts of men,
and that they are vain.

B

I

12 Happy the man whom you instruct, O Lord,
whom by your law you teach, 13 Giving him rest from evil days,
till the pit be dug for the wicked.
14 For the Lord will not cast off his people,
nor abandon his inheritance;
15 But judgment shall again be with justice,*
and all the upright of heart shall follow it.

m Ps 89 (90), 2; Hb 1, 12.—n Jb 22, 13; Pss 9B (10), 11; 72 (73), 11.

91, 11: My horn like the wild bull's: see note on Ps 17 (18), 3. The horns of the wild bull, the bos primigenius, were especially formidable. Cf Ps 21 (22), 22; Dt 33, 17.

91, 14: Planted: the pious are so steadfast in their attendance in the temple that they can figuratively be said to be rooted there. These words do not imply that cedars and palm trees actually grew in the temple. Cf Pss 51 (52), 10; 127 (128), 3.

Ps 92 (93): A hymn in praise of the eternal kingship of the Lord (1f), who triumphs over the stormy forces of rebellion (3f); hence He is always to be obeyed and worshiped (5).

92, 1: Is king: literally, "has become king." This is the cry with which the people acclaimed a new king at his coronation. Therefore this psalm as well as Pss 95 (96), 96 (97) and 98 (99) can be understood as enthronement psalms of the Messias celebrating the inauguration of His reign.

92, 3: The raging storm is here a figure of chaos and rebellion.

Ps 93 (94): A fervent prayer to God together with an indictment of wicked tyrants and unjust judges. Calling down divine vengeance upon these (1-4), as he sets forth their crimes and blasphemies (5-7), the psalmist directly rebukes them for their folly (8-11); then in a calmer tone he speaks of the blessedness of justice and fidelity to God's law (12-15). Confident of the Lord's assistance (16-19), he affirms his unwavering faith in the triumph of righteousness (20-23).

93, 15: The decisions of the judges will again be just.

II

16 Who will rise up for me against the wicked?
Who will stand by me against the evildoers?
17 Were not the Lord my help,
I would soon dwell in the silent grave.
18 When I say, "My foot is slipping,"
your kindness, O Lord, sustains me; 19 When cares abound within me,
your comfort gladdens my soul.

III

20 How could the tribunal of wickedness be leagued with you,
which creates burdens in the guise of law?
21 Though they attack the life of the just and condemn innocent blood, 22 Yet the Lord is my stronghold,
and my God the Rock of my refuge.
23 And he will requite them for their evildoing,
and for their wickedness he will destroy them;
the Lord, our God, will destroy them.

PSALM 94 (95)*

A Call to Praise and Obedience

I

1 Come, let us sing joyfully to the Lord;
let us acclaim the Rock of our salvation.
2 Let us greet him with thanksgiving;
let us joyfully sing psalms to him
3 For the Lord is a great God,
and a great king above all gods;
4 In his hands are the depths of the earth,
and the tops of the mountains are his.
5 His is the sea, for he has made it,
and the dry land, which his hands have formed.

II

6 Come, let us bow down in worship;
let us kneel before the Lord who made us.
7 For he is our God,
and we are the people he shepherds, the flock he guides.

III

Oh, that today you would hear his voice:[o]
8 "Harden not your hearts as at Meriba,*
as in the day of Massa in the desert, 9 Where your fathers tempted me;
they tested me though they had seen my works.[p]
10 Forty years I loathed that generation, and I said: They are a people of erring heart,
and they know not my ways.
11 Therefore I swore in my anger:
They shall not enter into my rest."*

PSALM 95 (96)*

The Glories of the Lord, the King of the Universe

I

1 Sing to the Lord a new song;[q]
sing to the Lord, all you lands.
2 Sing to the Lord; bless his name;
announce his salvation, day after day.
3 Tell his glory among the nations;
among all peoples, his wondrous deeds.

II

4 For great is the Lord and highly to be praised;
awesome is he, beyond all gods.
5 For all the gods of the nations are things of nought,[r]
but the Lord made the heavens.
6 Splendor and majesty go before him;
praise and grandeur are in his sanctuary.

III

7 Give to the Lord, you families of nations, give to the Lord glory and praise;[s]
8 give to the Lord the glory due his name!

Ps 94 (95): The Venite Exsultemus, the psalm which daily opens the Divine Office of the Church. Twice the psalmist invites the people to praise and worship the Lord (1f. 6), for He is king of all His creatures (3-5) and shepherd of His flock (7a-b). In the last strophe the psalmist, speaking in God's name, warns the people to be more faithful to Him than were their forefathers in the journey to the Promised Land (7c-11).

94, 8: Meriba: literally, "contention"; the place where the Israelites quarreled with the Lord. Massa: the place of "testing," where they put Him to the trial. Cf Ex 17, 7; Nm 20, 13.

94, 11: My rest: in Heb 4 this is applied to the eternal rest of heaven; here it refers directly to the Promised Land.

Ps 95 (96): A hymn inviting all mankind to praise the glories of the Lord (1-3), for He alone is God (4-6); to the just king of all men belongs adoration (7-10); even inanimate creation should praise Him (11ff). This psalm somewhat altered occurs in 1 Par 16, 23-33.

Bring gifts, and enter his courts;
9 worship the Lord in holy attire.
Tremble before him, all the earth;
10 say among the nations: The Lord is king.
He has made the world firm, not to be moved;
he governs the peoples with equity.

IV

11 Let the heavens be glad and the earth rejoice;
let the sea and what fills it resound;
12 let the plains be joyful and all that is in them!
Then shall all the trees of the forest exult 13 before the Lord, for he comes;
for he comes to rule the earth.
He shall rule the world with justice
and the peoples with his constancy.

PSALM 96 (97)*

The Divine King, the Just Judge of All

I

1 The Lord is king; let the earth rejoice;
let the many isles be glad.
2 Clouds and darkness are round about him,† justice and judgment are the foundation of his throne.
3 Fire goes before him
and consumes his foes round about.
4 His lightnings illumine the world;
the earth sees and trembles.
5 The mountains melt like wax before the Lord,
before the Lord of all the earth.
6 The heavens proclaim his justice,
and all peoples see his glory.

II

7 All who worship graven things are put to shame,
who glory in the things of nought;
all gods* are prostrate before him.
8 Sion hears and is glad,
and the cities of Juda rejoice
because of your judgments, O Lord.
9 Because you, O Lord, are the Most High over all the earth,
exalted far above all gods.

10 The Lord loves those that hate evil;
he guards the lives of his faithful ones;
from the hand of the wicked he delivers them.
11 Light dawns for the just;
and gladness, for the upright of heart.
12 Be glad in the Lord, you just,
and give thanks to his holy name.

† Ex 19, 16; Dt 4, 11; 5, 22; 3 Kgs 8, 12.

Ps 96 (97): The first stanza of this hymn is a theophany portraying the coming of the Lord as judge (1-6); Israel rejoices to behold the overthrow of paganism (7-9) and the rewarding of the true worshipers of God (10-12).

96, 7: All gods: some render, with the Greek, "All the angels." Cf Heb 1, 6.

Ps 97 (98): A hymn of praise, very similar to Ps 95 (96), extolling the Lord for the victory He has given to Israel (1-3); all the nations of the earth and even inanimate creation should welcome this just Savior with joy (4-9).

97, 1: His right hand . . . his holy arm: concrete expressions for God's infinite power.

PSALM 97 (98)*

The Lord, the Victorious King and Just Judge

1 A psalm.

I

Sing to the Lord a new song,
for he has done wondrous deeds;
His right hand has won victory for him,
his holy arm.*
2 The Lord has made his salvation known:
in the sight of the nations he has revealed his justice.
3 He has remembered his kindness and his faithfulness toward the house of Israel.
All the ends of the earth have seen
the salvation by our God.

II

4 Sing joyfully to the Lord, all you lands;
break into song; sing praise.
5 Sing praise to the Lord with the harp,
with the harp and melodious song.
6 With trumpets and the sound of the horn
sing joyfully before the King, the Lord.

III

7 Let the sea and what fills it resound,
the world and those who dwell in it;
8 Let the rivers clap their hands,
the mountains shout with them for joy
9 Before the Lord, for he comes,
for he comes to rule the earth;
He will rule the world with justice
and the peoples with equity.

PSALM 98 (99)*

The Lord the Holy King

I

1 The Lord is king; the peoples tremble;
he is throned upon the cherubim;*
the earth quakes.
2 The Lord in Sion is great,
he is high above all the peoples.
3 Let them praise your great and awesome name;
holy is he!

II

4 The King in his might loves justice;
you have established equity;
justice and judgment in Jacob you have wrought.
5 Extol the Lord, our God,
and worship at his footstool;*
holy is he!

III

6 Moses and Aaron were among his priests,
and Samuel, among those who called upon his name;
they called upon the Lord, and he answered them.
7 From the pillar of cloud he spoke to them; [u]
they heard his decrees and the law he gave them.
8 O Lord, our God, you answered them;
a forgiving God you were to them,
though requiting their misdeeds.
9 Extol the Lord, our God,
and worship at his holy mountain;
for holy is the Lord, our God.

PSALM 99 (100)*

Processional Hymn

1 A psalm of thanksgiving.

Sing joyfully to the Lord, all you lands;
2 serve the Lord with gladness;
come before him with joyful song.
3 Know that the Lord is God;
he made us, his we are;
his people, the flock he tends.*
4 Enter his gates with thanksgiving,
his courts with praise;
Give thanks to him; bless his name,
5 for he is good:
the Lord, whose kindness endures forever,
and his faithfulness, to all generations.

PSALM 100 (101)*

Norm of Life for Rulers

1 A psalm of David.

Of kindness and judgment I will sing;
to you, O Lord, I will sing praise.
2 I will persevere in the way of integrity;
when will you come to me?*
I will walk in the integrity of my heart,
within my house;
3 I will not set before my eyes
any base thing.
I hate him who does perversely;
he shall not remain with me.
4 A crooked heart shall be far from me;
evil I will not know.
5 Whoever slanders his neighbor in secret,
him will I destroy.
The man of haughty eyes and puffed-up heart
I will not endure.
6 My eyes are upon the faithful of the land,
that they may dwell with me.
He who walks in the way of integrity
shall be in my service.
7 He shall not dwell within my house
who practices deceit.
He who speaks falsehood shall not stand
before my eyes.
8 Each morning* I will destroy
all the wicked of the land,
And uproot from the city of the Lord
all evildoers.

u Ex 33, 9; Nm 12, 5.

Ps 98 (99): Another hymn in praise of the Lord as king, but here with special emphasis on His holiness. Each of the three strophes ends in a varying refrain (3b. 5. 9). The people extol the Lord's majesty (1-3a) and just rule (4), as well as His dealings with their great leaders of old (6-8).

98, 1: The cherubim: the figures of angels with outspread wings on the Ark of the Covenant. Cf Ex 25, 22; 1 Kgs 4, 4; 2 Kgs 6, 2; Ps 79 (80), 2.

98, 5: His footstool: the Ark itself. Cf 1 Par 28, 2; Ps 131 (132), 7.

Ps 99 (100): A short hymn, sung at the solemn entry into the temple, probably in connection with the offering up of a thanksgiving sacrifice.

99, 3: Although the people call on all the nations of the earth to join them in their hymn, they are conscious of being the chosen people of the one true God.

Ps 100 (101): After an introductory strophe setting forth his theme (1-2b), the psalmist pronounces several good resolutions concerning the exercise of his authority, both in his own conduct (2c-4) and in his suppression of evil in others (5-8).

100, 2: When will you come to me?: as a reward for his virtue, the psalmist desires union with God. With a slight emendation of the Hebrew text some render, "I will attend to the affairs of the wholehearted man whenever he comes to me."

100, 8: Each morning: the normal time for administering justice. Cf 2 Kgs 15, 2; Jer 21, 12.

PSALM 101 (102)*

Prayer in Time of Distress

[1] The prayer of an afflicted one when he is faint and pours out his anguish before the Lord.

I

[2] O Lord, hear my prayer,
and let my cry come to you.
[3] Hide not your face from me
in the day of my distress.
Incline your ear to me;
in the day when I call, answer me speedily.
[4] For my days vanish like smoke,
and my bones burn like fire.
[5] Withered and dried up like grass is my heart;
I forget to eat my bread.
[6] Because of my insistent sighing
I am reduced to skin and bone.
[7] I am like a desert owl;*
I have become like an owl among the ruins.
[8] I am sleepless, and I moan;
I am like a sparrow alone on the housetop.
[9] All the day my enemies revile me;
in their rage against me they make a curse of me.*
[10] For I eat ashes like bread
and mingle my drink with tears, [11] Because of your fury and your wrath;
for you lifted me up only to cast me down.
[12] My days are like a lengthening shadow,*
and I wither like grass.[v]

II

[13] But you, O Lord, abide forever,
and your name through all generations.
[14] You will arise and have mercy on Sion,
for it is time to pity her,
for the appointed time has come.
[15] For her stones are dear to your servants,
and her dust moves them to pity.
[16] And the nations shall revere your name, O Lord,
and all the kings of the earth your glory,[w] [17] When the Lord has rebuilt Sion
and appeared in his glory;
[18] When he has regarded the prayer of the destitute,
and not despised their prayer.

[19] Let this be written for the generation to come,
and let his future creatures praise the Lord:
[20] "The Lord looked down from his holy height,
from heaven he beheld the earth, [21] To hear the groaning of the prisoners,
to release those doomed to die"— [22] That the name of the Lord may be declared in Sion;
and his praise, in Jerusalem, [23] When the peoples gather together,
and the kingdoms, to serve the Lord.[x]

III

[24] He has broken down my strength in the way;
he has cut short my days.
[25] I say: O my God,
Take me not hence in the midst of my days;*
through all generations your years endure.
[26] Of old you established the earth,[y]
and the heavens are the work of your hands.
[27] They shall perish, but you remain
though all of them grow old like a garment.
Like clothing you change them, and they are changed,
[28] but you are the same, and your years have no end.
[29] The children of your servants shall abide,
and their posterity shall continue in your presence.

v Jb 8, 9; 14, 2; Pss 108 (109), 23; 143 (144), 4; Wis 2, 5.—w Is 59, 19.—x Za 2, 11; 8, 22.—y 26ff: Heb 1, 10ff.

Ps 101 (102): A composite psalm of three distinct parts. In the first section (2-12), the psalmist prays as a man who is very ill and abandoned by all; in the second, he prays for the restoration of Sion (13-18) and for her exiled children (19-23); the third section is a meditation on the brevity of human life compared to God's unchanging eternity (24-29). The psalm in its present form is perhaps a compilation made from parts of older psalms. This is the fifth of the Penitential Psalms.

101, 7: A desert owl: what exact species of birds the Hebrew words signify is uncertain, but evidently the solitary life of these birds as well as their desolate surroundings forms the point of comparison. Cf v 8b.

101, 9: They make a curse of me: the enemies of the psalmist use his name when they curse, saying to others, "May you be as miserable as this man."

101, 12: A lengthening shadow: life's day draws to a close.

101, 25: In the midst of my days: when the normal span of life is but half completed. Cf Is 38, 10; Jer 17, 11.

PSALM 102 (103)*

Praise of Divine Goodness

[1] Of David.

I

Bless the Lord, O my soul;
and all my being, bless his holy name.
[2] Bless the Lord, O my soul,
and forget not all his benefits;
[3] He pardons all your iniquities,
he heals all your ills.
[4] He redeems your life from destruction,
he crowns you with kindness and compassion,
[5] He fills your lifetime with good;
your youth is renewed like the eagle's.*

II

[6] The Lord secures justice
and the rights of all the oppressed.
[7] He has made known his ways to Moses,
and his deeds to the children of Israel.
[8] Merciful and gracious is the Lord,
slow to anger and abounding in kindness.[z] [9] He will not always chide,
nor does he keep his wrath forever.
[10] Not according to our sins does he deal with us,
nor does he requite us according to our crimes.

III

[11] For as the heavens are high above the earth,
so surpassing is his kindness toward those who fear him.
[12] As far as the east is from the west,
so far has he put our transgressions from us.
[13] As a father has compassion on his children,
so the Lord has compassion on those who fear him, [14] For he knows how we are formed;
he remembers that we are dust.
[15] Man's days are like those of grass;
like a flower of the field he blooms;
[16] The wind sweeps over him and he is gone,
and his place knows him no more.
[17] But the kindness of the Lord is from eternity
to eternity toward those who fear him,
And his justice toward children's children [18] among those who keep his covenant
and remember to fulfill his precepts.

IV

[19] The Lord has established his throne in heaven,
and his kingdom rules over all.
[20] Bless the Lord, all you his angels,[a]
you mighty in strength, who do his bidding, obeying his spoken word.
[21] Bless the Lord, all you his hosts,
his ministers, who do his will.
[22] Bless the Lord, all his works,
everywhere in his domain.
Bless the Lord, O my soul!

PSALM 103 (104)*

Praise of God the Creator

I

[1] Bless the Lord, O my soul!
O Lord, my God, you are great indeed!
You are clothed with majesty and glory,
[2] robed in light* as with a cloak.
You have spread out the heavens like a tent-cloth;
[3] you have constructed your palace upon the waters.*
You make the clouds your chariot;
you travel on the wings of the wind.
[4] You make the winds your messengers,
and flaming fire* your ministers.[b]

z Ex 34, 6, Nm 14, 18.—a 20ff: Ps 148, 2.—b Heb 1, 7.

Ps 102 (103): A hymn of thanksgiving, remarkable for its tender piety, in praise of the Lord's generosity to the psalmist himself (1-5) as well as to his nation (6-10). God's mercy is so great because He knows man's frailty (11-18); therefore the psalmist calls upon the heavenly spirits and all creation to join him in his hymn of grateful praise (19-22).

102, 5: Your youth is renewed like the eagle's: because of its long life—sometimes covering the span of a hundred years—the eagle was a symbol of perennial youth and vigor. Cf Is 40, 31. It is doubtful whether there is any allusion here to the fabled phoenix.

Ps 103 (104): A magnificent hymn praising God's creative wisdom and power. Filled with wonder at the glorious works of the Creator, the psalmist depicts in vivid colors the marvels of the atmosphere and sky (1-4); of the dry land and the ocean (5-9); of the streams and fields that give drink and food to man and beast and bird (10-18); of the sun and moon, with the activities of day and night (19-23); and of the manifold life in the mighty sea (24-26). Acknowledging that it is the Lord who governs and sustains all His creatures (27-30), the psalmist proclaims His omnipotence and sanctity (31-35).

103, 2: Light: created on the first day. In general the psalmist follows the order of creation as given in Gn 1.

103, 3: Your palace upon the waters: God's heavenly dwelling above the upper waters of the sky. Cf Gn 1, 6f.

103, 4: Flaming fire: lightning. In Heb 1, 7 this verse is cited as an argument for the superiority of Christ over the angels: if God uses mere wind and lightning as His messengers and ministers, then the ministering spirits in heaven whom God also uses as His messengers must be immeasurably

II

5 You fixed the earth upon its foundation,*
not to be moved forever;
6 With the ocean, as with a garment, you covered it;*
above the mountains the waters stood.
7 At your rebuke they fled,
at the sound of your thunder they took to flight;
8 As the mountains rose, they went down the valleys
to the place you had fixed for them.
9 You set a limit they may not pass,
nor shall they cover the earth again.

III

10 You send forth springs into the watercourses that wind among the mountains, 11 And give drink to every beast of the field,
till the wild asses quench their thirst.
12 Beside them the birds of heaven dwell;
from among the branches they send forth their song.
13 You water the mountains from your palace;*
the earth is replete with the fruit of your works.
14 You raise grass for the cattle,
and vegetation for men's use,
Producing bread from the earth,
15 and wine to gladden men's hearts,
So that their faces gleam with oil,
and bread fortifies the hearts of men.
16 Well watered are the trees of the Lord,
the cedars of Lebanon, which he planted;
17 In them the birds build their nests;
fir trees are the home of the stork.
18 The high mountains are for wild goats;
the cliffs are a refuge for rock-badgers.*

IV

19 You made the moon to mark the seasons; [c]
the sun knows the hour of its setting.
20 You bring darkness, and it is night;
then all the beasts of the forest roam about;
21 Young lions roar for the prey
and seek their food from God.
22 When the sun rises, they withdraw and couch in their dens.
23 Man goes forth to his work
and to his tillage till the evening.

V

24 How manifold are your works, O Lord! [d]
In wisdom you have wrought them all—
the earth is full of your creatures;
25 The sea also, great and wide,
in which are schools without number of living things both small and great, 26 And where ships* move about with Leviathan, which you formed to make sport of it.

VI

27 They all* look to you to give them food in due time.
28 When you give it to them, they gather it;
when you open your hand, they are filled with good things.
29 If you hide your face, they are dismayed;
if you take away their breath, they perish
and return to their dust.
30 When you send forth your spirit,* they are created,
and you renew the face of the earth.

VII

31 May the glory of the Lord endure forever;
may the Lord be glad in his works!*
32 He who looks upon the earth, and it trembles;

c Sir 43, 6ff.—d Ps 91 (92), 6.

lower than the eternal Son of God. In Greek the argument is more striking because the word pneuma means both "wind" and "spirit," while the word angelos means both "messenger" and "angel."

103, 5: The ancients compared the earth to a large building set upon firm foundations.

103, 6-9: According to Gn 1, 9f the whole earth was once covered with water; by elevating a part of the earth, God made the dry land appear.

103, 13: God is pictured as sending down the rain from the reservoir of the upper waters referred to in v 3. Cf Gn 7, 11; Jb 38, 22; Sir 43, 14.

103, 18: Rock-badgers: the hyrax syriacus, a small, hare-like, ungulate mammal. Cf Lv 11, 5; Dt 14, 7; Prv 30, 26.

103, 26: Ships: some amend the Hebrew text to read, "sea dragons," for the sake of the parallelism with Leviathan. The latter was the name of a mythological sea monster personifying primeval chaos. Cf Ps 73 (74), 14; Is 27, 1. However, in Jb 40, 25 it stands for the crocodile, and here it may well signify the whale or some other large marine creature.

103, 27: They all: all the creatures, man included, mentioned in vv 10-26.

103, 30: Your spirit: the "breath" or spirit of God is the divine creative power, the source of all life in nature. Cf Gn 1, 2; 2, 7. So also the Holy Spirit of God is the source of all supernatural life. Hence, this verse is applied by the Church to the Third Person of the Blessed Trinity.

103, 31: Glad in his works: cf Gn 1, 31, "God saw that all he had made was very good."

who touches the mountains, and they smoke!
33 I will sing to the Lord all my life;
I will sing praise to my God while I live.[e]
34 Pleasing to him be my theme;
I will be glad in the Lord.
35 May sinners cease from the earth,
and may the wicked be no more.
Bless the Lord, O my soul! Alleluia.

PSALM 104 (105)*
God's Fidelity to His Promise

I

1 Give thanks to the Lord, invoke his name;[f]
make known among the nations his deeds.
2 Sing to him, sing his praise,
proclaim all his wondrous deeds.
3 Glory in his holy name;
rejoice, O hearts that seek the Lord!
4 Look to the Lord in his strength;
seek to serve him constantly.
5 Recall the wondrous deeds that he has wrought,
his portents, and the judgments he has uttered, 6 You descendants of Abraham, his servants,
sons of Jacob, his chosen ones!

7 He, the Lord, is our God;
throughout the earth his judgments prevail. (II)
8 He remembers forever his covenant which he made binding for a thousand generations—9 Which he entered into with Abraham and by his oath to Isaac;
10 Which he established for Jacob by statute,
for Israel as an everlasting covenant,
11 Saying, "To you will I give the land of Chanaan
as your allotted inheritance."[g]

III

12 When they were few in number,[h]
a handful, and strangers there, 13 Wandering from nation to nation
and from one kingdom to another people, 14 He let no man oppress them,
and for their sake he rebuked kings:*
15 "Touch not my anointed,
and to my prophets* do no harm."

IV

16 When he called down a famine on the land[i]
and ruined the crop that sustained them,*
17 He sent a man before them,
Joseph, sold as a slave;[j]
18 They had weighed him down with fetters,
and he was bound with chains,[k]
19 Till his prediction came to pass and the word of the Lord proved him true.[l] 20 The king sent and released him,
the ruler of the peoples set him free.[m] 21 He made him lord of his house and ruler of all his possessions,[n] 22 That he might train his princes to be like him and teach his elders wisdom.

V

23 Then Israel came to Egypt,[o]
and Jacob sojourned in the land of Ham.*
24 He greatly increased his people and made them stronger than their foes,[p] (VI) 25 Whose hearts he changed, so that they hated his people, and dealt deceitfully with his servants.[q]
26 He sent Moses his servant;
Aaron, whom he had chosen.
27 They wrought his signs among them,
and wonders in the land of Ham.[r]

Ps 104 (105): A hymn in praise of God's goodness as shown in Israel's history. Cf Pss 77 (78); 105 (106); 135 (136). After the introductory invocation (1-7), the psalmist recounts the Lord's promise to the patriarchs (8-11), their early wanderings in Chanaan (12-15), the story of Joseph (16-22) and of the Israelites in Egypt (23-27), the Egyptian plagues (28-38), the journey through the desert (39-43), and the occupation of the Promised Land (44f).

104, 14: Kings: Pharao, and Abimelech of Gerara. Cf Gn 12, 17; 20, 6f.

104, 15: My anointed . . . my prophets: the patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, who were in a certain sense "anointed," that is, consecrated to God, and were the recipients of His revelations.

104, 16b: Literally, "And broke every staff of bread."

104, 23. 27: The land of Ham: a synonym for Egypt. Cf Gn 10, 6, where Mesraim is the Hebrew name for Egypt.

VII

28 He sent the darkness; it grew dark,*
but they rebelled against his words.
29 He turned their waters into blood
and killed their fish.
30 Their land swarmed with frogs,
even in the chambers of their kings.
31 He spoke, and there came swarms of flies;
gnats, throughout all their borders.
32 For rain he gave them hail,
with flashing fires throughout their land.
33 He struck down their vines and their fig trees
and shattered the trees throughout their borders.
34 He spoke, and there came locusts
and grasshoppers without number;
35 And they devoured every plant throughout the land,
they devoured the fruit of their soil.
36 Then he struck every first-born throughout their land,
the first fruits of all their manhood.
37 And he led them forth laden with silver and gold,[s]
with not a weakling among their tribes.
38 Egypt rejoiced at their going,
for the dread of them had fallen upon it.

VIII

39 He spread a cloud to cover them
and fire to give them light by night.[t] 40 They asked, and he brought them quail,
and with bread from heaven he satisfied them.[u] 41 He cleft the rock, and the water gushed forth;[v]
it flowed through the dry lands like a stream, 42 For he remembered his holy word
to his servant Abraham.
43 And he led forth his people with joy;
with shouts of joy, his chosen ones.

IX

44 And he gave them the lands of the nations,
and they took what the peoples had toiled for,
45 That they might keep his statutes and observe his laws. Alleluia.

PSALM 105 (106)*

Israel's Confession of Sin

1 Alleluia.

A

Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good,
for his kindness endures forever.
2 Who can tell the mighty deeds of the Lord,
or proclaim all his praises?
3 Happy are they who observe what is right,
who do always what is just.
4 Remember me, O Lord, as you favor your people;
visit me with your saving help,
5 That I may see the prosperity of your chosen ones,
rejoice in the joy of your people,
and glory with your inheritance.

I B

6 We have sinned, we and our fathers;
we have committed crimes; we have done wrong.
7 Our fathers in Egypt considered not your wonders;[w]
They remembered not your abundant kindness,
but rebelled against the Most High at the Red Sea.
8 Yet he saved them for his name's sake,
to make known his power.
9 He rebuked the Red Sea, and it was dried up,[x]
and he led them through the deep as through a desert.
10 He saved them from hostile hands
and freed them from the hands of the enemy.
11 The waters covered their foes;
not one of them was left.
12 Then they believed his words
and sang his praises.[y]

104, 28-38: Here, as also in Ps 77 (78), 43-51, the plagues of Egypt are retold with some poetic license, so that the order of the plagues is not quite the same as in Ex 7, 14—12, 30.

Ps 105 (106): Like the preceding psalm, this hymn reviews Israel's history, but here the salient thought is the rebellious spirit of the chosen people despite God's goodness to them. After an introductory prayer for God's mercy on himself and on his nation (1-5), the psalmist recounts the lack of faith shown by the Israelites at the Exodus (6-12), their craving for meat in the desert (13-15), the rebellions of Core, Dathan and Abiram (16-18), the worship of the golden calf at Sinai (19-23), the cowardice and foolhardiness of the Israelites at their first contact with the Chanaanites (24-27), their paganism at Phegor (28-31), their causing Moses to sin at Meriba (32f), and their mingling with the Chanaanites (34-39); confessing that it was their wickedness which made God punish them with repeated calamities and defeats (40-46), the psalmist prays for the return and restoration of scattered Israel (47).

II

13 But soon they forgot his works; [z]
they waited not for his counsel.
14 They gave way to craving in the desert
and tempted God in the wilderness.
15 He gave them what they asked
but sent a wasting disease against them.

III

16 They envied Moses in the camp,[a]
and Aaron, the holy one of the Lord.
17 The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan,
and covered the faction of Abiram.
18 Fire broke out against their faction;
a flame consumed the wicked.

IV

19 They made a calf in Horeb [b]
and adored a molten image;
20 They exchanged their glory
for the image of a grass-eating bullock.
21 They forgot the God who had saved them,
who had done great deeds in Egypt,
22 Wondrous deeds in the land of Ham,
terrible things at the Red Sea.
23 Then he spoke of exterminating them,
but Moses, his chosen one, Withstood him in the breach
to turn back his destructive wrath.

V

24 Yet they despised the desirable land; [c]
they believed not his word.
25 They murmured in their tents,
and obeyed not the voice of the Lord.
26 Then with raised hand he swore against them
to let them perish in the desert, 27 To scatter their descendants among the nations,
and to disperse them over the lands.

VI

28 And they submitted to the rites of Beelphegor [d]
and ate the sacrifices of dead gods.
29 They provoked him by their deeds,
and a plague attacked them.
30 Then Phinees stood forth in judgment
and the plague was checked;
31 And it was imputed to him for merit
through all generations forever.

VII

32 They angered him at the waters of Meriba,
and Moses fared ill* on their account, 33 For they embittered his spirit,
and the rash utterance passed his lips.

VIII

34 They did not exterminate the peoples,
as the Lord had commanded them,[e] 35 But mingled with the nations and learned their works.[f] 36 They served their idols,
which became a snare for them.[g] 37 They sacrificed their sons and their daughters to demons,[h] 38 And they shed innocent blood,
the blood of their sons and their daughters,
Whom they sacrificed to the idols of Chanaan,
desecrating the land with bloodshed;
39 They became defiled by their works,
and wanton in their crimes.

C

40 And the Lord grew angry with his people,
and abhorred his inheritance;
41 He gave them over into the hands of the nations,
and their foes ruled over them.
42 Their enemies oppressed them,
and they were humbled under their power.
43 Many times did he rescue them,
but they embittered him with their counsels
and were brought low by their guilt.
44 Yet he had regard for their affliction
when he heard their cry;
45 And for their sake he was mindful of his covenant
and relented, in his abundant kindness, 46 And he won for them compassion
from all who held them captive.

47 Save us, O Lord, our God,[i]
and gather us from among the nations,

PSALM 106 (107)*

God the Savior of Men in Distress

1 "Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good,
for his kindness endures forever!"*
2 Thus let the redeemed of the Lord say,
those whom he has redeemed from the hand of the foe
3 And gathered from the lands, from the east and the west, from the north and the south.

A

I

4 They went astray in the desert wilderness;
the way to an inhabited city they did not find.
5 Hungry and thirsty,
their life was wasting away within them.
6 They cried to the Lord in their distress;
from their straits he rescued them.
7 And he led them by a direct way
to reach an inhabited city,
8 Let them give thanks to the Lord for his kindness
and his wondrous deeds to the children of men, 9 Because he satisfied the longing soul
and filled the hungry soul with good things.

II

10 They dwelt in darkness and gloom, bondsmen in want and in chains,i 11 Because they had rebelled against the words of God and scorned the counsel of the Most High.
12 And he humbled their hearts with trouble;
when they stumbled, there was no one to help them.
13 They cried to the Lord in their distress;
from their straits he rescued them.
14 And he led them forth from darkness and gloom
and broke their bonds asunder.
15 Let them give thanks to the Lord for his kindness
and his wondrous deeds to the children of men, 16 Because he shattered the gates of brass
and burst the bars of iron.

III

17 Stricken because of their wicked ways
and afflicted because of their sins, 18 They loathed all manner of food,
so that they were near the gates of death.
19 They cried to the Lord in their distress;
from their straits he rescued them.
20 He sent forth his word to heal them
and to snatch them from destruction.
21 Let them give thanks to the Lord for his kindness
and his wondrous deeds to the children of men.
22 Let them make thank offerings
and declare his works with shouts of joy.

IV

23 They who sailed the sea in ships,
trading on the deep waters,
24 These saw the works of the Lord
and his wonders in the abyss.
25 His command raised up a storm wind which tossed its waves on high.
26 They mounted up to heaven; they sank to the depths;

i Is 42, 7.

105, 48: The doxology at the end of the Fourth Book of the Psalms; a later addition.

Ps 106 (107): Besides the prologue (1-3), in which the people thank the Lord for their return from exile, this psalm consists of two parts. In the first (4-32), where each of the four stanzas has the same divided refrain, God is praised as the helper and rescuer of wanderers lost in the wilderness (4-9), of the imprisoned (10-16), of the sick (17-22), and of storm-tossed seafarers (23-32). The second part (33-43) describes how God's beneficent providence changed deserts into fertile fields (33-35) where the needy found prosperity (36-38); and how, when bad rulers brought hard times upon them, God restored the fortunes of the poor (39-41). All this, therefore, should be recognized as coming from Him (42f).

106, 1: A standard cry of praise in the liturgy of the temple, and frequently cited in the Bible. Cf 1 Par 16, 34; Pss 117 (118), 1; 135 (136), 1; Jer 33, 11; Dn 3, 89; 1 Mc 4, 24.

their hearts melted away in their plight.
27 They reeled and staggered like drunken men,
and all their skill was swallowed up.
28 They cried to the Lord in their distress;
from their straits he rescued them.
29 He hushed the storm to a gentle breeze,
and the billows of the sea were stilled;
30 They rejoiced that they were calmed,
and he brought them to their desired haven.
31 Let them give thanks to the Lord for his kindness
and his wondrous deeds to the children of men.
32 Let them extol him in the assembly of the people and praise him in the council of the elders.

B

33 He changed rivers into desert,[k]
water springs into thirsty ground, 34 Fruitful land into salt marsh,
because of the wickedness of its inhabitants.
35 He changed the desert into pools of water,
waterless land into water springs.
36 And there he settled the hungry,*
and they built a city to dwell in.
37 They sowed fields and planted vineyards,
And they obtained a fruitful yield.
38 He blessed them, and they became very many;
nor did he suffer their cattle to decrease.
39 And they dwindled and were brought low through oppression, affliction and sorrow.
40 But he who pours out contempt upon princes,
and sends them astray through a trackless waste,[l] 41 Lifted up the needy out of misery
and made the families numerous like flocks.

42 The upright see this and rejoice,
and all wickedness closes its mouth.
43 Who is wise enough to observe these things and to understand the favors of the Lord?[m]

PSALM 107 (108)*

Prayer for Victory

1 A song; a psalm of David.

I

2 My heart is steadfast, O God; my heart is steadfast;[n]
I will sing and chant praise.
3 Awake, O my soul; awake, lyre and harp;
I will wake the dawn.
4 I will give thanks to you among the peoples, O Lord;
I will chant your praise among the nations,
5 For your kindness towers to the heavens,
and your faithfulness to the skies.
6 Be exalted above the heavens, O God;
over all the earth be your glory!
7 That your loved ones may escape,[o]
help us by your right hand, and answer us.

II

8 God promised in his sanctuary;
"Exultantly I will apportion Sichem,
and measure off the valley of Succhoth;
9 Mine is Galaad, and mine Manasse,
Ephraim is the helmet for my head;
Juda, my scepter;
10 Moab shall serve as my washbowl;
upon Edom I will set my shoe;
I will triumph over Philistia."
11 Who will bring me into the fortified city?
Who will lead me into Edom?
12 Have not you, O God, rejected us,
So that you go not forth, O God, with our armies?
13 Give us aid against the foe,
for worthless is the help of men.
14 Under God we shall do valiantly;
it is he who will tread down our foes.

106, 36-41: Although his words seem to refer to God's providence in general, the psalmist probably has in mind the settlement and development of the Promised Land (36ff), the hard times caused by the Assyrian and Babylonian invasions (39), the humiliation and exile of the last kings of Juda (40), and the restoration of Sion after the exile (41).

Ps 107 (108): A compilation of parts from two other psalms: 2-6 are the same as Ps 56 (57), 8-12; 7-14 are the same as Ps 59 (60), 7-14.

PSALM 108 (109)*

Prayer against a Slanderous Enemy

[1] For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

O God, whom I praise, be not silent, [2] for they have opened wicked and treacherous mouths against me.
They have spoken to me with lying tongues,
[3] and with words of hatred they have encompassed me
and attacked me without cause.
[4] In return for my love they slandered
me,
but I prayed.
[5] They repaid me evil for good
and hatred for my love.

II

[6] Raise up a wicked man against him,
and let the accuser* stand at his right hand.
[7] When he is judged, let him go forth condemned,
and may his plea be in vain.
[8] May his days be few;
may another take his office.[p] [9] May his children be fatherless,
and his wife a widow.
[10] May his children be roaming vagrants
and beggars;
may they be cast out of the ruins
of their homes.
[11] May the usurer ensnare all his belongings,
and strangers plunder the fruit of his labors.
[12] May there be no one to do him a kindness,
nor anyone to pity his orphans.
[13] May his posterity meet with destruction;
in the next generation may their
name be blotted out.
[14] May the guilt of his fathers be remembered by the Lord;
let not his mother's sin be blotted
out;
[15] May they be continually before the Lord,
till he banish the memory of these parents from the earth, [16] Because he remembered not to show
kindness,
but persecuted the wretched and poor
and the brokenhearted, to do them
to death.
[17] He loved cursing; may it come upon
him;
he took no delight in blessing; may
it be far from him.
[18] And may he be clothed with cursing
as with a robe;
may it penetrate into his entrails like
water
and like oil into his bones;
[19] May it be for him like a garment which covers him,
like a girdle which is always about
him.

III

[20] May this be the recompense* from the Lord upon my accusers
and upon those who speak evil
against me.
[21] But do you, O God, my Lord, deal kindly with me for your name's sake;
in your generous kindness rescue me;
[22] For I am wretched and poor,
and my heart is pierced within me.
[23] Like a lengthening shadow I pass away;
I am swept* away like the locust.
[24] My knees totter from my fasting,
and my flesh is wasted of its substance.
[25] And I am become a mockery to them;
when they see me, they shake their heads.

p Acts 1, 20.

Ps 108 (109): The first and the third sections are prayers of supplication from one who is cursed and calumniated by numerous enemies (1-5. 20-31). The middle section is a series of strong curses against a certain individual (6-19). Whether the imprecations of this section were uttered by the psalmist himself against one of his foes, or by these foes against him, is a disputed question; the answer depends principally on the interpretation of v 20. See note on this verse.

108, 6: The accuser: the Hebrew word is satan. Cf Za 3, 1, where Satan stands at the right hand of the high priest to bring accusations against him before the Lord. But here a human accuser is meant, unless the phrase, a wicked man, is rendered, "the wicked one," that is, the devil.

108, 20: Recompense: the Hebrew word means either "work done" or "wages for work done." The above translation takes it in the latter sense. Accordingly, the preceding dire curses may be understood either as directly spoken by the psalmist against his chief enemy, or as spoken first by his enemies against him and then willed by him to recoil on them. The other possible translation would be, "This is the work of those who would bring harm upon me from the Lord." In this case the only imprecations of the psalmist himself would be those in v 29, which are comparatively mild.

108, 23: Swept away: a strong wind sometimes ends a plague of locusts by blowing them out into the sea. Cf Ex 10, 19; Jl 2, 20. Some render, "Shaken off," and understand this of the custom of knocking locusts off the plants in order to kill them on the ground.

26 Help me, O Lord, my God;
save me, in your kindness,
27 And let them know that this* is your hand;
that you, O Lord, have done this.
28 Let them curse,* but do you bless;
may my adversaries be put to shame,
but let your servant rejoice.
29 Let my accusers be clothed with disgrace
and let them wear their shame like a mantle.
30 I will speak my thanks earnestly to the Lord,
and in the midst of the throng I will praise him, 31 For he stood at the right hand of the poor man,
to save him from those who would condemn him.

PSALM 109 (110)*

The Messias: King, Priest, and Conqueror

1 A psalm of David.

I

The Lord said to my Lord:* "Sit at my right hand
till I make your enemies your footstool." [q] 2 The scepter of your power the Lord will stretch forth from Sion:
"Rule in the midst of your enemies.
3 Yours is princely power in the day of your birth, in holy splendor;
before the daystar, like the dew, I have begotten you."*

II

4 The Lord has sworn, and he will not repent:
"You are a priest forever,[r] according to the order of Melchisedec."*

III

5 The Lord is at your right hand;
he will crush kings on the day of his wrath.
6 He will do judgment on the nations, heaping up corpses;
he will crush heads over the wide earth.
7 From the brook by the wayside he will drink;
therefore will he lift up his head.*

q Mt 22, 44; Acts 2, 34f; 1 Cor 15, 25; Heb 1, 13; 10, 13.—r Heb 5, 6; 7, 21.—s Ps 137 (138), 1.

108, 27: This: both the misery suffered and the deliverance expected from the Lord.

108, 28: Let them curse: this gives some probability to the view that the imprecations in vv 6-19 were uttered by the enemies of the psalmist.

Ps 109 (110): One of the most important of the Messianic psalms. Following the teaching of our Lord and the Apostles, Catholic tradition has constantly and unanimously interpreted this psalm as referring to Christ. However, in some verses the Hebrew text is obscure and the interpretation uncertain. Here are set forth the dignity of the Messias as the king appointed by God (1-3), as the royal priest (4), and as victor over His foes (5-7).

109, 1: The Lord said to my Lord: literally, "The oracle of the Lord (Yahweh) for my Lord." My Lord: a Hebrew phrase of polite address, equivalent to "you," and used when a subject addresses his superior. Cf 1 Kgs 25, 25ff; 2 Kgs 1, 10. The force of our Lord's argument from this passage is as follows: David was universally recognized as the author of this psalm, which was acknowledged by all as referring to the Messias; but the psalmist addresses the Messias here as his superior; therefore the Messias must be David's superior and not merely his "son" or descendant. Cf Mt 22, 41-45 and parallels. At my right hand: the place of honor next to the royal throne. Cf 3 Kgs 2, 19. Your footstool: in ancient times vanquished enemies had to suffer the victor's putting his feet on their prostrate bodies as a sign of their submission.

109, 3: The current Hebrew text is obscure and seems corrupt. The translation here follows the reading of the revised Latin Psalter, which is based on the ancient versions. Before the daystar: when the sun had not yet been created, that is, from all eternity. Like the dew: in a secret, mysterious manner.

109, 4: According to the order of Melchisedec: in the same way as Melchisedec was a priest. There are three main points of resemblance between Melchisedec, the prophetic type, and Christ who fulfilled this prophecy: both are kings as well as priests, both offer bread and wine to God, and both have their priesthood directly from God and not through Aaron, since neither belongs to the tribe of Levi. Cf Gn 14, 18; Heb 7.

109, 7: Figurative language of uncertain significance. The sense, according to some, is: The Messianic king will bow down in humility to drink of the waters of divine assistance, and then go on to new victories. Cf Is 8, 6; Jer 2, 13. 17f.

Ps 110 (111): An alphabetic hymn in praise of God's law and of His merciful deeds for Israel. As is customary in such psalms, the thoughts here are rather loosely strung together.

110, 1: In the company and assembly of the just: in the temple. Cf Ps 149, 1.

110, 5: Food to those who fear him: the manna in the desert. In the liturgy of the Church these words are applied to the Blessed Eucharist, of which the manna was the type or figure. Cf Jn 6, 31ff. 49ff.

PSALM 110 (111)*

Praise of God for His Goodness

1 Alleluia.

I will give thanks to the Lord with all my heart [s] in the company and assembly of the just.*
2 Great are the works of the Lord,
exquisite in all their delights.
3 Majesty and glory are his work,
and his justice endures forever.
4 He has won renown for his wondrous deeds;
gracious and merciful is the Lord.
5 He has given food to those who fear him; *

he will forever be mindful of his covenant.
6 He has made known to his people the power of his works,
giving them the inheritance of the nations.
7 The works of his hands are faithful and just;
sure are all his precepts,
8 Reliable forever and ever,
wrought in truth and equity.
9 He has sent deliverance to his people;
he has ratified his covenant forever;
holy and awesome is his name.
10 The fear of the Lord* is the beginning of wisdom; [t]
prudent are all who live by it.
His praise endures forever.

PSALM 111 (112)*

The Blessings of the Just Man

1 Alleluia.

Happy the man who fears the Lord,
who greatly delights in his commands.
2 His posterity shall be mighty upon the earth;
the upright generation shall be blessed.
3 Wealth and riches shall be in his house;
his generosity* shall endure forever.
4 He dawns through the darkness, a light for the upright;
he is gracious and merciful and just.*
5 Well for the man who is gracious and lends,
who conducts his affairs with justice;
6 He shall never be moved;
the just man shall be in everlasting remembrance.
7 An evil report he shall not fear;
his heart is firm, trusting in the Lord.
8 His heart is steadfast; he shall not fear till he looks down upon his foes.
9 Lavishly he gives to the poor;
his generosity shall endure forever; [u]
his horn* shall be exalted in glory.
10 The wicked man shall see it and be vexed;
he shall gnash his teeth and pine away;
the desire of the wicked shall perish.

t Jb 28, 28; Prv 1, 7; 9, 10; Sir 1, 16.—u 2 Cor 9, 9.—v 7f: 1 Kgs 2, 8.

110, 10: The fear of the Lord: reverence for God; the Hebrew term for "religion."

Ps 111 (112): An alphabetic psalm of didactic character, lauding the virtues of the God-fearing man. In style and diction this is very similar to the preceding psalm; both may well have had the same author.

111, 3: Generosity: the original meaning of the Hebrew word is "justice," but in a later period of the language it also acquired the meaning of "liberality, almsgiving." Cf Sir 3, 30; 7, 10; also Mt 6, 1.

111, 4: Some interpret this verse as said of God. Cf Ps 110 (111), 4b. But more probably the subject of this sentence is the same as the subject of all the preceding and following sentences, that is, the just man. He acts in the same way as God does.

111, 9: His horn: his power, dignity and authority. Cf note on Ps 17 (18), 3.

Ps 112 (113): A hymn praying that God may be glorified at all times and in all places (1-3), because He who is supreme over all (4-6) stoops down to raise up the lowly and the barren (7-9).

112, 1: Servants of the Lord: devout worshipers; in particular, the Levites. Cf Pss 133 (134), 1; 134 (135), 1; Dn 3, 85.

112, 3: From the rising to the setting of the sun: either temporally, "from morning to evening," or spatially, "from the east to the west." Cf Mal 1, 11.

112, 9: Because of the importance in Israel of large families, the barren wife was considered disgraced and cursed by God. Cf Gn 16, 4f; 1 Kgs 1, 5f. 11; 2, 5; Lk 1, 25.

PSALM 112 (113)*

Praise of the Lord for His Care of the Lowly

1 Alleluia.

I

Praise, you servants of the Lord,*
praise the name of the Lord.
2 Blessed be the name of the Lord
both now and forever.
3 From the rising to the setting of the sun*
is the name of the Lord to be praised.

II

4 High above all nations is the Lord;
above the heavens is his glory.
5 Who is like the Lord, our God, who is enthroned on high
6 and looks upon the heavens and the earth below?

III

7 He raises up the lowly from the dust; [v]
from the dunghill he lifts up the poor 8 To seat them with princes,
with the princes of his own people.
9 He establishes in her home the barren wife
as the joyful mother of children.*

PSALM 113A (114)*

The Lord's Wonders at the Exodus

[1] Alleluia.
When Israel came forth from Egypt,
the house of Jacob from a people of alien tongue,
[2] Juda became his sanctuary,
Israel his domain.
[3] The sea beheld and fled;
Jordan turned back.[w] [4] The mountains skipped like rams,
the hills like the lambs of the flock.*
[5] Why is it, O sea, that you flee?
O Jordan, that you turn back?
[6] You mountains, that you skip like rams?
You hills, like the lambs of the flock?
[7] Before the face of the Lord, tremble, O earth,
before the face of the God of Jacob, [8] Who turned the rock into pools of water,
the flint into flowing springs.[x]

PSALM 113B (115)*

The Greatness and Goodness of the True God

I

[1] (9) Not to us, O Lord, not to us
but to your name give glory
because of your kindness, because of your truth.
2(10) Why should the pagans say,
"Where is their God?"*
3(11) Our God is in heaven;
whatever he wills, he does.

II

4(12) Their idols are silver and gold,[y]
the handiwork of men.
5(13) They have mouths but speak not;
they have eyes but see not;
6(14) They have ears but hear not;
they have noses but smell not;
7(15) They have hands but feel not;
they have feet but walk not;
they utter no sound from their throat.
8(16) Their makers shall be like them,
everyone that trusts in them.

III

9(17) The house of Israel trusts in the Lord;
he is their help and their shield.
10(18) The house of Aaron trusts in the Lord;
he is their help and their shield.
11(19) Those who fear the Lord* trust in the Lord;
he is their help and their shield.
12(20) The Lord remembers us and will bless us:
he will bless the house of Israel;
he will bless the house of Aaron;
13(21) He will bless those who fear the Lord,
both the small and the great.
14(22) May the Lord bless you more and more,
both you and your children.
15(23) May you be blessed by the Lord,
who made heaven and earth.
16(24) Heaven is the heaven of the Lord,
but the earth he has given to the children of men.
17(25) It is not the dead who praise the Lord,*
nor those who go down into silence;[z]
18(26) But we bless the Lord,
both now and forever.

PSALM 114 (116A)*

Thanksgiving to God for Help in Need

[1] Alleluia.

w Ex 14, 21f; Jos 3, 14ff.—x Ex 17, 6; Nm 20, 11.—y 4-10: Ps 134 (135), 15-19.—z Pss 6, 6; 87 (88), 11ff; Sir 17, 27f (25f); Is 38, 18.

Ps. 113A (114): A song commemorating Israel's deliverance from Egypt. When the Lord chose Israel as His own special people (1f), marvelous things took place in nature (3f) of which He was the cause (5-8). In the Greek and Latin versions, this song is joined to the following one to form a single psalm, but originally they were probably distinct.

113A, 4: A poetic description of the earthquake that took place when God appeared on Mount Sinai. Cf Ex 19, 16ff.

Ps 113B (115): A song in praise of the living God (1-3) and in derision of the lifeless idols of the pagans (4-8). To this are added a brief "liturgy," consisting of a litany in which the various classes of the people express their confidence in God (9-11); a blessing given by the priests (12-15); and a short hymn of praise (16-18). In Ps 134 (135), 15-18 a very similar song in mockery of the pagan gods occurs, and there also it is followed by a similar litany and hymn (vv 19ff).

113B, 2: Where is their God?: implying that God does not help them.

113B, 9ff: The house of Israel . . . the house of Aaron . . . those who fear the Lord: the laity of Israelite birth, the priests, and the converts to Judaism. Cf Pss 117 (118), 2ff; 134 (135), 19f. In the New Testament likewise, the phrase, "those who fear the Lord," is used for the proselytes or converts to Judaism. Cf Acts 10, 2. 22. 35; 13, 16. 26.

113B, 17: See note on Ps 6, 6.

Ps 114 (116A): The current Hebrew text is probably correct in treating as a single unit the two parts which the Greek and Latin versions treat as separate psalms. This is a hymn of thanksgiving sung in the temple by an individual who, when mortally ill, had been cured by the Lord. Recalling how he prayed when he was at death's door (1-4), the psalmist now praises God for having heard his prayer (5-9). Referring again to his former period of need (Ps 115, 1f), he offers up his sacrifice and hymn of grateful praise (Ps 115, 3-10).

A

I love the Lord because he has heard
my voice in supplication,
2 Because he has inclined his ear to me
the day I called.
3 The cords of death encompassed me; [a]
the snares of the nether world seized upon me;*
I fell into distress and sorrow,
4 And I called upon the name of the Lord,
"O Lord, save my life!"

II

5 Gracious is the Lord and just;
yes, our God is merciful.
6 The Lord keeps the little ones;
I was brought low, and he saved
me.
7 Return, O my soul, to your tranquility,
for the Lord has been good to you.
8 For he has freed my soul from death,
my eyes from tears, my feet from stumbling.
9 I shall walk before the Lord
in the lands of the living.

a Ps 17 (18), 5; Jon 2, 3.—b 2 Cor 4, 13.—c Rom 3, 4.—d Rom 15, 11.

114, 3: Death is pictured as a trapper catching his prey. Cf Ps 17 (18), 6.

115, 1: I believed: the psalmist did not doubt that God would be faithful to His promise of help.

115, 4: The cup of salvation: the libation of wine poured out in gratitude for having been saved. Cf Ex 25, 29; Nm 15, 1-10. This verse has been very appropriately chosen as the prayer which the priest says before drinking the Precious Blood at Holy Mass.

115, 6: Humanly speaking, the Lord looks upon the death of His faithful servants and the consequent loss of their praise as too costly for Him to allow. This sentiment of the psalmist is naturally connected with his ideas of the nether world. Cf Ps 6, 6. In the liturgy this verse is used, after the reading of the Martyrology at Prime, in an applied sense: in the eyes of God the death of His holy martyrs is as precious as gold which has been proved in a furnace. Cf Wis 3, 4-7.

Ps 116 (117): The shortest of all the psalms; a brief hymn of praise calling on all mankind to glorify the Lord for His kindness and fidelity to His promises. This invitation to all the nations finds its fulfillment in Christ's universal kingdom. Cf Rom 15, 11.

Ps 117 (118): A dramatic "liturgy" of thanksgiving. After an invocation in the form of a litany (1-4), the psalmist, who very likely is speaking here in the name of the whole community, describes how the nation confidently implored the Lord's help (5-9) when hostile peoples threatened its life (10-14); in vivid words he recounts how God came to the rescue (15-18). Then follows a dialogue between the priests at the temple gates and the psalmist as he enters to offer the thanksgiving sacrifice (19-25); finally the priests impart their blessing (26f), and the psalmist sings his hymn of grateful praise (28f).

117, 2ff: See note on Ps 113B (115), 9ff.

B

10 (1) I believed,* even when I said,[b]
"I am greatly afflicted";
11 (2) I said in my alarm,
"No man is dependable." [c] 12 (3) How shall I make a return to the Lord
for all the good he has done for
me?
13 (4) The cup of salvation* I will take up,
and I will call upon the name of
the Lord;
14 (5) My vows to the Lord I will pay
in the presence of all his people.
15 (6) Precious in the eyes of the Lord
is the death of his faithful ones.*
16 (7) O Lord, I am your servant;
I am your servant, the son of
your handmaid;
you have loosed by bonds.
17 (8) To you will I offer sacrifice of thanksgiving,
and I will call upon the name of
the Lord.
18 (9) My vows to the Lord I will pay
in the presence of all his people, 19 (10) In the courts of the house of the Lord,
in your midst, O Jerusalem.

PSALM 116 (117)*

Doxology of All the Nations

1 Alleluia.

Praise the Lord, all you nations;
glorify him, all you peoples! [d]
2 For steadfast is his kindness toward us, and the fidelity of the Lord endures
forever.

PSALM 117 (118)*

Hymn of Thanksgiving to the Savior of Israel

1 Alleluia.

A

Give thanks to the Lord, for he is
good,
for his mercy endures forever.
2 Let the house of Israel say,*
"His mercy endures forever."
3 Let the house of Aaron say,
"His mercy endures forever."

4 Let those who fear the Lord say,
"His mercy endures forever."

B

I

5 In my straits I called upon the Lord;*
the Lord answered me and set me free.
6 The Lord is with me; I fear not;
what can man do against me? [e]
7 The Lord is with me to help me, and I shall look down upon my foes.
8 It is better to take refuge in the Lord [f]
than to trust in man.
9 It is better to take refuge in the Lord
than to trust in princes.

II

10 All the nations encompassed me;
in the name of the Lord I crushed them.
11 They encompassed me on every side;
in the name of the Lord I crushed them.
12 They encompassed me like bees,
they flared up like fire among thorns;
in the name of the Lord I crushed them.
13 I was hard pressed and was falling,
but the Lord helped me.
14 My strength and my courage is the Lord,
and he has been my savior.[g]

III

15 The joyful shout of victory
in the tents of the just:
"The right hand of the Lord has struck with power:
16 the right hand of the Lord is exalted;
the right hand of the Lord has struck with power."
17 I shall not die, but live,
and declare the works of the Lord.
18 Though the Lord has indeed chastised me,
yet he has not delivered me to death.

C

I

19 Open to me the gates of justice;*
I will enter them and give thanks to the Lord.
20 This gate is the Lord's;
the just shall enter it.
21 I will give thanks to you, for you have answered me
and have been my savior.
22 The stone which the builders rejected*
has become the cornerstone.[h] 23 By the Lord has this been done;
it is wonderful in our eyes.
24 This is the day the Lord has made;
let us be glad and rejoice in it.
25 O Lord, grant salvation!*
O Lord, grant prosperity!

II

26 Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord;[i]
we bless you from the house of the Lord.*
27 The Lord is God, and he has given us light.
Join in procession with leafy boughs up to the horns of the altar.*
28 You are my God, and I give thanks to you;
O my God, I extol you.
29 Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good;
for his kindness endures forever.

PSALM 118 (119)*
Praise of God's Law

ALEPH

1 Happy are they whose way is blameless,
who walk in the law of the Lord.

e Heb 13, 6.—f 8f: Ps 145 (146), 3.—g Ex 15, 2; Is 12, 2.—h Mt 21, 42; Lk 20, 17; Acts 4, 11; Rom 9, 33; 1 Pt 2, 7.—i Mt 21, 9; 23, 39.

117, 5-18: Although many of the phrases in this section resemble those used in the supplications of individuals, other phrases make it probable that the psalmist is speaking here in the name of the whole nation. The occasion may have been such as described in 2 Esd 12, 27-43.

117, 19-29: In this dramatic dialogue the words of the representative of the people seem to be limited to vv 19. 21ff. 28f. Probably vv 20. 24-27 are spoken by the priests.

117, 22: The stone which the builders rejected: directly, Israel, which the empire-builders thought unworthy of a place in their worldly plans. But Israel is here a type of Christ, in whom this prophecy has been most eminently fulfilled; hence these words are often cited in the New Testament as referring to our Lord's rejection by the Jews.

117, 25: Grant salvation: the Hebrew for this cry, as far as English letters can represent it, is "Hosanna." This word and the words in the next line were used as a welcome to Christ when He entered the temple on Palm Sunday. Cf Mk 11, 10f.

117, 26: The sense is, "May he who now comes into the temple be blessed by having the Lord's name invoked upon him."

117, 27: The horns of the altar: the four corners of the altar of holocausts. Cf Ex 27, 2; 38, 2; Lv 4, 25. 30. 34.

Ps 118 (119): An alphabetic psalm of didactic nature; in the form of a prayer it inculcates the excellence of keeping the divinely revealed law. Some of th strophes show a certain logical development of thought, but on the whole there is merely a constant repetition of the main theme with numerous disconnected variations of it. The external form is based on an elaborately constructed scheme. The psalmist chose eight synonyms — law, statutes, commands, ordinances, decrees, precepts, words and promise — and in his

2 Happy are they who observe his decrees, who seek him with all their heart,
3 And do no wrong,
but walk in his ways.
4 You have commanded that your precepts be diligently kept.
5 Oh, that I might be firm in the ways
of keeping your statutes!
6 Then should I not be put to shame
when I beheld all your commands.
7 I will give you thanks with an upright heart,
when I have learned your just ordinances.
8 I will keep your statutes;
do not utterly forsake me.

BETH

9 How shall a young man be faultless in his way?
By keeping to your words.
10 With all my heart I seek you;
let me not stray from your commands.
11 Within my heart I treasure your promise,
that I may not sin against you.
12 Blessed are you, O Lord;
teach me your statutes.
13 With my lips I declare
all the ordinances of your mouth.
14 In the way of your decrees I rejoice,
as much as in all riches.
15 I will meditate on your precepts
and consider your ways.
16 In your statutes I will delight;
I will not forget your words.

GIMEL

17 Be good to your servant, that I may live
and keep your words.
18 Open my eyes, that I may consider
the wonders of your law.
19 I am a wayfarer of earth;*
hide not your commands from me.
20 My soul is consumed with longing
for your ordinances at all times.
21 You rebuke the accursed proud,
who turn away from your commands.
22 Take away from me reproach and contempt,
for I observe your decrees.
23 Though princes meet and talk against me,
your servant meditates on your statutes.
24 Yes, your decrees are my delight;
they are my counselors.

DALETH

25 I lie prostrate in the dust;
give me life according to your word.
26 I declared my ways, and you answered me;
teach me your statutes.
27 Make me understand the way of your precepts,
and I will meditate on your wondrous deeds.
28 My soul weeps for sorrow;
strengthen me according to your words.
29 Remove from me the way of falsehood,
and favor me with your law.
30 The way of truth I have chosen;
I have set your ordinances before me.
31 I cling to your decrees;
O Lord, let me not be put to shame.
32 I will run the way of your commands
when you give me a docile heart.

HE

33 Instruct me, O Lord, in the way of your statutes, that I may exactly observe them.
34 Give me discernment, that I may observe your law
and keep it with all my heart.
35 Lead me in the path of your commands,
for in it I delight.
36 Incline my heart to your decrees
and not to gain.
37 Turn away my eyes from seeing what is vain;
by your way give me life.
38 Fulfill for your servant
your promise to those who fear you.

strophes of eight verses apiece planned perhaps to use a different synonym in each verse. In the present form of the text, however, this plan is not perfectly carried out, nor is it certain whether these departures are due to mistakes of later copyists or to the original author himself. This psalm is the longest by far of any in the Psalter. Each of the eight verses of the first strophe begins with the first letter of the Hebrew alphabet, each verse of the second strophe with the second letter, and so on for all the twenty-two letters. Hence, the whole consists of 176 verses.

118, 19: A wayfarer of earth: the psalmist realizes that he has but a short life here below. Cf Ps 38 (39), 13. Some render, "I am a stranger in the land"; the desire of the psalmist would then be that he might learn all the laws and customs of the land that God has chosen for His people.

39 Turn away from me the reproach which I dread,
for your ordinances are good.
40 Behold, I long for your precepts;
in your justice give me life.

VAU

41 Let your kindness come to me, O Lord,
your salvation according to your promise.
42 So shall I have an answer for those who reproach me,
for I trust in your words.
43 Take not the word of truth from my mouth,
for in your ordinances is my hope;
44 And I will keep your law continually,
forever and ever.
45 And I will walk at liberty,
because I seek your precepts.
46 I will speak of your decrees before kings
without being ashamed.
47 And I will delight in your commands,
which I love.
48 And I will lift up my hands* to your commands
and meditate on your statutes.

ZAIN

49 Remember your word to your servant
since you have given me hope.
50 My comfort in my affliction is that your promise gives me life.
51 Though the proud scoff bitterly at me,
I turn not away from your law.
52 I remember your ordinances of old, O Lord,
and I am comforted.
53 Indignation seizes me because of the wicked
who forsake your law.
54 Your statutes are the theme of my song
in the place of my exile.
55 By night I remember your name, O Lord,
and I will keep your law.
56 This has been mine,
that I have observed your precepts.

HETH

57 I have said, O Lord, that my part is to keep your words.
58 I entreat you with all my heart,
have pity on me according to your promise.
59 I considered my ways
and turned my feet to your decrees.
60 I was prompt and did not hesitate
in keeping your commands.
61 Though the snares of the wicked are twined about me,
your law I have not forgotten.
62 At midnight I rise to give you thanks
because of your just ordinances.
63 I am the companion of all who fear you
and keep your precepts.
64 Of your kindness, O Lord, the earth is full;
teach me your statutes.

TETH

65 You have done good to your servant,
O Lord, according to your word.
66 Teach me wisdom and knowledge,
for in your commands I trust.
67 Before I was afflicted I went astray,
but now I hold to your promise.
68 You are good and bountiful;
teach me your statutes.
69 Though the proud forge lies against me,
with all my heart I will observe your precepts.
70 Their heart has become gross and fat;*
as for me, your law is my delight.
71 It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I may learn your statutes.
72 The law of your mouth is to me more precious than thousands of gold and silver pieces.

JOD

73 Your hands have made me and fashioned me;[j]
give me discernment that I may learn your commands.
74 Those who fear you shall see me and be glad,
because I hope in your word.
75 I know, O Lord, that your ordinances are just,
and in your faithfulness you have afflicted me.
76 Let your kindness comfort me

j Jb 10, 8.

118, 48: I will lift up my hands: an ancient and natural gesture of supplication. Some render, "I will put my hand to (the task of keeping) your commands."

118, 70: Their heart has become gross and fat: a Hebrew idiom for, "Their mind has become dull and insensitive." But it may also be understood to signify a "cruel heart." Cf Ps 16 (17), 10.

according to your promise to your servants.
77 Let your compassion come to me that I may live,
for your law is my delight.
78 Let the proud be put to shame for oppressing me unjustly;
I will meditate on your precepts.
79 Let those turn to me who fear you and acknowledge your decrees.
80 Let my heart be perfect in your statutes,
that I be not put to shame.

CAPH

81 My soul pines for your salvation;
I hope in your word.
82 My eyes strain after your promise;
when will you comfort me?
83 Though I am shriveled like a leathern flask* in the smoke,
I have not forgotten your statutes.
84 How many are the days of your servant?
When will you do judgment on my persecutors?
85 The proud have dug pits for me;
this is against your law.*
86 All your commands are steadfast;
they persecute me wrongfully; help me!
87 They have all but put an end to me on the earth,
but I have not forsaken your precepts.
88 In your kindness give me life,
that I may keep the decrees of your mouth.

LAMED

89 Your word, O Lord, endures forever;
it is firm as the heavens.
90 Through all generations your truth endures;
you have established the earth, and it stands firm.
91 According to your ordinances they still stand firm;
all things serve you.
92 Had not your law been my delight,
I should have perished in my affliction.
93 Never will I forget your precepts,
for through them you give me life.
94 I am yours; save me,
for I have sought your precepts.
95 Sinners wait to destroy me,
but I pay heed to your decrees.
96 I see that all fulfillment has its limits;
broad indeed is your command.

MEM

97 How I love your law, O Lord!
It is my meditation all the day.
98 Your command has made me wiser than my enemies,
for it is ever with me.
99 I have more understanding than all my teachers
when your decrees are my meditation.
100 I have more discernment than the elders;
because I observe your precepts.
101 From every evil way I withhold my feet,
that I may keep your words.
102 From your ordinances I turn not away,
for you have instructed me.
103 How sweet to my palate are your promises, sweeter than honey to my mouth!
104 Through your precepts I gain discernment;
therefore I hate every false way.

NUN

105 A lamp to my feet is your word,
a light to my path.
106 I resolve and swear
to keep your just ordinances.
107 I am very much afflicted;
O Lord, give me life according to your word.
108 Accept, O Lord, the free homage of my mouth,
and teach me your decrees.
109 Though constantly I take my life in my hands,*
yet I forget not your law.
110 The wicked have laid a snare for me,
but from your precepts I have not strayed.
111 Your decrees are my inheritance forever;
the joy of my heart they are.
112 I intend in my heart to fulfill your statutes always, to the letter.

118, 83: A leathern flask: tanned hides were used for holding water or wine; such containers, if kept in the dry heat near the fireplace, gradually became brittle and useless.
118, 85: This is against your law: or perhaps the sense may be, "that is, to make me act against your law."
118, 109f: The psalmist's life is always threatened by the wicked who persecute him for keeping God's law.

SAMECH

113 I hate men of divided heart,*
but I love your law.
114 You are my refuge and my shield;
in your word I hope.
115 Depart from me, you wrongdoers,
and I will observe the commands
of my God.
116 Sustain me as you have promised,
that I may live;
disappoint me not in my hope.
117 Help me, that I may be safe
and ever delight in your statutes.
118 You despise all who stray from your statutes,
for their deceitfulness is in vain.
119 You account all the wicked of the earth as dross;
therefore I love your decrees.
120 My flesh shudders with dread of you,
and I fear your ordinances.

AIN

121 I have fulfilled just ordinances;
leave me not to my oppressors.
122 Be surety for the welfare of your servant;
let not the proud oppress me.
123 My eyes strain after your salvation
and your just promise.
124 Deal with your servant according to your kindness,
and teach me your statutes.
125 I am your servant; give me discernment
that I may know your decrees.
126 It is time for the Lord to act:
they have broken your law.
127 For I love your command
more than gold, however fine.
128 For in all your precepts I go forward;
every false way I hate.

PHE

129 Wonderful are your decrees;
therefore I observe them.
130 The revelation of your words sheds light,
giving understanding to the simple.
131 I gasp with open mouth in my yearning for your commands.
132 Turn to me in pity
as you turn to those who love your name.
133 Steady my footsteps according to your promise,
and let no iniquity rule over me.
134 Redeem me from the oppression of
men,
that I may keep your precepts.
135 Let your countenance shine* upon your servant,
and teach me your statutes.
136 My eyes shed streams of tears because your law has not been kept.

SADE

137 You are just, O Lord,
and your ordinance is right.
138 You have pronounced your decrees
in justice
and in perfect faithfulness.
139 My zeal consumes me,
because my foes forget your words.
140 Your promise is very sure,*
and your servant loves it.
141 I am mean and contemptible, but your precepts I have not forgotten.
142 Your justice is everlasting justice,
and your law is permanent.
143 Though distress and anguish have come upon me,
your commands are my delight.
144 Your decrees are forever just;
give me discernment that I may live.

COPH

145 I call out with all my heart; answer
me, O Lord;
I will observe your statutes.
146 I call upon you; save me,
and I will keep your decrees.
147 Before dawn I come and cry out;
I hope in your words.
148 My eyes greet the night watches*
in meditation on your promise.
149 Hear my voice according to your kindness, O Lord;
according to your ordinance give me life.
150 I am attacked by malicious persecutors
who are far from your law.

118, 113: Men of divided heart: those who hesitate between fidelity and infidelity to God. Cf 3 Kgs 18, 21.

118, 135: Let your countenance shine: the psalmist asks God to smile on him with favor. Cf Nm 6, 25; Pss 66 (67), 2; 79 (80), 4.

118, 140: Very sure: literally, "fire-tried," said of purified metals that are genuine and reliable. Cf Ps 11 (12), 7.

118, 148: The night watches: even at the time when people are usually asleep, the psalmist meditates on God's word. Cf v 62 and Ps 76 (77), 3. 5.

151 You, O Lord, are near,
and all your commands are permanent.
152 Of old I know from your decrees,
that you have established them forever.

RES

153 Behold my affliction, and rescue me,
for I have not forgotten your law.
154 Plead my cause, and redeem me;
for the sake of your promise give me life.
155 Far from sinners is salvation,
because they seek not your statutes.
156 Your compassion is great, O Lord;
according to your ordinances give me life.
157 Though my persecutors and my foes are many,
I turn not away from your decrees.
158 I beheld the apostates with loathing,
because they kept not to your promise.
159 See how I love your precepts, O Lord;
in your kindness give me life.
160 Permanence is your word's chief trait;
each of your just ordinances is everlasting.

SIN

161 Princes persecute me without cause
but my heart stands in awe of your word.
162 I rejoice at your promise,
as one who has found rich spoil.
163 Falsehood I hate and abhor;
your law I love.
164 Seven times* a day I praise you for your just ordinances.
165 Those who love your law have great peace,
and for them there is no stumbling block.
166 I wait for your salvation, O Lord,
and your commands I fulfill.
167 I keep your decrees
and love them deeply.
168 I keep your precepts and your decrees,
for all my ways are before you.

THAU

169 Let my cry come before you, O Lord;
in keeping with your word give me discernment.
170 Let my supplication reach you;
rescue me according to your promise.
171 My lips pour forth your praise,
because you teach me your statutes.
172 May my tongue sing of your promise,
for all your commands are just.
173 Let your hand be ready to help me,
for I have chosen your precepts.
174 I long for your salvation, O Lord,
and your law is my delight.
175 Let my soul live to praise you,
and may your ordinances help me.
176 I have gone astray [like a lost sheep];
seek your servant,
because your commands I do not forget.

118, 164: Seven times: a Hebrew idiom for "many times." Cf Gn 4, 24; Ps 11 (12), 7; Prv 24, 16; Mt 18, 21f; Lk 17, 4.

Ps 119 (120): The psalmist implores God's help against his deceitful foe (1f); he asks the Lord to punish him (3f) as he bewails his long exile among hostile strangers (5-7).

119, 1: A song of ascents: this title also occurs in each of the next fourteen psalms. The most probable explanation is that these fifteen psalms form a little collection of "Pilgrim Psalms," that is, songs which were sung by the pilgrims when they "went up" to Jerusalem for the great annual feasts. Cf Ex 23, 17; Dt 16, 16; 3 Kgs 12, 28; Mt 20, 17; Lk 2, 41f. Less probable explanations are that these psalms were sung by the returning exiles when they "went up" to Jerusalem from Babylon (1 Esd 7, 9), or that they were sung by the Levites on the fifteen steps by which they ascended from the Court of the Women to the Court of the Israelites in the temple. Hence, these psalms are also known as the "Gradual Psalms," or "Psalms of the Steps"; under this title they are given in the appendix of the Roman Breviary.

119, 3: With more besides: the common formula of a curse in Hebrew was, "May the Lord do such and such evils to you (the evils being specified), and add still more to them." Cf 1 Kgs 3, 17; 14, 44; 25, 22. Here the psalmist is at a loss for a suitable malediction.

119, 4: The punishment which the psalmist finally decides to wish on his enemy is that the latter may be shot in battle or overwhelmed with glowing charcoal. Brushwood: more exactly, the broom plant; charcoal made of this wood burns with an intense heat.

PSALM 119 (120)*

A Complaint against Treacherous Tongues

1 A song of ascents.*

I

In my distress I called to the Lord,
and he answered me.
2 O Lord, deliver me from lying lip,
from treacherous tongue.

II

3 What will he inflict on you, with more besides,*
O treacherous tongue?
4 Sharp arrows of a warrior with fiery coals of brushwood.*

III

5 Woe is me that I sojourn in Mosoch,*
that I dwell amid the tents of Cedar!
6 All too long have I dwelt with those who hate peace.
7 When I speak of peace,
they are ready for war.

PSALM 120 (121)*

The Lord Our Guardian

1 A song of ascents.

I

I lift up my eyes toward the mountains;*
whence shall help come to me?
2 My help is from the Lord,
who made heaven and earth.

II

3 May he not suffer your foot to slip;
may he slumber not who guards you:
4 Indeed he neither slumbers nor sleeps,
the guardian of Israel.

III

5 The Lord is your guardian; the Lord is your shade;
he is beside you at your right hand.
6 The sun shall not harm you by day,
nor the moon by night.*

IV

7 The Lord will guard you from all evil;
he will guard your life.
8 The Lord will guard [k]your coming and your going,*
both now and forever.

PSALM 121 (122)*

The Pilgrim's Greetings to Jerusalem

1 A song of ascents. Of David.

I

I rejoiced because they said to me,
"We will go up to the house of the Lord."
2 And now we have set foot within your gates, O Jerusalem—3 Jerusalem, built as a city with compact unity.

II

4 To it the tribes go up,
the tribes of the Lord,
According to the decree for Israel,
to give thanks to the name of the Lord.
5 In it are set up judgment seats,
seats for the house of David.

III

6 Pray for the peace* of Jerusalem!
May those who love you prosper!
7 May peace be within your walls,
prosperity in your buildings.
8 Because of my relatives and friends
I will say, "Peace be within you!"
9 Because of the house of the Lord, our God,
I will pray for your good.

PSALM 122 (123)*

Israel's Prayer in Persecution

1 A song of ascents.

I

To you I lift up my eyes
who are enthroned in heaven.
2 Behold, as the eyes of servants are on the hands of their masters,
As the eyes of a maid
are on the hands of her mistress,
So are our eyes on the Lord, our God,
till he have pity on us.

II

3 Have pity on us, O Lord, have pity on us,
for we are more than sated with contempt;
4 Our souls are more than sated
with the mockery of the arrogant,
with the contempt of the proud.

k Dt 28, 6.

119, 5: Mosoch: an ancient people dwelling in northeastern Asia Minor. Cf Gn 10, 2. Cedar: a tribe of the north Arabian desert. Cf Gn 25, 13. Probably these names are used here merely in a metaphorical sense for barbarians in general.

Ps 120 (121): Since he himself is full of confidence in the Lord's help (1f), the psalmist also reassures his companion of God's protection (3-8).

120, 1: The mountains: the ridge on which Mount Sion with its temple was situated. Cf Pss 86 (87), 1; 124 (125), 2.

120, 6: The harm caused by sunstroke was known to the ancients. Cf 4 Kgs 4, 18ff. The Orientals even today think that the moon also may have harmful effects. Some amend the Hebrew text to read, "Nor the cold by night." Cf Gn 31, 40.

120, 8: Your coming and your going: by a common idiom, the Hebrew uses the expression "to come in and to go out" to signify all ordinary human activity. Cf Dt 28, 6; 31, 2; Jos 14, 11; 2 Kgs 3, 25.

Ps 121 (122): A song of Sion. Full of joy at his arrival in the Holy City (1-3), the psalmist lauds Jerusalem as the goal of pilgrims and the seat of government (4f); he asks God's blessings upon it (6-9).

121, 6ff: Peace: shalom, the regular greeting in Hebrew; it is wider in meaning than the English word peace, and includes the idea of happiness, prosperity.

Ps 122 (123): A supplication of the people. Protesting their loyal obedience to the Lord (1f), they beg Him to have mercy on them in their humiliation (3f).

PSALM 123 (124)*

The Lord the Rescuer of His People

[1] A song of ascents. Of David.*

I

Had not the Lord been with us,
let Israel say,
[2] had not the Lord been with us—
When men rose up against us,
[3] then would they have swallowed us alive.
When their fury was inflamed against us,
[4] then would the waters* have overwhelmed us;
The torrent would have swept over us;
[5] over us then would have swept the raging waters.

II

[6] Blessed be the Lord, who did not leave us a prey to their teeth.
[7] We were rescued like a bird
from the fowlers' snare;
Broken was the snare,
and we were freed.
[8] Our help is in the name of the Lord,
who made heaven and earth.

PSALM 124 (125)*

The Lord the Protector of Israel

[1] A song of ascents.

I

They who trust in the Lord are like Mount Sion,*
which is immovable; which forever stands.
[2] Mountains are round about Jerusalem;
so the Lord is round about his people,
both now and forever.

II

[3] For the scepter of the wicked shall not remain upon the territory of the just,
Lest the just put forth
to wickedness their hands.

III

[4] Do good, O Lord, to the good
and to the upright of heart.
[5] But such as turn aside to crooked ways
may the Lord lead away with the evildoers!
Peace be upon Israel!

PSALM 125 (126)*

The People's Prayer for Full Restoration

[1] A song of ascents.

I

When the Lord brought back the captives of Sion,
we were like men dreaming.*
[2] Then our mouth was filled with laughter,
and our tongue with rejoicing.
Then they said among the nations,
"The Lord has done great things for them."
[3] The Lord has done great things for us;
we are glad indeed.

II

[4] Restore our fortunes, O Lord,
like the torrents in the southern desert.*
[5] Those that sow in tears
shall reap rejoicing.
[6] Although they go forth weeping,
carrying the seed to be sown,
They shall come back rejoicing,
carrying their sheaves.

PSALM 126 (127)*

The Need of God's Blessing: His Gift of Sons

[1] A song of ascents. Of Solomon.

I

Unless the Lord build the house,
they labor in vain who build it.
Unless the Lord guard the city,
in vain does the guard keep vigil.
[2] It is vain for you to rise early,
or put off your rest,

Ps 123 (124): A hymn of thanksgiving in which the people acknowledge that without the Lord's help they would have been utterly destroyed (1-5); they praise Him, therefore, for having rescued them from their enemies (6-8).

123, 1: Of David: missing in some ancient sources.

123, 4f: The waters: a figure of affliction. Cf Pss 17 (18), 5. 17; 68 (69), 2f.

Ps 124 (125): A supplication in which the people, affirming their confidence in the Lord's protection (1f), pray that the reign of wickedness may end (3) and that the good may enjoy God's blessings (4f).

124, 1ff: Although Jerusalem itself is situated on a high hill, a rampart of still higher mountains surrounds it.

Ps 125 (126): Grateful for their happy return from exile (1-3), the people beseech the Lord that He will prosper their present struggle to rebuild their homeland (4-6). Cf Ps 84 (85).

125, 1: Like men dreaming: the change from exile to their own country was almost too good to be believed.

125, 4: As the infrequent rains cause the sudden rush of waters through the dry and empty channels, so may the Lord quickly restore the fortunes of the exiles.

Ps 126 (127): Two short songs; the first (1f) stresses the truth that without God's blessing all human endeavor is futile, the second (3-5) congratulates the man whom God has blessed with many children.

You that eat hard-earned bread,
for he gives to his beloved in sleep.*

II

3 Behold, sons* are a gift from the Lord;
the fruit of the womb is a reward.
4 Like arrows in the hand of a warrior
are the sons of one's youth.
5 Happy the man whose quiver is filled with them;
they shall not be put to shame when they contend with enemies at the gate.*

PSALM 127 (128)*

The Happy Home of the Just Man

1 A song of ascents.

I

Happy are you who fear the Lord,
who walk in his ways!
2 For you shall eat the fruit of your handiwork;
happy shall you be, and favored.
3 Your wife shall be like a fruitful vine
in the recesses of your home;
Your children like olive plants*
around your table.
4 Behold, thus is the man blessed who fears the Lord.

II

5 The Lord bless you from Sion:
may you see the prosperity of Jerusalem
all the days of your life;
6 May you see your children's children.
Peace be upon Israel!

PSALM 128 (129)*

Prayer for the Overthrow of Israel's Foes

1 A song of ascents.

I

Much have they oppressed me from my youth,
let Israel say,
2 Much have they oppressed me from my youth;
yet they have not prevailed against me.
3 Upon my back the plowers plowed;*
long did they make their furrows.
4 But the just Lord has severed
the cords of the wicked.

II

5 May all be put to shame and fall back that hate Sion.
6 May they be like grass on the housetops,*
which withers before it is plucked;
7 With which the reaper fills not his hand,
nor the gatherer of sheaves his arms;
8 And those that pass by say not,
"The blessing of the Lord be upon you!
We bless you in the name of the Lord!"*

PSALM 129 (130)*

Prayer for Pardon and Mercy

1 A song of ascents.

I

Out of the depths* I cry to you, O Lord;
Lord, hear my voice!
2 Let your ears be attentive
to my voice in supplication:

II

3 If you, O Lord, mark iniquities,
Lord, who can stand?
4 But with you is forgiveness,
that you may be revered.*

126, 2: Our Lord taught the same truth, that God's blessings come to those who do not worry but trust in His loving providence. Cf Mt 6, 25-34; Mk 4, 26-29; Lk 12, 22-31.

126, 3: Sons: the word might also be rendered, "children"; but boys were more welcome than girls in an Israelite family.

126, 5: Enemies at the gate: the sense is not "foes besieging the walls of the city," but "adversaries in the forum, in the court of justice." Local government functioned in the large open space inside the city's gate. The larger a man's family, the greater his influence there. Cf Prv 31, 23.

Ps 127 (128): Like Ps 126 (127), 3ff, this is a song celebrating the blessings of family life. The psalmist congratulates the man to whom the Lord has given a fruitful wife and sturdy children (1-4), and wishes him prosperity and long life (5f).

127, 3: Vine . . . olive plants: merely for the purpose of comparison; not to be understood as if these plants grew inside a house. Cf Pss 51 (52), 10; 91 (92), 13ff.

Ps 128 (129): Bewailing the affliction that has so often been Israel's lot (1-4), the people pray that their foes may be brought to nought (5-8).

128, 3: Upon my back the plowers plowed: Israel's towns were changed into plowland. Some understand the words to mean that Israel was scourged like a slave.

128, 6f: The flat roofs of the houses in Palestine were coated with a protective covering of clay; the grass that sprouted in this clay after a heavy rain was short-lived and worthless.

128, 8: Harvesters greeted one another with such blessings. Cf Ru 2, 4.

Ps 129 (130): The sixth of the Penitential Psalms, the De Profundis, used in the liturgy of the Church as a prayer for the faithful departed. In deep sorrow the psalmist cries to the Lord (1f), begging pardon for his sins (3f); as he himself trusts in God's mercy (5-6b), so also should Israel wait in hope for the Lord's redemption (6c-8).

129, 1: The depths: of spiritual, not physical, misery.

129, 4: That you may be revered: the thought of God's merciful forgiveness should lead one to seek His pardon and to fear offending Him in the future. Cf Rom 2, 4.

III

5 I trust in the Lord;
my soul trusts in his word.
6 My soul waits for the Lord
more than sentinels wait for the dawn.

IV

More than sentinels wait for the dawn,
7 let Israel wait for the Lord,
For with the Lord is kindness
and with him is plenteous redemption;*
8 And he will redeem Israel
from all their iniquities.

PSALM 130 (131)*

Humble Trust in God

1 A song of ascents. Of David.

O Lord, my heart is not proud,
nor are my eyes haughty;
I busy not myself with great things,
nor with things too sublime for me.
2 Nay rather, I have stilled and quieted
my soul like a weaned child.
Like a weaned child on its mother's lap,
[so is my soul within me.]
3 O Israel, hope in the Lord,
both now and forever.

l 8ff: 2 Par 6, 41f.—m 11f: 2 Kgs 7, 12ff.

129, 7f: The redemption of Israel from all their iniquities was achieved by Christ, the divine Redeemer. Cf Lk 2, 38.

Ps 130 (131): A protestation of humility. The psalmist asserts that he is free from all worldly ambition (1) and as simple as a child (2); he hopes that Israel will likewise have childlike confidence in the Lord (3).

Ps 131 (132): A song reminding the people of the Lord's great promise to David that his descendants would always rule in Sion. It is similar to Ps 88 (89) but differs from it in its lack of lamentation over present miseries. The psalmist first recalls how David vowed to build a new dwelling place for the Lord (1-5); he then recounts how the Ark was brought to Sion (6-10). There follows the Lord's promise to David to bless his dynasty (11-13) and Sion, his capital (14-18).

131, 1: All his anxious care: to build the temple. Cf 2 Kgs 7, 1ff; 3 Kgs 8, 17.

131, 2. 5: The Mighty One of Jacob: one of the titles of the Lord. Cf Gn 49, 24; Is 49, 26; 60, 16.

131, 6: Ephratha: Bethlehem, David's birthplace. Cf Ru 4, 11. The fields of Jaar: "Forestfield," the same as Cariathiarim, "Foresttown," where the Ark remained for several generations. Cf 1 Kgs 7, 1f; 2 Kgs 6, 2; 1 Par 13, 5f.

131, 7: His footstool: the Ark. Cf Ps 98 (99), 5.

131, 10: Your anointed: the royal descendants of David, contemporaneous with the psalmist. According to some, this proves that the psalm is pre-exilic; according to others, the "anointed" of the Lord is Zorobabel, the post-exilic descendant of David. Cf 1 Esd 3, 2; Ag 1, 1-2. 23; Za 4.

131, 17: A horn to sprout forth for David: a strong offspring of David. This refers preeminently to Christ, who is called a "sprout" of David by the prophets. Cf Jer 23, 5; 33, 15; Za 3, 8; 6, 12. I will place a lamp: the ever-burning lamp in a house was a symbol of perpetual offspring; when a man died without descendants, his lamp was said to be put out. Cf 3 Kgs 11, 36; 15, 4; 4 Kgs 8, 19.

PSALM 131 (132)*

The Pact between David and the Lord

1 A song of ascents.

I

Remember, O Lord, for David
all his anxious care:*
2 How he swore to the Lord,
vowed to the Mighty One of Jacob:*
3 "I will not enter the house I live in,
nor lie on the couch where I sleep;
4 I will give my eyes no sleep
my eyelids no rest,
5 Till I find a place for the Lord,
a dwelling for the Mighty One of Jacob."

II

6 Behold, we heard of it in Ephratha;*
we found it in the fields of Jaar.
7 Let us enter into his dwelling,
let us worship at his footstool.*
8 Advance, O Lord, to your resting place l
you and the ark of your majesty.
9 May your priests be clothed with justice;
let your faithful ones shout merrily for joy.
10 For the sake of David your servant,
reject not the plea of your anointed.*

B

I

11 The Lord swore to David m
a firm promise from which he will not withdraw:
"Your own offspring
I will set upon your throne;
12 If your sons keep my covenant
and the decrees which I shall teach them,
Their sons, too, forever
shall sit upon your throne."
13 For the Lord has chosen Sion;
he prefers her for his dwelling.

II

14 "Sion is my resting place forever;
in her will I dwell, for I prefer her.
15 I will bless her with abundant provision,
her poor I will fill with bread.
16 Her priests I will clothe with salvation,
and her faithful ones shall shout merrily for joy.
17 In her will I make a horn to sprout forth for David;*

I will place a lamp for my anointed.
18 His enemies I will clothe with shame,
but upon him my crown shall shine."

PSALM 132 (133)*

The Benefits of Brotherly Concord

1 A song of ascents. Of David.

I

Behold, how good it is, and how pleasant,
where brethren dwell at one!
2 It is as when the precious ointment upon the head runs down over the beard, the beard of Aaron,
till it runs down upon the collar of his robe.
3 It is a dew like that of Hermon,
which comes down upon the mountains of Sion;
For there the Lord has pronounced his blessing,
life forever.

PSALM 133 (134)*

Exhortation to the Night Watch To Bless the Lord

1 A song of ascents.

Come, bless the Lord,
all you servants of the Lord*
Who stand in the house of the Lord during the hours of night.
2 Lift up your hands toward the sanctuary,
and bless the Lord.
3 May the Lord bless you from Sion,
the maker of heaven and earth.

PSALM 134 (135)*

Praise of God, the Lord and Benefactor of Israel

1 Alleluia.

A

Praise the name of the Lord;*
Praise, you servants of the Lord
2 Who stand in the house of the Lord,
in the courts of the house of our God.
3 Praise the Lord, for the Lord is good;
sing praise to his name, which we love;
4 For the Lord has chosen Jacob for himself,
Israel for his own possession.*

B

I

5 For I know that the Lord is great;
our Lord is greater than all gods.
6 All that the Lord wills he does[n]
in heaven and on earth,
in the seas and in all the deeps.
7 He raises storm clouds from the end of the earth;
with the lightning he makes the rain;
he brings forth the winds from his storehouse.[o]

II

8 He smote the first-born in Egypt,[p]
both of man and of beast.
9 He sent signs and wonders
into your midst, O Egypt, against Pharao and against all his servants.
10 He smote many nations[q]
and slew mighty kings:
11 Sehon, king of the Amorrites,
and Og, king of Basan,
and all the kings of Chanaan;
12 And he made their land a heritage,
the heritage of Israel his people.
13 Your name, O Lord, endures forever;
Lord is your title through all generations,[r]
14 For the Lord defends his people,
and is merciful to his servants.[s]

n Ps 113B (115), 3.—o Jer 10, 13.—p 8f: Pss 104 (105), 27, 36; 135 (136), 10.—q 10ff: Nm 21, 21-35; Dt 3, 8-11; Ps 135 (136), 17-22.—r Ps 101 (102), 13.—s Dt 32, 36.

Ps 132 (133): The psalmist rejoices in the compact settlement of the Israelite families as an evidence of God's blessing (1), just as the same divine blessing would be signified by the fragrant oil of anointing (2) used at the consecration of the high priest (Ex 30, 22-33), or by the rich dew (Gn 27, 27ff; Os 14, 6; Jl 3, 17f) covering the mountain slopes round about Jerusalem (3). Hermon is the majestic snow-capped mountain at the north of the Holy Land. Its copious waters are the type of the divine blessing that fructifies the soil. Similarly, Aaron is the type for any high priest consecrated with the same precious oil. The life forever was understood in the first place of the preservation of earthly life; it is capable of a fuller application in the light of the Gospel. The similes used seem to suppose that the psalmist saw the returned exiles living in and about the Holy City, crowning its mountaintop and spreading down over its slopes like a precious oil of a heaven-sent dew.

Ps 133 (134): This short song seems to have been sung in the temple as an encouragement for the priests and Levites who were on duty there during the night (1f); they respond by blessing the people (3).

133, 1: Servants of the Lord: the priests and Levites. Cf Dt 10, 8; Pss 112 (113), 1; 134 (135), 1; Dn 3, 84f.

Ps 134 (135): This hymn begins (1-4) and ends (19-21) with an exhortation to glorify God who is the almighty Lord of creation (5-7) and the defender of His chosen people (8-14), whereas the pagan gods are lifeless idols (15-18). Many of the verses were borrowed from other psalms.

134, 1f: Very similar to Ps 133 (134), 1.

134, 4: All nations belong to the Lord, but He has chosen Israel as His own in a special sense. Cf Ex 19, 5; Dt 7, 6; 14, 2; 26, 18; 32, 9.

III

15 The idols of the nations are silver and gold,*
the handiwork of men.
16 They have mouths but speak not;
they have eyes but see not;
17 They have ears but hear not,
nor is there breath in their mouths.
18 Their makers shall be like them,
everyone that trusts in them.

C

19 House of Israel, bless the Lord,*
house of Aaron, bless the Lord, 20 House of Levi, bless the Lord;
you who fear the Lord, bless the Lord.
21 Blessed from Sion be the Lord,
who dwells in Jerusalem.

PSALM 135 (136)*

Hymn of Thanksgiving for the Everlasting Kindness of the Lord

1 Alleluia.
Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good,
for his mercy endures forever;
2 Give thanks to the God of gods,*
for his mercy endures forever;
3 Give thanks to the Lord of lords,
for his mercy endures forever;

I

4 Who alone does great wonders,
for his mercy endures forever;
5 Who made the heavens in wisdom,[t]
for his mercy endures forever;
6 Who spread out the earth upon the waters,
for his mercy endures forever;
7 Who made the great lights,
for his mercy endures forever;
8 The sun to rule over the day,
for his mercy endures forever;
9 The moon and the stars to rule over the night,
for his mercy endures forever;

II

10 Who smote the Egyptians in their first-born,[u]
for his mercy endures forever;
11 And brought out Israel from their midst,
for his mercy endures forever;
12 With a mighty hand and an outstretched arm,
for his mercy endures forever;
13 Who split the Red Sea in twain,
for his mercy endures forever;
14 And led Israel through its midst,
for his mercy endures forever;
15 But swept Pharao and his army into the Red Sea,
for his mercy endures forever;
16 Who led his people through the wilderness,
for his mercy endures forever;
17 Who smote great kings,*
for his mercy endures forever;
18 And slew powerful kings,
for his mercy endures forever;
19 Sehon, king of the Amorrites,
for his mercy endures forever;
20 And Og, king of Basan,
for his mercy endures forever;
21 And made their land a heritage,
for his mercy endures forever;
22 The heritage of Israel his servant,
for his mercy endures forever;

III

23 Who remembered us in our abjection,*
for his mercy endures forever;
24 And freed us from our foes,
for his mercy endures forever;
25 Who gives food to all flesh,
for his mercy endures forever.
26 Give thanks to the God of heaven,
for his mercy endures forever.

PSALM 136 (137)*

The Exile's Remembrance of Sion

I

1 By the streams of Babylon*
we sat and wept
when we remembered Sion.

t 5-9: Gn 1, 8-18.—u 10-16: Ex 12, 29. 51; 14, 22. 28; 15, 22; Ps 77 (78), 51ff.

134, 15-18: Almost identical with Ps 113B (115), 4ff. 8.

134, 19ff: Similar to Ps 117 (118), 1-4.

Ps 135 (136): This hymn has the form of a "litany," that is, each half-verse is followed by a refrain, the former probably sung by a soloist and the latter by the people. It seems fairly certain that at least the main section, vv 4-25, did not originally have this invariable refrain, which now interrupts the grammatical structure of the sentences. Besides the introductory and concluding invitations to give grateful praise (1-3. 26), this hymn extols the Lord's greatness in creating the universe (4-9), as well as His goodness in bringing Israel to the Promised Land (10-22)

135, 2: The God of gods: the supreme and only God.

135, 17-22: These verses occur in similar form but without the refrain in Ps 134 (135), 10ff.

135, 23f: The reference seems to be to the Babylonian exile.

Ps 136 (137): The psalmist, now apparently returned from exile, recalls how the Jews refused to sing for their captors (1-3) because they thought joyful songs out of harmony with their mournful remembrance of Sion (4-6); condign punishment is wished upon cruel Edom and Babylon (7-9).

136, 1: The streams of Babylon: the Euphrates and Tigris, with the numerous irrigation-canals which branched off from them.

2 On the aspens* of that land
we hung up our harps,
3 Though there our captors asked of us
the lyrics of our songs,
And our despoilers urged us to be joyous:
"Sing for us the songs of Sion!"

II

4 How could we sing a song of the Lord
in a foreign land?
5 If I forget you, Jerusalem,
may my right hand be forgotten!
6 May my tongue cleave to my palate
if I remember you not,
If I place not Jerusalem
ahead of my joy.

III

7 Remember, O Lord, against the children of Edom,
the day of Jerusalem,*
When they said, "Raze it, raze it down to its foundations!"
8 O daughter of Babylon,* you destroyer, happy the man who shall repay you the evil you have done us!
9 Happy the man who shall seize and smash
your little ones against the rock!*

PSALM 137 (138)*

Hymn of a Grateful Heart

1 Of David.

I

I will give thanks to you, O Lord, with all my heart,
[for you have heard the words of my mouth;*]
in the presence of the angels I will sing your praise;
2 I will worship at your holy temple
and give thanks to your name,
Because of your kindness and your truth;
for you have made great above all things
your name and your promise.
3 When I called, you answered me;
you built up strength within me.

II

4 All the kings of the earth shall give thanks to you, O Lord,
when they hear the words of your mouth;
5 And they shall sing of the ways of the Lord:
"Great is the glory of the Lord."
6 The Lord is exalted, yet the lowly he sees,
and the proud he knows from afar.

III

7 Though I walk amid distress, you preserve me;
against the anger of my enemies you raise your hand;
your right hand saves me.
8 The Lord will complete what he has done for me;
your kindness, O Lord, endures forever;
forsake not the work of your hands.

PSALM 138 (139)*

The All-knowing and Ever-present God

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

O Lord, you have probed me and you know me;
2 you know when I sit and when I stand;*
you understand my thoughts from afar.
3 My journeys and my rest you scrutinize,
with all my ways you are familiar.

136, 2: The aspens: not, "the willows," as the older versions generally rendered it; the Hebrew word most probably signifies the populus euphraticus, the Mesopotamian aspen.

136, 7: The day of Jerusalem: the time when the Holy City was captured and destroyed by the Babylonians. In league with the latter were the Edomites, the southern neighbors and rivals of Juda. The prophets often threaten dire punishment to Edom for its hatred of Israel. Cf Is 34, 5-15; Jer 49, 7-22; Lam 4, 21f; Ez 25, 12ff; Am 1, 11f; Abd 1, 1-18.

136, 8: Daughter of Babylon: a Hebrew idiom for "city of Babylon."

136, 9: According to the ruthless custom of ancient warfare, children were indeed thus cruelly killed. Cf 4 Kgs 8, 12; Os 9. 16. But it seems more probable that here the psalmist is personifying "the daughter of Babylon" as a mother whose little ones are the adult citizens, not the infants, of the city. Cf Lk 19, 44.

Ps 137 (138): Thanking God for having heard his prayer (1-3), the psalmist wishes that all the great ones of the earth might join him in his hymn of gratitude (4-6), for he is confident of the Lord's continual help (7f).

137, 1: The words in brackets are in the Greek version but not in the current Hebrew text. They are probably a variant of v 4b accidentally inserted here. The angels: in Hebrew, elohim, which is the word for "God," "gods," and sometimes "godlike beings," such as the angels. Cf Ps 8, 6; 96 (97), 7. Some render, "In the face of the gods," that is, despite the false gods of the pagans.

Ps 138 (139): A hymn to God's omnipresence and omniscience, in the form of a meditation in which the psalmist ponders the truths that the Lord sees and knows him no matter where he may be (1-6); that there is no escape from the all-seeing eye of God (7-12); and that the divine Creator of man is also the Author of his destiny (13-18). He therefore resolves to abhor the wicked and to live sincerely in God's sight (19-24). The current Hebrew text is rather poorly preserved, and the interpretation of a few passages is somewhat doubtful.

138, 2: When I sit and when I stand: in all human activity.

4 Even before a word is on my tongue,
behold, O Lord, you know the whole of it.
5 Behind me and before, you hem me in
and rest your hand upon me.
6 Such knowledge is too wonderful for me;
too lofty for me to attain.

II

7 Where can I go from your spirit?
from your presence where can I flee?
8 If I go up to the heavens, you are there;[v]
if I sink to the nether world, you are present there.
9 If I take the wings of the dawn,*
if I settle at the farthest limits of the sea,
10 Even there your hand shall guide me,
and your right hand hold me fast.
11 If I say, "Surely the darkness shall hide me,
and night shall be my light"— 12 For you darkness itself is not dark,
and night shines as the day.
[Darkness and light are the same.*]

III

13 Truly you have formed my inmost being;
you knit me in my mother's womb.
14 I give you thanks that I am fearfully, wonderfully made;
wonderful are your works.
My soul also you knew full well;
15 nor was my frame unknown to you
When I was made in secret,
when I was fashioned in the depths of the earth.*
16 Your eyes have seen my actions;*
in your book they are all written;
my days were limited before one of them existed.
17 How weighty are your designs, O God;
how vast the sum of them!
18 Were I to recount them, they would outnumber the sands;
did I reach the end of them, I should still be with you.*

IV

19 If only you would destroy the wicked, O God,
and the men of blood were to depart from me!
20 Wickedly they invoke your name;
your foes swear faithless oaths.
21 Do I not hate, O Lord, those who hate you?
Those who rise up against you do I not loathe?
22 With a deadly hatred I hate them;
they are my enemies.
23 Probe me, O God, and know my heart;
try me, and know my thoughts;
24 See if my way is crooked,
and lead me in the way of old.*

v 8ff: Am 9, 2ff.—w Rom 3, 13.

138, 9: Take the wings of the dawn: go to the most distant extremities of the east. The farthest limits of the sea: the uttermost bounds of the west.

138, 12: Darkness and light are the same: as far as God is concerned; an explanatory gloss on the two preceding lines.

138, 15: The depths of the earth: figurative language for "the womb"; stressing not so much the darkness of the place as the hidden, mysterious nature of the operations which occur there.

138, 16ff: The text of these three verses is obscure in several places.

138, 18: I should still be with you: even though the psalmist might reach the end of his own capacity for understanding the divine attributes, the infinity of God's nature would still stand before him as if he had not even begun to comprehend it.

138, 24: The way of old: the manner of living of the ancient patriarchs. Cf Jer 6, 16.

Ps 139 (140): The psalmist beseeches God to rescue him from his violent, treacherous foes (2-4); they lay a trap for his life (5f), but he trusts in the Lord's protection (7f). Therefore he prays that their evil plans may recoil upon themselves (9-11), and that God will render due justice to both the wicked and the good (12-14).

139, 4: Similar metaphors for a wicked tongue are used in Pss 51 (52), 4; 54 (55), 22; 57 (58), 5.

139, 6: The same figure, taken from the custom of a hunter laying a trap for his prey, occurs in Pss 9A, 16; 30 (31), 5; 34 (35), 7; 56 (57), 7; 63 (64), 6. Cf Mt 22, 15; Lk 11, 54.

PSALM 139 (140)*

Prayer for Deliverance from the Snares of the Wicked

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.

I

2 Deliver me, O Lord, from evil men;
preserve me from violent men,
3 From those who devise evil in their hearts,
and stir up wars every day.
4 They make their tongues sharp as those of serpents;*
the venom of asps is under their lips.[w]

II

5 Save me, O Lord, from the hands of the wicked;
preserve me from violent men
Who plan to trip up my feet—
6 the proud who have hidden a trap for me;
They have spread cords for a net;
by the wayside they have laid snares for me.*

7 I say to the Lord, you are my God;
hearken, O Lord, to my voice in supplication.
8 O God, my Lord, my strength and my salvation;
you are my helmet in the day of battle!

III

9 Grant not, O Lord, the desires of the wicked;
further not their plans.
10 Those who surround me lift up their heads;
may the mischief which they threaten overwhelm them.
11 May he rain burning coals upon them;
may he cast them into the depths, never to rise.

IV

12 A man of wicked tongue shall not abide in the land;
evil shall abruptly entrap the violent man.
13 I know that the Lord renders justice to the afflicted, judgment to the poor.
14 Surely the just shall give thanks to your name;
the upright shall dwell in your presence.

PSALM 140 (141)*

Prayer of a Just Man To Be Saved from Wickedness

1 A psalm of David.

I

O Lord, to you I call; hasten to me;
hearken to my voice when I call upon you.
2 Let my prayer come like incense* before you;
the lifting up of my hands, like the evening sacrifice.

II

3 O Lord, set a watch before my mouth,
a guard at the door of my lips.
4 Let not my heart incline to the evil
of engaging in deeds of wickedness
With men who are evildoers;
and let me not partake of their dainties.
5 Let the just man strike me; that is kindness;
let him reprove me; it is oil for the head,
Which my head shall not refuse,
but I will still pray under these afflictions.
6 Their judges were cast down over the crag,*
and they heard how pleasant were my words
7 As when a plowman breaks furrows in the field,
so their bones are strewn by the edge of the nether world.

III

8 For toward you, O God, my Lord, my eyes are turned;
in you I take refuge; strip me not of life.
9 Keep me from the trap they have set for me,
and from the snares of evildoers.
10 Let all the wicked fall, each into his own net,
while I escape.

PSALM 141 (142)*

Prayer of a Prisoner in Dire Straits

1 A maskil of David. A prayer when he was in the cave.*

I

2 With a loud voice I cry out to the Lord;
with a loud voice I beseech the Lord.
3 My complaint I pour out before him;
before him I lay bare my distress.
4 When my spirit is faint within me,
you know my path.

II

In the way along which I walk
they have hid a trap for me.
5 I look to the right to see,
but there is no one who pays me heed.

Ps 140 (141): After calling for divine aid in general (1f), the psalmist prays that he may not be led astray by the seductions of the wicked, whose end is destruction (3-7), and that their evil may harm only themselves (8-10).

140, 2: Incense: literally, "smoke," that is, the fragrant fumes which rose from the altar at the burning of sacrificial animals or of aromatic spices, including frankincense; also in Ap 5, 8 as a symbol of prayer. The lifting up of my hands: the gesture of supplication. Cf Pss 27 (28), 2; 62 (63), 5; 76 (77), 3; 87 (88), 10; 118 (119), 48; 133 (134), 2; 142 (143), 6.

140, 6f: The text of these two verses is very obscure, and their interpretation quite uncertain.

Ps 141 (142): Imploring the Lord to behold his sad plight (2-4b), the psalmist tells how his enemies have hemmed him in (4c-5), and beseeches God to rescue him (6-8).

141, 1: In the cave: cf 1 Kgs 22, 1; 24, 1f; Ps 56 (57), 1.

I have lost all means of escape;
there is no one who cares for my life.

III

6 I cry out to you, O Lord;
I say, "You are my refuge,
my portion in the land of the living."
7 Attend to my cry,
for I am brought low indeed.
Rescue me from my persecutors,
for they are too strong for me.
8 Lead me forth from prison,
that I may give thanks to your name.
The just shall gather around me*
when you have been good to me.

PSALM 142 (143)*

Prayer of a Penitent in Distress

1 A psalm of David.

I

O Lord, hear my prayer;*
hearken to my pleading in your faithfulness;
in your justice answer me.
2 And enter not into judgment with your servant,
for before you no living man is just.

II

3 For the enemy pursues me;
he has crushed my life to the ground;
he has left me dwelling in the dark,
like those long dead.
4 And my spirit is faint within me,
my heart within me is appalled.
5 I remember the days of old;
I meditate on all your doings,
the works of your hands I ponder.x
6 I stretch out my hands to you;
my soul thirsts for you like parched land.

III

7 Hasten to answer me, O Lord,
for my spirit fails me.
Hide not your face from me
lest I become like those who go down into the pit.
8 At dawn let me hear of your kindness,
for in you I trust.
Show me the way in which I should walk,
for to you I lift up my soul.y
9 Rescue me from my enemies, O Lord, for in you I hope.

IV

10 Teach me to do your will,
for you are my God.
May your good spirit guide me
on level ground.*
11 For your name's sake, O Lord, preserve me;
in your justice free me from distress, 12 And in your kindness destroy my enemies;
bring to nought all my foes,
for I am your servant.

PSALM 143 (144)*

Prayer for Victory and Prosperity

1 Of David.

I

Blessed be the Lord, my rock,*
who trains my hands for battle, my fingers for war;
2 My refuge and my fortress,
my stronghold, my deliverer,
My shield, in whom I trust,
who subdues peoples under me.

II

3 Lord, what is man, that you notice him;
the son of man, that you take thought of him?*
4 Man is like a breath;
his days, like a passing shadow.*

x Ps 76 (77), 6. 12f.—y Pss 24 (25), 1; 85 (86), 4.

141, 8: The just shall gather around me: in the temple, when the psalmist offers up his thanksgiving sacrifice.

Ps 142 (143): The seventh of the Penitential Psalms. Pleading for divine assistance despite his sinfulness (1f), the psalmist describes his external and internal afflictions (3f) as he longs for the help which God has always offered His faithful servants (5f). He begs to be rescued from his enemies (7-9), and prays for God's saving guidance and the destruction of his foes (10-12).

142, 1f: Confident that God, in justice to His own promise, will answer his prayer, the psalmist admits that in strict justice to himself he does not deserve to be heard because of his sins.

142, 10: On level ground: some ancient sources read, "On a level path." Cf Pss 25 (26), 12; 26 (27), 11.

Ps 143 (144): Except for its final section, this psalm is made up almost entirely of verses borrowed from various other psalms; hence it is somewhat lacking in logical unity. The first section (1f) is a prayer of thanks for victory in war; the second (3-7a), a humble acknowledgment of man's nothingness and a supplication that God show forth His saving might; the third (9f), a promise of future thanksgiving; the fourth (12-15), a wish for prosperity and peace. A slightly varying refrain, which contains a prayer for deliverance from treacherous foes, occurs after the second and third sections (7b-8,11).

143, 1f: Composed of phrases from Ps 17 (18), 3. 35. 47f.

143, 3: Very similar to Ps 8, 5.

143, 4: Composed of phrases from Pss 38 (39), 6; 101 (102), 12.

5 Incline your heavens, O Lord, and come down;*
touch the mountains, and they shall smoke;
6 Flash forth lightning, and put them to flight,
shoot your arrows, and rout them;
7 Reach out your hand from on high—Deliver me and rescue me from many waters,
from the hands of aliens,
8 Whose mouths swear false promises
while their right hands are raised in perjury.

III

9 O God, I will sing a new song to you;*
with a ten-stringed lyre I will chant your praise, 10 You who give victory to kings,
and deliver David, your servant.
11 From the evil sword deliver me;
and rescue me from the hands of aliens,
Whose mouths swear false promises
while their right hands are raised in perjury.

IV

12 May our sons be like plants
well-nurtured in their youth,
Our daughters like wrought columns such as stand at the corners of the temple.*
13 May our garners be full,
affording every kind of store;
May our sheep be in the thousands,
and increase to myriads in our meadows;
14 may our oxen be well laden.
May there be no breach in the walls, no exile,
no outcry in our streets.
15 Happy the people for whom things are thus;
happy the people whose God is the Lord.

PSALM 144 (145)*

The Greatness and Goodness of God

1 Praise. Of David.

I will extol you, O my God and King,
and I will bless your name forever and ever.
2 Every day will I bless you,
and I will praise your name forever and ever.
3 Great is the Lord and highly to be praised;[z]
his greatness is unsearchable.
4 Generation after generation praises your works and proclaims your might.

5 They speak of the splendor of your glorious majesty and tell of your wondrous works.
6 They discourse of the power of your terrible deeds and declare your greatness.[a] 7 They publish the fame of your abundant goodness and joyfully sing of your justice.
8 The Lord is gracious and merciful, slow to anger and of great kindness.[b] 9 The Lord is good to all and compassionate toward all his works.

10 Let all your works give you thanks, O Lord,
and let your faithful ones bless you.
11 Let them discourse of the glory of your kingdom
and speak of your might, 12 Making known to men your might
and the glorious splendor of your kingdom.
13 Your kingdom is a kingdom for all ages,
and your dominion endures through all generations.[c]

The Lord is faithful in all his words
and holy in all his works.
14 The Lord lifts up all who are falling and raises up all who are bowed down.
15 The eyes of all look hopefully to you,
and you give them their food in due season;
16 You open your hand
and satisfy the desire of every living thing.[d]

z Ps 47 (48), 2.—a Ps 65 (66), 3.—b 8f: Ps 85 (86), 5. 15.—c Dn 4, 31.—d Ps 103 (104), 27.

143, 5ff: Adapted in large part from Pss 17 (18), 10. 15. 17; 103 (104), 32.

143, 9f: Similar to Pss 17 (18), 51; 32 (33), 2f.

143, 12: Like wrought columns . . . of the temple: well-formed, shapely. But the Hebrew text of these two lines is obscure, and the allusion is uncertain.

Ps 144 (145): An alphabetic psalm of which many of the phrases occur in similar form in other psalms or in other books of the Bible. The main thoughts of this hymn are concerned with God's sovereign majesty and loving providence.

17 The Lord is just in all his ways
and holy in all his works.
18 The Lord is near to all who call upon him,
to all who call upon him in truth.
19 He fulfills the desire of those who fear him,
he hears their cry and saves them.
20 The Lord keeps all who love him,
but all the wicked he will destroy.

21 May my mouth speak the praise of the Lord,
and may all flesh bless his holy name forever and ever.

PSALM 145 (146)*
Trust in God Alone

1 Alleluia.
Praise the Lord, O my soul;
2 I will praise the Lord all my life;
I will sing praise to my God while I live.[e]

I

3 Put not your trust in princes,
in man in whom there is no salvation.[f]
4 When his spirit departs he returns to his earth;
on that day his plans perish.

II

5 Happy he whose help is the God of Jacob,
whose hope is in the Lord, his God,
6 Who made heaven and earth,
the sea and all that is in them;[g]
Who keeps faith forever,
7 secures justice for the oppressed,
gives food to the hungry.
The Lord sets captives free;
8 the Lord gives sight to the blind.
The Lord raises up those that were bowed down;
the Lord loves the just.
9 The Lord protects strangers;
the fatherless and the widow he sustains,
but the way of the wicked he thwarts.
10 The Lord shall reign forever;
your God, O Sion, through all generations. Alleluia.

e Ps 103 (104), 33.—f Ps 117 (118), 8f.—g Acts 14, 14; Ap 14, 7.—h Is 11, 12.—i Is 61, 1.—j Is 40, 26.—k Ps 103 (104), 13f.—l Jb 38, 41.

Ps 145 (146): A hymn in praise of the kindness and generosity of God. After a short introductory strophe (1f), the psalmist exposes the folly of trusting in merely human aid (3f), and then extols the goodness of God toward those who put their trust in Him alone (5-10).

Ps 146 (147A): The current Hebrew text is probably correct in treating as only one psalm the parts which the Greek and Latin versions rendered as separate psalms. The combined psalm sings the praises of God as the restorer of exiled Israel (1-6) who sustains the needy (7-11), and as the benefactor of Sion (12-20).

146, 8f: Just as the heavenly Father clothes the mountains with vegetation for the nourishment of man and beast, so does His loving providence feed the birds, especially the ravens, whose loud cawing is poetically taken as a cry to God for food. Cf Mt 6, 26-30.

146, 10f: Trust in his own natural strength makes a man proud and displeasing to God, who delights only in a humble confidence toward Himself. Cf Pss 19 (20), 8; 32 (33), 16ff.

PSALM 146 (147A)*
Sion's Grateful Praise to Her Bountiful Lord.

I

1 Praise the Lord, for he is good;
sing praise to our God, for he is gracious;
it is fitting to praise him.
2 The Lord rebuilds Jerusalem;
the dispersed of Israel he gathers.[h] 3 He heals the brokenhearted and binds up their wounds.[i] 4 He tells the number of the stars;
he calls each by name.[j]
5 Great is our Lord and mighty in power;
to his wisdom there is no limit.
6 The Lord sustains the lowly;
the wicked he casts to the ground.

II

7 Sing to the Lord with thanksgiving;
sing praise with the harp to our God,
8 Who covers the heavens with clouds,*
who provides rain for the earth;[k]
Who makes grass sprout on the mountains and herbs for the service of men;
9 Who gives food to the cattle,
and to the young ravens when they cry to him.[l] 10 In the strength of the steed he delights not,*
nor is he pleased with the fleetness of men.
11 The Lord is pleased with those who fear him,
with those who hope for his kindness.

PSALM 147 (147B)*

III

12 Glorify the Lord, O Jerusalem;
praise your God, O Sion.
13 For he has strengthened the bars of your gates;
he has blessed your children within you.
14 He has granted peace in your borders;
with the best of wheat he fills you.[m] 15 He sends forth his command to the earth;
swiftly runs his word!
16 He spreads snow like wool;
frost he strews like ashes.

17 He scatters his hail like crumbs;
before his cold the waters freeze.[n]
18 He sends his word and melts them;
he lets his breeze blow and the waters run.
19 He has proclaimed his word to Jacob,[o]
his statutes and his ordinances to Israel.
20 He has not done thus for any other nation;
his ordinances he has not made known to them. Alleluia.

PSALM 148*

Hymn of All Creation to the Almighty Creator

1 Alleluia.

I

Praise the Lord from the heavens,
praise him in the heights;
2 Praise him, all you his angels,[p]
praise him, all you his hosts.
3 Praise him, sun and moon;
praise him, all you shining stars.
4 Praise him, you highest heavens,*
and you waters above the heavens.
5 Let them praise the name of the Lord,
for he commanded and they were created;
6 He established them forever and ever;
he gave them a duty which shall not pass away.

II

7 Praise the Lord from the earth,
you sea monsters and all depths;
8 Fire and hail, snow and mist,
storm winds that fulfill his word;
9 You mountains and all you hills,
you fruit trees and all you cedars;
10 You wild beasts and all tame animals,
you creeping things and you winged fowl.

III

11 Let the kings of the earth and all peoples,
the princes and all the judges of the earth, 12 Young men too, and maidens,
old men and boys,
13 Praise the name of the Lord,
for his name alone is exalted;
His majesty is above earth and heaven,
14 and he has lifted up the horn of his people.*
Be this his praise from all his faithful ones,
from the children of Israel, the people close to him. Alleluia.

PSALM 149*

Invitation To Glorify the Lord with Song and Sword

1 Alleluia.

I

Sing to the Lord a new song
of praise in the assembly of the faithful.
2 Let Israel be glad in their maker,
let the children of Sion rejoice in their king.
3 Let them praise his name in the festive dance,*
let them sing praise to him with timbrel and harp.[q]
4 For the Lord loves his people,
and he adorns the lowly with victory.
5 Let the faithful exult in glory;
let them sing for joy upon their couches;
6 let the high praises of God be in their throats.

Ps 148: All creatures in the heavens (1-6) and on earth (7-10) are called upon to join in the hymn of praise that universal mankind, and especially Israel, should sing to the Lord of all (11-14).

148, 4: Highest heavens: literally, "the heavens of the heavens," that is, the space above the firmament, where the "upper waters" are stored. Cf Gn 1, 6ff; Dt 10, 14; 3 Kgs 8, 27; Ps 103 (104), 3. 13.

148, 14: Lifted up the horn of his people: restored their power. Cf note on Ps 17 (18) 3.

Ps 149: While the people are invited to praise the Lord with sacred music in the temple (1-6a), they stand with sword in hand for the defense of Sion (6b-9). Cf 2 Esd 4, 16-23 (10-17); 1 Mc 4, 37f. 54; 2 Mc 15, 26f.

149, 3: The festive dance: cf Ex 15, 20; 2 Kgs 6, 5. 14. 16.

And let two-edged swords be in their hands:
7 to execute vengeance on the nations,
punishments on the peoples;
8 To bind their kings with chains,
their nobles with fetters of iron;
9 To execute on them the written sentence.
This is the glory of all his faithful.
Alleluia.

Ps 150: As a grand finale, the psalmist calls upon all the musical instruments of the temple service to join in the praise of the Lord; thus, the psalm serves as the closing doxology, not only to the Fifth Book of the Psalms, but to the whole Psalter.

150, 1: Praise the Lord: in Hebrew, hallelu-yah, which through the Greek and Latin versions has become our "Alleluia."

PSALM 150*

Final Doxology with Full Orchestra

1 Alleluia.
Praise the Lord* in his sanctuary,
praise him in the firmament of his strength.
2 Praise him for his mighty deeds,
praise him for his sovereign majesty.
3 Praise him with the blast of the trumpet,
praise him with lyre and harp,
4 Praise him with timbrel and dance,
praise him with strings and pipe.
5 Praise him with sounding cymbals,
praise him with clanging cymbals.
6 Let everything that has breath praise the Lord! Alleluia.

THE BOOK OF PROVERBS

The first word of this book, MISHLE, has provided the title by which it is generally designated in Jewish and Christian circles. The name "Proverbs," while not an exact equivalent of MISHLE, describes the main contents satisfactorily, even though it is hardly an adequate designation for such parts as 1, 1–9, 18 or 31, 10-31. Among some early Christian writers the book was also known by the name of "Wisdom," and in the Roman Missal it is referred to as a "Book of Wisdom."

The Book of Proverbs is an anthology of didactic poetry forming part of the sapiential literature of the Old Testament. Its primary purpose, indicated in the first sentence (1, 2f), is to teach wisdom. It is thus directed particularly to the young and inexperienced (1, 4); but also to those who desire advanced training in wisdom (1, 5f). The wisdom which the book teaches covers a wide field of human and divine activity, ranging from matters purely secular to most lofty moral and religious truths, such as God's omniscience (5, 21; 15, 3-11), power (19, 21; 21, 30), providence (20, 1-24), goodness (15, 29), and the joy and strength resulting from abandonment to Him (3, 5; 16, 20; 18, 10). The teaching of the entire book is placed on a firm religious foundation by the principle that "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge" (1, 7; cf 9, 10).

To Solomon are explicitly ascribed parts II and V of the book, which means at least their substance. Of Agur (part VI) and Lamuel (part VIII) nothing further is known. Parts III and IV are attributed to "the wise." The remaining parts are anonymous.

The manner of compilation is conjectural. Parts II and V may have circulated first as independent collections, compiled before the fall of Jerusalem, as the references to Solomon (10, 1) and Ezechias (25, 1) indicate. The rest was added at various later times. No definite date can be assigned to the completion of the work.

Christ and the Apostles often expressly quoted the Proverbs (Jn 7, 38; Rom 12, 20; Jas 4, 6) or repeated their teaching; compare Lk 10, 14, and Prv 25, 7; 1 Pt 4, 8; Jas 5, 20 and Prv 10, 12. The book has an important place in the Latin and Greek liturgies.

On the basis of titles, subject matter, and poetic structure the Book of Proverbs may be divided as follows: I. Introduction: The Value of Wisdom (1, 1–9, 18). II. First Collection of the Proverbs of Solomon (10, 1–22, 16). III. Sayings of the Wise (22, 17–24, 22). IV. Other Sayings of the Wise (24, 23-34). V. Second Collection of the Proverbs of Solomon (25, 1–29, 27). VI. The Words of Agur (30, 1-14). VII. Numerical Proverbs (30, 15-33). VIII. The Words of Lamuel (31, 1-9). IX. The Ideal Wife (31, 10-31).

I: INTRODUCTION: THE VALUE OF WISDOM

CHAPTER 1.

Purpose of the Proverbs of Solomon*

1 The proverbs of Solomon,[a] the son of David,
king of Israel:
2 That men may appreciate wisdom and discipline,*
may understand words of intelligence;
3 May receive training in wise conduct,
in what is right, just and honest;
4 That resourcefulness may be imparted to the simple,*
to the young man knowledge and discretion.
5 A wise man by hearing them will advance in learning,
an intelligent man will gain sound guidance,
6 That he may comprehend proverb and parable,
the words of the wise and their riddles.

7 The fear of the Lord* is the beginning of knowledge; [b] wisdom and instruction fools despise.

The Path of the Wicked: Greed and Violence*

8 Hear, my son, your father's instruction,
and reject not your mother's teaching;
9 A graceful diadem will they be for your head;
a torque for your neck.
10 My son, should sinners entice you, 11 and say,
"Come along with us!
Let us lie in wait for the honest man,
let us, unprovoked, set a trap for the innocent;
12 Let us swallow them up, as the nether world does, alive,
in the prime of life, like those who go down to the pit!
13 All kinds of precious wealth shall we gain,
we shall fill our houses with booty;
14 Cast in your lot with us,
we shall all have one purse!"— 15 My son, walk not in the way with them, hold back your foot from their path!
16 [For their feet run to evil,
they hasten to shed blood.[c]] 17 It is in vain that a net is spread* before the eyes of any bird—18 These men lie in wait for their own blood,
they set a trap for their own lives.
19 This is the fate of everyone greedy of loot:
unlawful gain takes away the life of him who acquires it.

Wisdom in Person Gives Warning*

20 Wisdom cries aloud in the street, in the open squares she raises her voice; [d] 21 Down the crowded ways she calls out,
at the city gates she utters her words:
22 "How long, you simple ones, will you love inanity,
23 how long will you turn away at my reproof?
Lo! I will pour out to you my spirit,
I will acquaint you with my words.

24 "Because I called and you refused,
I extended my hand and no one took notice; [e]
25 Because you disdained all my counsel, and my reproof you ignored—
26 I, in my turn, will laugh at your doom;
I will mock when terror overtakes you;

a Prv 10, 1; 25, 1; 3 Kgs 4, 32.—b Prv 9, 10; Jb 28, 28; Ps 110 (111), 10; Sir 1, 16.—c Is 59, 7.—d Prv 8, 1-3; 9, 3.—e Is 65, 2. 12; 66, 4; Jer 7, 13.

1, 1-6: This prologue explains the purpose of the book: to educate the inexperienced in knowledge and right conduct, and to increase the learning of the wise man by proverbs, parables and riddles.

1, 2: Discipline: education or formation which dispels ignorance and corrects vice.

1, 4: Simple: immature and inexperienced, hence easily influenced for good or evil.

1, 7: Fear of the Lord: reverential fear and respect for God on account of His sovereignty, goodness and justice toward men. This is the foundation of religion.

1, 8-19: A warning against association with the greedy and the violent who seek to destroy the honest man and to steal his possessions (11-14). The trap which the wicked set for the innocent (11), in the end (19) takes away the life of the wicked themselves.

1, 17: Instructed by the wise man, the youth (of v 4) will recognize the invitation of the wicked (11-14) as a net spread before him, and he will thus, like the bird, be protected against falling into it.

1, 20-33: Wisdom is here personified: with divine authority she sets forth and proclaims the moral order, instructing and threatening (24-33) the multitudes in the streets and places of assembly.

27 When terror comes upon you like a storm,
and your doom approaches like a whirlwind;
when distress and anguish befall you.

28 "Then they call me, but I answer not;
they seek me, but find me not;*
29 Because they hated knowledge,
and chose not the fear of the Lord;
30 They ignored my counsel,
they spurned all my reproof;
And in their arrogance they preferred arrogance,
and like fools they hated knowledge:
31 "Now they must eat the fruit of their own way,
and with their own devices be glutted.*
32 For the self-will of the simple kills them,
the smugness of fools destroys them.
33 But he who obeys me dwells in security,
in peace, without fear of harm." f

CHAPTER 2.*

The Blessings of Wisdom*

1 My son, if you receive my words
and treasure my commands,
2 Turning your ear to wisdom,*
inclining your heart to understanding;
3 Yes, if you call to intelligence,
and to understanding raise your voice;
4 If you seek her like silver,
and like hidden treasures search her out:

5 Then will you understand the fear of the Lord;
the knowledge of God you will find;
6 For the Lord gives wisdom,
from his mouth comes knowledge and understanding; g
7 He has counsel in store for the upright,
he is the shield of those who walk honestly,
8 Guarding the paths of justice,
protecting the way of his pious ones.

9 Then you will understand rectitude and justice,
honesty, every good path;
10 For wisdom will enter your heart,
knowledge will please your soul, 11 Discretion will watch over you,
understanding will guard you;

12 Saving you from the way of evil men,
from men of perverse speech, 13 Who leave the straight paths
to walk in ways of darkness, 14 Who delight in doing evil,
rejoice in perversity;
15 Whose ways are crooked,
and devious their paths;

16 Saving you from the wife of another,
from the adulteress with her smooth words,h
17 Who forsakes the companion of her youth and forgets the pact with her God;
18 For her path sinks down to death,
and her footsteps lead to the shades; i 19 None who enter thereon come back again,
or gain the paths of life.

20 Thus you may walk in the way of good men,
and keep to the paths of the just.
21 For the upright will dwell in the land,j
the honest will remain in it;
22 But the wicked will be cut off from the land,
the faithless will be rooted out of it.

CHAPTER 3.

Attitude toward the Lord*

1 My son, forget not my teaching,
keep in mind my commands;

f Prv 8, 33f.—g Jb 32, 8; Wis 7, 25; Sir 1, 1; Jas 1, 5.—h Prv 5, 3, 20; 6, 24; 7, 5; 22, 14.—i Prv 5, 5f; 7, 27.—j 21f: Prv 10, 7. 30; Jb 18, 17; Pss 20 (21), 9-13; 36 (37), 22. 28.

1, 28: Overtaken by doom, the foolish seek wisdom, but in vain because they do so too late. Cf Jn 7, 34; 8, 21.

1, 31: Sinners are punished by the bad fruits which their sins produce. Cf Wis 11, 16.

Ch 2—7: These chapters form an ordered discourse in seven "columns" of twenty-two verses each. Chapter 2 introduces the four topics about which the sage instructs his pupil: the service of God (3, 1-12. 25-34), the search for wisdom (3, 13-24; 4, 1-9), the avoidance of evil companions among men (4, 10-27; 5, 21-23), and among women (5, 1-20; 6, 20—7, 27). The last topic is treated at a length equal to the first three because the discourse is meant especially for youths (cf 1, 4).

2, 1-22: The search for wisdom (1-4) leads to the protection of God (5-8) and of wisdom herself (9ff; cf 1, 20-33) and to deliverance from evil men (12-15) and evil women (16-19), and so to lasting happiness (20ff).

2, 2f: Wisdom, understanding, intelligence: various names or aspects of the same gift.

3, 1-12: Many are the rewards for fidelity and trust in God, and for diffidence of self (1-8). Cf Dt 30, 20; Is 38, 19. The offering of material things for divine worship is blessed by an increase of such goods (9f). Even correction and chastisement are a mark of God's love and favor (11f).

2 For many days, and years of life,[k]
and peace, will they bring you.

3 Let not kindness and fidelity leave you;
bind them around your neck;
4 Then will you win favor and good esteem
before God and man.

5 Trust in the Lord with all your heart,
on your own intelligence rely not;
6 In all your ways be mindful of him,
and he will make straight your paths.

7 Be not wise in your own eyes,[l]
fear the Lord and turn away from evil;
8 This will mean health for your flesh
and vigor for your bones.

9 Honor the Lord with your wealth,
with first fruits of all your produce;[m]
10 Then will your barns be filled with grain,
with new wine your vats will overflow.

11 The discipline of the Lord, my son, disdain not;[n]
spurn not his reproof;
12 For whom the Lord loves he reproves,
and he chastises the son he favors.[o]

The Value of Wisdom*

13 Happy the man who finds wisdom,
the man who gains understanding![p]
14 For her profit is better than profit in silver,
and better than gold is her revenue;
15 She is more precious than corals,*
and none of your choice possessions can compare with her.[q]

16 Long life is in her right hand,
in her left are riches and honor;
17 Her ways are pleasant ways,
and all her paths are peace;
18 She is a tree of life* to those who grasp her,[r]
and he is happy who holds her fast.

19 The Lord by wisdom founded the earth,
established the heavens by understanding; 20 By his knowledge the depths break open,
and the clouds drop down dew.*

21 My son, let not these slip out of your sight:
keep advice and counsel in view;
22 So will they be life to your soul,
and an adornment for your neck.
23 Then you may securely go your way;
your foot will never stumble;
24 When you lie down, you need not be afraid,
when you rest, your sleep will be sweet.

Attitude toward Fellow Men*

25 Be not afraid of sudden terror,
of the ruin of the wicked* when it comes;
26 For the Lord will be your confidence,
and will keep your foot from the snare.

27 Refuse no one the good on which he has a claim
when it is in your power to do it for him.
28 Say not to your neighbor, "Go, and come again, tomorrow I will give," when you can give at once.

29 Plot no evil against your neighbor,
against him who lives at peace with you.
30 Quarrel not with a man without cause,
with one who has done you no harm.
31 Envy not the lawless man
and choose none of his ways:[s] 32 To the Lord the perverse man is an abomination,
but with the upright is his friendship.

k Prv 4, 10; 9, 11; 10, 27.—l Rom 11, 25; 12, 16.—m Ex 34, 26; Lv 27, 30; Dt 26, 2; Sir 7, 31; 35, 7.—n Heb 12, 5f.—o Jude 8, 27; Ap 3, 19.—p Prv 8, 34f.—q Prv 8, 11, 19; Wis 7, 8-11.—r Prv 4, 13; 8, 35; 11, 30; Gn 2, 9; 3, 22.—s Prv 23, 17; 24, 1. 19; Ps 36 (37), 1.

3, 13-24. Wisdom, or understanding, is more valuable than silver and gold. Its fruit is long life, riches, honor and happiness (13-18). Even the creation of the universe and its adornment (Gn 1) were not done without wisdom (19f). It is the life of the soul and gives security in work and in repose (21-24).

3, 15: Corals: some precious stone may be intended.

3, 18: A tree of life: cf Prv 11, 30; 13, 12; Gn 2, 9.

3, 20: For the Hebrews, the depths enclosed the great subterranean ocean; the rain and dew descended from the celestial ocean above the firmament; cf Gn 1, 6-10; Jb 26, 8. 12; Ps 17 (18), 16; 23 (24), 2.

3, 25-34: Service of God requires also right conduct toward one's fellow man: one who has confidence in God (25f) must also be ready with kindness toward his neighbor (27f), maintain peace with the good (29ff), and shun envy of the wicked (31), because the Lord's friendship and kindness are with the just, but His curse is with the wicked (32f).

3, 25: The ruin of the wicked: i.e., the ruin that comes upon the wicked.

33 The curse of the Lord is on the house of the wicked,
but the dwelling of the just he blesses;
34 When he is dealing with the arrogant, he is stern,[t]
but to the humble he shows kindness.

35 [Honor is the portion of wise men,
but fools inherit shame.]

CHAPTER 4.

Wisdom: the Supreme Guide of Men*

1 Hear, O children, a father's instruction,
be attentive, that you may gain understanding!
2 Yes, excellent advice I give you;
my teaching do not forsake.
3 When I was my father's child,
frail, yet the darling of my mother,
4 He taught me, and said to me:
"Let your heart hold fast my words![u]
5 Keep my commands, do not forget;
go not astray from the words of my mouth.

7 "The beginning of wisdom is: get wisdom;
at the cost of all you have, get understanding.
6 Forsake her not, and she will preserve you;
love her, and she will safeguard you;
8 Extol her, and she will exalt you;
she will bring you honors if you embrace her;
9 She will put on your head a graceful diadem;
a glorious crown will she bestow on you."

t Prv 1, 26.—u 3 Kgs 2, 2ff.—v Prv 3, 2.—w Prv 8, 35.

4, 1-9: The sage speaks as a father admonishing his children to secure wisdom at any cost.

4, 10-27: The way of wisdom leads directly to life (10-13); it is a light that grows brighter (18). The wise man is bound to shun (14-17) the dark and violent path of the wicked (19). Singleness of purpose and right conduct proceed from the heart of a wise man as from the source of life (23-26); they save him from destruction on evil paths (4, 27; 5, 21ff).

4, 19: Till perfect day: literally, "till the day is established"; this may refer to full daylight or to noonday.

5, 1-20: Understanding and discretion guard a man against the wiles of an adulteress, which lead astray and beget bitterness, bloodshed and death (1-6). They destroy honor, waste the years of life, despoil hard-earned wealth, consume the flesh, and bring remorse in the end (7-14). Conjugal fidelity and love for one wife only bring happiness and security (15-20). Cf Prv 6, 20 — 7, 27.

The Good and the Evil Way*

10 Hear, my son, and receive my words,
and the years of your life shall be many.[v]
11 On the way of wisdom I direct you,
I lead you on straightforward paths.
12 When you walk, your step will not be impeded,
and should you run, you will not stumble.
13 Hold fast to instruction, never let her go;
keep her, for she is your life.

14 The path of the wicked enter not,
walk not on the way of evil men;
15 Shun it, cross it not,
turn aside from it, and pass on.
16 For they cannot rest unless they have done evil;
to have made no one stumble steals away their sleep.
17 For they eat the bread of wickedness
and drink the wine of violence.

19 But the path of the just is like shining light,
that grows in brilliance till perfect day.*
18 The way of the wicked is like darkness;
they know not on what they stumble.
20 My son, to my words be attentive,
to my sayings incline your ear;
21 Let them not slip out of your sight,
keep them within your heart;
22 For they are life to those who find them,[w]
to man's whole being they are health.

23 With closest custody, guard your heart,
for in it are the sources of life.
24 Put away from you dishonest talk,
deceitful speech put far from you.
25 Let your eyes look straight ahead
and your glance be directly forward.
26 Survey the path for your feet,
and let all your ways be sure.
27 Turn neither to right nor to left,
keep your foot far from evil.

CHAPTER 5.

Warning against Adultery*

1 My son, to my wisdom be attentive,
to my knowledge incline your ear,

2 That discretion may watch over you,
and understanding may guard you.
3 The lips of an adulteress drip with honey,
and her mouth is smoother than oil; [x]
4 But in the end she is as bitter as wormwood,
as sharp as a two-edged sword.
5 Her feet go down to death,
to the nether world her steps attain; [y]
6 Lest you see before you the road to life,
her paths will ramble, you know not where.

7 So now, O children, listen to me,
go not astray from the words of my mouth.
8 Keep your way far from her, [z]
approach not the door of her house, 9 Lest you give your honor* to others, [a]
and your years to a merciless one;
10 Lest strangers have their fill of your wealth,
your hard-won earnings go to an alien's house;
11 And you groan in the end,
when your flesh and your body are consumed; 12 And you say, "Oh, why did I hate instruction,
and my heart spurn reproof!
13 Why did I not listen to the voice of my teachers,
nor to my instructors incline my ear!
14 I have all but come to utter ruin,
condemned by the public assembly!"

15 Drink water from your own cistern,
running water from your own well.
16 How may your water sources be dispersed abroad,
streams of water in the streets?
17 Let your fountain be yours alone,
not one shared with strangers;
18 And have joy of the wife of your youth,
19 your lovely hind, your graceful doe.*
Her love will invigorate you always,
through her love you will flourish continually, 22 When you lie down she will watch over you,
and when you wake, she will share your concerns;
wherever you turn, she will guide you.*
20 Why then, my son, should you go astray for another's wife and accept the embraces of an adulteress?

21 For each man's ways are plain to the Lord's sight;*
all their paths he surveys; [b]
22 By his own iniquities the wicked man will be caught, in the meshes of his own sin he will be held fast;
23 He will die from lack of discipline,
through the greatness of his folly he will be lost.

CHAPTER 6.

Miscellaneous Proverbs*

1 My son, if you have become surety to your neighbor, [c]
given your hand in pledge* to another,
2 You have been snared by the utterance of your lips,
caught by the words of your mouth;
3 So do this, my son, to free yourself,
since you have fallen into your neighbor's power:
Go, hurry, stir up your neighbor!
4 Give no sleep to your eyes,
nor slumber to your eyelids;
5 Free yourself as a gazelle from the snare,
or as a bird from the hand of the fowler.

6 Go to the ant, [d] O sluggard,
study her ways and learn wisdom;
7 For though she has no chief,
no commander or ruler,

x Prv 7, 5.—y Prv 2, 18; 7, 27.—z Prv 7, 25.—a 9f: Sir 9, 6.—b Jb 14, 16; 31, 4; 34, 21.—c 1f: Prv 11, 15; 22, 26; Sir 8, 13; 29, 19.—d Prv 30, 25.

5, 9: Honor: the words "life" and "wealth" have also been read in this place. A merciless one: the offended husband; cf Prv 6, 34f.

5, 19: Lovely hind . . . graceful doe: oriental symbols of feminine beauty and charm; cf Ct 2, 7. 9. 17.

5, 22: This is transposed from chapter 6, 22.

5, 21-23: These verses are best read after 4, 27.

6, 1-19: These verses interrupt the discourse of chapters 2-7, which should be read apart from them; they contain four shorter proverbs akin to those in chapter 30.

6, 1: Given your hand in pledge: literally, "struck your hands"; this was probably the legal method for closing a contract.

8 She procures her food in the summer,
stores up her provisions in the harvest.
9 How long, O sluggard, will you rest?
when will you rise from your sleep?
10 A little sleep, a little slumber,
a little folding of the arms to rest—*
11 Then will poverty come upon you like a highwayman,
and want like an armed man.

12 A scoundrel, a villain, is he who deals in crooked talk.
13 He winks his eyes,
shuffles his feet,
makes signs with his fingers;
14 He has perversity in his heart,
is always plotting evil,
sows discord.
15 Therefore suddenly ruin comes upon him;
in an instant he is crushed beyond cure.

16 There are six things the Lord hates,
yes, seven are an abomination to him;*
17 Haughty eyes, a lying tongue,
and hands that shed innocent blood;
18 A heart that plots wicked schemes,
feet that run swiftly to evil, 19 The false witness who utters lies,
and he sows discord among brothers.

Warning against Adultery*

20 Observe, my son, your father's bidding,
and reject not your mother's teaching;
21 Keep them fastened over your heart always,
put them around your neck;
23 For the bidding is a lamp, and the teaching a light,
and a way to life are the reproofs of discipline;
24 To keep you from your neighbor's wife,
from the smooth tongue of the adulteress.[e]

25 Lust not in your heart after her beauty,
let her not captivate you with her glance![f] 26 For the price of a loose woman
may be scarcely a loaf of bread,
But if she is married,
she is a trap for your precious life.*
27 Can a man take fire to his bosom,
and his garments not be burned?
28 Or can a man walk on live coals,
and his feet not be scorched?
29 So with him who goes in to his neighbor's wife—
none who touches her shall go unpunished.[g]

30 Men despise not the thief if he steals to satisfy his appetite when he is hungry;
31 Yet if he be caught he must pay back sevenfold;
all the wealth of his house he may yield up.
32 But he who commits adultery is a fool;
he who would destroy himself does it.
33 A degrading beating will he get,
and his disgrace will not be wiped away;
34 For vindictive is the husband's wrath,
he will have no pity on the day of vengeance;
35 He will not consider any restitution,
nor be satisfied with the greatest gifts.

CHAPTER 7.

1 My son, keep my words,
and treasure my commands.
2 Keep my commands and live,
my teaching as the apple of your eye;
3 Bind them on your fingers,
write them on the tablet of your heart.[h]
4 Say to Wisdom, "You are my sister!"
call Understanding, "Friend!"
5 That they may keep you from another's wife,

e Prv 2, 16; 7, 5.—f Ex 20, 17; Dt 5, 21; Sir 9, 8; 25, 20; Mt 5, 28.—g Sir 9, 9.—h Dt 6, 8.

6, 10: This verse may be regarded as the sluggard's reply or as a continuation of the remonstrance.

6, 16-19: The seven vices symbolized for the most part by bodily organs are pride, lying, murder, intrigue, readiness to do evil, false witness, and the stirring up of discord.

6, 20—7, 27: Parental training and the love of wisdom are an invaluable and constant help for the young (6, 20-23; 7, 1-4). They are the best defense against adultery (6, 24; 7, 5. 24f), which involves the guilty in many dangers and punishments (6, 26-35; 7, 6-27). Cf Prv 5, 1-20.

6, 26: Some interpret the verse in a progressive sense, i.e., to satisfy the increasing demands of a courtesan a man is reduced to poverty; if the woman is married, even his very life is endangered.

from the adulteress with her smooth words.[i]

6 For at the window of my house,
through my lattice I looked out;
7 And I saw among the simple ones,
I observed among the young men,
a youth with no sense,
8 Going along the street near the corner,
then walking in the direction of her house—9 In the twilight, at dusk of day,
at the time of the dark of night.

10 And lo! the woman comes to meet him,
robed like a harlot, with secret designs—11 She is fickle and unruly,
in her home her feet cannot rest;
12 Now she is in the streets, now in the open squares,
and at every corner she lurks in ambush—13 When she seizes him, she kisses him,
and with an impudent look says to him:

14 "I owed peace offerings,
and today I have fulfilled my vows;*
15 So I came out to meet you,
to look for you, and I have found you!
16 With coverlets I have spread my couch,
with brocaded cloths of Egyptian linen;
17 I have sprinkled my bed with myrrh,
with aloes, and with cinnamon.

18 "Come, let us drink our fill of love,
until morning, let us feast on love!
19 For my husband is not at home,
he has gone on a long journey;
20 A bag of money he took with him,
not till the full moon will he return home."

21 She wins him over by her repeated urging,
with her smooth lips she leads him astray;[j] 22 He follows her stupidly,
like an ox that is led to slaughter;
Like a stag that minces toward the net,
23 till an arrow pierces its liver;
Like a bird that rushes into a snare,
unaware that its life is at stake.

24 So now, O children, listen to me,
be attentive to the words of my mouth!
25 Let not your heart turn to her ways,
go not astray in her paths;
26 For many are those she has struck down dead,
numerous, those she has slain.

27 Her house is made up of ways to the nether world,
leading down into the chambers of death.[k]

CHAPTER 8.

The Discourse of Wisdom*

1 Does not Wisdom call,
and Understanding raise her voice?[l]
2 On the top of the heights along the road,
at the crossroads she takes her stand;
3 By the gates at the approaches of the city,
in the entryways she cries aloud:
4 "To you, O men, I call;
my appeal is to the children of men.
5 You simple ones, gain resource,
you fools,* gain sense.

6 "Give heed! for noble things I speak;
honesty opens my lips.
7 Yes, the truth my mouth recounts,*
but wickedness my lips abhor.
8 Sincere are all the words of my mouth,
no one of them is wily or crooked;
9 All of them are plain to the man of intelligence,
and right to those who attain knowledge.
10 Receive my instruction in preference to silver,
and knowledge rather than choice gold.

i Prv 2, 16; 6, 24.—j Prv 5, 3; 6, 24.—k Prv 2, 18f; 5, 5.—l Prv 1, 20f; 9, 3.

7, 14: "Peace offerings . . . vows": a portion of the sacrifice reverted to the donor and had to be eaten on the same day at a family festival (Lv 7, 11-15). In this figure, the adulteress offers to share with the foolish young man the deadly feast of her sensuality.

8, 1-36: Wisdom is here personified as in Prv 1, 20-33, to confirm the words of the teacher of wisdom. She exalts her grandeur and origin, and invites all (1-11) to be attentive to her salutary influence in human society (12-21), for she was privileged to be present at the creation of the world (22-31). Finally, she promises life and the favor of God to those who find her, death to those who despise her.

8, 5: Simple ones . . . fools: see note on Prv 1, 4.

8, 7f: The truth and sincerity of wisdom are absolute because they are divine. They can neither deceive nor tolerate deception. An intelligent man understands and accepts them.

11 [For Wisdom is better than corals,
and no choice possession can compare with her.[m]]

12 "I, Wisdom, dwell with experience, and judicious knowledge I attain.
13 [The fear of the Lord is to hate evil;]
Pride, arrogance, the evil way,
and the perverse mouth I hate.[n]
14 Mine are counsel and advice;
Mine is strength; I am understanding.*
15 By me kings reign,
and lawgivers establish justice;
16 By me princes govern,
and nobles; all the rulers of earth.

17 "Those who love me I also love,
and those who seek me find me.
18 With me are riches and honor,[o]
enduring wealth and prosperity.
19 My fruit is better than gold, yes, than pure gold,
and my revenue than choice silver.[p] 20 On the way of duty I walk, along the paths of justice, 21 Granting wealth to those who love me,
and filling their treasuries.

22 "The Lord begot me, the firstborn of his ways,*
the forerunner of his prodigies of long ago;[q] 23 From of old I was poured forth,*
at the first, before the earth.[r]
24 Where there were no depths I was brought forth,*
when there were no fountains or springs of water;
25 Before the mountains were settled into place,
before the hills, I was brought forth;
26 While as yet the earth and the fields were not made,
nor the first clods of the world.

27 "When he established the heavens I was there,[s]
when he marked out the vault over the face of the deep; 28 When he made firm the skies above,
when he fixed fast the foundations of the earth;
29 When he set for the sea its limit,
so that the waters should not transgress his command;
30 Then was I beside him as his craftsman,*
and I was his delight day by day,[t]
Playing before him all the while,
31 playing on the surface of his earth
[and I found delight in the sons of men].

32 "So now, O children, listen to me;
33 instruction and wisdom do not reject!
Happy the man who obeys me,
and happy those who keep my ways, 34 Happy the man watching daily at my gates,
waiting at my doorposts;
35 For he who finds me finds life,[u]
and wins favor from the Lord; 36 But he who misses me harms himself;
all who hate me love death."

CHAPTER 9.

The Two Banquets*

1 Wisdom has built her house,
she has set up her seven columns;
2 She has dressed her meat, mixed her wine,
yes, she has spread her table.
3 She has sent out her maidens; she calls*
from the heights out over the city:[v]
4 "Let whoever is simple turn in here;
to him who lacks understanding, I say,

m Prv 3, 15; Wis 7, 8.—n Prv 6, 16f; 16, 5.—o Prv 3, 16.—p Prv 3, 14.—q Wis 9, 9; Sir 1, 1; 24, 9.—r Sir 1, 4.—s Prv 3, 19; Sir 24, 4f—t Wis 9, 9.—u Prv 3, 13-18; 4, 22.—v Prv 8, 1f

8, 14: What is here predicated of wisdom is elsewhere attributed to God (Jb 12, 13-16).

8, 22-31: Wisdom is of divine origin. It is here represented as a being which existed before all things (22-26) and concurred with God when He planned and executed the creation of the universe, adorned it with beauty and variety, and established its wonderful order (27-30). Here that plurality of divine Persons is foreshadowed which was afterward to be fully revealed when Wisdom in the Person of Jesus Christ became incarnate.

8, 23: Poured forth: although the exact meaning of the Hebrew is uncertain, the expression must indicate the equivalent of "born."

8, 24-26: The formless mass from which God created the heavens and the earth; cf Gn 1, 1f; 2, 4ff.

8, 30: His craftsman: furnishing God with the plan, as it were, for the creation of all things; cf Jb 38, 1f; Wis 7, 22 — 8, 1. I was his delight: the ever-present object of God's complacency.

9, 1-6; 13-18: Wisdom and folly are represented as matrons, each inviting people to her banquet. Wisdom offers the food and drink of divine doctrine and virtue which give life (1-6). Unstable and senseless folly furnishes the stolen bread and water of deceit and vice which bring death to her guests.

9, 3: She calls: i.e., indirectly, through her maidens; but the text could also mean that wisdom herself publicly proclaims her invitation.

5 Come, eat of my food,
and drink of the wine I have mixed!
6 Forsake foolishness that you may live;
advance in the way of understanding."

7 He who corrects an arrogant man earns insult;
and he who reproves a wicked man incurs opprobrium.
8 Reprove not an arrogant man, lest he hate you;
reprove a wise man, and he will love you.[w] 9 Instruct a wise man, and he becomes still wiser;
teach a just man, and he advances in learning.

10 The beginning of wisdom is the fear of the Lord,
and knowledge of the Holy One is understanding;[x]
11 For by me your days will be multiplied and the years of your life increased.[y]
12 If you are wise, it is to your own advantage;
and if you are arrogant, you alone shall bear it.

13 The woman Folly is fickle,[z]
she is inane, and knows nothing.
14 She sits at the door of her house
upon a seat on the city heights, 15 Calling to passers-by
as they go on their straight way:
16 "Let whoever is simple turn in here,
or who lacks understanding; for to him I say, 17 Stolen water is sweet,
and bread gotten secretly is pleasing!"*
18 Little he knows that the shades are there,
that in the depths of the nether world are her guests!*

II: FIRST COLLECTION OF THE PROVERBS OF SOLOMON*

CHAPTER 10.

1 The Proverbs of Solomon:

A wise son makes his father glad,
but a foolish son is a grief to his mother.[a] 2 Ill-gotten treasures profit nothing,
but virtue saves from death.[b] 3 The Lord permits not the just to hunger,
but the craving of the wicked he thwarts.

4 The slack hand impoverishes,
but the hand of the diligent enriches.[c]

5 A son who fills the granaries in summer is a credit;
a son who slumbers during harvest, a disgrace.

6 Blessings are for the head of the just,
but a rod for the back of the fool.

7 The memory of the just will be blessed,
but the name of the wicked will rot.

8 A wise man heeds commands,
but a prating fool will be overthrown.

9 He who walks honestly walks securely,
but he whose ways are crooked will fare badly.

10 He who winks at a fault causes trouble,
but he who frankly reproves promotes peace.

11 A fountain of life is the mouth of the just,
but the mouth of the wicked conceals violence.

12 Hatred stirs up disputes,
[d] but love covers all offenses.*

13 On the lips of the intelligent is found wisdom,
[but the mouth of the wicked conceals violence].

14 Wise men store up knowledge,
but the mouth of a fool is imminent ruin.

w Sir 10, 7.—x Prv 1, 7; Jb 28, 28; Ps 110 (111), 10; Sir 1, 16.—y Prv 3, 2. 16; 4, 10; 10, 27.—z 13-18: Prv 7, 7-27.—a Prv 1, 1; 15, 20; 17, 25; 19, 13; 25, 1; 29, 15.—b Prv 11, 4. 6.—c Prv 6, 11; 12, 24; 13, 4; 20, 13; 28, 19.—d 1 Cor 13, 4-7; 1 Pt 4, 8.

9, 17: The secrecy implies wrongdoing.

9, 18: The banquet chamber of folly is a tomb from which no one who enters it is released.

10, 1 – 22, 16: The varied contents of this first collection of Solomon's proverbs apply mostly to individual life. Each of its three hundred and seventy-five proverbs is meant to be distinct from the others, developing one idea through contrasting parallelism in chapters 10-15, and a climactic treatment in 16-22.

10, 12: Love covers all offenses: a favorite maxim of the Apostles; cf 1 Cor 13, 7; Jas 5, 20; 1 Pt 4, 8; also Prv 17, 9.

15 The rich man's wealth is his strong city;
the ruination of the lowly is their poverty.*

16 The just man's recompense leads to life,
the gains of the wicked, to sin.[e]

17 A path to life is his who heeds admonition,
but he who disregards reproof goes astray.[f]

18 It is the lips of the liar that conceal hostility;
but he who spreads accusations is a fool.

19 Where words are many, sin is not wanting;
but he who restrains his lips does well.[g]

20 Like choice silver is the just man's tongue;
the heart of the wicked is of little worth.

21 The just man's lips nourish many,
but fools die for want of sense.

22 It is the Lord's blessing that brings wealth,[h]
and no effort can substitute for it.*

23 Crime is the entertainment of the fool;
so is wisdom for the man of sense.

24 What the wicked man fears will befall him,
but the desire of the just will be granted.

25 When the tempest passes, the wicked man is no more;
but the just man is established forever.

26 As vinegar to the teeth, and smoke to the eyes,
is the sluggard to those who use him as a messenger.

27 The fear of the Lord prolongs life,
but the years of the wicked are brief.[i]

28 The hope of the just brings them joy,
but the expectation of the wicked comes to nought.

29 The Lord is a stronghold to him who walks honestly,
but to evildoers, their downfall.

30 The just man will never be disturbed,
but the wicked will not abide in the land.

31 The mouth of the just yields wisdom,
but the perverse tongue will be cut off.

32 The lips of the just know how to please,
but the mouth of the wicked, how to pervert.

CHAPTER 11.

1 False scales are an abomination to the Lord,
but a full weight is his delight.[j]

2 When pride comes, disgrace comes;
but with the humble is wisdom.

3 The honesty of the upright guides them;
the faithless are ruined by their duplicity.

4 Wealth is useless on the day of wrath,[k]
but virtue saves from death.*

5 The honest man's virtue makes his way straight,
but by his wickedness the wicked man falls.[l]

6 The virtue of the upright saves them,
but the faithless are caught in their own intrigue.

7 When a wicked man dies his hope perishes,[m]
and what is expected from strength comes to nought.

8 The just man escapes trouble,
and the wicked man falls into it in his stead.

9 With his mouth the impious man would ruin his neighbor,[n]
but through their knowledge the just make their escape.

10, 15: The inspired author reflects upon the reality of the power of money and the defeat of poverty, without approving these things.

10, 22: The blessing of God rather than our own industry crowns our efforts with success; cf Ps 126 (127), 1f; Mt 6, 25-34.

11, 4: Wealth . . . death: not what a man is worth but what he is, counts before God.

10 When the just prosper, the city rejoices;[o]
and when the wicked perish, there is jubilation.

11 Through the blessing of the righteous the city is exalted,
but through the mouth of the wicked it is overthrown.

12 He who reviles his neighbor has no sense,
but the intelligent man keeps silent.

13 A newsmonger reveals secrets,[p]
but a trustworthy man keeps a confidence.

14 For lack of guidance a people falls;
security lies in many counselors.[q]

15 He is in a bad way who becomes surety for another,[r]
but he who hates giving pledges is safe.

16 A gracious woman wins esteem,
but she who hates virtue is covered with shame.

The slothful become impoverished,
but the diligent gain wealth.

17 A kindly man benefits himself,
but a merciless man harms himself.

18 The wicked man makes empty profits,
but he who sows virtue has a sure reward.[s]

19 Virtue directs toward life,
but he who pursues evil does so to his death.

20 The depraved in heart are an abomination to the Lord,
but those who walk blamelessly are his delight.

21 Truly the evil man shall not go unpunished,
but those who are just shall escape.

22 Like a golden ring in a swine's snout
is a beautiful woman with a rebellious disposition.

23 The desire of the just ends only in good;
the expectation of the wicked is wrath.

24 One man is lavish yet grows still richer;
another is too sparing, yet is the poorer.

25 He who confers benefits will be amply enriched,
and he who refreshes others will himself be refreshed.

26 Him who monopolizes grain, the people curse—
but blessings upon the head of him who distributes it!

27 He who seeks the good commands favor,
but he who pursues evil will have evil befall him.

28 He who trusts in his riches will fall,
but like green leaves the just flourish.[t]

29 He who upsets his household has empty air for a heritage;
and the fool will become slave to the wise man.

30 The fruit of virtue is a tree of life,
but violence takes lives away.

31 If the just man is punished on earth,
how much more the wicked and the sinner![u]

CHAPTER 12.

1 He who loves correction loves knowledge,
but he who hates reproof is stupid.[v]

2 The good man wins favor from the Lord,
but the schemer is condemned by him.

3 No man is built up by wickedness,
but the root of the just will never be disturbed.

4 A worthy wife is the crown of her husband,[w]
but a disgraceful one is like rot in his bones.

5 The plans of the just are legitimate;
the designs of the wicked are deceitful.

6 The words of the wicked are a deadly ambush,
but the speech of the upright saves them.

7 The wicked are overthrown and are no more,

but the house of the just stands firm.

8 According to his good sense a man is praised,
but one with a warped mind is despised.

9 Better a lowly man who supports himself
than one of assumed importance who lacks bread.[x]

10 The just man takes care of his beast,
but the heart of the wicked is merciless.

11 He who tills his own land has food in plenty,
but he who follows idle pursuits is a fool.[y]

12 The stronghold of evil men will be demolished,
but the root of the just is enduring.

13 In the sin of his lips the evil man is ensnared,
but the just comes free of trouble.

14 From the fruit of his words a man has his fill of good things,[z]
and the work of his hands comes back to reward him.*

15 The way of the fool seems right in his own eyes,
but he who listens to advice is wise.

16 The fool immediately shows his anger,
but the shrewd man passes over an insult.

17 He tells the truth who states what he is sure of,
but a lying witness speaks deceitfully.[a]

18 The prating of some men is like sword thrusts,
but the tongue of the wise is healing.

19 Truthful lips endure forever,
the lying tongue, for only a moment.

20 Deceit is in the hands of those who plot evil,
but those who counsel peace have joy.

21 No harm befalls the just,
but the wicked are overwhelmed with misfortune.

22 Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord,[b]
but those who are truthful are his delight.

23 A shrewd man conceals his knowledge,
but the hearts of fools gush forth folly.

24 The diligent hand will govern,
but the slothful will be enslaved.[c]

25 Anxiety in a man's heart depresses it,
but a kindly word makes it glad.[d]

26 The just man surpasses his neighbor,
but the way of the wicked leads them astray.

27 The slothful man catches not his prey,
but the wealth of the diligent man is great.

28 In the path of justice there is life,
but the abominable way leads to death.

CHAPTER 13.

1 A wise son loves correction,
but the senseless one heeds no rebuke.

2 From the fruit of his words a man eats good things,[e]
but the treacherous one craves violence.

3 He who guards his mouth protects his life;
to open wide one's lips brings downfall.[f]

4 The soul of the sluggard craves in vain,
but the diligent soul is amply satisfied.

5 Anything deceitful the just man hates,
but the wicked brings shame and disgrace.

6 Virtue guards one who walks honestly,
but the downfall of the wicked is sin.[g]

7 One man pretends to be rich, yet has nothing;
another pretends to be poor, yet has great wealth.

8 A man's riches serve as ransom for his life,
but the poor man heeds no rebuke.

12, 14: Cf Mt 7, 17; Gal 6, 8.

9 The light of the just shines gaily,
but the lamp* of the wicked goes out.[h]

10 The stupid man sows discord by his insolence,
but with those who take counsel is wisdom.

11 Wealth quickly gotten dwindles away,
but amassed little by little, it grows.[i]

12 Hope deferred makes the heart sick,
but a wish fulfilled is a tree of life.

13 He who despises the word* must pay for it,
but he who reveres the commandment will be rewarded.

14 The teaching of the wise is a fountain of life,
that a man may avoid the snares of death.

15 Good sense brings favor,
but the way of the faithless is their ruin.

16 The shrewd man does everything with prudence,
but the fool peddles folly.

17 A wicked messenger brings on disaster,
but a trustworthy envoy is a healing remedy.

18 Poverty and shame befall the man who disregards correction,
but he who heeds reproof is honored.

19 Lust indulged starves the soul,
but fools hate to turn from evil.

20 Walk with wise men and you will become wise,
but the companion of fools will fare badly.[j]

21 Misfortune pursues sinners,
but the just shall be recompensed with good.

22 The good man leaves an inheritance to his children's children, but the wealth of the sinner is stored up for the just.

23 A lawsuit devours the tillage of the poor,
but some men perish for lack of a law court.

24 He who spares his rod hates his son,
but he who loves him takes care to chastise him.[k]

25 When the just man eats, his hunger is appeased;
but the belly of the wicked suffers want.

CHAPTER 14.

1 Wisdom builds her house,
but Folly tears hers down with her own hands.

2 He who walks uprightly fears the Lord,
but he who is devious in his ways spurns him.

3 In the mouth of the fool is a rod for his back,
but the lips of the wise preserve them.

4 Where there are no oxen, the crib remains empty;
but large crops come through the strength of the bull.

5 A truthful witness does not lie,
but a false witness utters lies.[l]

6 The senseless man seeks in vain for wisdom,
but knowledge is easy to the man of intelligence.

7 To avoid the foolish man, take steps!
But knowing lips one meets with by surprise.

8 The shrewd man's wisdom gives him knowledge of his way,
but the folly of fools is their deception.

9 Guilt lodges in the tents of the arrogant,
but favor in the house of the just.

10 The heart knows its own bitterness,
and in its joy no one else shares.

11 The house of the wicked will be destroyed,
but the tent of the upright will flourish.[m]

12 Sometimes a way seems right to a man,
but the end of it leads to death![n]

and the end of joy may be sorrow.

14 The scoundrel suffers the consequences of his ways,
and the good man reaps the fruit of his paths.

15 The simpleton believes everything,
but the shrewd man measures his steps.

16 The wise man is cautious and shuns evil;
the fool is reckless and sure of himself.

17 The quick-tempered man makes a fool of himself,
but the prudent man is at peace.

18 The adornment of simpletons is folly,
but shrewd men gain the crown of knowledge.

19 Evil men must bow down before the good,
and the wicked, at the gates of the just.

20 Even by his neighbor the poor man is hated,
but the friends of the rich are many.[o]

21 He sins who despises the hungry;
but happy is he who is kind to the poor!

22 Do not those who plot evil go astray?
But those intent on good gain kindness and constancy.

23 In all labor there is profit,
but mere talk tends only to penury.

24 The crown of the wise is resourcefulness;
the diadem of fools is folly.

25 The truthful witness saves lives,
but he who utters lies is a betrayer.

26 In the fear of the Lord is a strong defense;
even for one's children he will be a refuge.

27 The fear of the Lord is a fountain of life,
that a man may avoid the snares of death.

28 In many subjects lies the glory of the king;
but if his people are few, it is the prince's ruin.

29 The patient man shows much good sense,
but the quick-tempered man displays folly at its height.[p]

30 A tranquil mind gives life to the body,
but jealousy rots the bones.

31 He who oppresses the poor blasphemes his Maker,
but he who is kind to the needy glorifies him.[q]

32 The wicked man is overthrown by his wickedness,
but the just man finds a refuge in his honesty.

33 In the heart of the intelligent wisdom abides,
but in the bosom of fools it is unknown.

34 Virtue exalts a nation,
but sin is a people's disgrace.

35 The king favors the intelligent servant,
but the worthless one incurs his wrath.

CHAPTER 15.

1 A mild answer calms wrath,[r]
but a harsh word stirs up anger.

2 The tongue of the wise pours out knowledge,
but the mouth of fools spurts forth folly.

3 The eyes of the Lord are in every place,
keeping watch on the evil and the good.

4 A soothing tongue is a tree of life,
but a perverse one crushes the spirit.

5 The fool spurns his father's admonition,
but prudent is he who heeds reproof.[s]

6 In the house of the just there are ample resources,
but the earnings of the wicked are in turmoil.

7 The lips of the wise disseminate knowledge,
but the heart of fools is perverted.

o Prv 19, 4, 7; Sir 6, 8, 12.—p Prv 16, 32; 19, 11; Jas 1, 19.—q Prv 17, 5.—r Prv 25, 15; Sir 6, 5.—s Prv 12, 1; 13, 18.

8 The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord,[t]
but the prayer of the upright is his delight.

9 The way of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord,
but he loves the man who pursues virtue.[u]

10 Severe punishment is in store for the man who goes astray;
he who hates reproof will die.

11 The nether world and the abyss* lie open before the Lord;
how much more the hearts of men!

12 The senseless man loves not to be reproved;
to wise men he will not go.

13 A glad heart lights up the face,
but by mental anguish the spirit is broken.[v]

14 The mind of the intelligent man seeks knowledge,
but the mouth of fools feeds on folly

15 Every day is miserable for the depressed,
but a lighthearted man has a continual feast.

16 Better a little with fear of the Lord*
than a great fortune with anxiety.

17 Better a dish of herbs where love is than a fatted ox and hatred with it.

18 An ill-tempered man stirs up strife,[w]
but a patient man allays discord.

19 The way of the sluggard is hemmed in as with thorns,
but the path of the diligent is a highway.

20 A wise son makes his father glad,
but a fool of a man despises his mother.[x]

21 Folly is joy to the senseless man,
but the man of understanding goes the straight way.

22 Plans fail when there is no counsel,
but they succeed when counselors are many.[y]

23 There is joy for a man in his utterance;
a word in season, how good it is![z]

24 The path of life leads the prudent man upward,
that he may avoid the nether world below.

25 The Lord overturns the house of the proud,
but he preserves intact the widow's landmark.

26 The wicked man's schemes are an abomination to the Lord,[a] but the pure speak what is pleasing to him.

27 He who is greedy of gain brings ruin on his own house,
but he who hates bribes will live.

28 The just man weighs well his utterance,
but the mouth of the wicked pours out evil.

29 The Lord is far from the wicked,
but the prayer of the just he hears.

30 A cheerful glance brings joy to the heart;
good news invigorates the bones.

31 He who listens to salutary reproof[b]
will abide among the wise.

32 He who rejects admonition despises his own soul,
but he who heeds reproof gains understanding.

33 The fear of the Lord is training for wisdom,
and humility goes before honors.[c]

CHAPTER 16.

1 Man may make plans in his heart,
but what the tongue utters is from the Lord.*

2 All the ways of a man may be pure in his own eyes,
but it is the Lord who proves the spirit.[d]

3 Entrust your works to the Lord,
and your plans will succeed.

15, 11: Nether world . . . abyss: the abode of the dead, signifying the profound obscurity which is open nevertheless to the sight and power of God.

15, 16f: Not the amount of temporal goods but the virtue of their possessor makes them a source of happiness.

16, 1: Words, like actions, often produce results different from those which were planned.

4 The Lord has made everything for his own ends,
even the wicked for the evil day.*

5 Every proud man is an abomination to the Lord;[e]
I assure you that he will not go unpunished.

6 By kindness and piety guilt is expiated,
and by the fear of the Lord man avoids evil.

7 When the Lord is pleased with a man's ways,
he makes even his enemies be at peace with him.

8 Better a little with virtue,
than a large income with injustice.

9 In his mind a man plans his course,
but the Lord directs his steps.[f]

10 The king's lips are an oracle;
no judgment he pronounces is false.*

11 Balance and scales belong to the Lord;
all the weights used with them are his concern.[g]

12 Kings have a horror of wrongdoing,
for by righteousness the throne endures.[h]

13 The king takes delight in honest lips, and the man who speaks what is right he loves.[i]

14 The king's wrath is like messengers of death,[j]
but a wise man can pacify it.

15 In the light of the king's countenance is life,
and his favor is like a rain cloud in spring.

16 How much better to acquire wisdom than gold!
To acquire understanding is more desirable than silver.[k]

17 The path of the upright avoids misfortune;
he who pays attention to his way safeguards his life.

18 Pride goes before disaster,
and a haughty spirit before a fall.[l]

19 It is better to be humble with the meek than to share plunder with the proud.

20 He who plans a thing will be successful;
happy is he who trusts in the Lord!

21 The wise man is esteemed for his discernment,
yet pleasing speech increases his persuasiveness.

22 Good sense is a fountain of life to its possessor,
but folly brings chastisement on fools.

23 The mind of the wise man makes him eloquent,
and augments the persuasiveness of his lips.

24 Pleasing words are a honeycomb,
sweet to the taste and healthful to the body.

25 Sometimes a way seems right to a man,
but the end of it leads to death![m]

26 The laborer's appetite labors for him,
for his mouth urges him on.[n]

27 A scoundrel is a furnace of evil,
and on his lips there is a scorching fire.

28 An intriguer sows discord,
and a talebearer separates bosom friends.[o]

29 A lawless man allures his neighbor,
and leads him into a way that is not good.

30 He who winks his eye is plotting trickery;
he who compresses his lips has mischief ready.

31 Gray hair is a crown of glory;[p] it is gained by virtuous living.

32 A patient man is better than a warrior,
and he who rules his temper, than he who takes a city.[q]

33 When the lot is cast into the lap,
its decision depends entirely on the Lord.*

16, 4: Even the wicked, in their punishment, cannot escape glorifying God's justice.

16, 10: Decisions of supreme judicial authority were presumed disinterested and correct.

16, 33: The favorable or unfavorable result of chance depends on God. Deciding strifes and doubts by lot was practiced by the ancient Hebrews; cf Ex 28, 15-30; Lv 16, 8; Jos 7, 14; 1 Kgs 10, 20f.

CHAPTER 17.

1 Better a dry crust with peace
than a house full of feasting with strife.

2 An intelligent servant will rule over a worthless son,
and will share the inheritance with the brothers.*

3 The crucible for silver, and the furnace for gold,
but the tester of hearts is the Lord.

4 The evil man gives heed to wicked lips,
and listens to falsehood from a mischievous tongue.*

5 He who mocks the poor blasphemes his Maker;[r]
he who is glad at calamity will not go unpunished.

6 Grandchildren are the crown of old men,
and the glory of children is their parentage.

7 Fine words are out of place in a fool;
how much more, lying words in a noble!

8 A man who has a bribe to offer rates it a magic stone;
at every turn it brings him success.

9 He who covers up a misdeed fosters friendship,
but he who gossips about it separates friends.

10 A single reprimand does more for a man of intelligence than a hundred lashes for a fool.

11 On rebellion alone is the wicked man bent,
but a merciless messenger will be sent against him.

12 Face a bear robbed of her cubs,
but never a fool in his folly!

13 If a man returns evil for good,
from his house evil will not depart.[s]

14 The start of strife is like the opening of a dam;
therefore, check a quarrel before it begins!

15 He who condones the wicked,[t] he who condemns the just,
are both an abomination to the Lord.

16 Of what use in the fool's hand are the means to buy wisdom, since he has no mind for it?

17 He who is a friend is always a friend,
and a brother is born for the time of stress.[u]

18 Senseless is the man who gives his hand in pledge, who becomes surety for his neighbor.[v]

19 He who loves strife loves guilt;[w]
he who builds his gate high* courts disaster.

20 He who is perverse in heart finds no good,
and a double-tongued man falls into trouble.

21 To be a fool's parent is grief for a man;
the father of a numskull has no joy.

22 A joyful heart is the health of the body,
but a depressed spirit dries up the bones.[x]

23 The wicked man accepts a concealed bribe to pervert the course of justice.

24 The man of intelligence fixes his gaze on wisdom,[y]
but the eyes of a fool are on the ends of the earth.

25 A foolish son is vexation to his father,
and bitter sorrow to her who bore him.[z]

26 It is wrong to fine an innocent man,
but beyond reason to scourge princes.

27 He who spares his words is truly wise,
and he who is chary of speech is a man of intelligence.[a]

28 Even a fool, if he keeps silent, is considered wise;
if he closes his lips, intelligent.

17, 2: Intelligence and ability are esteemed more highly than nobility of blood.

17, 4: To justify his own evil ways, a wicked man judges evil of others. Cf Mt 7, 1-5.

17, 19: Builds . . . high: a symbol of arrogance.

CHAPTER 18.

1 In estrangement one seeks pretexts:
with all persistence he picks a quarrel.

2 The fool takes no delight in understanding,
but rather in displaying what he thinks.

3 With wickedness comes contempt,
and with disgrace comes scorn.

4 The words from a man's mouth are deep waters,
but the scource of wisdom is a flowing brook.[b]

5 It is not good to be partial to the guilty,
and so to reject a rightful claim.[c]

6 The fool's lips lead him into strife,
and his mouth provokes a beating.

7 The fool's mouth is his ruin;
his lips are a snare to his life.[d]

8 The words of a talebearer are like dainty morsels
that sink into one's inmost being.[e]

9 The man who is slack in his work is own brother to the man who is destructive.

10 The name of the Lord is a strong tower;*
the just man runs to it and is safe.

11 The rich man's wealth is his strong city;[f]
he fancies it a high wall.

12 Before his downfall a man's heart is haughty,[g]
but humility goes before honors.*

13 He who answers before he hears[b]—
his is the folly and the shame.*

14 A man's spirit sustains him in infirmity—
but a broken spirit who can bear?

15 The mind of the intelligent gains knowledge,
and the ear of the wise seeks knowledge.

16 A man's gift clears the way for him,
and gains him access to great men.[i]

17 The man who pleads his case first seems to be in the right;
then his opponent comes and puts him to the test.

18 The lot puts an end to disputes,
and is decisive in a controversy between the mighty.*

19 A brother is a better defense than a strong city,
and a friend is like the bars of a castle.

20 From the fruit of his mouth a man has his fill;*
with the yield of his lips he sates himself.[j]

21 Death and life are in the power of the tongue;[k]
those who make it a friend shall eat its fruit.

22 He who finds a wife finds happiness;
it is a favor he receives from the Lord.[l]

23 The poor man implores,
but the rich man answers harshly.

24 Some friends bring ruin on us,
but a true friend is more loyal than a brother.[m]

CHAPTER 19.

1 Better a poor man who walks in his integrity than he who is crooked in his ways and rich.[n]

2 Without knowledge even zeal is not good;
and he who act hastily, blunders.

3 A man's own folly upsets his way,
but his heart is resentful against the Lord.

4 Wealth adds many friends,
but the friend of the poor man deserts him.[o]

5 The false witness will not go unpunished,

18, 10f: Religion is a strong support and sure refuge in the struggle of life. The rich foolishly rely on their wealth for such support.

18, 12: Compare the Savior's words: "Whoever exalts himself shall be humbled, and whoever humbles himself shall be exalted" (Mt 23, 12).

18, 13: To speak without first listening is characteristic of a fool; cf Prv 10, 14; Sir 11, 8.

18, 18: See note on Prv 16, 33.

18, 20f: Everyone must accept the consequences, of benefit or harm to himself, which his words produce.

and he who utters lies will not escape.[p]

6 Many curry favor with a noble;
all are friends of the man who has something to give.

7 All the poor man's brothers hate him;
how much more do his friends shun him!

8 He who gains intelligence is his own best friend;
he who keeps understanding will be successful.

9 The false witness will not go unpunished,
and he who utters lies will perish.

10 Luxury is not befitting a fool;
much less should a slave rule over princes.

11 It is good sense in a man to be slow to anger,
and it is his glory to overlook an offense.

12 The king's wrath is like the roaring of a lion,
but his favor, like dew on the grass.[q]

13 The foolish son is ruin to his father,[r]
and the nagging of a wife is a persistent leak.

14 Home and possessions are an inheritance from parents,
but a prudent wife is from the Lord.[s]

15 Laziness plunges a man into deep sleep, and the sluggard must go hungry.[t]

16 He who keeps the precept keeps his life,
but the despiser of the word will die.[u]

17 He who has compassion on the poor lends to the Lord,[v]
and he will repay him for his good deed.*

18 Chastise your son, for in this there is hope;
but do not desire his death.[w]

19 The man of violent temper pays the penalty;
even if you rescue him, you will have it to do again.

20 Listen to counsel and receive instruction,
that you may eventually become wise.

21 Many are the plans in a man's heart,
but it is the decision of the Lord that endures.[x]

22 From a man's greed comes his shame;
rather be a poor man than a liar.

23 The fear of the Lord is an aid to life;
one eats and sleeps without being visited by misfortune.

24 The sluggard loses his hand in the dish;
he will not even lift it to his mouth.[y]

25 If you beat an arrogant man, the simple learn a lesson;
if you rebuke an intelligent man, he gains knowledge.[z]

26 He who mistreats his father, or drives away his mother, is a worthless and disgraceful son.[a]

27 If a son ceases to hear instruction,
he wanders from words of knowledge.

28 An unprincipled witness perverts justice,
and the mouth of the wicked pours out iniquity.

29 Rods are prepared for the arrogant,
and blows for the backs of fools.[b]

CHAPTER 20.

1 Wine is arrogant, strong drink is riotous;
none who goes astray for it is wise.[c]

2 The dread of the king is as when a lion roars;[d]
he who incurs his anger forfeits his life.

3 It is honorable for a man to shun strife,
while every fool starts a quarrel.

4 In seedtime the sluggard plows not;
when he looks for the harvest, it is not there.

5 The intention in the human heart is like water far below the surface,

but the man of intelligence draws it forth.[e]

6 Many are declared to be men of virtue:
but who can find one worthy of trust?

7 When a man walks in integrity and justice,
happy are his children after him!

8 A king seated on the throne of judgment
dispels all evil with his glance.

9 Who can say, "I have made my heart clean,[f]
I am cleansed of my sin"?*

10 Varying weights, varying measures,
are both an abomination to the Lord.[g]

11 Even by his manners the child betrays whether his conduct is innocent and right.

12 The ear that hears, and the eye that sees—
the Lord has made them both.

13 Love not sleep, lest you be reduced to poverty;
eyes wide open mean abundant food.

14 "Bad, bad!" says the buyer;
but once he has gone his way, he boasts.*

15 Like gold or a wealth of corals,
wise lips are a precious ornament.

16 Take his garment who becomes surety for another,[h]
and for strangers yield it up!*

17 The bread of deceit is sweet to a man,
but afterward his mouth will be filled with gravel.

18 Plans made after advice succeed;
so with wise guidance wage your war.

19 A newsmonger reveals secrets;
so have nothing to do with a babbler!

20 If one curses his father or mother,
his lamp will go out* at the coming of darkness.[i]

21 Possessions gained hastily at the outset will in the end not be blessed.

22 Say not, "I will repay evil!"
Trust in the Lord and he will help you.[j]

23 Varying weights are an abomination to the Lord,
and false scales are not good.[k]

24 Man's steps are from the Lord;[l]
how, then, can a man understand his way?*

25 Rashly to pledge a sacred gift is a trap for a man, or to regret a vow once made.*

26 A wise king winnows the wicked,
and threshes them under the cartwheel.

27 A lamp from the Lord is the breath of man;
it searches through all his inmost being.

28 Kindness and piety safeguard the king,
and he upholds his throne by justice.[m]

29 The glory of young men is their strength, and the dignity of old men is gray hair.[n]

30 Evil is cleansed away by bloody lashes,
and a scourging to the inmost being.

CHAPTER 21.

1 Like a stream is the king's heart in the hand of the Lord;
wherever it pleases him, he directs it.

2 All the ways of a man may be right in his own eyes,
but it is the Lord who proves hearts.[o]

20, 14: What one wishes to buy is valued cheaply in order that it may be obtained at a low price; once purchased, it is deemed more valuable.

20, 16: Caution is again advised in the matter of becoming surety; cf Prv 6, 1ff.

20, 20: His lamp will go out: misfortune, even death, awaits him; cf Prv 13, 9; Ex 21, 17.

20, 24: Man is dependent upon God and cannot fully foresee his own course.

20, 25: This verse cautions against making vows without proper reflection; cf Dt 23, 22ff; Eccl 5, 4f.

3 To do what is right and just[p]
is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice.*

4 Haughty eyes and a proud heart—
the tillage of the wicked is sin.

5 The plans of the diligent are sure of profit,
but all rash haste leads certainly to poverty.

6 He who makes a fortune by a lying tongue
is chasing a bubble over deadly snares.

7 The oppression of the wicked will sweep them away,
because they refuse to do what is right.

8 The way of the culprit is crooked,
but the conduct of the innocent is right.

9 It is better to dwell in a corner of the housetop
than in a roomy house with a quarrelsome woman.[q]

10 The soul of the wicked man desires evil;
his neighbor finds no pity in his eyes.

11 When the arrogant man is punished, the simple are the wiser;
when the wise man is instructed, he gains knowledge.[r]

12 The just man appraises the house of the wicked:
there is one who brings down the wicked to ruin.

13 He who shuts his ear to the cry of the poor will himself also call and not be heard.

14 A secret gift allays anger,
and a concealed present, violent wrath.

15 To practice justice is a joy for the just,
but terror for evildoers.[s]

16 The man who strays from the way of good sense will abide in the assembly of the shades.*

17 He who loves pleasure will suffer want;
he who loves wine and perfume will not be rich.

18 The wicked man serves as ransom for the just,*
and the faithless man for the righteous.[t]

19 It is better to dwell in a wilderness than with a quarrelsome and vexatious wife.

20 Precious treasure remains in the house of the wise,
but the fool consumes it.

21 He who pursues justice and kindness will find life and honor.

22 The wise man storms a city of the mighty,
and overthrows the stronghold in which it trusts.

23 He who guards his mouth and his tongue keeps himself from trouble.[u]

24 Arrogant is the name for the man of overbearing pride who acts with scornful effrontery.

25 The sluggard's propensity slays him,
for his hands refuse to work.

26 Some are consumed with avarice all the day,
but the just man gives unsparingly.

27 The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination,
the more so when they offer it with a bad intention.[v]

28 The false witness shall perish,[w]
but he who listens will finally have his say.

29 The wicked man is brazenfaced,
but the upright man pays heed to his ways.

30 There is no wisdom, no understanding,
no counsel, against the Lord.

21, 16: Assembly of the shades: cf note on Jb 26, 5.

21, 18: Wicked . . . ransom for the just: exemplified in the history of God's chosen people whom He ransomed from Egypt at the cost of the life of Pharao and his army (Ex 14, 23-31), and from Babylon by giving to Cyrus, the Persian conqueror, Egypt, Ethiopia and Saba, the richest lands of the world (Is 43, 1ff).

31 The horse is equipped for the day of battle,
but victory is the Lord's.

CHAPTER 22.

1 A good name is more desirable than great riches,
and high esteem, than gold and silver.[x]

2 Rich and poor have a common bond:
the Lord is the maker of them all.[y]

3 The shrewd man perceives evil and hides,
while simpletons continue on and suffer the penalty.[z]

4 The reward of humility and fear of the Lord is riches, honor and life.

5 Thorns and snares are on the path of the crooked;
he who would safeguard his life will shun them.

6 Train a boy in the way he should go;
even when he is old, he will not swerve from it.

7 The rich rule over the poor,
and the borrower is the slave of the lender.

8 He who sows iniquity reaps calamity,[a]
and the rod destroys his labors.

9 The kindly man will be blessed,
for he gives of his sustenance to the poor.

10 Expel the arrogant man and discord goes out;
strife and insult cease.

11 The Lord loves the pure of heart;[b]
the man of winning speech has the king for his friend.

12 The eyes of the Lord safeguard knowledge,
but he defeats the projects of the faithless.

13 The sluggard says, "A lion is outside;[c]
in the streets I might be slain."*

14 The mouth of the adulteress is a deep pit;[d]
he with whom the Lord is angry will fall into it.

15 Folly is close to the heart of a child,
but the rod of discipline will drive it far from him.

16 He who oppresses the poor to enrich himself will yield up his gains to the rich as sheer loss.*

III: SAYINGS OF THE WISE*

17 The sayings of the wise:*

Incline your ear, and hear my words,[e]
and apply your heart to my doctrine;
18 For it will be well if you keep them in your bosom,
if they all are ready on your lips.
19 That your trust may be in the Lord,
I make known to you the words of Amen-em-Ope.*

20 Have I not written for you the "Thirty"
with counsels and knowledge, 21 To teach you truly
how to give a dependable report to one who sends you?

22 Injure not the poor because they are poor,
nor crush the needy at the gate;
23 For the Lord will defend their cause,[f]
and will plunder the lives of those who plunder them.

24 Be not friendly with a hotheaded man,
nor the companion of a wrathful man, 25 Lest you learn his ways,
and get yourself into a snare.

x Eccl 7, 1.—y Prv 29, 13.—z Prv 27, 12.—a Jb 4, 8; Sir 7, 3; Os 8, 7.—b Mt 5, 8.—c Prv 26, 13.—d Prv 23, 27.—e Prv 5, 1.—f Prv 23, 11.

22, 13: To avoid the effort required for doing good, the sluggard exaggerates the difficulties that must be overcome.

22, 16: Money gained by exploiting the poor is in turn lost to those who are more wealthy.

22, 17–24, 22: This collection of proverbs, introduced as sayings of the wise, is given in the more intimate and personal form of an address to a pupil called the son and is arranged in strophes instead of couplets.

22, 17–23, 35: The maxims warn against: oppression of the poor and defenseless (22, 22f), anger (24f), giving surety for debts (26f), bad manners at a king's table (23, 1f), anxiety for riches (4f), a grudging host (6ff), intemperance in food and drink (19ff. 29-35), and adultery (26ff). They exhort to: careful workmanship (22, 29), respect for the rights of orphans (23, 10f), correction of the young (13f), filial piety (15f. 22-25), and fear of the Lord (17f).

22, 19f: Amen-em-Ope: an Egyptian scribe to whom is attributed a collection of maxims in Thirty chapters (v 20) composed for the instruction of his children and addressed to a young man who wishes to enter upon a career. The inspired editor of Proverbs does not translate these, but uses their materials in constructing a similar collection of thirty proverbs.

26 Be not one of those who give their hand in pledge, of those who become surety for debts;[g] 27 For if you have not the means to pay,
your bed will be taken from under you.

28 [Remove not the ancient landmark which your fathers set up.[h]]

29 You see a man skilled at his work?
He will not stand in the presence of kings;
he will not stand in the presence of obscure men.

CHAPTER 23.

1 When you sit down to dine with a ruler,
keep in mind who is before you;
2 And put a knife to your throat*
if you have a ravenous appetite.

4 Toil not to gain wealth,
cease to be concerned about it;
5 While your glance flits to it, it is gone!
for assuredly it grows wings,
like the eagle that flies toward heaven.

6 Do not dine with a grudging man,
and do not desire his dainties;
7 For like a storm within you will be that deceitful food.
"Eat and drink," he says to you,
though his heart is not with you;
8 The little you have eaten you will vomit up,
and you will have wasted your agreeable words.

9 Speak not for the fool's hearing;
he will despise the wisdom of your words.[i]

10 Remove not the ancient landmark,[j]
nor invade the fields of orphans; 11 For their redeemer is strong;
he will defend their cause against you.[k]

12 Apply your heart to instruction, and your ears to words of knowledge.

13 Withhold not chastisement from a boy;
if you beat him with the rod, he will not die.[l] 14 Beat him with the rod,[m]
and you will save him from the nether world.

15 My son, if your heart be wise,
my own heart also will rejoice;
16 And my inmost being will exult,
when your lips speak what is right.

17 Let not your heart emulate sinners,[n]
but be zealous for the fear of the Lord always;
18 For you will surely have a future,
and your hope will not be cut off.[o]

19 Hear, my son, and be wise,
and guide your heart in the right way.
20 Consort not with winebibbers,
nor with those who eat meat to excess;
21 For the drunkard and the glutton come to poverty,
and torpor clothes a man in rags.

22 Listen to your father who begot you,
and despise not your mother when she is old.
23 Get the truth, and sell it not—wisdom, instruction and understanding.
24 The father of a just man will exult with glee;
he who begets a wise son will have joy in him.[p] 25 Let your father and mother have joy;
let her who bore you exult.

26 My son, give me your heart,
and let your eyes keep to my ways.
27 For the harlot is a deep ditch,
and the adulteress a narrow pit;
28 Yes, she lies in wait like a robber,[q]
and increases the faithless among men.

29 Who scream? Who shriek?*
Who have strife? Who have anxiety?

23, 2: Put a knife to your throat: a proverbial expression for self-restraint.

23, 29-35: A vivid description of the evil effects, physical and psychological, of drunkenness.

Who have wounds for nothing?
Who have black eyes?
30 Those who linger long over wine,
those who engage in trials of blended wine.[r] 31 Look not on the wine when it is red,
when it sparkles in the glass.
It goes down smoothly;
32 But in the end it bites like a serpent,
or like a poisonous adder.
33 Your eyes behold strange sights,
and your heart utters disordered thoughts;
34 You are like one now lying in the depths of the sea,
now sprawled at the top of the mast.
35 "They struck me, but it pained me not;
They beat me, but I felt it not;
When shall I awake
to seek wine once again?"*

CHAPTER 24.

1 Be not emulous of evil men,*
and desire not to be with them;[s]
2 For their hearts plot violence,
and their lips speak of foul play.

3 By wisdom is a house built,
by understanding is it made firm;
4 And by knowledge are its rooms filled with every precious and pleasing possession.

5 A wise man is more powerful than a strong man, and a man of knowledge than a man of might,[t]
6 For it is by wise guidance that you wage your war, and the victory is due to a wealth of counselors.[u]
7 For a fool, to be silent is wisdom;[v]
not to open his mouth at the gate.*

8 He who plots evil doing—
men call him an intriguer.
9 Beyond intrigue and folly and sin,
it is arrogance that men find abominable.

10 If you remain indifferent* in time of adversity,
your strength will depart from you.
11 Rescue those who are being dragged to death,*
and from those tottering to execution withdraw not.
12 If you say, "I know not this man!"
does not he who tests hearts perceive it?
He who guards your life knows it,
and he will repay each one according to his deeds.[w]

13 If you eat honey, my son, because it is good,
if virgin honey is sweet to your taste;
14 Such, you must know, is wisdom to your soul.
If you find it, you will have a future,
and your hope will not be cut off.[x]

15 Lie not in wait against the home of the just man, ravage not his dwelling place;
16 For the just man* falls seven times and rises again,
but the wicked stumble to ruin.

17 Rejoice not when your enemy falls,
and when he stumbles, let not your heart exult, 18 Lest the Lord see it, be displeased with you,
and withdraw his wrath from your enemy.

19 Be not provoked with evildoers,
nor envious of the wicked;
20 For the evil man has no future,
the lamp of the wicked will be put out.[y]

21 My son, fear the Lord and the king;*
have nothing to do with those who rebel against them;

r Prv 20, 1; Sir 19, 2; Os 4, 11.—s Prv 3, 31; 23, 17.—t Prv 21, 22.—u Prv 20, 18.—v Sir 6, 21.—w Ps 61 (62), 13; Sir 16, 12; Mt 16, 27; Rom 2, 6.—x Prv 23, 18.—y Prv 13, 9.

23, 35: Wine makes the drunkard insensible to bodily and moral harm. His one desire is to indulge again.

24, 1-22: These verses continue an exhortation to wisdom (vv 3-7, 13f), and against: violence (1f), pride and intrigue (8f), callousness (10-12), injustice (15f), joy in the failure of others (17f) or scandal at their success (19f), and rebellion against authority (21f).

24, 7: At the gate: of the city, where justice was administered and public affairs discussed; see note on Ru 4, 1. Cf also Pss 68 (69), 13; 126 (127), 5; Prv 22, 22; 31, 23, 31.

24, 10: Indifferent: to those who suffer unjustly.

24, 11: Rescue . . . death: most probably refers to the legal rescue of those unjustly condemned to death.

24, 16: The just man overcomes every misfortune which oppresses him. Seven times: i.e., an indefinite number; cf Mt 18, 21f; Lk 17, 4.

24, 21f: One owes obedience to God and to supreme civil authority (Mt 22, 21; Rom 13, 1ff; 1 Pt 2, 13f). The punishments for failure in either duty transcend the limits of private justice.

22 For suddenly arises the destruction they send,
and the ruin from either one, who can measure?

IV: OTHER SAYINGS OF THE WISE*

23 These also are sayings of the wise:

To show partiality in judgment is not good.[z]

24 He who says to the wicked man, "You are just"— men will curse him, people will denounce him;
25 But those who convict the evildoer will fare well,
and on them will come the blessing of prosperity.
26 He gives a kiss on the lips*
who makes an honest reply.

27 Complete your outdoor tasks,
and arrange your work in the field;
afterward you can establish your house.*

28 Be not a witness against your neighbor without just cause,[a] thus committing folly with your lips.

29 Say not, "As he did to me, so will I do to him;[b]
I will repay the man according to his deeds."*

30 I passed by the field of the sluggard,
by the vineyard of the man without sense;
31 And behold! it was all overgrown with thistles;
its surface was covered with nettles,
and its stone wall broken down.
32 And as I gazed at it, I reflected;
I saw and learned the lesson:
33 A little sleep, a little slumber,[c]
a little folding of the arms to rest—
34 Then will poverty come upon you like a highwayman,
and want like an armed man.

V: SECOND COLLECTION OF THE PROVERBS OF SOLOMON

CHAPTER 25.

1 These also are proverbs of Solomon.[d] The men of Ezechias,* king of Juda, transmitted them.

2 God has glory in what he conceals,
kings have glory in what they fathom.

3 As the heavens in height, and the earth in depth,
the heart of kings is unfathomable.

4 Remove the dross from silver,
and it comes forth perfectly purified;
5 Remove the wicked from the presence of the king,
and his throne is made firm through righteousness.

6 Claim no honor in the king's presence,*
nor occupy the place of great men;
7 For it is better that you be told, "Come up closer!"
than that you be humbled before the prince.[e]

8 What your eyes have seen bring not forth hastily against an opponent;
For what will you do later on
when your neighbor puts you to shame?
9 Discuss your case with your neighbor,
but another man's secret do not disclose;
10 Lest, hearing it, he reproach you,
and your ill repute cease not.

11 Like golden apples in silver settings
are words spoken at the proper time.

12 Like a golden earring, or a necklace of fine gold, z Prv 18, 5; 28, 21; Lv 19, 15; Dt 1, 17; 16, 19.—a Prv 19, 5; 25, 18.—b Prv 20, 22.—c 33f: Prv 6, 10f.—d Prv 1, 1.—e Lk 14, 8ff.

24, 23-34: This collection of sayings continues in the same vein as the preceding: it instructs in fairness (23-26) and preparation for the future (27); and warns against vengeance (28f) and slothfulness (30-34).

24, 26: He gives a kiss on the lips: shows himself a true friend.

24, 27: This verse is commonly interpreted as advocating careful and practical preparation for marriage.

24, 29: This verse indicates great progress from the principle of the law of Talion (see note on Ex 21, 23ff) toward the teaching found in Rom 12, 17ff. Cf also Prv 25, 21ff.

25, 1: The men of Ezechias: literary men at the royal court of Ezechias who are represented as transcribing the proverbs from other collections. Ezechias was a reformer of national religious life (2 Par 29, 25-30).

25, 6f: Compare the lesson on humility which was taught by Christ (Lk 14, 7-11).

is a wise reprover to an obedient ear.

13 Like the coolness of snow in the heat of the harvest is a faithful messenger for the one who sends him.
[He refreshes the soul of his master.]

14 Like clouds and wind when no rain follows is the man who boastfully promises what he never gives.

15 By patience is a ruler persuaded,[f]
and a soft tongue will break a bone.

16 If you find honey, eat only what you need,
lest you become glutted with it and vomit it up.

17 Let your foot be seldom in your neighbor's house,
lest he have more than enough of you, and hate you.

18 Like a club, or a sword, or a sharp arrow,
is the man who bears false witness against his neighbor.

19 Like an infected tooth or an unsteady foot
is [dependence on] a faithless man in time of trouble.

20 Like a moth in clothing, or a maggot in wood,
sorrow gnaws at the human heart.[g]

21 If your enemy be hungry, give him food to eat,*
if he be thirsty, give him drink;
22 For live coals you will heap on his head,
and the Lord will vindicate you.[h]

23 The north wind brings rain,
and a backbiting tongue an angry countenance.

24 It is better to dwell in a corner of the housetop
than in a roomy house with a quarrelsome woman.[i]

25 Like cool water to one faint from thirst is good news from a far country.

26 Like a troubled fountain or a polluted spring
is a just man who gives way before the wicked.

27 To eat too much honey is not good;
nor to seek honor after honor.*

28 Like an open city with no defenses
is the man with no check on his feelings.

CHAPTER 26.*

1 Like snow in summer, or rain in harvest,
honor for a fool is out of place.

2 Like the sparrow in its flitting, like the swallow in its flight,
a curse uncalled-for arrives nowhere.

3 The whip for the horse, the bridle for the ass,
and the rod for the back of fools.[j]

4 Answer not the fool according to his folly,*
lest you too become like him.

5 Answer the fool according to his folly,
lest he become wise in his own eyes.

6 He cuts off his feet, he drinks down violence,
who sends messages by a fool.

7 A proverb in the mouth of a fool*
hangs limp, like crippled legs.

8 Like one who entangles the stone in the sling is he who gives honor to a fool.

9 Like a thorn stick brandished by the hand of a drunkard is a proverb in the mouth of fools.

10 Like an archer wounding all who pass by is he who hires a drunken fool.

11 As the dog returns to his vomit,
so the fool repeats his folly.[k]

f Prv 15, 1. 4.—g Sir 30, 24.—h Rom 12, 20.—i Prv 21, 9.—j Prv 19, 29; Sir 33, 25.—k 2 Pt 2, 22.

25, 21f: Charity is invaluable in resolving enmities and restoring peace. Live coals: i.e., either remorse and embarrassment for the harm done, or increased punishment for refusing reconciliation. Cf Mt 5, 44; Rom 12, 20.

25, 27: Nor . . . honor after honor: the text is uncertain.

26, 1-28: Concrete images describe the vices of fools (1-12), of sluggards (13-16), of meddlers (17-19), of talebearers (20ff), and of flatterers (23-28).

26, 4f: There is no contradiction between these two proverbs. In any answer the wise man gives he must protect his own interest against the fool.

26, 7ff: The fool abuses whatever knowledge he possesses.

12 You see a man wise in his own eyes?
There is more hope for a fool than for him.

13 The sluggard says, "There is a lion in the street,
a lion in the middle of the square!"[l]

14 The door turns on its hinges,
the sluggard, on his bed!

15 The sluggard loses his hand in the dish;
he is too weary to lift it to his mouth.[m]

16 The sluggard imagines himself wiser than seven men who answer with good sense.

17 Like the man who seizes a passing dog by the ears is he who meddles in a quarrel not his own.

18 Like a crazed archer
scattering firebrands and deadly arrows 19 Is the man who deceives his neighbor,
and then says, "I was only joking."

20 For lack of wood, the fire dies out;
and when there is no talebearer, strife subsides.

21 What a bellows is to live coals, what wood is to fire,
such is a contentious man in enkindling strife.[n]

22 The words of a talebearer are like dainty morsels
that sink into one's inmost being.[o]

23 Like a glazed finish on eartherware are smooth lips with a wicked heart.

24 With his lips an enemy pretends,
but in his inmost being he maintains deceit;

25 When he speaks graciously, trust him not,[p]
for seven abominations* are in his heart.

26 A man may conceal hatred under dissimulation,
but his malice will be revealed in the assembly.

27 He who digs a pit falls into it;
and a stone comes back upon him who rolls it.[q]

28 The lying tongue is its owner's enemy,
and the flattering mouth works ruin.

CHAPTER 27.

1 Boast not of tomorrow,
for you know not what any day may bring forth.

2 Let another praise you—not your own mouth;
someone else—not your own lips.

3 Stone is heavy, and sand a burden,
but a fool's provocation is heavier than both.[r]

4 Anger is relentless, and wrath overwhelming—
but before jealousy who can stand?

5 Better is an open rebuke
than a love that remains hidden.

6 Wounds from a friend may be accepted as well meant,
but the greetings of an enemy one prays against.

7 One who is full, tramples on virgin honey;
but to the man who is hungry, any bitter thing is sweet.

8 Like a bird that is far from its nest
is a man who is far from his home.

9 Perfume and incense gladden the heart,
but by grief the soul is torn asunder.

10 Your own friend and your father's friend forsake not;
but if ruin befalls you, enter not a kinsman's house.
Better is a neighbor near at hand than a brother far away.

11 If you are wise, my son, you will gladden my heart, and I will be able to rebut him who taunts me.

12 The shrewd man perceives evil and hides;
simpletons continue on and suffer the penalty.[s]

13 Take his garment who becomes surety for another,[t]

1 Prv 22, 13.—m Prv 19, 24.—n Prv 15, 18; 29, 22.—o Prv 18, 8.—p Sir 12, 10; 27, 23.—q Eccl 10, 8; Sir 27, 25f.—r Sir 22, 14f.—s Prv 22, 3.—t Prv 20, 16.

26, 25: Seven abominations: many evil intentions.

and for the sake of a stranger, yield
it up!*

14 When one greets his neighbor with a loud voice in the early morning,
a curse can be laid to his charge.*

15 For a persistent leak on a rainy day
the match is a quarrelsome woman.[u] 16 He who keeps her stores up a storm-
wind;
he cannot tell north from south.

17 As iron sharpens iron,
so man sharpens his fellow man.

18 He who tends a fig tree eats its fruit,
and he who is attentive to his master
will be enriched.

19 As one face differs from another,
so does one human heart from another.

20 The nether world and the abyss are never satisfied;[v]
so too the eyes of men.

21 As the crucible tests silver and the furnace gold,
so a man is tested by the praise he receives.

22 Though you should pound the fool to bits [with the pestle, amid the grits in a mortar],
his folly would not go out of him.

23 Take good care of your flocks,*
give careful attention to your herds;
24 For wealth lasts not forever,
nor even a crown from age to age.
25 When the grass is taken away and the aftergrowth appears,
and the mountain greens are gathered in,
26 The lambs will provide you with clothing,
and the goats will bring the price
of a field,
27 And there will be ample goat's milk to supply you,
[to supply your household,]
and maintenance for your maidens.

CHAPTER 28.

1 The wicked man flees although no one pursues him;
but the just man, like a lion, feels sure of himself.

2 If a land is rebellious, its princes will be many;
but with a prudent man it knows security.*

3 A rich man who oppresses the poor
is like a devastating rain that leaves
no food.

4 Those who abandon the law* praise
the wicked man,
but those who keep the law war
against him.

5 Evil men understand nothing of justice,
but those who seek the Lord understand all.

6 Better a poor man who walks in his integrity
than he who is crooked in his ways
and rich.[w]

7 He who keeps the law is a wise son,
but the gluttons' companion disgraces his father.

8 He who increases his wealth by interest and overcharge*
gathers it for him who is kind to the poor.

9 When one turns away his ear from hearing the law,[x]
even his prayer is an abomination.*

10 He who seduces the upright into an evil way
will himself fall into his own pit.
[And blameless men will gain prosperity.]

11 The rich man is wise in his own eyes,
but a poor man who is intelligent sees through him.

12 When the just are triumphant, there is great jubilation;

u Prv 21, 9; 25, 24.—v Prv 39, 16; Eccl 4, 8.—w Prv 19, 1.—x Prv 21, 27.

27, 13: See note on Prv 20, 16.

27, 14: The loud voice suggests hypocrisy in the greeting.

27, 23-27: The land of Palestine was very suitable for flocks and herds, which formed the principal source of wealth for their owners.

28, 2: The meaning of this poorly preserved verse seems to be that frequent changes of rulers often result from moral corruption and political disorder.

28, 4: The law: religious and moral teaching.

28, 3: Interest and overcharge were strictly forbidden in the Old Law among Israelites because it was presumed that the borrower was in distress; cf Ex 22, 25; Lv 25, 35ff; Dt 23, 19; Ps 14 (15), 5; Ez 18, 8. Civil and divine law will take the offender's wealth from him.

28, 9: Prayers offered in bad faith are displeasing to God.

but when the wicked gain pre-eminence, people hide.

13 He who conceals his sins prospers not,
but he who confesses and forsakes them obtains mercy.

14 Happy the man who is always on his guard;
but he who hardens his heart will fall into evil.

15 Like a roaring lion or a ravenous bear
is a wicked ruler over a poor people.

16 The less prudent the prince, the more his deeds oppress.
He who hates ill-gotten gain prolongs his days.

17 Though a man burdened with human blood
were to flee to the grave, none should support him.

18 He who walks uprightly is safe,
but he whose ways are crooked falls into the pit.

19 He who cultivates his land will have plenty of food,
but from idle pursuits a man has his fill of poverty.[y]

20 The trustworthy man will be richly blessed;
he who is in haste to grow rich will not go unpunished.[z]

21 To show partiality is never good:[a] for even a morsel of bread a man may do wrong.

22 The avaricious man is perturbed about his wealth,
and he knows not when want will come upon him.

23 He who rebukes a man gets more thanks in the end than one with a flattering tongue.

24 He who defrauds father or mother and calls it no sin,[b] is a partner of the brigand.

25 The greedy man stirs up disputes,
but he who trusts in the Lord will prosper.

26 He who trusts in himself is a fool,
but he who walks in wisdom is safe.

27 He who gives to the poor suffers no want,[c]
but he who ignores them gets many a curse.

28 When the wicked gain pre-eminence, other men hide;
but at their fall the just flourish.

CHAPTER 29.

1 The man who remains stiff-necked and hates rebuke
will be crushed suddenly beyond cure.

2 When the just prevail, the people rejoice;
but when the wicked rule, the people groan.[d]

3 He who loves wisdom makes his father glad,
but he who consorts with harlots squanders his wealth.[e]

4 By justice a king gives stability to the land;
but he who imposes heavy taxes ruins it.

5 The man who flatters his neighbor is spreading a net under his feet.

6 The wicked man steps into a snare,
but the just man runs on joyfully.

7 The just man has a care for the rights of the poor;
the wicked man has no such concern.

8 Arrogant men set the city ablaze,
but wise men calm the fury.[f]

9 If a wise man disputes with a fool,
he may rage or laugh but can have no peace.

10 Bloodthirsty men hate the honest man,
but the upright show concern for his life.

11 The fool gives vent to all his anger;
but by biding his time, the wise man calms it.[g]

12 If a ruler listens to lying words,
his servants all become wicked.

13 The poor and the oppressor* have a common bond:[h]

the Lord gives light to the eyes of both.

14 If a king is zealous for the rights of the poor,
his throne stands firm forever.

15 The rod of correction gives wisdom,
but a boy left to his whims disgraces his mother.[i]

16 When the wicked prevail, crime increases;
but their downfall the just will behold.

17 Correct your son, and he will bring you comfort, and give delight to your soul.

18 Without prophecy the people become demoralized;
but happy is he who keeps the law.

19 By words no servant can be trained;[j]
for he understands what is said, but obeys not.

20 Do you see a man hasty in his words?[k]
More can be hoped for from a fool!

21 If a man pampers his servant from childhood,
he will turn out to be stubborn.

22 An ill-tempered man stirs up disputes,
and a hotheaded man is the cause of many sins.[l]

23 Man's pride causes his humiliation,
but he who is humble of spirit obtains honor.[m]

24 The accomplice of a thief is his own enemy:*
he hears himself put under a curse, yet discloses nothing.

25 The fear of man brings a snare,
but he who trusts in the Lord is safe.

26 Many curry favor with the ruler,
but the rights of each are from the Lord.

27 The evildoer is an abomination to the just,
and he who walks uprightly is an abomination to the wicked.

VI: THE WORDS OF AGUR

CHAPTER 30.

1 The words of Agur,* son of Yakeh the Massaite:

The pronouncement of mortal man:
"I am not God;*
I am not God, that I should prevail.
2 Why, I am the most stupid of men,
and have not even human intelligence;
3 Neither have I learned wisdom,
nor have I the knowledge of the Holy One.
4 Who has gone up to heaven and come down again—
who has cupped the wind in his hands?
Who has bound up the waters in a cloak—
who has marked out all the ends of the earth?
What is his name, what is his son's name,
if you know it?"
5 Every word of God is tested;[n]
he is a shield to those who take refuge in him.
6 Add nothing to his words,[o]
lest he reprove you, and you be exposed as a deceiver.

7 Two things I ask of you,
deny them not to me before I die:
8 Put falsehood and lying far from me,
give me neither poverty nor riches;
[provide me only with the food I need;]
9 Lest, being full, I deny you, saying, "Who is the Lord?"
Or, being in want, I steal,
and profane the name of my God.

10 Slander not a servant to his master,
lest he curse you, and you have to pay the penalty.

11 There is a group of people that curses its father,*
and blesses not its mother.[p]

12 There is a group that is pure in its own eyes,
yet is not purged of its filth.
13 There is a group—how haughty their eyes!
how overbearing their glance!
14 There is a group whose incisors are swords,
whose teeth are knives, Devouring the needy from the earth,
and the poor from among men.

VII: NUMERICAL PROVERBS

15 The two daughters of the leech are, "Give, Give."*
Three things are never satisfied,
four never say, "Enough!"
16 The nether world, and the barren womb;[q]
the earth, that is never saturated with water,
and fire, that never says, "Enough!"
17 The eye that mocks a father,
or scorns an aged mother,
Will be plucked out by the ravens in the valley;
the young eagles will devour it.

18 Three things are too wonderful for me,*
yes, four I cannot understand:
19 The way of an eagle in the air,
the way of a serpent upon a rock,
The way of a ship on the high seas,
and the way of a man with a maiden.
20 Such is the way of an adulterous woman:
she eats, wipes her mouth,
and says, "I have done no wrong."*

21 Under three things the earth trembles,
yes, under four it cannot bear up:
22 Under a slave when he becomes king,
and a fool when he is glutted with food;[r] 23 Under an odious woman when she is wed,
and a maidservant when she displaces her mistress.

24 Four things are among the smallest on the earth,
and yet are exceedingly wise:
25 Ants—a species not strong,
yet they store up their food in the summer;
26 Rock-badgers*—a species not mighty,
yet they make their home in the crags;
27 Locusts—they have no king,
yet they migrate all in array;
28 Lizards—you can catch them with your hands,
yet they find their way into kings' palaces.

29 Three things are stately in their stride,
yes, four are stately in their carriage:
30 The lion, mightiest of beasts,
who retreats before nothing;
31 The strutting cock, and the he-goat,
and the king at the head of his people.

32 If you have foolishly been proud*
or presumptuous—put your hand on your mouth; 33 For the stirring of milk brings forth curds,
and the stirring of anger brings forth blood.

VIII: THE WORDS OF LAMUEL

CHAPTER 31.

1 The words of Lamuel, king of Massa.
The advice which his mother gave him:

2 What, my son, my first-born!
what, O son of my womb;
what, O son of my vows!
3 Give not your vigor to women,
nor your strength to those who ruin kings.[s]
4 It is not for kings, O Lamuel,
not for kings to drink wine;
strong drink is not for princes![t]

q Prv 27, 20.—r Prv 19, 10; Eccl 10, 6f.—s Prv 5, 9.—t Prv 20, 1.

30, 15f: The two daughters . . . Give": the text is obscure but the general idea seems to be that the leech is insatiable in its desire for blood, just as are the nether world for victims, the barren womb for offspring, the parched earth for water, and fire for fuel (16).

30, 18f: The soaring flight of the eagle, the mysterious movement upon a rock of the serpent which has no feet, the path of the ship through the trackless deep, and the marvelous procreation of human life, excite great wonderment.

30, 20: This verse, which is probably a gloss, pictures the indifference of an adulterous woman who thinks there is no trace of her wicked act.

30, 26: Rock-badgers: cf note on Ps 103 (104), 18.

30, 32f: The anger aroused by overweening pride threatens an awesome punishment.

5 Lest in drinking they forget what the law decrees,
and violate the rights of all who are in need.
6 Give strong drink to one who is perishing,
and wine to the sorely depressed;
7 When they drink, they will forget their misery,
and think no more of their burdens.
8 Open your mouth in behalf of the dumb,
and for the rights of the destitute;
9 Open your mouth, decree what is just,
defend the needy and the poor!

IX: THE IDEAL WIFE

10 When one finds a worthy wife,[u]
her value is far beyond pearls.
11 Her husband, entrusting his heart to her,
has an unfailing prize.
12 She brings him good, and not evil,*
all the days of her life.
13 She obtains wool and flax
and makes cloth with skillful hands.
14 Like merchant* ships,
she secures her provisions from afar.
15 She rises while it is still night,
and distributes food to her household.
16 She picks out a field to purchase;
out of her earnings she plants a vineyard.
17 She is girt about with strength,
and sturdy are her arms.
18 She enjoys the success of her dealings;
at night her lamp is undimmed.*
19 She puts her hands to the distaff,
and her fingers ply the spindle.
20 She reaches out her hands to the poor,
and extends her arms to the needy.
21 She fears not the snow for her household;
all her charges are doubly clothed.
22 She makes her own coverlets;
fine linen and purple are her clothing.
23 Her husband is prominent at the city gates
as he sits with the elders of the land.
24 She makes garments and sells them,
and stocks the merchants with belts.
25 She is clothed with strength and dignity,
and she laughs at the days to come.*
26 She opens her mouth in wisdom,
and on her tongue is kindly counsel.
27 She watches the conduct of her household,
and eats not her food in idleness.
28 Her children rise up and praise her;
her husband, too, extols her:
29 "Many are the women of proven worth,
but you have excelled them all."
30 Charm is deceptive and beauty fleeting;
the woman who fears the Lord is to be praised.*
31 Give her a reward of her labors,
and let her works praise her at the city gates.

u 10-31: Sir 26, 1ff. 13-18.

31, 12: Good and not evil: i.e., prosperity, not adversity.
31, 14: Merchant: literally, "Chanaanite" (cf v 24), probably because the merchant class had been composed chiefly of Chanaanites.
31, 18: Her lamp is undimmed: indicates abundance of productive work and its accompanying prosperity: cf Prv 20, 20; Jb 18, 6.
31, 25: Laughs at the days to come: anticipates the future with gladness free from anxiety.
31, 30: The true charm of the ideal wife is her religious spirit, for she fears the Lord; cf note on Prv 1, 7.

ECCLESIASTES

The title "Ecclesiastes" given to this book is the Greek translation of the Hebrew name COHELETH meaning, perhaps, "one who convokes an assembly." The book, however, does not consist of public addresses, but is a treatise, more or less logically developed, on the vanity of all things. Reflections in prose and aphorisms in verse are intermingled in Ecclesiastes, which contains, besides, an introduction and an epilogue.

The book is concerned with the purpose and value of human life. While admitting the existence of a divine plan, it considers such a plan to be hidden from man, who seeks happiness without ever finding it here below (3, 11; 8, 7. 17). Ecclesiastes applies his "Vanity of vanities" to everything "under the sun," even to that wisdom which seeks to find at last a semblance of good in the things of the world. Merit does not yield happiness for it is often tried by suffering. Riches and pleasures do not avail. Existence is monotonous, enjoyment fleeting and vain; darkness quickly follows. Life, then, is an enigma beyond human ability to solve.

While Ecclesiastes concedes that there is an advantage for man in the enjoyment of certain legitimate pleasures lest he lapse into pessimism and despair, he nevertheless considers this indulgence also vanity unless man returns due thanks to the Creator who has given him all. Under this aspect, earthly wisdom would rise to the higher level of true spiritual wisdom. This true wisdom is not found "under the sun" but is perceived only by the light of faith, inasmuch as it rests with God, who is the final Judge of the good and the bad, and whose reign endures forever. The Epilogue gives the clue to this thought (12, 13f).

The moral teaching of the book is imperfect, like the Old Testament itself (Heb 7, 19), yet it marks an advance in the development of the doctrine of divine retribution. While rejecting the older solution of earthly rewards and punishments, Ecclesiastes looks forward to a more lasting one. The clear answer to the problem was to come with the light of Christ's teaching concerning future life.

The author of the book was a teacher of popular wisdom (12,9). Coheleth was obviously only his literary name. Because he is called "David's son, king in Jerusalem," it was commonly thought that he was King Solomon. Such personation, however, was but a literary device to lend greater dignity and authority to the book—a circumstance which does not in any way impugn its inspired character. The Epilogue seems to have been written by an editor, probably a disciple of Coheleth. The entire work differs considerably in language and style from earlier books of the Old Testament. It reflects a late period of Hebrew, and was probably written about three centuries before Christ.

CHAPTER 1.

Vanity of Earthly Things. 1 The words [a] of David's son, Coheleth,* king in Jerusalem: 2 [b] Vanity of vanities,* says Coheleth, vanity of vanities! All things are vanity! 3 [c] What profit has man from all the labor which he toils at under the sun?* 4 One generation passes and another comes, but the world forever stays. 5 The sun rises and the sun goes down; then it presses on to the place where it rises. 6 Blowing now toward the south, then toward the north, the wind turns again and again, resuming its rounds. 7 All rivers go to the sea, yet never does the sea become full. To the place where they go, the rivers keep on going. 8 [d] All speech is labored; there is nothing man can say.* The eye is not satisfied with seeing nor is the ear filled with hearing.

9 [e] What has been, that will be; what has been done, that will be done. Nothing is new under the sun. 10 [f] Even the thing of which we say, "See, this is new!" has already existed in the ages that preceded us. 11 [g] There is no remembrance of the men of old;* nor of those to come will there be any remembrance among those who come after them.

Vanity of Wisdom. 12 I, Coheleth, was king over Israel in Jerusalem, 13 [h] and I applied my mind to search and investigate in wisdom all things that are done under the sun. A thankless task God has appointed for me to be busied about. 14 [i] I have seen all things that are done under the sun, and behold, all is vanity and a chase after wind.* 15 What is crooked cannot be made straight, and what is missing cannot be supplied.

16 [j] Though I said to myself, "Behold, I have become great and stored up wisdom beyond all who were before me in Jerusalem, and my mind has broad experience of wisdom and knowledge"; 17 [k] yet when I applied my mind to know wisdom and knowledge, madness and folly, I learned that this also is a chase after wind. 18 For in much wisdom there is much sorrow, and he who stores up knowledge stores up grief.

1, 8: All speech . . . man can say: or "All things are wearisome beyond man's power to tell."

1, 11: Among men nothing is long remembered; God, however, never forgets.

1, 14: Chase after wind: futility, like an attempt to corral the winds. Cf Os 12, 2. The ancient versions understood "affliction of spirit."

CHAPTER 2.

Vanity of Pleasure. 1 I said to myself,
*"Come, now, let me try you with pleasure and the enjoyment of good things."
l But behold, this too was vanity. 2 Of laughter I said: "Mad!" and of mirth:
"What good does this do?" 3 I thought of beguiling my senses with wine, though
my mind was concerned with wisdom,* and of taking up folly, until I should understand what is best for men to do under the heavens during the limited days of their life.

4 I undertook great works; I built myself houses and planted vineyards; 5 I made gardens and parks, and set out in them fruit trees of all sorts. 6 And I constructed for myself reservoirs to water a flourishing woodland. 7 I acquired male and female slaves, and slaves were born in my house. I also had growing herds of cattle and flocks of sheep, more than all who had been before me in Jerusalem. 8 I amassed for myself silver and gold, and the wealth of kings and provinces. I got for myself male and female singers and all human luxuries. 9 I became great, and I stored up more than all others before me in Jerusalem; my wisdom, too, stayed with me. 10 m Nothing that my eyes desired did I deny them, nor did I deprive myself of any joy, but my heart rejoiced in the fruit of all my toil. This was my share for all my toil. 11 n But when I turned to all the works that my hands had wrought, and to the toil at which I had taken such pains, behold! all was vanity
and a chase after wind, with nothing gained under the sun. 12 For what will the man do who is to come after the king?
What men have already done!

Wisdom and Folly Compared. I went on to the consideration of wisdom, madness and folly. 13 And I saw that wisdom had the advantage over folly as much as light has the advantage over darkness. 14 o The wise man has eyes in his head, but the fool walks in darkness. Yet I knew that one lot befalls both of them. 15 So I said to myself, if the fool's lot is to befall me also, why then should I be wise? Where is the profit for me? And I concluded in my heart that this too is vanity. 16 p Neither of the wise man nor of the fool will there be an abiding remembrance, for in days to come both will have been forgotten. How is it that the wise man dies as well as the fool! 17 Therefore I loathed life, since for me the work that is done under the sun is evil; for all is vanity and a chase after wind.

Vanity of Toil. 18 And I detested all the fruits of my labor under the sun, because I must leave them to a man who is to come after me. 19 And who knows whether he will be a wise man or a fool? Yet he will have control over all the fruits of my wise labor under the sun. This also is vanity. 20 So my feelings turned to despair of all the fruits of my labor under the sun. 21 For here is a man who has labored with wisdom and knowledge and skill, and to another, who has not labored over it, he must leave his property.
This also is vanity and a great misfortune. 22 q For what profit comes to a man from all the toil and anxiety of heart with which he has labored under the sun? 23
All his days sorrow and grief are his occupation; even at night his mind is not at rest. This also is vanity.

24 r There is nothing better for man than to eat and drink and provide himself with good things by his labors. Even this, I realized, is from the hand of God.*
25 For who can eat or drink apart from him? 26 s For to whatever man he sees fit
he gives wisdom and knowledge and joy;
but to the sinner he gives the task of gathering possessions to be given to whatever man God sees fit. This also is vanity and a chase after wind.

CHAPTER 3.

Unchanging Order of Events. 1 There is an appointed time for everything, and a time for every affair under the heavens.
2 A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to uproot the plant. 3 A time to kill, and a time to heal;
a time to tear down, and a time to build.
4 A time to weep, and a time to laugh;
a time to mourn, and a time to dance. 5
A time to scatter stones, and a time to gather them; a time to embrace, and a time to be far from embraces. 6 A time to seek, and a time to lose; a time to keep,

and a time to cast away. 7 A time to rend,
and a time to sew; a time to be silent,
and a time to speak. 8 A time to love,
and a time to hate; a time of war, and a time of peace.

9 t What advantage has the worker from his toil? 10 I have considered the task which God has appointed for men to be busied about. 11 u He has made everything appropriate to its time, and has put the timeless into their hearts, without men's ever discovering, from beginning to end, the work which God has done. 12 I recognized that there is nothing better than to be glad and to do well during life.
13 v For every man, moreover, to eat and drink and enjoy the fruit of all his labor is a gift of God.

Uncertainty of the Future. 14 I recognized that whatever God does will endure forever; there is no adding to it, or taking from it. Thus has God done that he may be revered. 15 w What now is has already been; what is to be, already is; and God restores* what would otherwise be displaced. 16 x And still under the sun in the judgment place I saw wickedness, and in the seat of justice, iniquity. 17 y And I said to myself, both the just and the wicked God will judge, since there is a time for every affair and on every work a judgment. 18 I said to myself: As for the children of men, it is God's way of testing them and of showing that they are in themselves like beasts. 19 For the lot of man and of beast is one lot; the one dies as well as the other. Both have the same life-breath, and man has no advantage over the beast; but all is vanity. 20 z Both go to the same place; both were made from the dust, and to the dust they both return. 21 a Who knows if the life-breath of the children of men goes upward and the life-breath of beasts goes earthward? 22 b And I saw that there is nothing better for a man than to rejoice in his work; for this is his lot. Who will let him see what is to come after him?

CHAPTER 4.

Social Disorders. 1 Again I considered all the oppressions that take place under the sun: the tears of the victims with none to comfort them! From the hand of their oppressors comes violence, and there is none to comfort them! c 2 And those now dead, I declared more fortunate in death than are the living to be still alive.d 3 And better off than both is the yet unborn, who has not seen the wicked work that is done under the sun. 4 Then I saw that all toil and skillful work is the rivalry of one man for another. This also is vanity and a chase after wind. 5 "The fool folds his arms and consumes his own flesh"*—6 better is one handful with tranquility than two with toil and a chase after wind!

7 Again I found this vanity under the sun: 8 a solitary man with no companion; with neither son nor brother. Yet there is no end to all his toil, and riches do not satisfy his greed. "For whom do I toil and deprive myself of good things?" This also is vanity and a worthless task. 9 Two are better than one: they get a good wage for their labor. 10 If the one falls, the other will lift up his companion. Woe to the solitary man! For if he should fall, he has no one to lift him up. 11 So also, if two sleep together, they keep each other warm. How can one alone keep warm? 12 Where a lone man may be overcome, two together can resist. A three-ply cord is not easily broken.

13 Better is a poor but wise youth than an old but foolish king who no longer knows caution; 14 for from a prison house* one comes forth to rule, since even in his royalty he was poor at birth. 15 Then I saw all those who are to live and move about under the sun with the heir apparent who will succeed to his place.* 16 There is no end to all these people, to all over whom he takes precedence; yet the later generations will not applaud him. This also is vanity and a chase after wind.

Reverence for God. 17 e Guard your step when you go to the house of God. Let your approach be obedience, rather than let not your heart be quick to make a promise in God's presence. God is in heaven and you are on earth; therefore let your words be few. 2 For nightmares*

come with many cares, and a fool's utterance with many words.

3 f When you make a vow to God, delay not its fulfillment. For God has no pleasure in fools; fulfill what you have vowed. 4 You had better not make a vow than make it and not fulfill it. 5 Let not your utterances make you guilty, and say not before his representative, "It was a mistake," lest God be angered by such words and destroy the words of your hands. 6 g Rather, fear God!

Perverted Justice. 7 h If you see oppression of the poor, and violation of rights and justice in the realm, do not be shocked by the fact, for the high official has another higher than he watching him
and above these are others higher still—.
8 Yet an advantage for a country in every respect is a king for the arable land.*

Vanity of Riches. 9 i The covetous man is never satisfied with money, and the lover of wealth reaps no fruit from it;
so this too is vanity. 10 Where there are great riches, there are also many to devour them. Of what use are they to the owner except to feast his eyes upon? 11
Sleep is sweet to the laboring man, whether he eats little or much, but the rich man's abundance allows him no sleep.

12 j This is a grievous evil which I have seen under the sun: riches kept by their owner to his hurt. 13 Should the riches be lost through some misfortune, he may have a son when he is without means. 14
k As he came forth from his mother's womb, so again shall he depart, naked
as he came, having nothing from his labor that he can carry in his hand. 15 This too is a grievous evil, that he goes just as he came. What then does it profit him to toil for wind? 16 All the days of his life are passed in gloom and sorrow, under great vexation, sickness and wrath.

17 l Here is what I recognize as good:
it is well for a man to eat and drink and enjoy all the fruits of his labor under the sun during the limited days of the life which God gives him; for this is his lot.
18 Any man to whom God gives riches and property, and grants power to partake of them, so that he receives his lot and finds joy in the fruits of his toil, has a gift from God. 19 For he will hardly dwell on the shortness of his life, because God lets him busy himself with the joy of his heart.*

CHAPTER 6.

1 There is another evil which I have seen under the sun, and it weighs heavily upon man: 2 m there is the man to whom God gives riches and property and honor, so that he lacks none of all the things he craves; yet God does not grant him power to partake of them, but a stranger devours them. This is vanity and a dire plague. 3 Should a man have a hundred children and live many years, no matter to what great age, still if he has not the full benefit of his goods, or if he is deprived of burial, of this man I proclaim that the child born dead is more fortunate than he.* 4 Though it came in vain and goes into darkness and its name is enveloped in darkness; 5 though it has not seen or known the sun, yet the dead child is at rest rather than such a man. 6 Should he live twice a thousand years and not enjoy his goods, do not both go to the same place?*

Vanity of Desires. 7 All man's toil is for his mouth,* yet his desire is not fulfilled.
8 For what advantage has the wise man over the fool, or what advantage has the poor man in knowing how to conduct himself in life? 9 "What the eyes see is better than what the desires wander
after."* This also is vanity and a chase
after wind.

10 Whatever is, was long ago given its name, and the nature of man is known, and that he cannot contend in judgment with one who is stronger than he.* 11 For though there are many sayings that multiply vanity, what profit is there for a man? 12 n For who knows what is good for a man in life, the limited days of his vain life (which God has made like a shadow)? Because—who is there to tell a man what will come after him under the sun?

CHAPTER 7.

Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. 1 A good name is better than good ointment,* and the day of death than the day of birth. o 2 p It is better to go to the house of mourning than to the house of feasting, for that is the end of every man, and the living should take it to heart. 3 Sorrow is better than laughter, because when the face is sad the heart grows wiser. 4 The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning, but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth. 5 It is better to hearken to the wise man's rebuke than to hearken to the song of fools; 6 for as the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the fool's laughter.

This also is vanity, 7 for oppression can make a fool of a wise man, and a bribe corrupts the heart. 8 Better is the end of speech than its beginning; better is the patient spirit than the lofty spirit. 9 Do not in spirit become quickly discontented, for discontent lodges in the bosom of a fool. 10 Do not say: How is it that former times were better than these? For it is not in wisdom that you ask about this. 11 Wisdom and an inheritance are good, and an advantage to those that see the sun. 12 For the protection of wisdom is as the protection of money; and the advantage of knowledge is that wisdom preserves the life of its owner.

The World an Enigma. 13 Consider the work of God. Who can make straight what he has made crooked? 14 On a good day enjoy good things, and on an evil day consider: Both the one and the other God has made, so that man cannot find fault with him in anything.

15 I have seen all manner of things in my vain days: a just man perishing in his justice, and a wicked one surviving in his wickedness. 16 q "Be not just to excess, and be not overwise, lest you be ruined.* 17 Be not wicked to excess, and be not foolish. Why should you die before your time?"* 18 It is good to hold to this rule, and not to let that one* go; but he who fears God will win through at all events.

19 Wisdom is a better defense for the wise man than would be ten princes in the city; 20 r yet there is no man on earth so just as to do good and never sin.* 21 s Do not give heed to every word that is spoken lest you hear your servant speaking ill of you, 22 for you know in your heart that you have many times spoken ill of others.

23 All these things I probed in wisdom. I said, "I will acquire wisdom"; but it was beyond me. 24 What exists is far-reaching; it is deep, very deep: who can find it out? 25 t I turned my thoughts toward knowledge; I sought and pursued wisdom and reason, and I recognized that wickedness is foolish and folly is madness.

Women. 26 u More bitter than death I find the woman who is a hunter's trap, whose heart is a snare and whose hands are prison bonds. He who is pleasing to God will escape her, but the sinner will be entrapped by her. 27 Behold, this have I found, says Coheleth, adding one thing to another that I might discover the answer 28 which my soul still seeks and has not found: One man out of a thousand have I come upon, but a woman among them all I have not discerned.* 29 Behold, only this have I found out: God made mankind straight, but men have had recourse to many subtleties.*

7, 18: This rule . . . that one: the sayings cited in vv 16f. Others refer this and that to riches and wisdom (cf 7, 12), justice and wisdom, or justice and wickedness. This last supposition makes the author's thought hard to follow.

Obedience to Rulers. 2 Observe the precept of the king, and in view of your oath to God, 3 be not hasty to withdraw from the king; do not join in with a base plot, for he does whatever he pleases, 4 because his word is sovereign, and who can say to him, "What are you doing?"

Indiscernible Moral Sanction. 5 "He who keeps the commandment experiences no evil, and the wise man's heart knows times and judgments; 6 for there is a time and a judgment for everything." Yet it is a great affliction for man 7 v that he is ignorant of what is to come; for who will make known to him how it will be? 8 There is no man who is master of the breath of life so as to retain it, and none has mastery of the day of death. There is no exemption from the struggle, nor are the wicked saved by their wickedness. 9 w All these things I considered and I applied my mind to every work that is done under the sun, while one man tyrannizes over another to his hurt. 10 Meanwhile I saw wicked men approach and enter; and as they left the sacred place, they were praised in the city for what they had done. This also is vanity.* 11 Because the sentence against evildoers is not promptly executed, therefore the hearts of men are filled with the desire to commit evil—12 because the sinner does evil a hundred times and survives. Though indeed I know that it shall be well with those who fear God, for their reverence toward him; 13 and that it shall not be well with the wicked man, and he shall not prolong his shadowy* days, for his lack of reverence toward God.

14 This is a vanity which occurs on earth: there are just men treated as though they had done evil and wicked men treated as though they had done justly. This, too, I say is vanity. 15 x Therefore I commend mirth, because there is nothing good for man under the sun except eating and drinking and mirth: for this is the accompaniment of his toil during the limited days of the life which God gives him under the sun.*

The Same Lot for All. 16 y When I applied my heart to know wisdom and to observe what is done on earth, 17 z I recognized that man is unable to discover all God's work that is done under the sun, even though neither by day nor by night do his eyes find rest in sleep. However much man toils in searching, he does not find it out; and even if the wise man says that he knows, he is unable to discover it.

CHAPTER 9.

1 All this I have kept in mind and recognized:* the just, the wise, and their deeds are in the hand of God. Love from hatred* man cannot tell; both appear equally vain, 2 a in that there is the same lot for all, for the just and the wicked, for the good and the bad, for the clean and the unclean, for him who offers sacrifice and him who does not. As it is for the good man, so it is for the sinner; as it is for him who swears rashly, so it is for him who fears an oath. 3 Among all the things that happen under the sun, this is the worst, that things turn out the same for all. Hence the minds of men are filled wih evil, and madness is in their hearts during life; and afterward they go to the dead.

4 Indeed, for any among the living there is hope; a live dog is better off than a dead lion. 5 b For the living know that they are to die, but the dead no longer know anything. There is no further recompense for them, because all memory of them is lost. 6 For them, love and hatred and rivalry have long since perished. They will never again have part in anything that is done under the sun.

7 c Go, eat your bread with joy and drink your wine with a merry heart, because it is now that God favors your works. 8 At all times let your garments be white, and spare not the perfume for your head. 9 Enjoy life with the wife whom you love, all the days of the fleeting life that is granted you under the sun. This is your lot in life, for the toil of your labors under the sun. 10 Anything you can turn your hand to, do with what power you have; for there will be no work, nor reason, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the nether world where you are going.

Uncertainty of Fortune. 11 Again I saw under the sun that the race is not won by the swift, nor the battle by the valiant, nor a livelihood by the wise, nor riches by the shrewd, nor favor by the experts; for a time of calamity comes to all alike. 12 Man no more knows his own time* than fish taken in the fatal net, or birds trapped in the snare; like these the children of men are caught when the evil time falls suddenly upon them.

13 On the other hand I saw this wise deed under the sun, which I thought sublime. 14 Against a small city with few men in it advanced a mighty king, who surrounded it and threw up great siegeworks about it. 15 But in the city lived a man who, though poor, was wise, and he delivered it through his wisdom. Yet no one remembered this poor man. 16 d Though I had said, "Wisdom is better than force," yet the wisdom of the poor man is despised and his words go unheeded.

17 "The quiet words of the wise are better heeded than the shout of a ruler of fools"—!

Sundry Proverbs. 18 "A fly that dies can spoil the perfumer's ointment, and a single slip can ruin much that is good."

CHAPTER 10.

1 More weighty than wisdom or wealth is a little folly!

2 The wise man's understanding turns him to his right; the fool's understanding turns him to his left.*

3 When the fool walks through the street, in his lack of understanding he calls everything foolish.

4 Should the anger of the ruler burst upon you, forsake not your place; for mildness abates great offenses.

5 I have seen under the sun another evil, like a mistake that proceeds from the ruler: 6 a fool put in lofty position while the rich sit in lowly places. 7 I have seen slaves on horseback, while princes walked on the ground like slaves.

8 e He who digs a pit may fall into it, and he who breaks through a wall may be bitten by a serpent.

9 He who moves stones may be hurt by them, and he who chops wood is in danger from it.

10 If the iron becomes dull, though at first he made easy progress, he must increase his efforts; but the craftsman has the advantage of his skill.

11 If the serpent bites because it has not been charmed, then there is no advantage for the charmer.

12 f Words from the wise man's mouth win favor, but the fool's lips consume him. 13 The beginning of his words is folly, and the end of his talk is utter madness; 14 g yet the fool multiplies words. Man knows not what is to come, for who can tell him what is to come after him? 15 When will the fool be weary of his labor, he who knows not the way of the city?*

16 Woe to you, O land, whose king was a servant, and whose princes dine in the morning! 17 Blessed are you, O land, whose king is of noble birth, and whose princes dine at the right time (for vigor and not in drinking bouts). 18 When hands are lazy, the rafters sag; when hands are slack, the house leaks. 19 Bread and oil call forth merriment and wine makes the living glad, but money answers for everything. 20 Even in your thoughts do not make light of the king, nor in the privacy of your bedroom revile the rich, because the birds of the air may carry your voice, a winged creature may tell what you say.

CHAPTER 11.

1 Cast your bread upon the waters;* after a long time you may find it again. 2 Make seven or eight portions; you know not what misfortune may come upon the earth.* 3 When the clouds are full, they pour out rain upon the earth. Whether a tree falls to the south or to the north, wherever it falls, there shall it lie. 4 One who pays heed to the wind will not sow, and one who watches the clouds will never reap. 5 h Just as you know not how the breath of life fashions the human frame in the mother's womb, so you know not the work of God which he is accomplishing in the universe. 6 In the morning sow your seed, and at evening let not your hand be idle: For you know not which of the two will be successful, or whether both alike will turn out well.

Youth. 7 Light is sweet! and it is pleasant for the eyes to see the sun. 8 However many years a man may live, let him, as he enjoys them all, remember that the days of darkness will be many. All that is to come is vanity.

9 Rejoice, O young man, while you are young and let your heart be glad in the days of your youth. Follow the ways of your heart, the vision of your eyes; yet understand that as regards all this God will bring you to judgment. 10 Ward off grief from your heart and put away trouble from your presence, though the dawn of youth is fleeting.*

which you will say, I have no pleasure in them; 2 before the sun is darkened, and the light, and the moon, and the stars, while the clouds return* after the rain; 3 when the guardians* of the house tremble, and the strong men are bent, and the grinders are idle because they are few, and they who look through the windows grow blind; 4 when the doors* to the street are shut, and the sound of the mill is low; when one waits for the chirp of a bird, but all the daughters of song are suppressed; 5 and one fears heights, and perils in the street; when the almond tree blooms,* and the locust grows sluggish and the caper berry is destroyed, because man goes to his lasting home, and mourners go about the streets; 6 before the silver cord is snapped and the golden bowl* is broken, and the pitcher is shattered at the spring, and the broken pulley falls into the well, 7 i and the dust returns to the earth as it once was, and the life-breath returns to God who gave it.

8 j Vanity of vanities, says Coheleth, all things are vanity!

Epilogue. 9 Besides being wise, Coheleth taught the people knowledge, and weighed, scrutinized and arranged many proverbs. 10 Coheleth sought to find pleasing sayings, and to write down true sayings with precision. 11 The sayings of the wise are like goads; like fixed pegs are the topics given by one collector.* 12 k As to more than these, my son, beware. Of the making of many books there is no end, and in much study there is weariness for the flesh.

13 l The last word, when all is heard: Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is man's all;* 14 m because God will bring to judgment every work, with all its hidden qualities, whether good or bad.

THE CANTICLE OF CANTICLES

The Canticle of Canticles, or the "Song of Songs," meaning the greatest of songs (1, 1), contains in exquisite poetic form the sublime portrayal and praise of the mutual love of the Lord and His people. The Lord is the Lover and His people are the beloved. Describing this relationship in terms of human love, the author simply follows Israel's tradition. Isaias (5, 1-7; 54, 4-8), Jeremias (2, 2f. 32), and Ezechiel (16; 23) all characterize the covenant between the Lord and Israel as a marriage. Osee the prophet sees the idolatry of Israel in the adultery of Gomer (1-3). He also represents the Lord speaking to Israel's heart (2, 16) and changing her into a new spiritual people, purified by the Babylonian captivity and betrothed anew to her divine Lover "in justice and uprightness, in love and mercy" (2, 21).

The author of the Canticle, using the same literary figure, paints a beautiful picture of the ideal Israel, the chosen people of the Old and New Testaments, whom the Lord led by degrees to an exalted spiritual union with Himself in the bond of perfect love. When the Canticle is thus interpreted there is no reason for surprise at the tone of the poem, which employs in its descriptions the courtship and marriage customs of the author's time. Moreover, the poem is not an allegory in which each remark, e.g., in the dialogue of the lovers, has a higher meaning. It is a parable in which the true meaning of mutual love comes from the poem as a whole.

While the Canticle is thus commonly understood by most Catholic scholars, it is also possible to see in it an inspired portrayal of ideal human love. Here we would have from God a description of the sacredness and the depth of married union.

Although the poem is attributed to Solomon in the traditional title (1, 1), the language and style of the work, among other considerations, point to a time after the end of the Babylonian Exile (538 B.C.) as that in which an unknown poet composed this masterpiece. The structure of the Canticle is difficult to analyze; here it is regarded as a lyric dialogue, with dramatic movement and interest.

The use of marriage as a symbol, characteristic of the Canticle, is found extensively also in the New Testament (Mt 9, 15; 25, 1-13; Jn 3, 29; 2 Cor 11, 2; Eph 5, 23-32; Ap 19, 7ff; 21, 9ff). In Christian tradition, the Canticle has been interpreted in terms of the union between Christ and the Church and, particularly by St. Bernard, of the union between Christ and the individual soul. Throughout the liturgy, especially in the Little Office, there is a consistent application of the Canticle of Canticles to the Blessed Virgin Mary.

CHAPTER 1.

Love's Desires

2 B Let him kiss me with kisses of his mouth!*
More delightful is your love than wine![a] 3 Your name spoken is a spreading perfume—
that is why maidens love you.
4 Draw me!—
D We will follow you eagerly!
B Bring me, O king, to your chambers.
D With you we rejoice and exult,
we extol your love; it is beyond wine:[b]
how rightly you are loved!

Love's Boast

5 B I am as dark—but lovely,
O daughters of Jerusalem*—
As the tents of Cedar,
as the curtains of Salma.
6 Do not stare at me because I am swarthy,*
because the sun has burned me.
My brothers have been angry with me;
they charged me with the care of the vineyards:
my own vineyard I have not cared for.

Love's Inquiry

7 B Tell me, you whom my heart loves,*
where you pasture your flock,

a 2f: Ct 4, 10.—b Ct 4, 10.

1, 1: This title is actually the first verse of Chapter 1.

1, 2ff: The marginal letters indicate the speaker of the verses: B—Bride; D—Daughters of Jerusalem; G—Bridegroom. In vv 2-7 the bride and the daughters address the bridegroom who appears here as a king, but more often in the poem as a shepherd. King and shepherd are familiar figures of the Lord in the Sacred Scriptures. Cf Ps 22 (23), 1; Is 40, 11; Jn 10, 1-16.

1, 5: Daughters of Jerusalem: the chorus whom the bride addresses and who ask her questions (5, 9; 6, 1), thus developing action within the poem. Cedar: a Syrian desert region whose name suggests blackness; tents were often made of black goat hair. Curtains: tent coverings of Salma, a region close to Cedar.

1, 6: Swarthy: tanned by the sun from working in her brothers' vineyards. My own vineyard: the bride herself; cf Is 5, 1-7, where Israel is designated as the vineyard and the Lord is the Lover.

1, 7: Here and elsewhere in the Canticle (3, 1; 5, 8; 6, 1), the bride expresses her desire to be in the company of her lover. These verses point to a certain tension in the poem. Only at the end (8, 5ff) does mutual possession of the lovers become final.

13 My lover is for me a sachet of myrrh*

1, 9ff: The bridegroom compares the girl's beauty to the rich adornment of the royal chariot of Pharao.

1, 12: Nard: a precious perfume, a figure of the bride; cf Ct 4, 14.

1, 13: Myrrh: produced from aromatic resin of balsam or roses.

1, 14: Henna: a plant which bears white scented flowers.

1, 15: Doves: suggesting innocence and charm.

1, 16f: Though the meeting place of the lovers is but a shepherd's hut of green branches, it becomes a palace with beams of cedar and rafters of cypress when adorned with their love.

2, 1: Flower of Saron: probably the narcissus, which grows in the fertile Plain of Saron lying between Mount Carmel and Jaffa on the Mediterranean coast.

2, 4ff: The banquet hall, the sweet things of the table, the embrace of the bride and bridegroom, express the delicacy of their affection and the intimacy of their love.

2, 7: By the gazelles and hinds: the swiftness of these animals and the luster and soft expression of their eyes are suggestive of love; cf Prv 5, 19.

2, 8ff: In this sudden change of scene, the bride pictures her lover hastening toward her dwelling until his voice is heard bidding her come to him.

2, 14: The bride is addressed as though she were a dove in a mountain fastness out of sight and reach.

CHAPTER 2.

1 I am a flower of Saron,*
a lily of the valley.
2 G As a lily among thorns,
so is my beloved among women.
3 B As an apple tree among the trees of the woods,
so is my lover among men.
I delight to rest in his shadow,
and his fruit is sweet to my mouth.
4 He brings me into the banquet hall*
and his emblem over me is love.[d] 5 Strengthen me with raisin cakes,
refresh me with apples,
for I am faint with love.[e] 6 His left hand is under my head
and his right arm embraces me.[f]
7 I adjure you, daughters of Jerusalem,[g]
by the gazelles and hinds* of the field,
Do not arouse, do not stir up love
before its own time.

A Tryst in the Spring

8 B Hark! my lover—here he comes* springing across the mountains, leaping across the hills.
9 My lover is like a gazelle
or a young stag.
Here he stands behind our wall,
gazing through the windows,
peering through the lattices.
10 My lover speaks; he says to me,
"Arise, my beloved, my beautiful one,
and come!
11 "For see, the winter is past,
the rains are over and gone.
12 The flowers appear on the earth,
the time of pruning the vines has come,
and the song of the dove is heard in our land.
13 The fig tree puts forth its figs,
and the vines, in bloom, give forth fragrance.
Arise, my beloved, my beautiful one,
and come!
14 "O my dove in the clefts of the rock,*
in the secret recesses of the cliff,

Let me see you,
let me hear your voice,
For your voice is sweet,
and you are lovely."

15 B Catch us the foxes, the little foxes* that damage the vineyards; for our vineyards are in bloom!

16 My lover belongs to me and I to
him;
he browses among the lilies.[h]

17 Until the day breathes cool* and the shadows lengthen,
roam, my lover,
Like a gazelle or a young stag
upon the mountains of Bether.[i]

CHAPTER 3.

Loss and Discovery

1 B On my bed at night I sought him*
whom my heart loves—
I sought him but did not find him.[j]

2 I will rise then and go about the city;
in the streets and crossings I will seek
Him whom my heart loves.
I sought him but I did not find
him.

3 The watchmen came upon me, as they made their rounds of the
city:
Have you seen him whom my heart loves?

4 I had hardly left them
when I found him whom my
heart loves.
I took hold of him and would not let him go till I should bring him to the home of my mother,[k]
to the room of my parent.

5 I adjure you, daughters of Jerusalem,
by the gazelles and hinds of the
field,
Do not arouse, do not stir up love
before its own time.[l]

Regal State of the Bridegroom

6 D What is this coming up from the desert,*
like a column of smoke
Laden with myrrh, with frankincense,
and with the perfume of every exotic dust?[m]

7 Ah, it is the litter of Solomon;
sixty valiant men surround it,
of the valiant men of Israel:

8 All of them expert with the sword,
skilled in battle,
Each with his sword at his side against danger in the watches of the night.

9 King Solomon made himself a carriage
of wood from Lebanon.

10 He made its columns of silver,
its roof of gold,
Its seat of purple cloth,
its framework inlaid with ivory.

11 Daughters of Jerusalem, come forth and look upon King Solomon
In the crown with which his mother has crowned him
on the day of his marriage,
on the day of the joy of his heart.

CHAPTER 4.

The Charms of the Beloved

1 G Ah, you are beautiful, my beloved,[n]
ah, you are beautiful!
Your eyes are doves[o]
behind your veil.
Your hair is like a flock of goats
streaming down the mountains of Galaad.

2 Your teeth* are like a flock of ewes
to be shorn,
which come up from the washing,
All of them big with twins,
none of them thin and barren.

3 Your lips are like a scarlet strand;
your mouth is lovely.
Your cheek is like a half-pomegranate*
behind your veil.

4 Your neck is like David's tower[p]
girt with battlements;

2, 15: A snatch of song in answer to the request of v 14; cf Ct 8, 13f. Foxes: all who threaten to disturb the security of love symbolized by the vineyard; cf v 16.

2, 17: Breathes cool: in the evening when the sun is going down. Cf Gn 3, 8. Bether: a very obscure word; some interpret it in the sense of ruggedness; others, of spices; still others, of sacrifice (Gn 15, 10).

3, 1ff: See the parallel in Ct 5, 2-8.

3, 6ff: The lover is portrayed as King Solomon, escorted by sixty armed men, coming in royal procession to meet his bride.

4, 2: Teeth: praised for whiteness and regularity.

4, 3: Pomegranate: a fruit somewhat like an orange, with a firm skin and deep red color. The girl's cheek is compared, in roundness and tint, to a half-pomegranate.

A thousand bucklers hang upon it,
all the shields of valiant men.*
5 Your breasts are like twin fawns,[q]
the young of a gazelle
that browse among the lilies.
6 Until the day breathes cool and the shadows lengthen,[r]
I will go to the mountain of myrrh,
to the hill of incense.*
7 You are beautiful, my beloved,
and there is no blemish in you.*

8 Come from Lebanon, my bride,
come from Lebanon, come!
Descend from the top of Amana,
from the top of Sanir and Hermon,*
From the haunts of lions,
from the leopards' mountains.
9 You have ravished my heart, my sister,* my bride;[s]
you have ravished my heart with one glance of your eyes,
with one bead of your necklace.

10 How beautiful is your love, my sister, my bride,[t]
how much more delightful is your love than wine,
and the fragrance of your ointments than all spices!
11 Your lips drip honey,* my bride,
and sweetmeats and milk are under your tongue;
And the fragrance of your garments
is the fragrance of Lebanon.

4, 7: Cf St. Paul's description of the Church in Eph 5, 27. This verse is also applied to Our Lady, especially in the Liturgy of the Feast of the Immaculate Conception.

4, 8: Amana . . . Sanir and Hermon: these rugged heights symbolize obstacles that would separate the lovers; cf Ct 2, 14.

4, 9: Sister: a term of endearment; it forms part of the conventional language of love used in the Canticle.

4, 11: Honey: sweet words. Cf Prv 5, 3.

4, 12: Enclosed garden . . . fountain sealed: reserved for the bridegroom alone. The bride's fidelity is implied. Cf Prv 5, 15-19.

4, 14: These plants are all known for their sweet scent.

4, 16: The last two lines of the verse are spoken by the girl, inviting her lover to herself, the garden.

5, 1: Eat, friends; drink!: the lovers are encouraged to enjoy the delights of their love, symbol of Christ's union with the Church.

5, 2-8: A trial similar to that in Ct 3, 1ff.

5, 3f: The bride's hesitation is due, not to levity, but to strong emotion.

The Lover and His Garden

12 G You are an enclosed garden, my sister, my bride,[u] an enclosed garden, a fountain sealed.*
13 You are a park that puts forth pomegranates,
with all choice fruits;
14 Nard and saffron, calamus and cinnamon,
with all kinds of incense;
Myrrh and aloes,
with all the finest spices.*
15 You are a garden fountain, a well of water flowing fresh from Lebanon.
16 Arise, north wind! Come, south wind!
blow upon my garden*
that its perfumes may spread abroad.

B Let my lover come to his garden
and eat its choice fruits.

CHAPTER 5.

1 G I have come to my garden, my sister, my bride;[v]
I gather my myrrh and my spices,
I eat my honey and my sweetmeats,
I drink my wine and my milk.

D Eat, friends; drink!* Drink freely of love!

A Fruitless Search

2 B I was sleeping, but my heart kept vigil;*
I heard my lover knocking:
"Open to me, my sister, my beloved,
my dove, my perfect one![w]
For my head is wet with dew,
my locks with the moisture of the night."
3 I have taken off my robe,*
am I then to put it on?
I have bathed my feet,
am I then to soil them?

4 My lover put his hand through the opening;
my heart trembled within me,
and I grew faint when he spoke.
5 I rose to open to my lover,
with my hands dripping myrrh:
With my fingers dripping choice myrrh
upon the fittings of the lock.

6 I opened to my lover—
but my lover had departed, gone.[x]
I sought him but I did not find him;
I called to him but he did not answer me.*

7 The watchmen came upon me[y]
as they made their rounds of the city;
They struck me, and wounded me,
and took my mantle from me,
the guardians of the walls.*

8 I adjure you, daughters of Jerusalem,[z]
if you find my lover—
What shall you tell him?—
that I am faint with love.

The Charms of the Lost Lover

9 D How does your lover differ from any other,
O most beautiful among women.
How does your lover differ from any other,
that you adjure us so?

10 B My lover is radiant and ruddy;*
he stands out among thousands.

11 His head is pure gold;
his locks are palm fronds.
black as the raven.

12 His eyes are like doves
beside running waters,
His teeth would seem bathed in milk,
and are set like jewels.

13 His cheeks are like beds of spice
with ripening aromatic herbs.
His lips are red blossoms;
they drip choice myrrh.

14 His arms are rods of gold adorned with chrysolites.
His body is a work of ivory covered with sapphires.

15 His legs are columns of marble resting on golden bases.
His stature is like the trees on Lebanon,
imposing as the cedars.

16 His mouth is sweetness itself;
he is all delight.
Such is my lover, and such my friend,
O daughters of Jerusalem.

CHAPTER 6.

Discovery

1 D Where has your lover gone,
O most beautiful among women?
Where has your lover gone
that we may seek him with you?*

2 B My lover has come down to his garden,*
to the beds of spice,
To browse in the garden[a]
and to gather lilies.

3 My lover belongs to me and I to him;
he browses among the lilies.[b]

The Charms of the Beloved

4 G You are as beautiful as Thersa, my beloved,*
as lovely as Jerusalem,
as awe-inspiring as bannered troops.

5 Turn your eyes from me,[c]
for they torment me.
Your hair is like a flock of goats
streaming down from Galaad.

6 Your teeth are like a flock of ewes[d]
which come up from the washing,
All of them big with twins,
none of them thin and barren.

7 Your cheek is like a half-pomegranate
behind your veil.

8 There are sixty queens, eighty concubines,
and maidens without number—

9 One alone is my dove, my perfect one,
her mother's chosen,
the dear one of her parent.
The daughters saw her and declared her fortunate,
the queens and concubines, and they sang her praises;

5, 6: The disappearance of the lover seems to be a deliberate trial and test inflicted on the girl.

5, 7: The watchmen do not know the reason for the girl's appearance in the city streets; cf Ct 3, 2ff.

5, 10f: In answer to the question of v 9, the girl sings her lover's praises (vv 10-16). Gold: indicates how precious the lover is. Palm fronds: his thick, luxuriant growth of hair.

6, 1: The daughters of Jerusalem are won by this description of the lover and offer their aid in seeking him.

6, 2f: Determined to share her lover with no one, the girl refuses the aid offered by the daughters in seeking him. She implies that she had never really lost him, for he has come down to his garden.

6, 4-9: The lover again celebrates her beauty. Thersa: probably meaning "pleasant"; it was the early capital of the Northern Kingdom of Israel (3 Kgs 16).

10 D Who is this that comes forth like the dawn,[e]
as beautiful as the moon, as resplendent as the sun,
as awe-inspiring as bannered troops?

Love's Meeting

11 B I came down to the nut garden [f]
to look at the fresh growth of the valley,
To see if the vines were in bloom,
if the pomegranates had blossomed.
12 Before I knew it, my heart had made me
the blessed one of my kinswomen.*

CHAPTER 7.

The Beauty of the Bride

1 D Turn, turn, O Sulamite,*
turn, turn, that we may look at you!
B Why would you look at the Sulamite
as at the dance of the two companies?

2 D How beautiful are your feet in sandals,*
O prince's daughter!
Your rounded thighs are like jewels,
the handiwork of an artist.

3 Your navel is a round bowl
that should never lack for mixed wine.
Your body is a heap of wheat
encircled with lilies.
4 Your breasts are like twin fawns,
the young of a gazelle.[g]
5 Your neck is like a tower of ivory.[h]
Your eyes are like the pools in Hesebon
by the gate of Bath-rabbim.
Your nose is like the tower on Lebanon that looks toward Damascus.*
6 Your head rises like Carmel;
your hair is like draperies of purple;
a king is held captive in its tresses.

Love's Desires

7 G How beautiful you are, how pleasing,
my love, my delight!
8 Your very figure is like a palm tree,*
your breasts are like clusters.
9 I said: I will climb the palm tree,
I will take hold of its branches.
Now let your breasts be like clusters of the vine
and the fragrance of your breath like apples, 10 And your mouth like an excellent wine—

Love's Union

11 I belong to my lover*
and for me he yearns.[i] 12 Come, my lover, let us go forth to the fields and spend the night among the villages.
13 Let us go early to the vineyards, and see if the vines are in bloom,
If the buds have opened,
if the pomegranates have blossomed;[j]
There will I give you my love.
14 The mandrakes* give forth fragrance,
and at our doors are all choice fruits;

6, 12: The text is obscure in Hebrew and in the ancient versions. The Vulgate reads: "I did not know; my soul disturbed me because of the chariots of Aminadab."

7, 1: Sulamite: so called either because the girl is considered to be from Sulam in the plain of Esdraelon (cf 3 Kgs 1, 3) or because the name may mean "the peaceful one," and thus recall the name of Solomon. As at the dance of the two companies: the meaning is uncertain. The question in this verse could be construed as a refusal to dance; more probably, however, the girl accedes, as the following verses suggest.

7, 2-6: A flattering description of the girl's charms. Rounded . . . jewels: the meaning of these Hebrew words is not certain. Wine and wheat are symbolic of fertility; they are here associated with parts of the body which have a close relation to fruitfulness.

7, 5: The comparison emphasizes the stateliness and whiteness of the neck, and the limpidity of the eyes. Bath-rabbim: a proper name which occurs only here; there was a city of Rabbah northeast of Hesebon in Transjordan. Cf Jer 49, 3.

7, 8f: Palm tree: a figure of stateliness. The bridegroom is eager to enjoy the possession of his bride.

7, 10: The bride delicately turns his compliment into an expression of the love and tenderness she feels for him.

7, 11-14: The girl's answer assures him of her affection and invites him to return with her to the rural delights which are associated with their love and which recall the meeting described in Ct 6, 11f.

7, 14: Mandrakes: herbs believed to have power to arouse love and promote fertility; cf Gn 30, 14ff.

Both fresh and mellowed fruits, my lover,
I have kept in store for you.

CHAPTER 8.

1 Oh, that you were my brother,
nursed at my mother's breasts!
If I met you out of doors, I would kiss you
and none would taunt me.
2 I would lead you, bring you in to the home of my mother.[k]
There you would teach me to give you spiced wine to drink, and pomegranate juice.
3 His left hand is under my head
and his right arm embraces me.[l]

4 I adjure you, daughters of Jerusalem,
by the gazelles and hinds of the field,
Do not arouse, do not stir up love,
before its own time.[m]

Homecoming

5 D Who is this coming up from the desert,[n]
leaning upon her lover?*

G Under the apple tree I awakened you;
it was there that your mother conceived you,
it was there that your parent conceived.

True Love

6 B Set me as a seal* on your heart,
as a seal on your arm;
For stern as death is love,
relentless as the nether world is devotion;
its flames are a blazing fire.
7 Deep waters cannot quench love,
nor floods sweep it away.
Were one to offer all he owns to purchase love,
he would be roundly mocked.

Chastity and Its Welcome

8 "Our sister is little*
and she has no breasts as yet.
What shall we do for our sister
when her courtship begins?
9 If she is a wall,
we will build upon it a silver parapet;
If she is a door,
we will reinforce it with a cedar plank."

10 I am a wall,
and my breasts are like towers.
So now in his eyes I have become one to be welcomed.

The Bride and Her Dowry

11 B Solomon had a vineyard at Baal-Hamon;*
he gave over the vineyard to caretakers.
For its fruit one would have to pay
a thousand silver pieces.
12 My vineyard is at my own disposal;
the thousand pieces are for you, O Solomon,
and two hundred for the caretakers of its fruit.

Life Together

13 G O garden-dweller,*
my friends are listening for your voice,
let me hear it!

14 B Be swift, my lover,
like a gazelle or a young stag
on the mountains of spices![o]

k Ct 3, 4.—l Ct 2, 6.—m Ct 2, 7; 3, 5.—n Ct 3, 6; 6, 10.—o Ct 2, 9. 17; 4, 6.

8, 5: The lovers are pictured walking homeward, enjoying the fulfillment of the desire which the girl expressed in vv 1f. The groom speaks of their first meeting.

8, 6f: Seal: this could be worn bound to the arm, as here, or suspended at the neck, or as a ring (Jer 22, 24). It was used for identification and signatures. Stern . . . relentless: in human experience, death and the nether world are inevitable, unrelenting; in the end they always triumph. Love, which is just as certain of its victory, matches its strength against the natural enemies of life; waters cannot extinguish it nor floods carry it away. It is more priceless than all riches.

8, 8ff: The bride affirms her chastity. In 8, 9 she quotes the course of action which her elder brothers had decided on. While she is yet immature, they will shelter her in view of eventual marriage. If she is virtuous she will be honored; if she is unchaste, she will be kept under strict vigilance. In reply to this she proclaims her virtue and boasts of having found welcome from her lover.

8, 11f: These enigmatic verses have been variously interpreted. In v 11 the girl alludes to a vineyard of great value which is compared to her own self in v 12. Her enormous dowry, a thousand silver pieces, is in keeping with her intrinsic worth. She has been the generous lover, giving herself and a dowry to her lover, referred to as Solomon, and also smaller gifts to her brothers, the caretakers (cf vv 8ff).

8, 13f: As in Ct 2, 14f, her lover asks for a word or a song and she replies in words similar to those found in Ct 2, 17.

THE BOOK OF WISDOM

The Book of Wisdom was written about a hundred years before the coming of Christ. Its author, whose name is not known to us, was a member of the Jewish community at Alexandria, in Egypt. He wrote in Greek, in a style patterned on that of Hebrew verse. At times he speaks in the person of Solomon, placing his teachings on the lips of the wise king of Hebrew tradition in order to emphasize their value. His profound knowledge of the earlier Old Testament writings is reflected in almost every line of the book, and marks him, like Ben Sirach, as an outstanding representative of religious devotion and learning among the sages of post-exilic Judaism.

The primary purpose of the sacred author was the edification of his co-religionists in a time when they had experienced suffering and oppression, in part at least at the hands of apostate fellow Jews. To convey his message he made use of the most popular religious themes of his time, namely the splendor and worth of divine wisdom (6, 22—11, 1), the glorious events of the Exodus (11, 2—12, 27; 15, 18—19, 22), the folly of idolatry (13, 1—15, 17), and the manner in which God's justice is vindicated in rewarding or punishing the individual soul (1, 1—6, 21). The first ten chapters especially form a close and intimate preparation for the fuller teachings of Christ and His Church. Many passages from this section of the book, notably 3, 1-8, are used by the Church in her liturgy.

I: THE REWARD OF JUSTICE

CHAPTER 1.

Justice Is the Key to Life. 1 Love justice,* you who judge the earth; think of the Lord in goodness, and seek him in integrity of heart; [a] 2 [b] because he is found by those who test him not, and he manifests himself to those who do not disbelieve him. 3 [c] For perverse counsels separate a man from God, and his power, put to the proof, rebukes the foolhardy; 4 [d] because into a soul that plots evil wisdom enters not, nor dwells she in a body under debt of sin. 5 [e] For the holy spirit of discipline* flees deceit and withdraws from senseless counsels; and when wickedness occurs it is rebuked. 6 [f] For wisdom is a kindly spirit, yet she acquits not the blasphemer of his guilty lips; because God is the witness of his inmost self and the sure observer of his heart and the listener to his tongue. 7 [g] For the spirit of the Lord fills the world, is all-embracing, and knows man's utterance.* 8 [h] Therefore no one who speaks wickedly can go unnoticed, nor will chastising condemnation pass him by. 9 For the devices of the wicked man shall be scrutinized, and the sound of his words shall reach the Lord, for the chastisement of his transgressions; 10 [i] because a jealous ear hearkens to everything, and discordant grumblings are no secret. 11 Therefore guard against profitless grumbling, and from calumny* withhold your tongues; for a stealthy utterance does not go unpunished, and a lying mouth slays the soul. 12 Court not death by your erring way of life, nor draw to yourselves destruction by the works of your hands. 13 [j] Because God did not make death, nor does he rejoice in the destruction of the living. 14 For he fashioned all things that they might have being; and the creatures of the world are wholesome, and there is not a destructive drug among them nor any domain of the nether world on earth, 15 [k] for justice is immortal. 16 [l] It was the wicked who with hands and words invited death, considered it a friend and pined for it; they made a covenant with it, because they deserve to be in its possession.

CHAPTER 2.

The Wicked Reject Immortality and Justice Alike. 1 For they said among themselves, thinking not aright: "Brief and troublous is our lifetime; [m] neither is there any remedy for man's dying, nor is anyone known to have come back from the nether world. 2 For haphazard were we born, and hereafter we shall be as though we had not been; because the breath in our nostrils is a smoke and reason is a spark at the beating of our hearts, [3] n and when this is quenched, our body will be ashes and our spirit will be poured abroad like unresisting air. [4] Even our name will be forgotten in time, and no one will recall our deeds. So our life will pass away like the traces of a cloud, and will be dispersed like a mist pursued by the sun's rays and overpowered by its heat. [5] o For our lifetime is the passing of a shadow; and our dying cannot be deferred because it is fixed with a seal; and no one returns. [6] p Come, therefore, let us enjoy the good things that are real, and use the freshness of creation avidly. [7] Let us have our fill of costly wine and perfumes, and let no springtime blossom pass us by. [8] Let us crown ourselves with rosebuds ere they wither; [9] q let no meadow be free from our wantonness.* Everywhere let us leave tokens of our rejoicing, for this our portion is, and this our lot. [10] r Let us oppress the needy just man; let us neither spare the widow nor revere the old man for his hair grown white with time. [11] But let our strength be our norm of justice; for weakness proves itself worthless. [12] Let us beset the just one, because he is obnoxious to us; he sets himself against our doings, reproaches us for transgressions of the Law and charges us with violations of our training.[s] [13] t He professes to have knowledge of God and styles himself a child of the Lord. [14] u To us he is the censure of our thoughts; merely to see him is a hardship for us, [15] because his life is not like other men's, and different are his ways. [16] v He judges us debased; he holds aloof from our paths as from things impure. He calls blest the destiny of the just and boasts that God is his Father. [17] w Let us see whether his words be true; let us find out what will happen to him. [18] x For if the just one be the son of God, he will defend him and deliver him from the hand of his foes. [19] With revilement and torture let us put him to the test that we may have proof of his gentleness and try his patience. [20] y Let us condemn him to a shameful death; for according to his own words, God will take care of him."

God's Plan Brings the Just to Glory after Trial. [21] z These were their thoughts, but they erred; for their wickedness blinded them, [22] a and they knew not the hidden counsels of God; neither did they count on a recompense of holiness nor discern the innocent souls' reward. [23] b For God formed man to be imperishable; the image of his own nature he made him. [24] c But by the envy of the devil, death entered the world, and they who are in his possession experience it.

CHAPTER 3.

[1] But the souls of the just are in the hand of God,[d] and no torment shall touch them.* [2] They seemed, in the view of the foolish, to be dead; and their passing away was judged an affliction [3] e and their going forth from us, utter destruction. But they are in peace. [4] For if before men, indeed, they be punished, yet is their hope full of immortality; [5] f chastised a little, they shall be greatly blessed, because God tried them and found them worthy of himself. [6] g As gold in the furnace, he proved them, and as sacrificial offerings* he took them to himself. [7] h In the time of their visitation* they shall shine, and shall dart about as sparks through stubble; [8] i they shall judge nations and rule over peoples, and the Lord shall be their King forever. [9] j Those who trust in him shall understand truth, and the faithful shall abide with him in love: because grace and mercy are with his chosen ones.

Even on Earth, the Just and Not the Wicked Are Blessed. [10] But the wicked shall receive a punishment to match their thoughts,* since they neglected justice and forsook the Lord. 11 k For he who despises wisdom and instruction is doomed. Vain is their hope, fruitless are their labors, and worthless are their works. 12 l Their wives are foolish and their children wicked; accursed is their brood. 13 Yes, blessed is she who, childless and undefiled, knew not transgression of the marriage bed; she shall bear fruit at the visitation of souls.* 14 m So also the eunuch whose hand wrought no misdeed, who held no wicked thoughts against the Lord—for he shall be given fidelity's choice reward* and a more gratifying heritage in the Lord's temple. 15 n For the fruit of noble struggles is a glorious one; and unfailing is the root of understanding. 16 o But the children of adulterers will remain without issue, and the progeny of an unlawful bed will disappear. 17 For should they attain long life, they will be held in no esteem, and dishonored will their old age be at last; 18 while should they die abruptly, they have no hope nor comfort in the day of scrutiny; 19 p for dire is the end of the wicked generation.

CHAPTER 4.

1 Better is childlessness with virtue; q for immortal is its memory: because both by God is it acknowledged, and by men.* 2 When it is present men imitate it, and they long for it when it is gone; and forever it marches crowned in triumph, victorious in unsullied deeds of valor. 3 r But the numerous progeny of the wicked shall be of no avail; their spurious offshoots shall not strike deep root nor take firm hold. 4 s For even though their branches flourish for a time, they are unsteady and shall be rocked by the wind and, by the violence of the winds, uprooted; 5 their twigs shall be broken off untimely, and their fruit be useless, unripe for eating, and fit for nothing. 6 For children born of lawless unions give evidence of the wickedness of their parents, when they are examined. 7 t But the just man, though he die early, shall be at rest. 8 u For the age that is honorable comes not with the passing of time, nor can it be measured in terms of years. 9 Rather, understanding is the hoary crown for men, and an unsullied life, the attainment of old age. 10 v He who pleased God was loved; he who lived among sinners was transported* — 11 w snatched away, lest wickedness pervert his mind or deceit beguile his soul; 12 x for the witchery of paltry things obscures what is right and the whirl of desire transforms the innocent mind. 13 Having become perfect in a short while, he reached the fullness of a long career; 14 y for his soul was pleasing to the Lord, therefore he sped him out of the midst of wickedness. But the people saw and did not understand; nor did they take this into account: 15 z That God's grace and mercy are with his holy ones and his care is with his elect. 16 a Yes, the just man dead condemns the sinful who live, and youth swiftly completed condemns the many years of the wicked man grown old. 17 For they see the death of the wise man and do not understand what the Lord intended for him, or why he made him secure. 18 b They see, and hold him in contempt; but the Lord laughs them to scorn. 19 c And they shall afterward become dishonored corpses and an unceasing mockery among the dead. For he shall strike them down speechless and prostrate and rock them to their foundations; they shall be utterly laid waste and shall be in grief and their memory shall perish.

The Final Judgment of the Wicked. 20 Fearful shall they come, at the counting up* of their misdeeds, and their trangressions shall convict them to their face.

CHAPTER 5.

1 Then shall the just one with great assurance stand before his oppressors who set at nought his labors.d 2 Seeing this, they shall be shaken with dreadful fear, and amazed at the unlooked-for salvation. 3 They shall say among themselves, rueful and groaning through anguish of spirit: "This is he whom once we held as a laughingstock and as a type for mockery, 4 fools that we were! His life we deemed madness, and his death dishonored. 5 e See how he is accounted among the sons of God; how his lot is with the saints! 6 f We,

then, have strayed from the way of truth,
and the light of justice did not shine for us, and the sun did not rise for us. 7 We had our fill of the ways of mischief and of ruin; we journeyed through impassable deserts, but the way of the Lord we knew not. 8 g What did our pride avail us?
What have wealth and its boastfulness afforded us? 9 h All of them passed like a shadow and like a fleeting rumor; 10 like a ship traversing the heaving water, of which, when it has passed, no trace can be found, no path of its keel in the waves.
11 Or like a bird flying through the air;
no evidence of its course is to be found
—but the fluid air, lashed by the beat of pinions, and cleft by the rushing force of speeding wings, is traversed: and afterward no mark of passage can be found in it. 12 Or as, when an arrow has been shot at a mark, the parted air straightway flows together again so that none discerns
the way it went through — 13 i even so we, once born, abruptly came to nought and had no sign of virtue to display, but were consumed in our wickedness." 14
j Yes, the hope of the wicked is like thistledown borne on the wind, and like fine, tempest-driven foam; like smoke scattered
by the wind, and like the passing memory of the nomad camping for a single day.
15 k But the just live forever, and in the Lord is their recompense, and the thought of them is with the Most High. 16 l Therefore shall they receive the splendid crown, the beauteous diadem, from the hand of the Lord—for he shall shelter them with his right hand, and protect them with his arm. 17 m He shall take his zeal for armor and he shall arm creation to requite the enemy; 18 he shall don justice for a breast-plate and shall wear sure judgment for a helmet; 19 n he shall take invincible rectitude as a shield 20 and whet his sudden anger for a sword, and the universe shall war with him against the foolhardy. 21
o Well-aimed shafts of lightnings shall go forth and from the clouds as from a well-drawn bow shall leap to the mark; 22 p and as from his sling, wrathful hailstones shall be hurled. The water of the sea shall be enraged against them and the streams shall abruptly overflow; 23 q a mighty wind shall come against them and winnow them out like the tempest; thus lawlessness shall lay the whole earth waste and evildoing overturn the thrones of potentates.

CHAPTER 6.

To the Mighty, Wisdom Offers True Kingship. 1 Hear, therefore, kings, and understand; r learn, you magistrates of the earth's expanse! 2 Hearken, you who rule the multitude and lord it over throngs of peoples! 3 s Because authority was given you by the Lord and sovereignty by the Most High, who shall probe your works and scrutinize your counsels! 4 Because,
though you were ministers of his kingdom, you judged not rightly, and did not keep the Law,* nor walk according to the will of God, 5 terribly and swiftly shall he come against you, because judgment is stern for the exalted—6 t for the lowly may be pardoned out of mercy but the mighty shall be mightily put to the test.
7 u For the Lord of all shows no partiality, nor does he fear greatness, because he himself made the great as well as the small, and he provides for all alike; 8 but for the powerful a rigorous scrutiny im-pends. 9 v To you, therefore, O princes, are my words addressed that you may learn wisdom and that you may not sin.
10 For those who keep the holy precepts hallowed shall be found holy, and those learned in them will have ready a response.* 11 Desire therefore my words;
long for them and you shall be instructed.
12 w Resplendent and unfading is Wisdom, and she is readily perceived by those who love her, and found by those who seek her. 13 x She hastens to make herself known in anticipation of men's desire. 14 He who watches for her at dawn shall not be disappointed, for he shall find her sitting by his gate. 15 For taking thought of her is the perfection of prudence, and he who for her sake keeps vigil shall quickly be free from care; 16

[y] because she makes her own rounds, seeking those worthy of her, and graciously appears to them in the ways, and meets them with all solicitude. [17] z For the first step toward discipline is a very earnest desire for her; then, care for discipline is love of her; [18] love means the keeping of her laws; to observe her laws is the basis for incorruptibility; [19] and incorruptibility makes one close to God; [20] thus the desire for Wisdom leads up to a kingdom. [21] If, then, you find pleasure in throne and scepter, you princes of the peoples, honor Wisdom, that you may reign forever.

II: PRAISE OF WISDOM BY SOLOMON

Solomon as the Model Lover of Wisdom. [22] a Now what Wisdom is, and how she came to be, I shall relate; and I shall hide no secrets from you, but from the very beginning I shall search out and bring to light knowledge of her, nor shall I diverge from the truth. [23] b Neither shall I admit consuming jealousy to my company, because that can have no fellowship with Wisdom. [24] c A great number of wise men is the safety of the world, and a prudent king, the stability of his people; [25] so take instruction from my words, to your profit.

CHAPTER 7.

[1] I too am a mortal man, like all the rest, d and a descendant of the first man formed of earth.* And in my mother's womb I was molded into flesh [2] in a ten-months' period*—body and blood, from the seed of man, and the pleasure that accompanies marriage. [3] And I too, when born, inhaled the common air, and fell upon the kindred earth; wailing, I uttered that first sound common to all. [4] In swaddling clothes and with constant care I was nurtured. [5] For no king has any different origin or birth, [6] e but one is the entry into life for all; and in one same way they leave it. [7] f Therefore I prayed, and prudence was given me; I pleaded, and the spirit of Wisdom came to me. [8] g I preferred her to scepter and throne, and deemed riches nothing in comparison with her. [9] Nor did I liken any priceless gem to her; because all gold, in view of her, is a little sand, and before her, silver is to be accounted mire. [10] h Beyond health and comeliness I loved her, and I chose to have her rather than the light, because the splendor of her never yields to sleep. [11] i Yet all good things together came to me in her company, and countless riches at her hands; [12] j and I rejoiced in them all, because Wisdom is their leader, though I had not known that she is the mother of these. [13] k Simply I learned about her, and ungrudgingly do I share—her riches I do not hide away; [14] for to men she is an unfailing treasure; those who gain this treasure win the friendship of God, to whom the gifts they have from discipline*[/] commend them.

Nature and Incomparable Dignity of Wisdom. [15] Now God grant I speak suitably and value these endowments at their worth: For he is the guide of Wisdom and the director of the wise. [16] l For both we and our words are in his hand, as well as all prudence and knowledge of crafts. [17] For he gave me sound knowledge of existing things, that I might know the organization of the universe and the force of its elements, [18] the beginning and the end and the midpoint of times, the changes in the sun's course and the variations of the seasons. [19] Cycles of years, positions of the stars, [20] natures of animals, tempers of beasts, powers of the winds and thoughts of men, uses of plants and virtues of roots—[21] such things as are secret I learned, and such as are plain; [22] m for Wisdom, the artificer of all, taught me. For in her is a spirit intelligent, holy, unique, manifold, subtle, agile, clear, unstained, certain, not baneful, loving the good, keen, unhampered, beneficent, [23] kindly, firm, secure, tranquil, all-powerful, all-seeing, and pervading all spirits, though they be intelligent, pure and very subtle. [24] n For Wisdom is mobile beyond all motion, and she penetrates and pervades all things by reason of her purity. [25] For she is an aura of the might of God and a pure effusion of the glory of the Almighty; therefore nought that is sullied enters into her. 26 o For she is the refulgence of eternal light, the spotless mirror of the power of God, the image of his goodness. 27 p And she, who is one, can do all things, and renews everything while herself perduring; and passing into holy souls from age to age, she produces friends of God and prophets. 28 For there is nought God loves, be it not one who dwells with Wisdom. 29 q For she is fairer than the sun and surpasses every constellation of the stars. Compared to light, she takes precedence; 30 for that, indeed, night supplants, but wickedness prevails not over Wisdom.

CHAPTER 8.

1 Indeed, she reaches from end to end* mightily and governs all things well.r

Fruits of Wisdom for Human Life. 2 s Her I loved and sought after from my youth; I sought to take her for my bride and was enamored of her beauty. 3 She adds to nobility the splendor of companionship with God; even the Lord of all loved her. 4 t For she is instructress in the understanding of God, the selector of his works. 5 u And if riches be a desirable possession in life, what is more rich than Wisdom, who produces all things? 6 v And if prudence renders service, who in the world is a better craftsman than she? 7 Or if one loves justice, the fruits of her works are virtues; for she teaches moderation and prudence, justice and fortitude,* and nothing in life is more useful for men than these. 8 w Or again, if one yearns for copious learning, she knows the things of old, and infers those yet to come. She understands the turns of phrases and the solutions of riddles; signs and wonders she knows in advance and the outcome of times and ages. 9 So I determined to draw her into fellowship, knowing that she would be my counselor while all was well, and my comfort in care and grief. 10 x For her sake I should have glory among the masses, and esteem from the elders, though I be but a youth. 11 I should become keen in judgment, and should be a marvel before rulers. 12 They would abide my silence and attend my utterance; and as I spoke on further, they would place their hands upon their mouths.* 13 y For her sake I should have immortality and leave to those after me an everlasting memory. 14 z I should govern peoples, and nations would be my subjects; 15 terrible princes, hearing of me, would be afraid. In the assembly I should appear noble, and in war courageous. 16 a Within my dwelling, I should take my repose beside her; for association with her involves no bitterness and living with her no grief, but rather joy and gladness.

Solomon Seeks Wisdom in Prayer to God. 17 b Thinking thus within myself, and reflecting in my heart that there is immortality in kinship with Wisdom, 18 and good pleasure in her friendship, and unfailing riches in the works of her hands, and that in frequenting her society there is prudence, and fair renown in sharing her discourses, I went about seeking to take her for my own. 19 *Now, I was a well-favored child, and I came by a noble nature; 20 or rather, being noble, I attained an unsullied body. 21 c And knowing that I could not otherwise possess her* except God gave it—and this, too, was prudence, to know whose is the gift—I went to the Lord and besought him, and said with all my heart:

judgment and of laws. 6 i Indeed, though one be perfect among the sons of men, if Wisdom, who comes from you, be not with him, he shall be held in no esteem. 7 j You have chosen me king over your people and magistrate for your sons and daughters. 8 k You have bid me build a temple on your holy mountain and an altar in the city that is your dwelling place, a copy of the holy tabernacle which you had established from of old. 9 l Now with you is Wisdom, who knows your works and was present when you made the world; who understands what is pleasing in your eyes and what is conformable with your commands. 10 m Send her forth from your holy heavens and from your glorious throne dispatch her that she may be with me and work with me, that I may know what is pleasing to you. 11 n For she knows and understands all things, and will guide me discreetly in my affairs and safeguard me by her glory; 12 o thus my deeds will be acceptable, and I shall judge your people justly and be worthy of my father's throne. 13 p For what man knows God's counsel, or who can conceive what the Lord intends? 14 For the deliberations of mortals are timid, and unsure are our plans. 15 q For the corruptible body burdens the soul and the earthen shelter weighs down the mind that has many concerns. 16 r And scarce do we guess the things on earth, and what is within our grasp we find with difficulty; but when things are in heaven, who can search them out? 17 s Or who ever knew your counsel, except you had given Wisdom and sent your holy spirit from on high? 18 t And thus were the paths of those on earth made straight, and men learned what was your pleasure, and were saved by Wisdom.

Wisdom Preserves Her Followers.* 1 She preserved the first-formed father* of the world when he alone had been created; u 2 v and she raised him up from his fall, and gave him power to rule all things. 3 w But when the unjust man* withdrew from her in his anger, he perished through his fratricidal wrath. 4 x When on his account the earth was flooded, Wisdom again saved it, piloting the just man* on frailest wood. 5 y She, when the nations were sunk in universal wickedness, knew the just man, kept him blameless before God, and preserved him resolute against pity for his child.* 6 z She saved the just man from among the wicked who were being destroyed, when he fled as fire descended upon Pentapolis* — 7 a where as a testimony to its wickedness, there yet remain a smoking desert, plants bearing fruit that never ripens, and the tomb of a disbelieving soul,* a standing pillar of salt. 8 For those who forsook Wisdom first were bereft of knowledge of the right, and then they left mankind a memorial of their folly—so that they could not even be hidden in their fall. 9 b But Wisdom delivered from tribulations those who served her. 10 c She, when the just man fled from his brother's anger, guided him in direct ways,* showed him the kingdom of God and gave him knowledge of holy things; she prospered him in his labors and made abundant the fruit of his works, 11 d stood by him against the greed of his defrauders, and enriched him; 12 e she preserved him from foes, and secured him against ambush, and she gave him the prize for his stern struggle that he might recognize that devotion to God* is mightier than all else. 13 f She did not abandon the just man when he was sold,* but delivered him from sin. 14 She went down with him into the dungeon, and did not desert him in his bonds, until she brought him the scepter of royalty and authority over his oppressors, showed those who had defamed him false, and gave him eternal glory. 15 g The holy people and blameless race—it was she who delivered them from the nation that oppressed them. 16 h She entered the soul of the Lord's servant, and withstood fearsome kings with signs and portents.* 17 i She gave the holy ones the recompense of their labors, conducted them by a wondrous road, and became a shelter for them by day and a starry flame by night. 18 She took them across the Red Sea and brought them through the deep waters— 19 but their enemies she overwhelmed, and cast them up* from the bottom of the depths. 20 j Therefore the just despoiled the wicked; and they sang, O Lord, your holy name and praised in unison your conquering hand—21 k because Wisdom opened the mouths of the dumb, and gave ready speech to infants.

1 She made their affairs prosper through the holy prophet.l

III: SPECIAL PROVIDENCE OF GOD DURING THE EXODUS

Water Benefits the Israelites and Punishes the Egyptians. 2 m They journeyed through the uninhabited desert, and in solitudes they pitched their tents.* 3 n They withstood enemies and took vengeance on their foes. 4 When they thirsted, they called upon you, and water was given them from the sheer rock, assuagement for their thirst from the hard stone. 5 o For by the things through which their foes were punished they in their need were benefited. 6 p Instead of a spring, when the perennial river* was troubled with impure blood 7 as a rebuke to the decree for the slaying of infants, you gave them abundant water in an unhoped-for way, 8 once you had shown by the thirst they then had how you punished their adversaries. 9 q For when they had been tried, though only mildly chastised, they recognized how the wicked, condemned in anger, were being tormented. 11 r Both those afar off and those close by were afflicted: 10 The latter you tested, admonishing them as a father; the former as a stern king you probed and condemned. 12 s For a twofold grief took hold of them and a groaning at the remembrance of the ones who had departed. 13 For when they heard that the cause of their own torments was a benefit to these others, they recognized the Lord. 14 t Him who of old had been cast out in exposure they indeed mockingly rejected; but in the end of events, they marveled at him, since their thirst proved unlike that of the just.

God's Mercy Shown Even in Punishment. 15 u And in return for their senseless, wicked thoughts, which misled them into worshiping dumb* serpents and worthless insects, you sent upon them swarms of dumb creatures for vengeance; 16 v that they might recognize that a man is punished by the very things through which he sins. 17 w For not without means was your almighty hand, that had fashioned the universe from formless matter, to send upon them a drove of bears or fierce lions, 18 or new-created, wrathful, unknown beasts to breathe forth fiery breath, or pour out roaring smoke, or flash terrible sparks from their eyes. 19 Not only could these attack and completely destroy them; even their frightful appearance itself could slay. 20 x Even without these, they could have been killed at a single blast, pursued by retribution and winnowed out by your mighty spirit; but you have disposed all things by measure and number and weight. 21 y For with you great strength abides always; who can resist the might of your arm? 22 z Indeed, before you the whole universe is as a grain from a balance,* or a drop of morning dew come down upon the earth. 23 a But you have mercy on all, because you can do all things; and you overlook the sins of men that they may repent. 24

[b] For you love all things that are and loathe nothing that you have made; for what you hated, you would not have fashioned. [25] [c] And how could a thing remain, unless you willed it; or be preserved, had it not been called forth by you? [26] [d] But you spare all things, because they are yours, O Lord and lover of souls, [1] [e] for your imperishable spirit is in all things!

CHAPTER 12.

[2] Therefore you rebuke offenders little by little, warn them, and remind them of the sins they are committing, that they may abandon their wickedness and believe in you, O Lord!

Punishment of the Chanaanites an Example of Mercy. [3] [f] For truly, the ancient inhabitants of your holy hand, [4] whom you hated for deeds most odious—works of witchcraft and impious sacrifices; [5] a cannibal feast of human flesh and of blood, from the midst of* . . . — these merciless murderers of children, [6] [g] and parents who took with their own hands defenseless lives, you willed to destroy by the hands of our fathers, [7] [h] that the land that is dearest of all to you might receive a worthy colony of God's children. [8] [i] But even on these, as they were men, you took pity, and sent wasps as forerunners of your army that they might exterminate them by degrees. [9] [j] Not that you could not have had the wicked vanquished in battle by the just, or wiped out at once by terrible beasts or by one decisive word; [10] [k] but condemning them bit by bit, you gave them space for repentance. You were not unaware that their race was wicked and their malice ingrained, and that their dispositions would never change; [11] [l] for they were a race accursed from the beginning. Neither out of fear for anyone did you grant amnesty for their sins. [12] [m] For who can say to you, "What have you done?" or who can oppose your decree? Or when peoples perish, who can challenge you, their maker; or who can come into your presence as vindicator of unjust men? [13] [n] For neither is there any god besides you who have the care of all, that you need show you have not unjustly condemned; [14] [o] nor can any king or prince confront you on behalf of those you have punished. [15] [p] But as you are just, you govern all things justly; you regard it as unworthy of your power to punish one who has incurred no blame. [16] [q] For your might is the source of justice; your mastery over all things makes you spare them all. [17] [r] For you show your might when the perfection of your power is disbelieved;* and in those who know you, you rebuke temerity. [18] But though you have might at your disposal, you judge with clemency, and with much lenience you govern us; for power, whenever you will, attends you. [19] [s] And you taught your people, by these deeds, that those who are just must be kind; and you gave your sons good ground for hope that you would permit repentance for their sins. [20] For these were enemies of your servants, doomed to death; yet, while you punished them with such solicitude and pleading, granting time and opportunity to abandon wickedness, [21] [t] with what exactitude you judged your sons, to whose fathers you gave the sworn covenants of goodly promises! [22] Us, therefore, you chastise, and our enemies with a thousand blows you punish, that we may think earnestly of your goodness when we judge, and, when being judged, may look for mercy.

Animals Punish the Egyptians. [23] [u] Hence those unjust also, who lived a life of folly, you tormented through their own abominations. [24] [v] For they went far astray in the paths of error, taking for gods the worthless and disgusting among beasts, deceived like senseless infants. [25] [w] Therefore as though upon unreasoning children, you sent your judgment on them as a mockery; [26] but they who took no heed of punishment which was but child's play were to experience a condemnation worthy of God. 27 x For in the things through which they suffered distress, since they were tortured by the very things they deemed gods, they saw and recognized the true God whom before they had refused to know; with this, their final condemnation came upon them.

IV: THE FOLLY AND SHAME OF IDOLATRY

CHAPTER 13.

Creatures Should Lead Men to God. 1 For all men were by nature foolish who were in ignorance of God,y and who from the good things seen did not succeed in knowing him who is,* and from studying the works did not discern the artisan; 2 z but either fire, or wind, or the swift air, or the circuit of the stars, or the mighty water, or the luminaries of heaven,* the governors of the world, they considered gods. 3 a Now if out of joy in their beauty they thought them gods, let them know how far more excellent is the Lord than these; for the original source of beauty fashioned them. 4 b Or if they were struck by their might and energy, let them from these things realize how much more powerful is he who made them. 5 For from the greatness and the beauty of created things their original author, by analogy, is seen. 6 But yet, for these the blame is less;* for they indeed have gone astray perhaps, though they seek God and wish to find him. 7 For they search busily among his works, but are distracted by what they see, because the things seen are fair. 8 But again, not even these are pardonable. 9 For if they so far succeeded in knowledge that they could speculate about the world, how did they not more quickly find its Lord?

Wooden Idols Are a Perversion of God's Creation. 10 c But doomed are they, and in dead things are their hopes, who termed gods the works of human hands: Gold and silver, the product of art, and likenesses of beasts, or useless stone, the work of an ancient hand. 11 d A carpenter may saw out a suitable tree and skillfully scrape off all its bark, and deftly plying his art, produce something fit for daily use, and use up the refuse from his handiwork in preparing his food, and have his fill; 13 e then the good-for-nothing refuse from these remnants, crooked wood grown full of knots, he takes and carves to occupy his spare time. This wood he models with listless skill, and patterns it on the image of a man 14 f or makes it resemble some worthless beast. When he has daubed it with red and crimsoned its surface with red stain, and daubed over every blemish in it, 15 g he makes a fitting shrine for it and puts it on the wall, fastening it with a nail. 16 h Thus lest it fall down he provides for it, knowing that it cannot help itself; for, truly, it is an image and needs help. 17 i But when he prays about his goods or marriage or children, he is not ashamed to address the thing without a soul. And for vigor he invokes the powerless; 18 and for life he entreats the dead; and for aid he beseeches the wholly incompetent, and about travel, something that cannot even walk. 19 And for profit in business and success with his hands he asks facility of a thing with hands completely inert.

CHAPTER 14.

1 Again, one preparing for a voyage and about to traverse the wild waves cries out to wood more unsound than the boat that bears him.j 2 For the urge for profits devised this latter, and Wisdom the artificer constructed it, 3 k but your providence, O Father! guides it, for you have furnished even in the sea a road, and through the waves a steady path, 4 l showing that you can save from any danger, so that even one without skill may embark. 5 m But you will that the products of your Wisdom be not idle; therefore men trust their lives even to frailest wood, and have been safe crossing the surge on a raft. 6 n For of old, when the proud giants were being destroyed, the hope of the universe, who took refuge on a raft,* left to the world a future for his race, under the guidance of your hand. 7 For blest is the wood through which justice is fulfilled;* [8] o but the handmade idol is accursed, and its maker as well: he for having produced it, and it, because though corruptible, it was termed a god. [9] Equally odious to God are the evildoer and his evil deed; [10] and the thing made shall be punished with its contriver. [11] p Therefore upon even the idols of the nations shall a visitation come, since they have become abominable amid God's works, snares for the souls of men and a trap for the feet of the senseless.

The Folly of Idolatry Leads to Moral Disorders. [12] q For the source of wantonness is preoccupation with idols; and their invention was a corruption of life. [13] r For in the beginning they were not, nor shall they continue forever; [14] for by the vanity of men they came into the world, and therefore a sudden end is planned for them. [15] For a father, afflicted with untimely mourning, made an image of the child so quickly taken from him, and now honored as a god what was formerly a dead man and handed down to his subjects mysteries and sacrifices. [16] s Then, in time, the impious practice gained strength and was observed as law, and graven things were worshiped by princely decrees. [17] Men who lived so far away that they could not honor him in his presence copied the appearance of the distant king and made a public image of him they wished to honor, out of zeal to flatter him when absent, as though present. [18] And to promote this observance among those to whom it was strange, the artisan's ambition provided a stimulus. [19] t For he, mayhap in his determination to please the ruler, labored over the likeness to the best of his skill; [20] u and the masses, drawn by the charm of the workmanship, soon thought he should be worshiped who shortly before was honored as a man. [21] And this became a snare for mankind, that men enslaved to either grief or tyranny conferred the incommunicable Name on stocks and stones. [22] v Then it was not enough for them to err in their knowledge of God; but even though they live in a great war of ignorance, they call such evils peace.w [23] x For while they celebrate either child-slaying sacrifices or clandestine mysteries, or frenzied carousals in unheard-of rites, [24] they no longer safeguard either lives or pure wedlock; but each either waylays and kills his neighbor, or aggrieves him by adultery. [25] y And all is confusion—blood and murder, theft and guile, corruption, faithlessness, turmoil, perjury, [26] disturbance of good men, neglect of gratitude, besmirching of souls, unnatural lust, disorder in marriage, adultery and shamelessness. [27] z For the worship of infamous idols is the reason and source and extremity of all evil. [28] a For they either go mad with enjoyment, or prophesy lies, or live lawlessly or lightly forswear themselves. [29] For as their trust is in soulless idols, they expect no harm from their false oaths. [30] b But on both counts shall justice overtake them: because they thought ill of God and devoted themselves to idols, and because they deliberately swore false oaths, despising piety.* [31] For not the might of those invoked but the retribution of sinners ever follows upon the transgression of the wicked.*

CHAPTER 15.

The Living God Contrasted with Dead Idols. [1] But you, our God, are good and true, slow to anger, and governing all with mercy.c [2] d For even if we sin, we are yours, and know your might; but we will not sin, knowing that we belong to you. [3] e For to know you well is complete justice, and to know your might is the root of immortality. [4] f For neither did the evil creation of men's fancy deceive us, nor the fruitless labor of painters, a design portrayed in varied colors, [5] the sight of which arouses yearning in the senseless man, till he longs for the inanimate form of a dead image. [6] g Lovers of evil things, and worthy of such hopes are they who make them and long for them and worship them. [7] h For truly the potter, laboriously working the soft earth, molds for our service each several article: both the vessels that serve for clean purposes and their opposites, all alike; as to what shall be the use of each vessel of either class the worker in clay is the judge. 8 i And with misspent toil he molds a meaningless god from the self-same clay; though he himself shortly before was made from the earth and after a little, is to go whence he was taken, when the life that was lent him is demanded back. 9 j But his concern is not that he is to die nor that his span of life is brief; rather, he vies with goldsmiths and silversmiths and emulates molders of bronze, and takes pride in modeling counterfeits. 10 k Ashes his heart is! more worthless than earth is his hope, and more ignoble than clay his life; 11 l because he knew not the one who fashioned him, and breathed into him a quickening soul, and infused a vital spirit. 12 m Instead, he esteemed our life a plaything, and our span of life a holiday for gain; "For one must," says he, "make profit every way, be it even out of evil." 13 For this man more than any knows that he is sinning, when out of earthen stuff he creates fragile vessels and idols alike. 14 n But all quite senseless, and worse than childish in mind, are the enemies of your people who enslaved them. 15 o For they esteemed all the idols of the nations gods, which have no use of the eyes for vision, nor nostrils to snuff the air, nor ears to hear, nor fingers on their hands for feeling; even their feet are useless to walk with. 16 p For a man made them; one whose spirit has been lent them fashioned them. For no man succeeds in fashioning a god like himself; 17 being mortal, he makes a dead thing with his lawless hands. For he is better than the things he worships; he at least lives, but never they.

V: PROVIDENCE DURING THE EXODUS

Animals Punish the Egyptians but Sustain the Israelites. 18 q And besides, they worship* the most loathsome beasts—for compared as to folly, these are worse than the rest,* 19 r nor for their looks are they good or desirable beasts, but they have fled both the approval of God and his blessing.

CHAPTER 16.

1 Therefore they* were fittingly punished by similar creatures, and were tormented by a swarm of insects.s 2 t As against this punishment, you benefited your people with a novel dish, the delight they craved, by providing quail for their food; 3 u that those others, when they desired food, since the creatures sent to plague them were so loathsome, should be turned from even the craving of necessities, while these, after a brief period of privation, partook of a novel dish. 4 v For upon those oppressors, inexorable want had to come; but these needed only be shown how their enemies were being tormented. 5 w For when the dire venom of beasts came upon them and they were dying from the bite of crooked serpents, your anger endured not to the end. 6 But as a warning, for a short time they were terrorized, though they had a sign* of salvation, to remind them of the precept of your Law. 7 For he who turned toward it was saved, not by what he saw, but by you, the savior of all. 8 x And by this also you convinced our foes that you are he who delivers from all evil. 9 y For the bites of locusts and of flies slew them, and no remedy was found to save their lives because they deserved to be punished by such means; 10 z but not even the fangs of poisonous reptiles overcame your sons, for your mercy brought the antidote to heal them. 11 a For as a reminder of your injunctions, they were stung, and swiftly they were saved, lest they should fall into deep forgetfulness and become unresponsive to your beneficence. 12 b For indeed, neither herb nor application cured them, but your all-healing word, O Lord! 13 c For you have dominion over life and death; you lead down to the gates of the nether world and lead back. 14 Man, however, slays in his malice, but when the spirit has departed, it does not return, nor can he

bring back the soul once it is confined.*

The Elements Punish the Egyptians but Serve the Israelites. 15 But your hand none can escape. 16 d For the wicked who refused to know you were punished by the might of your arm, pursued by unwonted rains and hailstorms and unremitting downpours, and consumed by fire. 17 e For against all expectation, in water which quenches anything, the fire grew more active; for the universe fights on behalf of the just. 18 f For now the flame was tempered so that the beasts might not be burnt up that were sent upon the wicked, but that these might see and know they were struck by the judgment of God; 19 and again, even in the water, fire blazed beyond its strength so as to consume the produce of the wicked land. 20 g As against this, you nourished your people with food of angels and furnished them bread from heaven, ready to hand, untoiled-for, endowed with all delights and conforming to every taste. 21 h For this substance of yours revealed your sweetness toward your children, and serving the desire of him who received it, was blended to whatever flavor each one wished. 22 i Yet snow and ice* withstood fire and were not melted, that they might know that their enemies' fruits were consumed by a fire that blazed in the hail and flashed lightning in the rain. 23 j But this fire, again, that the just might be nourished, forgot even its proper strength; 24 k for your creation, serving you, its maker, grows tense for punishment against the wicked, but is relaxed in benefit for those who trust in you. 25 Therefore at that very time, transformed in all sorts of ways, it was serving your all-nourishing bounty according to what they needed and desired; 26 l that your sons whom you loved might learn, O Lord, that it is not the various kinds of fruits that nourish man, but it is your word that preserves those who believe you! 27 m For what was not destroyed by fire, when merely warmed by a momentary sunbeam, melted; 28 n so that men might know that one must give you thanks before the sunrise, and turn to you at daybreak. 29 o For the hope of the ingrate melts like a wintry frost and runs off like useless water.

CHAPTER 17.

Darkness Afflicts the Egyptians, While the Israelites Have Light. 1 For great are your judgments, and hardly to be described; therefore the unruly souls were wrong.p 2 q For when the lawless thought to enslave the holy nation, shackled with darkness, fettered by the long night, they lay confined beneath their own roofs as exiles from the eternal providence. 3 r For they who supposed their secret sins were hid under the dark veil of oblivion were scattered in fearful trembling, terrified by apparitions. 4 For not even their inner chambers kept them fearless, for crashing sounds on all sides terrified them, and mute phantoms with somber looks appeared. 5 s No force, even of fire, was able to give light, nor did the flaming brilliance of the stars succeed in lighting up that gloomy night. 6 t But only intermittent, fearful fires* flashed through upon them; and in their terror they thought beholding these was worse than the times when that sight was no longer to be seen. 7 u And mockeries of the magic art were in readiness, and a jeering reproof of their vaunted shrewdness. 8 For they who undertook to banish fears and terrors from the sick soul themselves sickened with a ridiculous fear. 9 v For even though no monstrous thing frightened them, they shook at the passing of insects and the hissing of reptiles, 10 and perished trembling, reluctant to face even the air that they could nowhere escape. 11 w For wickedness, of its nature cowardly, testifies in its own condemnation, and because of a distressed conscience, always magnifies misfortunes. 12 For fear is nought but the surrender of the helps that come from reason; 13 and the more one's expectation is of itself uncertain, the more one makes of not knowing the cause that brings on torment. 14 So they, during that night, powerless though it was, that had come upon them from the recesses of a powerless* nether world, while all sleeping the same sleep, [15] x were partly smitten by fearsome apparitions and partly stricken by their soul's surrender; for fear came upon them, sudden and unexpected. [16] y Thus, then, whoever was there fell into that unbarred prison and was kept confined. [17] For whether one was a farmer, or a shepherd, or a worker at tasks in the wasteland, taken unawares, he served out the inescapable sentence; [18] z for all were bound by the one bond of darkness. And were it only the whistling wind, or the melodious song of birds in the spreading branches, or the steady sound of rushing water, [19] or the rude crash of overthrown rocks, or the unseen gallop of bounding animals, or the roaring cry of the fiercest beasts, or an echo resounding from the hollow of the hills, these sounds, inspiring terror, paralyzed them. [20] a For the whole world shone with brilliant light and continued its works without interruption; [21] over them alone was spread oppressive night, an image of the darkness that next should come upon them; yet they were to themselves more burdensome than the darkness.

CHAPTER 18.

[1] But your holy ones had very great light; and those others, who heard their voices but did not see their forms, since now they themselves had suffered, called them blest; [2] and because they who formerly had been wronged did not harm them, they thanked them, and pleaded with them, for the sake of the difference between them.* [3] b By contrast, you furnished the flaming pillar which was a guide on the unknown way, and the mild sun for an honorable migration. [4] c For those deserved to be deprived of light and imprisoned by darkness, who had kept your sons confined through whom the imperishable light of the Law was to be given to the world.

Death of the Egyptian Firstborn; the Israelites Are Spared. [5] d When they determined to put to death the infants of the holy ones, and when a single boy*
had been cast forth but saved, as a reproof you carried off their multitude of sons and destroyed them all at once in the mighty water. [6] e That night was known beforehand to our fathers, that,
with sure knowledge of the oaths in which they put their faith, they might have courage. [7] f Your people awaited the salvation of the just and the destruction of their foes. [8] g For when you punished
our adversaries, in this you glorified us whom you had summoned. [9] h For in secret the holy children of the good were offering sacrifice and putting into effect
with one accord the divine institution, that your holy ones should share alike
the same good things and dangers, having previously sung the praises of the fathers.* [10] i But the discordant cry of their enemies responded, and the piteous wail of mourning for children was borne to them. [11] j And the slave was smitten
with the same retribution as his master;
even the plebeian suffered the same as the king. [12] k And all together by a single death had countless dead; for the living were not even sufficient for the burial, since at a single instant their nobler offspring were destroyed. [13] l For though they disbelieved at every turn on account of sorceries, at the destruction of the first-born they acknowledged that the people* was God's son. [14] For when peaceful stillness compassed everything and the night
in its swift course was half spent, [15]
m your all-powerful word from heaven's royal throne bounded, a fierce warrior, into the doomed land, [16] n bearing the sharp sword of your inexorable decree.
And as he alighted, he filled every place
with death; he still reached to heaven,
while he stood upon the earth. [17] o Then,
forthwith, visions in horrible dreams perturbed them and unexpected fears assailed them; [18] and cast half-dead, one here, another there, each was revealing the reason for his dying. [19] For the dreams that disturbed them had proclaimed this beforehand, lest they perish

unaware of why they suffered ill. 20 p But the trial of death touched at one time even the just, and in the desert a plague struck the multitude; yet not for long did the anger last. 21 q For the blameless man* hastened to be their champion, bearing the weapon of his special office, prayer and the propitiation of incense; he withstood the wrath and put a stop to the calamity, showing that he was your servant. 22 r And he overcame the bitterness not by bodily strength, not by force of arms; but by word he overcame the smiter,* recalling the sworn covenants with their fathers. 23 s For when corpses had already fallen one on another in heaps, he stood in the midst and checked the anger, and cut off the way to the living. 24 t For on his full-length robe was the whole world, and the glories of the fathers were carved in four rows upon the stones, and your grandeur* was on the crown upon his head. 25 u To these names the destroyer yielded, and these he feared; for the mere trial of anger was enough.

CHAPTER 19.

1 But the wicked, merciless wrath assailed until the end. For he* knew beforehand what they were yet to do: v 2 w That though they themselves had agreed to the departure and had anxiously sent them on their way, they would regret it and pursue them.* 3 x For while they* were still engaged in funeral rites and were mourning at the burials of the dead, they adopted another senseless plan; and those whom they had sent away with entreaty, they pursued as fugitives. 4 For a compulsion suited to this ending drew them on, and made them forgetful of what had befallen them, that they might fill out the torments of their punishment, 5 and your people might experience a wondrous journey while those others met an extraordinary death.

Conclusion. 6 y For all creation, in its several kinds, was being made over anew, serving its natural laws, that your children might be preserved unharmed. 7 z The cloud overshadowed their camp; and out of what had before been water, dry land was seen emerging: out of the Red Sea an unimpeded road, and a grassy plain out of the mighty flood. 8 Over this crossed the whole nation sheltered by your hand, after they beheld stupendous wonders. 9 a For they ranged about like horses, and bounded about like lambs, praising you, O Lord! their deliverer. 10 b For they were still mindful of what had happened in their sojourn: how instead of the young of animals the land brought forth gnats, and instead of fishes the river swarmed with countless frogs. 11 c And later they saw also a new kind of bird when, prompted by desire, they asked for pleasant foods; 12 for to appease them quail came to them from the sea. 13 d And the punishments came upon the sinners only after forewarnings from the violence of the thunderbolts. For they justly suffered for their own misdeeds, since indeed they treated their guests with the more grievous* hatred. 14 e For those others did not receive unfamiliar visitors, but these were enslaving beneficent guests. 15 And not that only; but what punishment was to be theirs* since they received strangers unwillingly! 16 f Yet these, after welcoming them with festivities, oppressed with awful toils those who now shared with them the same rights. 17 g And they were struck with blindness, as those others had been at the portals of the just—when, surrounded by yawning darkness, each sought the entrance of his own gate. 18 For the elements, in variable harmony among themselves, like strings of the harp, produce new melody, while the flow of music steadily persists. And this can be perceived exactly from a review of what took place. 19 For land creatures were changed into water creatures, and those that swam went over on to the land. 20 h Fire in water maintained its own strength, and water forgot its quenching nature; 21 flames, by contrast, neither consumed the flesh of the perish-

THE BOOK OF SIRACH
(ECCLESIASTICUS)

The Book of Sirach derives its name from the author, Jesus, son of Eleazar, son of Sirach (50, 27). Its earliest title seems to have been "Wisdom of the Son of Sirach." The designation "Liber Ecclesiasticus," meaning "Church Book" appended to some Greek and Latin manuscripts was due to the extensive use which the Church made of this book in presenting moral teaching to catechumens and to the faithful.

The author, a sage who lived in Jerusalem, was thoroughly imbued with love for the Law, the priesthood, the temple, and divine worship. As a wise and experienced observer of life he addressed himself to his contemporaries with the motive of helping them to maintain religious faith and integrity through study of the holy books, and through tradition.

The book contains numerous maxims formulated with care, grouped by affinity, and dealing with a variety of subjects such as the individual, the family, and the community in their relations with one another and with God. It treats of friendship, education, poverty and wealth, the Law, religious worship, and many other matters which reflect the religious and social customs of the time.

Written in Hebrew between 200 and 175 B.C., the text was translated into Greek sometime after 132 B.C. by the author's grandson, who also wrote a Foreword which contains information about the book, the author, and the translator himself. Until the close of the nineteenth century Sirach was known only in translations, of which this Greek rendering was the most important. From it the Latin version was made. Between 1896 and 1900, and again in 1931, documents were discovered containing in all about two thirds of the Hebrew text, which agrees substantially with the Greek.

Though not included in the Hebrew Bible after the first century A.D., nor accepted by Protestants, the Book of Sirach has always been recognized by the Catholic Church as divinely inspired and canonical. The Foreword, though not inspired, is placed in the Bible because of its antiquity and importance.

The contents of Sirach are of a discursive nature and are not easily divided into separate parts. Chapters 1—43 deal with moral instruction; chapters 44, 1—50, 24 contain a eulogy of the fathers and of some of the patriarchs. There are also two appendices in which the author expresses his thanksgiving to God, and appeals to the unlearned to acquire true wisdom. The Church uses the Book of Sirach extensively in her liturgy.

FOREWORD

Many important truths have been handed down to us through the Law, the Prophets, and the later authors; and for these the instruction and wisdom of Israel merit praise. Now, those who are familiar with these truths must not only understand them themselves but, as lovers of wisdom, be able, in speech and in writing, to help others less familiar. Such a one was my grandfather, Jesus, who, having devoted himself for a long time to the diligent study of the Law, the Prophets, and the rest of the books[1] of our ancestors, and having developed a thorough familiarity with them, was moved to write something himself in the nature of instruction and wisdom, in order that those who love wisdom might, by acquainting themselves with what he too had written, make even greater progress in living in conformity with the Divine Law.

You therefore are now invited to read it in a spirit of attentive good will, with indulgence for any apparent failure on our part, despite earnest efforts, in the interpretation of particular passages. For words spoken originally in Hebrew are not as effective when they are translated into another language. That is true not only of this book but of the Law itself, the Prophets and the rest of the books, which differ no little when they are read in the original.

I arrived in Egypt in the thirty-eighth year of the reign of King Euergetes,[2] and while there, I found a reproduction of our valuable teaching.[3] I therefore considered myself in duty bound to devote some diligence and industry to the translation of this book. Many sleepless hours of close application have I devoted in the interval to finishing the book for publication, for the benefit of those living abroad who wish to acquire wisdom and are disposed to live their lives according to the standards of the Law.

THE WISDOM OF SIRACH

CHAPTER 1.

Praise of Wisdom.* 1 All wisdom* comes from the Lord [a] and with him it remains forever. 2 The sand of the seashore, the drops of rain, the days of eternity: who can number these? 3 Heaven's height, earth's breadth, the depths of the abyss: who can explore these? 4 Before all things else wisdom was created; and prudent understanding from eternity. 5 [b] To whom has wisdom's root been revealed? Who knows her subtleties? 6 There is but one, wise and truly awe-inspiring, seated upon his throne: 7 [c] It is the Lord; he created her, has seen her and taken note of her. 8 He has poured her forth upon all his works, upon every living thing according to his bounty; he has lavished her upon his friends.

9 Fear of the Lord is glory and splendor, gladness and a festive crown. 10 Fear of the Lord warms the heart, giving gladness and joy and length of days. 11 He who fears the Lord will have a happy end; even on the day of his death he will be blessed. 12 [d] The beginning of wisdom is the fear of the Lord, which is formed with the faithful in the womb. 13 With devoted men was she created from of old, and with her children her beneficence abides. 14 [e] Fullness of wisdom is fear of the Lord; she inebriates men with her fruits. 15 Her entire house she fills with choice foods, her granaries with her harvest. 16 [f] Wisdom's garland is fear of the Lord, with blossoms of peace and perfect health. 17 Knowledge and full understanding she showers down; she heightens the glory of those who possess her. 18 The root of wisdom is fear of the Lord; her branches are length of days.

19 *One cannot justify unjust anger; anger plunges a man to his downfall. 20 A patient man need stand firm but for a time, and then contentment comes back to him. 21 For a while he holds back his words, then the lips of many herald his wisdom. 22 Among wisdom's treasures is the paragon of prudence; but fear of the Lord is an abomination to the sinner. 23 If you desire wisdom, keep the commandments, and the Lord will bestow her upon you; 24 for fear of the Lord is wisdom and culture; loyal humility is his delight. 25 *Be not faithless to the fear of the Lord, nor approach it with duplicity of heart. 26 Play not the hypocrite before men; over your lips keep watch. 27 Exalt not yourself lest you fall and bring upon you dishonor; 28 for then the Lord will reveal your secrets and publicly cast you down, 29 because you approached the fear of the Lord with your heart full of guile.

Duties toward God. 1 My son, *when you come to serve the Lord, prepare yourself for trials.[g] 2 Be sincere of heart and steadfast, undisturbed in time of adversity. 3 Cling to him, forsake him not; thus will your future be great. 4 Accept whatever befalls you, in crushing misfortune be patient; 5 [h] for in fire gold is tested, and worthy men in the crucible of humiliation. 6 Trust God and he will help you; make straight your ways and hope in him.

7 You who fear the Lord, wait for his mercy, turn not away lest you fall. 8 You who fear the Lord, trust him, and your reward will not be lost. 9 You who fear the Lord, hope for good things, for lasting joy and mercy. 10 [i] Study the generations long past and understand; has anyone hoped in the Lord and been disappointed? Has anyone persevered in his fear and been forsaken? has anyone called upon him and been rebuffed? 11 Compassionate and merciful is the Lord; he forgives sins, he saves in time of trouble.

1, 1-8: The Lord is the source and preserver of wisdom (1); He created her from eternity, before all things else (4-7); all His works reflect wisdom (2f. 8).

1, 1: Wisdom: here the author speaks of true wisdom, namely God's external revelation of Himself. Throughout the book he describes in great detail just what wisdom is; sometimes it is divine; sometimes it is a synonym for God's Law; sometimes it is human. But the author makes clear that even human wisdom, properly understood, comes from God.

1, 9-18: Here are described the spiritual and temporal blessings that come during the lifetime of him who fears the Lord, i.e., practices true religion.

1, 9: Fear of the Lord: see note on Ps 110 (111), 10.

1, 19-22: The disciple of wisdom shuns unjust anger which brings downfall. By patience and self-control he preserves calm, recovers contentment, and receives public praise. The sinner, on the contrary, despises the restraints which religion imposes.

1, 25-29: Infidelity to religion, or the use of it for any but the single purpose of serving God, is hypocrisy and self-exaltation, deserving of public disgrace.

2, 1-11: Serving God is not without its trials (1); moreover, it must be done with sincerity, steadfastness and fidelity (2f). Misfortune and humiliation merely purify man and prove his worth (4f). Patience and unwavering trust in God are always rewarded with the benefits of God's mercy and of lasting joy (6-11).

12 *Woe to craven hearts and drooping hands, to the sinner who treads a double path! 13 Woe to the faint of heart who trust not, who therefore will have no shelter! 14 Woe to you who have lost hope! what will you do at the visitation of the Lord? 15 i Those who fear the Lord disobey not his words; those who love him keep his ways. 16 Those who fear the Lord seek to please him, those who love him are filled with his law. 17 Those who fear the Lord prepare their hearts and humble themselves before him. 18 k Let us fall into the hands of the Lord and not into the hands of men, for equal to his majesty is the mercy that he shows.

CHAPTER 3.

Duties toward Parents.* 1 Children, pay heed to a father's right; do so that you may live. 2 For the Lord sets a father in honor over his children; a mother's authority he confirms over her sons. 3 He who honors his father atones for sins; 4 he stores up riches who reveres his mother. 5 He who honors his father is gladdened by children, and when he prays he is heard. 6 He who reveres his father will live a long life; and he obeys the Lord who brings comfort to his mother.

7 He who fears the Lord honors his father, and serves his parents as rulers. 8 l In word and deed honor your father that his blessing may come upon you; 9 m for a father's blessing gives a family firm roots, but a mother's curse uproots the growing plant.

10 Glory not in your father's shame, for his shame is no glory to you! 11 His father's honor is a man's glory; disgrace for her children, a mother's shame. 12 n My son, take care of your father when he is old; grieve him not as long as he lives. 13 Even if his mind fail, be considerate with him; revile him not in the fullness of your strength. 14 For kindness to a father will not be forgotten, it will serve as a sin offering—it will take lasting root. 15 In time of tribulation it will be recalled to your advantage, like warmth upon frost it will melt away your sins. 16 o A blasphemer is he who despises his father; accursed of his Creator, he who angers his mother.

Humility.* 17 My son, conduct your affairs with humility, and you will be loved more than a giver of gifts. 18 p Humble yourself the more, the greater you are, and you will find favor with God. 19 For great is the power of God; by the humble he is glorified.* 20 q What is too sublime for you, seek not, into things beyond your strength search not. 21 What is committed to you, attend to; for what is hidden is not your concern.

22 With what is too much for you meddle not, when shown things beyond human understanding. 23 Their own opinion has misled many, and false reasoning unbalanced their judgment. 24 Where the pupil of the eye is missing, there is no light, and where there is no knowledge, there is no wisdom.

25 A stubborn man will fare badly in the end, and he who loves danger will perish in it. 26 A stubborn man will be burdened with sorrow; a sinner will heap sin upon sin. 27 r For the affliction of the proud man there is no cure; he is the offshoot of an evil plant. 28 The mind of a sage appreciates proverbs, and an attentive ear is the wise man's joy.

Alms for the Poor.* 29 s Water quenches a flaming fire, and alms atone for sins. 30 He who does a kindness is remembered afterward; when he falls, he finds a support.

CHAPTER 4.

1 My son, rob not the poor man of his livelihood: force not the eyes of the needy* to turn away.t 2 A hungry man grieve not, a needy man anger not; 3 do not exasperate the downtrodden; delay not to give to the needy. 4 A beggar in

2, 12-18: A warning to those who compromise their religion in time of affliction; they fail in courage and trust and therefore have no security (12ff). But those who fear the Lord through obedience, reverence, love and humility find His mercy equal to His majesty (15-18).

3, 1-16: Besides the virtues that must characterize our conduct toward God, special duties toward our neighbor are enjoined, such as honor and respect toward parents, with corresponding blessings (1-9). Even to old and infirm parents this respect is due (10-13); through it, the sins of children are pardoned (14f). Failure to render respect is blasphemy and merits a curse from God (16). Cf Ex 20, 12; Eph 6, 2f.

3, 17-27: Humility gives a true estimate of self (17ff). Through it a man performs duty, avoids what is beyond his understanding and strength (20ff). Pride, however, begets false greatness, misjudgment, stubbornness, sorrow, affliction and perdition (23-27).

3, 19: An alternate or additional line would read: "For though many have been great in the course of time, it is to the humble he reveals his secrets." Cf Mt 11, 25f; 1 Cor 1, 26-29.

3, 29—4, 10: Mercy and kindness toward those in misfortune atone for sin and endear a man to God and to his fellow men.

4, 1: Eyes of the needy: when they look for help; cf Sir 18, 17.

distress do not reject; avert not your face from the poor. 5 From the needy turn not your eyes, give no man reason to curse you; 6 for if in the bitterness of his soul he curse you, his Creator will hear his prayer. 7 Endear yourself to the assembly; before a ruler bow your head. 8 Give a hearing to the poor man, and return his greeting with courtesy; 9 deliver the oppressed from the hand of the oppressor; let not justice be repugnant to you. 10 To the fatherless be as a father, and help their mother as a husband would; thus will you be like a son to the Most High, and he will be more tender to you than a mother.

The Rewards of Wisdom.* 11 Wisdom instructs her children and admonishes those who seek her. 12 He who loves her loves life; those who seek her out win her favor. 13 He who holds her fast inherits glory; wherever he dwells, the Lord bestows blessings. 14 u Those who serve her serve the Holy One; those who love her the Lord loves. 15 He who obeys her judges nations; he who hearkens to her dwells in her inmost chambers. 16 If one trusts her, he will possess her; his descendants too will inherit her. 17 She walks with him as a stranger, and at first she puts him to the test; fear and dread she brings upon him and tries him with her discipline; with her precepts she puts him to the proof, until his heart is fully with her. 18 Then she comes back to bring him happiness and reveals her secrets to him. 19 But if he fails her, she will abandon him and deliver him into the hands of despoilers.

Sincerity and Justice.* 20 Use your time well; guard yourself from evil, and bring upon yourself no shame. 21 There is a sense of shame laden with guilt, and a shame that merits honor and respect. 22 Show no favoritism to your own discredit; revile no one to your own downfall. 23 Refrain not from speaking at the proper time, and hide not away your wisdom; 24 for it is through speech that wisdom becomes known, and knowledge through the tongue's rejoinder. 25 Never gainsay the truth, and struggle not against the rushing stream. 26 Be not ashamed to acknowledge your guilt, but of your ignorance rather be ashamed. 27 Do not abase yourself before an impious man, nor refuse to do so before rulers. 28 Even to the death fight for truth, and the Lord your God will battle for you. 29 Be not surly in your speech, nor lazy and slack in your deeds. 30 Be not a lion at home, nor sly and suspicious at work. 31 Let not your hand be open to receive and clenched when it is time to give.

CHAPTER 5.

Against Presumption.* 1 Rely not on your wealth; say not: "I have the power." v 2 Rely not on your strength in following the desires of your heart. 3 Say not: "Who can prevail against me?" for the Lord will exact the punishment. 4 Say not: "I have sinned, yet what has befallen me?" for the Lord bides his time. 5 Of forgiveness be not overconfident, adding sin upon sin. 6 Say not: "Great is his mercy; my many sins he will forgive." 7 For mercy and anger alike are with him; upon the wicked alights his wrath. 8 Delay not your conversion to the Lord, put it not off from day to day; 9 for suddenly his wrath flames forth; at the time of vengeance, you will be destroyed. 10 w Rely not upon deceitful wealth, for it will be no help on the day of wrath.

Sincerity in Speech. 11 Winnow not in every wind, and start not off in every direction.* 12 Be consistent in your thoughts; steadfast be your words.* 13 x Be swift to hear, but slow to answer. 14 If you have the knowledge, answer your neighbor; if not, put your hand over your mouth. 15 Honor and dishonor through talking! A man's tongue can be his downfall. 16 Be not called a detractor; use not u Wis 7, 28.—v Lk 12, 19.—w Prv 10, 2; 11, 4. 28.—x Prv 29, 20; Jas 1, 19.

4, 11-19: The Hebrew text presents wisdom speaking in the first person, as in Chapter 24. The precious fruits of wisdom: life, favor, glory, blessings, God's love, are intended to arouse desire for her (11-14). Her disciples are like priests (14) and judges (15), even partners who possess her for themselves and their descendants (16). They enjoy happiness and penetrate her profound secrets after surviving her tests (17f). Those who fail her are abandoned to destruction (19).

4, 20-31: Besides the interior trials of discipline and precept, the disciple of wisdom is warned against external dangers to his sincerity and justice, namely evil, human respect (20f), compromise of liberty in speech and action (22-25), false shame, and ignorance (26). He must fight for the truth (28), and avoid cynicism and laziness (29), and inconsistency in his conduct (30).

5, 1-10: The vices of the rich are pride and independence (1f), presumption (3), false security (4-7), and impenitence (8), which cannot escape the divine wrath (9f). Cf Prv 18, 23; 19, 1; 28, 6.

5, 11: A proverbial expression condemning inconstancy and advocating sincerity and honesty.

5, 12–6, 1: Proper use of the tongue requires constancy in speech (5, 12), prudence (13f), reserve (15), charity (6, 1) as well as the avoidance of detraction, calumny (16) and double talk, which bring shame and disgrace (5, 17; 6, 1).

your tongue for calumny; [17] for shame has been created for the thief, and the reproach of his neighbor for the double-tongued.

CHAPTER 6.

[1] Say nothing harmful, small or great; be not a foe instead of a friend; a bad name and disgrace will you acquire: "That for the evil man with double tongue!"*

[2] y Fall not into the grip of desire, lest, like fire, it consumes your strength; [3] your leaves it will eat, your fruits destroy, and you will be left a dry tree, [4] for contumacious desire destroys its owner and makes him the sport of his enemies.

True Friendship.* [5] A kind mouth multiplies friends, and gracious lips prompt friendly greetings. [6] Let your acquaintances be many, but one in a thousand your confidant. [7] z When you gain a friend, first test him, and be not too ready to trust him. [8] For one sort of friend is a friend when it suits him, but he will not be with you in time of distress. [9] Another is a friend who becomes an enemy, and tells of the quarrel to your shame. [10] Another is a friend, a boon companion, who will not be with you when sorrow comes. [11] When things go well, he is your other self, and lords it over your servants; [12] but if you are brought low, he turns against you and avoids meeting you. [13] Keep away from your enemies; be on your guard with your friends. [14] A faithful friend is a sturdy shelter; he who finds one finds a treasure. [15] A faithful friend is beyond price, no sum can balance his worth. [16] A faithful friend is a life-saving remedy, such as he who fears God finds; [17] for he who fears God behaves accordingly, and his friend will be like himself.

Blessings of Wisdom.* [18] My son, from your youth embrace discipline: thus will you find wisdom with graying hair. [19] As though plowing and sowing, draw close to her; then await her bountiful crops. [20] For in cultivating her you will labor but little, and soon you will eat of her fruits. [21] How irksome she is to the unruly! The fool cannot abide her. [22] She will be like a burdensome stone to test him, and he will not delay in casting her aside. [23] For discipline* is like her name, she is not accessible to many.

[32] My son, if you wish, you can be taught; if you apply yourself, you will be shrewd. [33] If you are willing to listen, you will learn; if you give heed, you will be wise. [34] Frequent the company of the elders; whoever is wise, stay close to him. [35] b Be eager to hear every godly discourse; let no wise saying escape you. [36] If you see a man of prudence, seek him out; let your feet wear away his doorstep! [37] c Reflect on the precepts of the Lord, let his commandments be your constant meditation; then he will enlighten your mind, and the wisdom you desire he will grant.

CHAPTER 7.

Conduct in Public Life.* Do no evil, and evil will not overtake you; [2] avoid wickedness and it will turn aside from you. [3] d Sow not in the furrows of injustice, lest you harvest it sevenfold. [4] Seek not from the Lord authority, nor from the king a place of honor. [5] e Parade not your justice before the Lord, and before the king flaunt not your wisdom. [6] Seek not to become a judge if you have not strength

6, 1: "That . . . double tongue!": people will say this against the man whose deceitful tongue has brought him to disgrace.

6, 5-17: True friends are discerned not by prosperity (11) but through the trials of adversity: distress, quarrels (9), sorrow (10) and misfortune (12). Such friends are rare and their value is beyond estimation, a gift from God (14-17).

6, 18-37: The various figures in each of the three strophes urge the search for wisdom through patience (19-23), docility (32-37), and perseverance in trials (25ff), promising rich rewards (28-31). Cf Sir 4, 11-19.

6, 23: Discipline, musar, in the sense of wisdom is a perfect homonym for musar, "removed, withdrawn"; thus the path of discipline is inaccessible to many.

6, 31: Some forms of the text speak also of the "yoke" of wisdom under the imagery of golden ornaments.

7, 1-17: In the conduct of social relations wisdom forbids evil and injustice (1ff), pride (5, 15ff), ambition and human respect (4. 6), public disgrace (7), presumption and impatience toward God (9f), ridicule (11), mischief and deceit toward one's neighbor (8. 12f).

to root out crime, or you will show favor to the ruler and mar your integrity. 7 Be guilty of no evil before the city's populace, nor disgrace yourself before the assembly. 8 Do not plot to repeat a sin; not even for one will you go unpunished. 9 f Say not: "He will appreciate my many gifts; the Most High will accept my offerings." 10 Be not impatient in prayers, and neglect not the giving of alms. 11 Laugh not at an embittered man; be mindful of him who exalts and humbles.* 12 Plot no mischief against your brother, nor against your friend and companion. 13 Delight not in telling lie after lie, for it never results in good. 14 g Thrust not yourself into the deliberations of princes, and repeat not the words of your prayer.* 15 h Hate not laborious tasks, nor farming, which was ordained by the Most High. 16 Do not esteem yourself better than your fellows; remember, his wrath will not delay. 17 i More and more, humble your pride; what awaits man is worms.

Duties of Family Life, Religion and Charity.* 18 Barter not a friend for money, nor a dear brother for the gold of Ophir.* 19 Dismiss not a sensible wife; a gracious wife is more precious than corals. 20 j Mistreat not a servant who faithfully serves, nor a laborer who devotes himself to his task. 21 Let a wise servant be dear to you as your own self; refuse him not his freedom.* 22 If you have livestock, look after them; if they are dependable, keep them. 23 k If you have sons, chastise them; bend their necks* from childhood. 24 l If you have daughters, keep them chaste, and be not indulgent to them. 25 m Giving your daughter in marriage ends a great task; but give her to a worthy man. 26 If you have a wife, let her not seem odious to you; but where there is ill-feeling, trust her not. 27 n With your whole heart honor your father; your mother's birthpangs forget not. 28 Remember, of these parents you were born; what can you give them for all they gave you? 29 With all your soul fear God, revere his priests. 30 With all your strength, love your Creator, forsake not his ministers. 31 o Honor God and respect the priest; give him his portion as you have been commanded: first fruits and contributions, due sacrifices and holy offerings.* 32 To the poor man also extend your hand, that your blessing may be complete; 33 be generous to all the living, and withhold not your kindness from the dead;* 34 p avoid not those who weep, but mourn with those who mourn; 35 q neglect not to visit the sick—for these things you will be loved. 36 In whatever you do, remember your last days, and you will never sin.

7, 18-36: The duties of respect and appreciation, justice and kindness should characterize relations toward members of the household (18-28), and also toward God and His priests (29ff), the poor and afflicted, the living and the dead (32-36).

7, 23: Bend their necks: keep them from rebellious pride; so with the Greek. Cf Sir 30, 12. The present Hebrew text, which is probably not original here, reads: "Choose wives for them while they are young."

7, 31: First fruits . . . holy offerings: cf Ex 29, 27; Lv 7, 31-34; Nm 18, 8-20; Dt 18, 1-5.

7, 33: This seems to refer to the observances ordained toward the dead, that is, proper mourning and burial. Cf 2 Kgs 21, 12ff; Tb 1, 20; 12, 12. When this verse is read in the light of 2 Mc 12, 43ff, prayers for the souls of the deceased would also be recommended.

8, 1-19: A prudent man will be circumspect, avoiding conflict with the powerful, the rich and insolent, the impious, the irascible and with judges (1ff. 10ff. 14. 16). He will seek friendship not with the undisciplined (4. 12f) and the ruthless (15), nor with fools and strangers (17ff), but with the wise and the ancients of the people (8f).

8, 5: We all are guilty: cf 3 Kgs 8, 46; 2 Par 6, 36; Eccl 7, 20; Rom 3, 9; 1 Jn 1, 8.

CHAPTER 8.

Prudence in Dealing with Other Men.* 1 Contend not with an influential man, lest you fall into his power. 2 r Quarrel not with a rich man, lest he pay out the price of your downfall; for gold has dazzled many, and perverts the character of princes. 3 s Dispute not with a man of railing speech, heap no wood upon his fire. 4 Be not too familiar with an unruly man, lest he speak ill of your forebears. 5 t Shame not a repentant sinner; remember, we all are guilty.* 6 Insult no man when he is old, for some of us, too, will grow old. 7 Rejoice not when a man dies; remember, we are all to die. 8 u Spurn not the discourse of the wise, but acquaint yourself with their proverbs; from them you will acquire the training to serve in the presence of princes. 9 Reject not the tradition of old men which they have learned from their fathers; from it you will obtain the knowledge how to answer in time of need. 10 Kindle not the coals of a sinner, lest you be consumed in his flaming fire. 11 Let not the impious man intimidate you; it will set him in ambush against you.* 12 v Lend not to one more powerful than yourself; and whatever you lend, count it as lost. 13 Go not surety beyond your means; think any pledge a debt you must pay. 14 Contend not at law with a judge, for he will settle it according to his whim. 15 Travel not with a ruthless man, lest he weigh you down with calamity; for he will go his own way straight, and through his folly you will perish with him. 16 Provoke no quarrel with a quick-tempered man, nor ride with him through the desert; for bloodshed is nothing to him, and when there is no one to help you, he will destroy you.

17 Take no counsel with a fool, for he can keep nothing to himself. 18 w Before a stranger do nothing that should be kept secret, for you know not what it will engender. 19 Open your heart to no man, and banish not your happiness.

CHAPTER 9.

Advice concerning Women.* 1 Be not jealous of the wife of your bosom, lest you teach her to do evil against you.* 2 x Give no woman power over you to trample upon your dignity. 3 Be not intimate with a strange woman, lest you fall into her snares. 4 With a singing girl be not familiar, lest you be caught in her wiles. 5 Entertain no thoughts against a virgin, lest you be enmeshed in damages for her.* 6 y Give not yourself to harlots, lest you surrender your inheritance. 7 Gaze not about the lanes of the city and wander not through its squares; 8 z avert your eyes from a comely woman; gaze not upon the beauty of another's wife—through woman's beauty many perish, for lust for it burns like fire. 9 With a married woman dine not, recline not at table to drink by her side, lest your heart be drawn to her and you go down in blood to the grave.

Choice of Friends.* 10 Discard not an old friend, for the new one cannot equal him. A new friend is like new wine which you drink with pleasure only when it has aged. 11 Envy not a sinner's fame, for you know not what disaster awaits him. 12 Rejoice not at a proud man's success; remember he will not reach death unpunished. 13 Keep far from the man who has power to kill, and you will not be filled with the dread of death. But if you approach him, offend him not, lest he take away your life; know that you are stepping among snares and walking over a net. 14 As best you can, take your neighbors' measure, and associate with the wise. 15 With the learned be intimate; let your conversation be about the Law of the Lord. 16 Have just men for your table companions; in the fear of God be your glory.

Concerning Rulers.* 17 Skilled artisans are esteemed for their deftness; but the ruler of his people is the skilled sage. 18 Feared in the city is the man of railing speech, and he who talks rashly is hated.

CHAPTER 10.

1 a A wise magistrate lends stability to his people, and the government of a prudent man is well ordered.* 2 b As the people's judge, so are his ministers; as the head of a city, its inhabitants. 3 c A wanton king destroys his people, but a city grows through the wisdom of its princes. 4 Sovereignty over the earth is in the hand of God, who raises up on it the man of the hour; 5 sovereignty over every man is in the hand of God, who imparts his majesty to the ruler.

The Sin of Pride.* 6 d No matter the wrong, do no violence to your neighbor, and do not walk the path of arrogance. 7 Odious to the Lord and to men is arrogance, and the sin of oppression they both

8, 11: To give in to the wicked in one instance becomes an occasion of sin for the future.

9, 1-9: Prudence and reserve in dealing with women are the best defense of morality. To preserve the liberty and dignity of his person and the integrity of his possessions, a man must avoid jealousy toward his own wife and familiarity toward all other women. Cf Sir 25, 12—26, 18.

9, 1: Unjust suspicions often engender hatred between husband and wife and may prompt a wife to commit those faults of which heretofore she had been innocent.

9, 5: Cf Ex 22, 15f; Dt 22, 28f.

9, 10-16: In social relations, adherence to the Law of the Lord should serve as a guide (15). Associate with true friends (10), with the just and the learned (14ff); disregard the fame of the mighty and of sinners doomed to punishment (11ff). Cf Sir 8, 1-19.

9, 17—10, 5: Public office as conducted justly or unjustly benefits or destroys the people, according to the axiom, "as the prince, so the people." Cf Is 24, 2. God, however, has sovereignty over both.

10, 6-18: Glory displayed through arrogance and pride is false and displeasing to God and men, because founded on dust and ashes (6-11). It is the denial of the glory due to God, and therefore the source of all sin (12f). Even the memory of the proud is destroyed and God transfers their power to the lowly (14-18).

hate. [8] Dominion is transferred from one people to another because of the violence of the arrogant. [9] Why are dust and ashes proud? even during life man's body decays;* [10] a slight illness—the doctor jests, a king today—tomorrow he is dead. [11] e When a man dies, he inherits corruption; worms and gnats and maggots. [12] The beginning of pride is man's stubbornness in withdrawing his heart from his Maker; [13] f for pride is the reservoir of sin, a source which runs over with vice; because of it God sends unheard-of afflictions and brings men to utter ruin. [14] The thrones of the arrogant God overturns and establishes the lowly in their stead. [15] The roots of the proud God plucks up, to plant the humble in their place: [16] He breaks down their stem to the level of the ground, then digs their roots from the earth. [17] The traces of the proud God sweeps away and effaces the memory of them from the earth. [18] Insolence is not allotted to a man, nor stubborn anger to one born of woman.

True Glory.* [19] Whose offspring can be in honor? Those of men. Which offspring are in honor? Those who fear God. Whose offspring can be in disgrace? Those of men. Which offspring are in disgrace? Those who transgress the commandments. [20] Among brethren their leader is in honor; such, in God's sight, are those who fear him. [21] Be it tenant or wayfarer, alien or pauper, his glory is the fear of God. [22] g It is not just to despise a man who is wise but poor, nor proper to honor any sinner. [23] The prince, the ruler, the judge are in honor; but none is greater than he who fears God. [24] h When free men serve a prudent slave, the wise man does not complain. [25] Flaunt not your wisdom in managing your affairs, and boast not in your time of need. [26] i Better the worker who has plenty of everything than the boaster who is without bread.

[27] My son, with humility have self-esteem; prize yourself as you deserve. [28] Who will acquit him who condemns himself? who will honor him who discredits himself? [29] The poor man is honored for his wisdom as the rich man is honored for his wealth; [30] honored in poverty, how much more so in wealth! Dishonored in wealth, in poverty how much the more!

CHAPTER 11.

[1] The poor man's wisdom lifts his head high and sets him among princes. [2] Praise not a man for his looks; despise not a man for his appearance. [3] Least is the bee among winged things, but she reaps the choicest of all harvests. [4] Mock not the worn cloak and jibe at no man's bitter day: For strange are the works of the Lord, hidden from men his deeds. [5] The oppressed often rise to a throne, and some that none would consider wear a crown.* [6] The exalted often fall into utter disgrace; the honored are given into enemy hands.

Moderation.* [7] Before investigating, find no fault; examine first, then criticize. [8] j Before hearing, answer not, and interrupt no one in the middle of his speech. [9] Dispute not about what is not your concern; in the strife of the arrogant take no part.

[10] My son, why increase your cares, since he who is avid for wealth will not be blameless? Even if you run after it, you will never overtake it; however you seek it, you will not find it. [11] k One may toil and struggle and drive, and fall short all the more. [12] Another goes his way a weakling and a failure, with little strength and great misery—yet the eyes of the Lord look favorably upon him; he raises him free of the vile dust, [13] lifts up his head and exalts him to the amazement of the many. [14] l Good and evil, life and death, poverty and riches, are from the Lord.* [15] Wisdom and understanding and knowledge of affairs, love and virtuous paths are from the Lord.* [16] Error and darkness were formed with sinners from their birth, and evil grows old with evildoers. [17] The Lord's gift remains with the just; his favor brings continued success. [18] A man

10, 9f: The text is uncertain. Its general implication is that man deteriorates physically even while alive; a slight illness today may be followed by death tomorrow. The uncertainty of life leaves no room for pride.

10, 19—11, 6: Regardless of social barriers, genuine honor among men comes from fear of the Lord and a true estimate of self. The Lord exalts the lowly and oppressed; transgressors of the commandments merit dishonor and disgrace.

11, 5: Cf 1 Kgs 2, 8; Ps 104 (105), 17-22; Lk 1, 52.

11, 7-25: Discretion regulates a man's conduct toward others and their affairs (7ff); as regards his own interests, a man should avoid solicitude for the passing external benefits of life and property (10-14. 18f. 21. 23ff), and cultivate the lasting inward gifts of wisdom and virtue (15. 17. 20. 22).

11, 14: Divine Providence ultimately governs the lives of men. Evil: misfortune and calamity sent by God either in punishment or as an incentive to repentance or to greater virtue.

11, 15f: Some ancient witnesses omit these two verses.

may become rich through a miser's life,
and this is his allotted reward: [19] m When he says: "I have found rest, now I will feast on my possessions," he does not know how long it will be till he dies and leaves them to others.*

[20] My son, hold fast to your duty, busy yourself with it, grow old while doing your task. [21] Admire not how sinners live, but trust in the Lord and wait for his light; for it is easy with the Lord suddenly,
in an instant, to make a poor man rich.
[22] God's blessing is the lot of the just man,
and in due time his hopes bear fruit. [23] Say not: "What do I need? What further pleasure can be mine?" [24] Say not: "I am independent. What harm can come to me now?" [25] n The day of prosperity makes one forget adversity; the day of adversity makes one forget prosperity. [26] For it is easy with the Lord on the day of death to repay man according to his deeds.* [27] A moment's affliction brings forgetfulness of past delights; when a man dies, his life is revealed. [28] Call no man happy before his death, for by how he ends, a man is known.

Care in Choosing Friends. [29] Bring not every man into your house, for many are the snares of the crafty one; [30] though he seem like a bird confined in a cage, yet
like a spy he will pick out the weak spots.
[31] The talebearer turns good into evil;
with a spark he sets many coals afire. [32]
The evil man lies in wait for blood, and plots against your choicest possessions. [33]
Avoid a wicked man, for he breeds only evil, lest you incur a lasting stain. [34] Lodge
a stranger with you, and he will subvert your course, and make a stranger of you to your own household.

CHAPTER 12.

[1] If you do good, know for whom you are doing it, and your kindness will have its effect.* [2] Do good to the just man and reward will be yours, if not from him,
from the Lord. [3] No good comes to him who gives comfort to the wicked, nor is it an act of mercy that he does.* [4] o Give to the good man, refuse the sinner; refresh the downtrodden, give nothing to the proud man. [5] No arms for combat should you give him, lest he use them against yourself; [6] with twofold evil you will meet for every good deed you do for him. [7] The Most High himself hates sinners, and upon the wicked he takes vengeance.

[8] p In our prosperity we cannot know our friends;* in adversity an enemy will not remain concealed. [9] q When a man is successful even his enemy is friendly;
in adversity even his friend disappears. [10]
Never trust your enemy, for his wickedness is like corrosion in bronze. [11] Even though he acts humbly and peaceably toward you, take care to be on your guard against him. Rub him as one polishes a brazen mirror,* and you will find that there is still corrosion. [12] Let him not stand near you, lest he oust you and take your place. Let him not sit at your right hand, lest he then demand your seat, and in the end you appreciate my advice,
when you groan with regret, as I warned
you. [13] Who pities a snake charmer when he is bitten, or anyone who goes near a wild beast? [14] So it is with the companion of the proud man, who is involved in his sins: [15] While you stand firm, he makes no bold move; but if you slip, he cannot hold back. [16] With his lips an enemy speaks sweetly, but in his heart he schemes to plunge you into the abyss. Though your enemy has tears in his eyes, if given the chance, he will never have enough of your blood. [17] If evil comes upon you,
you will find him at hand; feigning to help, he will trip you up, [18] then he will nod his head and clap his hands and hiss repeatedly, and show his true face.

CHAPTER 13.

Caution Regarding Associates.* [1] He who touches pitch blackens his hand; he who associates with an impious man learns his ways. [2] Bear no burden too heavy for you; go with no one greater or wealthier than yourself. How can the 11, 19: Cf the parable of the rich man, Lk 12, 16-21.

11, 26ff: Sirach, writing before Christian revelation, did not go beyond the hour of death to find full divine retribution.

12, 1-7: The limitations to the practice of charity here reflected were removed by Christ, who requires that good be done even to enemies and to those who hate, persecute and calumniate us (Mt 5, 43-48).

12, 3ff: The author advises against generosity to those who would abuse it.

12, 8-18: Through adversity friends are distinguished from enemies; to trust the latter or permit them intimacy is to invite disaster. Cf note on Sir 6, 5-17.

12, 11: Brazen mirror: see note on Ex 38, 8.

13, 1–14, 2: By means of various figures Sirach indicates the practical impossibility of genuine and sincere companionship between the poor and the proud rich. He lays down the principle of associating with equals (13, 15).

earthen pot go with the metal cauldron?
When they knock together, the pot will be smashed. [3] The rich man does wrong and boasts of it, the poor man is wronged and begs forgiveness. [4] As long as the rich man can use you he will enslave you, but when you are exhausted, he will abandon
you. [5] As long as you have anything he will speak fair words to you, and with smiles he will win your confidence; [6] when he needs something from you he will cajole you, then without regret he will impoverish you. [7] While it serves his purpose he will beguile you, then twice or three times he will terrify you; when later
he sees you he will pass you by, and shake his head over you. [8] Guard against being presumptuous; be not as those who lack sense. [9] When invited by a man of influence, keep your distance; then he will urge you all the more. [10] Be not bold with him lest you be rebuffed, but keep not too far away lest you be forgotten. [11] Engage not freely in discussion with him, trust not his many words; for by prolonged talk he will test you, and though smiling he will probe you. [12] Mercilessly
he will make of you a laughingstock, and will not refrain from injury or chains. [13]
Be on your guard and take care never to accompany men of violence.

[14] Every living thing loves its own kind, every man a man like himself. [15] Every being is drawn to its own kind; with his own kind every man associates. [16] r Is a wolf ever allied with a lamb? So it is with the sinner and the just. [17] Can there be peace between the hyena and the dog? Or between the rich and the poor can there be peace?* [18] Lion's prey are the wild asses of the desert; so too the poor are feeding grounds for the rich. [19] A proud man abhors lowliness; so does the rich man abhor the poor. [20] When a rich man stumbles he is supported by a friend;
when a poor man trips he is pushed down
by a friend. [21] Many are the supporters for a rich man when he speaks; though what he says is odious, it wins approval.
When a poor man speaks they make sport of him; he speaks wisely and no attention is paid him. [22] A rich man speaks and all are silent, his wisdom they extol to the clouds. A poor man speaks and they say:
"Who is that?" If he slips they cast him down. [23] Wealth is good when there is no sin; but poverty is evil by the standards of the proud. [24] s The heart of a man changes his countenance, either for good or for evil. [25] The sign of a good heart is a cheerful countenance; withdrawn and perplexed is the laborious schemer.

CHAPTER 14.

[1] Happy the man whose mouth brings him no grief, who is not stung by remorse for sin.* [2] Happy the man whose conscience does not reproach him, who has not lost hope.

The Use of Wealth.* [3] Wealth ill becomes the mean man; and to the miser, of what use is gold? [4] u What he denies himself he collects for others, and in his possessions a stranger will revel. [5] To whom will he be generous who is stingy with himself and does not enjoy what is his own? [6] None is more stingy than he who is stingy with himself; he punishes
his own miserliness. [7] If ever he is generous, it is by mistake; and in the end he displays his greed. [8] In the miser's opinion his share is too small; [9] he refuses his neighbor and brings ruin on himself. [10]
The miser's eye is rapacious for bread,
but on his own table he sets it stale.

[11] v My son, use freely whatever you have and enjoy it as best you can; [12] remember that death does not tarry, nor have you been told the grave's appointed time. [13] w Before you die, be good to your friend, and give him a share in what you possess. [14] Deprive not yourself of present good things, let no choice portion escape you. [15] Will you not leave your riches to others, and your earnings to be divided by lot? [16] Give, take, and treat yourself well, for in the nether world
there are no joys to seek [17] x All flesh grows old, like a garment; the age-old law is: All must die. [18] y As with the leaves that grow on a vigorous tree: one falls off and another sprouts—so with the generations of flesh and blood: one dies and another is born. [19] All man's works will perish in decay, and his handiwork will follow after him.

13, 17: The hostility between the dogs which guard the flocks at night and the rapacious hyenas is proverbial in Palestine.

14, 3-16: The miser does no good even to himself (3-10); wealth should be wisely used during life, for it must be left behind at death (11-16). In the light of the Gospel, generosity has a higher motivation and promise of reward than the Old Testament writer could propose. Cf Mt 6, 19ff; Lk 12, 32ff.

The Search for Wisdom and Its Blessings.* 20 z Happy the man who meditates on wisdom, and reflects on knowledge· 21 who ponders her ways in his heart, and understands her paths; 22 who pursues her like a scout, and lies in wait at her entry way; 23 who peeps through her windows, and listens at her doors; 24 who encamps near her house, and fastens his tent pegs next to her walls; 25 who pitches his tent beside her, and lives as her welcome neighbor; 26 who builds his nest in her leafage, and lodges in her branches; 27 who takes shelter with her from the heat, and dwells in her home.

CHAPTER 15.

1 He who fears the Lord will do this; he who is practiced in the Law will come to wisdom. 2 Mother-like she will meet him, like a young bride she will embrace him, 3 a nourish him with the bread of understanding, and give him the water of learning to drink. 4 He will lean upon her and not fall, he will trust in her and not be put to shame. 5 She will exalt him above his fellows; in the assembly she will make him eloquent. 6 b Joy and gladness he will find, an everlasting name inherit. 7 Worthless men will not attain to her, haughty men will not behold her. 8 Far from the impious is she, not to be spoken of by liars. 9 Unseemly is praise on a sinner's lips, for it is not accorded to him by God. 10 But praise is offered by the wise man's tongue; its rightful steward will proclaim it.

Man's Free Will. 11 Say not: "It was God's doing that I fell away"; for what he hates he does not do. 12 c Say not: "It was he who set me astray"; for he has no need of wicked man. 13 Abominable wickedness the Lord hates, he does not let it befall those who fear him. 14 d When God, in the beginning, created man, he made him subject to his own free choice. 15 If you choose you can keep the commandments; it is loyalty to do his will. 16 There are set before you fire and water; to whichever you choose, stretch forth your hand. 17 e Before man are life and death, whichever he chooses shall be given him. 18 Immense is the wisdom of the Lord: he is mighty in power, and all-seeing. 19 f The eyes of God see all he has made; he understands man's every deed. 20 No man does he command to sin, to none does he give strength for lies.

CHAPTER 16.

God's Punishment of Sinners.* 1 Desire not a brood of worthless children, nor rejoice in wicked offspring. 2 Many though they be, exult not in them if they have not the fear of the Lord. 3 g Count not on their length of life, have no hope in their future. For one can be better than a thousand; rather die childless than have godless children! 4 Through one wise man can a city be peopled; through a clan of rebels it becomes desolate. 5 Many such things has my eye seen, even more than these has my ear heard. 6 h Against a sinful band* fire is enkindled, upon a godless people wrath flames out. 7 i He forgave not the leaders of old* who rebelled long ago in their might; 8 j he spared not the neighbors of Lot* whom he detested for their pride; 9 nor did he spare the doomed people* who were uprooted because of their sin; 10 k nor the six hundred thousand foot soldiers* who perished for the impiety of their hearts. 11 And had there been but one stiffnecked man, it were a wonder had he gone unpunished. For mercy and anger alike are with him who remits and forgives, though on the wicked alights his wrath. 12 Great as his mercy is his punishment; he judges men, each according to his deeds. 13 A criminal does not escape with his plunder; a just man's hope God does not leave unfulfilled. 14 Whoever does good has his reward, which each receives according to his deeds. 15 Say not: "I am hidden from God; in heaven who remembers me?

14, 20—15, 20: From his social teaching the sage now turns to consider individual responsibility. Happiness is to be found in the pursuit and possession of wisdom (14, 20—15, 5). Joy and honor are given, not to the sinner (7ff), but to him who fears God and observes His Law (1-6. 10). The sinner is fully responsible for his conduct because God, who sees all things (18f), is not the author of wickedness (11f. 20); He gives to every man the liberty to choose between good and evil (14-17).

16, 1-21: Sinful offspring are a great misfortune (1-4), for history and experience show how God punishes sin (5-10). He judges everyone according to his deeds (11ff); no one is hidden from Him or escapes retribution at His hand (15-21).

16, 6: For Core and his band (6a), see Nm 16, 35; Ps 105 (106), 18; for the disgruntled Israelites (6b), Ps 77 (78), 21f.

16, 7: The leaders of old: the "mighty men of old" who were destroyed by the flood; Gn 6, 4; Wis 14, 6; Bar 3, 26ff.

16, 8: The people of Sodom and Gomorra: cf Gn 19, 24f; Ez 16, 49f.

16, 9: The Chanaanites; cf Ex 23, 23f. 27-31; 33, 2; Dt 7, 1; Wis 12, 3.

16, 10: The Israelites who murmured against Moses; cf Nm 11, 20; 14, 12. 22ff.

Among so many people I cannot be known; what am I in the world of spirits? [16] Behold, the heavens, the heaven of heavens, the earth and the abyss tremble at his visitation; [17] the roots of the mountains, the earth's foundations, at his mere glance, quiver and quake. [18] Of me, therefore, he will take no thought; with my ways who will concern himself? [19] l If I sin, no eye will see me; if all in secret I am disloyal, who is to know? [20] Who tells him of just deeds and what could I expect for doing my duty?" [21] Such are the thoughts of senseless men, which only the foolish knave will think.

Divine Wisdom Seen in Creation.* [22] Hearken to me, my son, take my advice, apply your mind to my words, [23] while I propose measured wisdom, and impart accurate knowledge. [24] m When at the first God created his works and, as he made them, assigned their tasks, [25] he ordered for all time what they were to do and their domains from generation to generation. They were not to hunger, nor grow weary, nor ever cease from their tasks. [26] Not one should ever crowd its neighbor, nor should they ever disobey his word. [27] n Then the Lord looked upon the earth, and filled it with his blessings. [28] Its surface he covered with all manner of life which must return into it again.

[1] The Lord from the earth created man, and in his own image he made him.o [2] p Limited days of life he gives him and makes him return to earth again. [3] He endows man with a strength of his own, and with power over all things else on earth. [4] He puts the fear of him in all flesh, and gives him rule over beasts and birds. [5] He forms men's tongues and eyes and ears, and imparts to them an understanding heart. [6] With wisdom and knowledge he fills them; good and evil he shows them. [7] He looks with favor upon their hearts, and shows them his glorious works, [8] that they may describe the wonders of his deeds and praise his holy name. [9] He has set before them knowledge, a law of life as their inheritance; [10] an everlasting covenant he has made with them, his Commandments* he has revealed to them. [11] His majestic glory their eyes beheld, his glorious voice their ears heard. [12] He says to them, "Avoid all evil"; each of them he gives precepts about his fellow men. [13] Their ways are ever known to him, they cannot be hidden from his eyes. [14] q Over every nation he places a ruler,* but the Lord's own portion is Israel. [15] All their actions are clear as the sun to him, his eyes are ever upon their ways. [16] Their wickedness cannot be hidden from him; all of their sins are before the Lord. [17] A man's goodness God cherishes like a signet ring, a man's virtue, like the apple of his eye. [18] r Later he will rise up and repay them, and requite each one of them as they deserve.

Appeal for a Return to God.* [19] But to the penitent he provides a way back, he encourages those who are losing hope! [20] Return to the Lord and give up sin, pray to him and make your offenses few. [21] Turn again to the Most High and away from sin, hate intensely what he loathes; [22] s who in the nether world can glorify the Most High in place of the living who offer their praise? [23] No more can the dead give praise than those who have never lived; they glorify the Lord who are alive and well. [24] How great the mercy of the Lord, his forgiveness of those who return to him! [25] The like cannot be found in men, for not immortal is any son of man. [26] Is anything brighter than the sun? Yet it can be eclipsed. How obscure* then the thoughts of flesh and blood! [27] God watches over the hosts of highest heaven, while all men are dust and ashes.

16, 22—17, 18: In harmony with Gn 1—2, the author describes God's wisdom in creating the universe and all things in it (22-28), endowing man with a moral nature, with wisdom and knowledge and freedom of will according to His own image (17, 1. 6), so that man may govern the earth (3f), praise God's name (8), obey His Law (9-12), and render to Him an account of his deeds (18). Cf Pss 18 (19); 103 (104).

17, 10: An everlasting covenant . . . his Commandments: the various covenants which God entered into with mankind, e.g., Gn 2, 15ff; 17, 1-22, especially on Mount Sinai where the people saw God's glory and heard His voice (Ex 19, 16—24, 18).

17, 14: Ruler: this may refer to civil authority or to angels placed over nations as guardians; see note on Dt 32, 8 and the cross references above.

17, 19-27: Exhorting the sinner to return to God (19ff. 24ff), the author implies that the Lord will postpone death for a repentant sinner so that he may fulfill his destiny of praising God on earth (22f). In the light of Christian teaching, the gift of final penitence extends this divine purpose into life everlasting. See note on Ps 6, 6; cf also Ez 18, 23; 33, 11-16.

17, 26: Obscure: literally, evil; compare Gn 6, 5. Though moral fault is not excluded, the thought here is the inability to understand the merciful designs of God. Cf Wis 9, 14-18.

CHAPTER 18.

The Divine Power and Mercy.* 1 The Eternal is the judge of all things without exception; the Lord alone is just. 2 Whom has he made equal to describing his works, and who can probe his mighty deeds? 3 Who can measure his majestic power, or exhaust the tale of his mercies? 4 One cannot lessen, nor increase, nor penetrate the wonders of the Lord. 5 When a man ends he is only beginning, and when he stops he is still bewildered. 6 What is man, of what worth is he? the good, the evil in him, what are these? 7 t The sum of a man's days is great if it reaches a hundred years: 8 Like a drop of sea water, like a grain of sand, so are these few years among the days of eternity. 9 That is why the Lord is patient with men and showers upon them his mercy. 10 He sees and understands that their death is grievous, and so he forgives them all the more. 11 Man may be merciful to his fellow man, but the Lord's mercy reaches all flesh, 12 u reproving, admonishing, teaching, as a shepherd guides his flock; 13 merciful to those who accept his guidance, who are diligent in his precepts.

The Necessity of Prudence.* 14 My son, to your charity add no reproach, nor spoil any gift by harsh words. 15 Like dew that abates a burning wind, so does a word improve a gift. 16 Sometimes the word means more than the gift; both are offered by a kindly man. 17 v Only a fool upbraids before giving; a grudging gift wears out the expectant eyes. 18 Be informed before speaking; before sickness prepare the cure. 19 Before you are judged, seek merit for yourself, and at the time of visitation you will have a ransom.* 20 Before you have fallen, humble yourself; when you have sinned, show repentance. 21 Delay not to forsake sins, neglect it not till you are in distress. 22 w Let nothing prevent the prompt payment of your vows; wait not to fulfill them when you are dying.* 23 Before making a vow have the means to fulfill it; be not one who tries the Lord. 24 x Think of wrath and the day of death, the time of vengeance when he will hide his face. 25 y Remember the time of hunger in the time of plenty, poverty and want in the day of wealth. 26 Between morning and evening the weather changes; before the Lord all things are fleeting. 27 A wise man is circumspect in all things; when sin is rife he keeps himself from wrongdoing.

28 Any learned man should make wisdom known, and he who attains to her should declare her praise;* 29 those trained in her words must show their wisdom, dispensing sound proverbs like life-giving waters.

Self-Control.* 30 z Go not after your lusts, but keep your desires in check. 31 If you satisfy your lustful appetites they will make you the sport of your enemies. 32 Have no joy in the pleasures of a moment which bring on poverty redoubled; 33 become not a glutton and a winebibber with nothing in your purse.

CHAPTER 19.

1 He who does so grows no richer; he who wastes the little he has will be stripped bare. 2 a Wine and women make the mind giddy, and the companion of harlots becomes reckless. 4 He who lightly trusts in them has no sense, and he who strays after them sins against his own life. 3 Rottenness and worms will possess him, for contumacious desire destroys its owner.

The Proper Use of Speech.* 5 He who gloats over evil will meet with evil, and he who repeats an evil report has no sense. 6 b Never repeat gossip, and you will not

t Ps 89 (90), 10.—u Jn 10, 11.—v Sir 20, 13.—w Nm 30, 3; Dt 23, 22; Ps 49 (50), 14; Prv 20, 25; Eccl 5, 4.—x Sir 7, 16.—y Sir 11, 25.—z Rom 6, 12; 13, 14.—a Prv 20, 1; 23, 20ff.—b Prv 25, 10.

18, 1-13: Not only are God's justice and power beyond man's understanding (1-5), His mercy also is boundless and surpasses all human compassion (6-13).

18, 14-27: The practice of charity is an art which avoids every offense to the recipient (14-18). Prudence directs the changing circumstances of daily life toward the attainment of its reward at the time of visitation, i.e., the day of reckoning (19-27).

18, 19: Merit . . . ransom: almsgiving is often portrayed in the Bible as a means of approach to the forgiving mercy of God. Cf Sir 3, 29f; 29, 11f; Tb 12, 12f; Dn 4, 24; Lk 16, 9; Acts 10, 31.

18, 22f: The usual object of a vow in Old Testament times was the offering of a bloody sacrifice.

18, 28f: A general statement on the teaching of wisdom, serving either as a conclusion to the preceding section or as an introduction to the following one. The neighbors of the wise man are regarded as the field into which he channels the waters of wisdom to encourage growth. Cf Sir 24, 28-31.

18, 30—19, 4: Inordinate gratification of the senses makes a man unreasonable, the slave of passion, the sport of his enemies. In the end it destroys him physically and spiritually.

19, 5-16: An excellent commentary on the Eighth Commandment of the Decalogue, forbidding intemperance in speech through calumny, rash judgment, and detraction (5f), and inculcating discreet silence in defense of self and of neighbor (7-11). Justice requires that an accused neighbor be given a hearing, and charity urges fraternal correction; both together fulfill the law of the Most High (12-16); cf Mt 7, 1f; 18, 15f.

be reviled. 7 c Tell nothing to friend or foe; if you have a fault, reveal it not, 8 for he who hears it will hold it against you, and in time become your enemy. 9 Let anything you hear die within you; be assured it will not make you burst. 10 When a fool hears something, he is in labor, like a woman giving birth to a child. 11 Like an arrow lodged in a man's thigh is gossip in the breast of a fool. 12 d Admonish your friend—he may not have done it; and if he did, that he may not do it again. 13 Admonish your neighbor—he may not have said it; and if he did, that he may not say it again. 14 Admonish your friend—often it may be slander; every story you must not believe. 15 e Then, too, a man can slip and not mean it; who has not sinned with his tongue? 16 f Admonish your neighbor before you break with him; thus will you fulfill the law of the Most High.

How to Recognize True Wisdom.* 17 g All wisdom is fear of the Lord; perfect wisdom is the fulfillment of the Law. 18 The knowledge of wickedness is not wisdom, nor is there prudence in the counsel of sinners. 19 There is a shrewdness that is detestable, while the simple man may be free from sin. 20 There are those with little understanding who fear God, and those of great intelligence who violate the Law. 21 There is a shrewdness keen but dishonest, which by duplicity wins a judgment. 22 There is the wicked man who is bowed in grief, but is full of guile within; 23 he bows his head and feigns not to hear, but when not observed, he will take advantage of you: 24 Even though his lack of strength keeps him from sinning, when he finds the opportunity, he will do harm.

19, 17-26: True and false wisdom as here described are synonymous with virtue and vice, with the fulfillment of the Law and the violation of it.

20, 1-7: Wisdom indicates the proper times for speech and silence, that is, the occasions when the most benefit can be gained from them.

20, 3: The sense is that violence or force against a person can prevent an external act of sin or compel a good deed without eliminating the internal sin or desire of wrongdoing, cf Sir 20, 20.

20, 8-16: In a series of paradoxes the author indicates how much true and lasting values differ from apparent ones.

20, 9: And some . . . double: or perhaps, "but some are doubly precious."

20, 17-25: The ill-timed speech of the wicked, the unruly and a fool is repulsive (17ff); human respect exposes one to intimidation, rash promises and enmity (21f); lies bring dishonor and lasting disgrace (23ff).

25 One can tell a man by his appearance; a wise man is known as such when first met. 26 A man's attire, his hearty laughter and his gait, proclaim him for what he is.

CHAPTER 20.

Conduct of the Wise and the Foolish. 1 An admonition can be inopportune, and a man may be wise to hold his peace.* 2 It is much better to admonish than to lose one's temper, for one who admits his fault will be kept from disgrace. 3 Like a eunuch lusting for intimacy with a maiden is he who does right under compulsion.* 4 One man is silent and is thought wise, another is talkative and is disliked. 5 h One man is silent because he has nothing to say; another is silent, biding his time. 6 A wise man is silent till the right time comes, but a boasting fool ignores the proper time. 7 He who talks too much is detested; he who pretends to authority is hated.

8 Some misfortunes bring success; some things gained are a man's loss.* 9 Some gifts do one no good, and some must be paid back double.* 10 Humiliation can follow fame, while from obscurity a man can lift up his head. 11 A man may buy much for little, but pay for it seven times over. 12 A wise man makes himself popular by a few words, but fools pour forth their blandishments in vain. 13 A gift from a rogue will do you no good, for in his eyes his one gift is equal to seven. 14 He gives little and criticizes often, and like a crier he shouts aloud. He lends today, he asks it back tomorrow; hateful indeed is such a man. 15 A fool has no friends, nor thanks for his generosity; 16 those who eat his bread have an evil tongue. How many times they laugh him to scorn!

17 A fall to the ground is less sudden than a slip of the tongue; that is why the downfall of the wicked comes so quickly.* 18 Insipid food is the untimely tale; the unruly are always ready to offer it. 19 A proverb when spoken by a fool is unwelcome, for he does not utter it at the proper time. 20 A man through want may be unable to sin, yet in this tranquility he cannot rest. 21 One may lose his life through shame, and perish through a fool's intimidation. 22 A man makes a promise to a friend out of shame, and has him for his enemy needlessly. 23 A lie is a foul blot in a man, yet it is constantly on the lips of the unruly. 24 Better a thief than an inveterate liar, yet both will suffer disgrace; 25 a liar's way leads to dishonor,

his shame remains ever with him.

26 A wise man advances himself by his words, a prudent man pleases the great.*
27 He who works his land has abundant crops, he who pleases the great is pardoned his faults. 28 i Favor and gifts blind
the eyes; like a muzzle over the mouth
they silence reproof. 29 Hidden wisdom and unseen treasure—of what value is either? 30 Better the man who hides his folly than the one who hides his wisdom.

CHAPTER 21.

Sin Must Be Avoided.* 1 My son, if you have sinned, do so no more, and for your past sins pray to be forgiven. 2 Flee from sin as from a serpent that will bite you if you go near it; its teeth are lion's teeth, destroying the souls of men. 3 Every offense is a two-edged sword; when it cuts, there can be no healing. 4 Violence and arrogance wipe out wealth; so too a proud man's home is destroyed. 5 Prayer from a poor man's lips is heard at once, and justice is quickly granted him. 6 He who hates correction walks the sinner's path, but he who fears the Lord repents in his heart. 7 Widely known is the boastful
speaker, but the wise man knows his own faults. 8 He who builds his house with another's money is collecting stones for his funeral mound. 9 j A band of criminals is like a bundle of tow; they will end in a flaming fire. 10 The path of sinners is smooth stones that end in the depths of the nether world.*

The Wise and the Foolish Differ.* 11 He who keeps the Law controls his impulses;
he who is perfect in fear of the Lord has wisdom. 12 He can never be taught who is not shrewd, but one form of shrewdness is thoroughly bitter. 13 k A wise man's knowledge wells up in a flood, and his counsel, like a living spring; 14 a fool's mind is like a broken jar—no knowledge
at all can it hold. 15 When an intelligent man hears words of wisdom, he approves
them and adds to them; the wanton hears them with scorn and casts them behind his back. 16 A fool's chatter is like a load on a journey, but there is charm to be found upon the lips of the wise. 17 The views of a prudent man are sought in an assembly, and his words are considered with care. 18 Like a house in ruins is wisdom to a fool; the stupid man knows it only as inscrutable words. 19 Like fetters on the legs is learning to a fool, like a manacle on his right hand. 20 l A fool raises his voice in laughter, but a prudent man at the most smiles gently. 21 Like a chain of gold is learning to a wise man,
like a bracelet on his right arm.

22 m The fool steps boldly into a house,
while the well-bred man remains outside;
23 a boor peeps through the doorway of a house, but a cultured man keeps his glance cast down. 24 It is rude for one to listen at a door; a cultured man would be overwhelmed by the disgrace of it. 25 The lips of the impious talk of what is not their concern, but the words of the prudent are carefully weighed. 26 Fools' thoughts are in their mouths, wise men's words are in their hearts. 27 When a godless man curses his adversary,* he really curses himself. 28 A slanderer besmirches himself and is hated by his neighbors.

CHAPTER 22.

On Laziness and Foolishness.* 1 The sluggard is like a stone in the mud; everyone hisses at his disgrace. 2 The sluggard

i Ex 23, 8; Dt 16, 19.—j Ps 21 (22), 9.—k Prv 13, 14; 16, 22.—l Eccl 7, 6.—m Prv 25, 17.

20, 26-30: Unlike the fool who invites disaster through misuse of his tongue, the sage through prudent speech gains in honor and esteem among the great (26f). He must beware, however, of accepting bribes, lest he share in evil through silence when he should reprove (28ff).

21, 1-10: Under various figures the consequences of sin are described as destructive of wealth, and even of body and soul, and deserving of death and a place in the depths of the nether world (2ff. 6a. 8ff). Through prayer, forgiveness can be sought (1), and through fear of the Lord, repentance is achieved (1, 5. 6b).

21, 10: The path of sinners . . . nether world: eternal retribution, dimly seen in this reference, became clearly revealed through the teaching of Christ; cf Mt 7, 13f; 25, 41-46; Lk 16, 19-31.

21, 11-28: The mind of the wise man is a fountain of knowledge (13. 15); his will is trained to keep the Law (11); his words are gracious, valued, carefully weighed, sincere (16f. 25f); his conduct is respectful, cultured and restrained (20. 22ff). The fool's mind is devoid of knowledge and impenetrable to it (12. 14. 18f); his will rejects it (15); his talk is burdensome (16), his laughter unrestrained (20), his conversation shallow and meddlesome (25f); his conduct is bold and rude (22ff); his abuse of others redounds on himself (27f).

21, 27: Adversary: this can be understood in the sense that, if a man curses one who led him into sin, he implicitly curses himself for having yielded to the sin; or in the sense that the enemy is the man's own sinful nature; or even in the sense that the enemy is the devil, since the Hebrew word used here is satan. Cf 1 Par 21, 1; Za 3, 2; 2 Pt 2, 12f; Jude 9.

22, 1-15: To Sirach, a lazy person and an unruly child are a cause of shame and disgrace; everyone wishes to be rid of them (1-5). A wicked fool is as senseless as a man asleep or dead, but the grief he causes others lasts a lifetime (7-11). He is like a brute, troublesome and intolerable (12-15).

is like a lump of dung; whoever touches
him wipes his hands. 3 n An unruly child is a disgrace to its father; if it be a daughter, she brings him to poverty. 4 A thoughtful daughter becomes a treasure to her husband, a shameless one is her father's grief. 5 A hussy shames her father and her husband; by both she is despised. 6 Like a song in time of mourning is inopportune talk,* but lashes and discipline are at all times wisdom. 7
o Teaching a fool is like gluing a broken
pot, or like disturbing a man in the depths of sleep; 8 he talks with a slumberer who talks with a fool, for when it is over, he will say, "What was that?" 9 Weep over the dead man, for his light has gone out;
weep over the fool, for sense has left him. 10 Weep but a little over the dead man, for he is at rest; but worse than death is the life of a fool. 11 p Seven days of mourning for the dead, but for the wicked fool a whole lifetime.

12 Speak but seldom with the stupid man, be not the companion of a brute;
13 beware of him lest you have trouble
and be spattered when he shakes himself;
turn away from him and you will find rest and not be wearied by his lack of sense. 14 What is heavier than lead, and what is its name but "Fool"? 15 q Sand and salt and an iron mass are easier to bear than a stupid man.

16 Masonry bonded with wooden beams is not loosened by an earthquake; neither is a resolve constructed with careful deliberation shaken in a moment of fear.*
17 A resolve that is backed by prudent understanding is like the polished surface of a smooth wall. 18 Small stones lying on an open height will not remain when the wind blows; neither can a timid resolve based on foolish plans withstand fear of any kind.

The Preservation of Friendship.* 19 One who jabs the eye brings tears: he who pierces the heart bares its feelings. 20 He who throws stones at birds drives them away, and he who insults a friend breaks up the friendship. 21 Should you draw a sword against a friend, despair not, it can be undone. 22 Should you speak sharply to a friend, fear not, you can be reconciled. But a contemptuous insult, a confidence broken, or a treacherous attack will drive away any friend.

23 Make fast friends with a man while he is poor; thus will you enjoy his prosperity with him. In time of trouble remain true to him, so as to share in his inheritance when it comes. 24 Before flames burst forth an oven smokes; so does abuse come before bloodshed. 25
From a friend in need of support no one need hide in shame; 26 but from him who brings harm to his friend all will stand aloof who hear of it.

Prayer.* 27 r Who will set a guard over my mouth, and upon my lips an effective seal, that I may not fail through them,
that my tongue may not destroy me?

CHAPTER 23.

1 Lord, Father and Master of my life,* permit me not to fall by them! 2 Who will apply the lash to my thoughts, to my mind the rod of discipline, that my failings may not be spared, nor the sins of my heart overlooked; 3 lest my failings increase, and my sins be multiplied; lest I succumb to my foes, and my enemy rejoice over me? 4 Lord, Father and God of my life, abandon me not into their control! 5 A brazen look allow me not;
ward off passion from my heart, 6 let not the lustful cravings of the flesh master me, surrender me not to shameless desires.

The Proper Use of the Tongue.* 7 Give heed, my children, to the instruction that I pronounce, for he who keeps it will not be enslaved. 8 Through his lips is the sinner ensnared; the railer and the arrogant

n Prv 17, 21; 19, 13.—o 7-11: Prv 23, 9.—p Gn 50, 10.—q Prv 27, 3.—r Ps 140 (141), 3.

22, 6: Like a song . . . is . . . talk: some understand talk in the sense of a rebuke unheeded by the unruly as a joyful song is out of place among mourners. Corporal punishment, however, is always effective.

22, 16ff: A prudent mind firmly resolved is undisturbed by violent and conflicting thoughts, whereas a foolish person is tossed about by the winds of fear, like small stones whipped about by high winds.

22, 19-26: As disputes and violence weaken friendship, and disloyalty and abuse of confidence destroy it utterly (19-22 . 24. 26), so kindness to a poor man in time of poverty and adversity builds up friendship and merits a share in his property and inheritance (23. 25).

22, 27—23, 6: The sage implores the divine assistance to preserve him through stern discipline from sins of the tongue (22, 27; 23, 1): ignorance of mind and weakness of will (2f); and inclinations of the senses and the flesh, lest he fall into the hands of his enemies, or become a prey of shameful desires (3-6).

23, 1: Lord, Father and Master of my life: these words express the tender personal relationship between the author's soul and God, the need of His assistance, and the truth of His providence.

23, 7-15: A warning against sins of the tongue through misuse of the Holy Name, thoughtless swearing which involves obligation and incurs guilt (7-11), blasphemy (12), talk that is coarse and blundersome (13f), and the incorrigible habit of abusive language (15).

man fall thereby. 9 s Let not your mouth form the habit of swearing, or becoming too familiar with the Holy Name. 10 Just as a slave that is constantly under scrutiny* will not be without welts, so one who swears continually by the Holy Name will not remain free from sin. 11
t A man who often swears heaps up obligations; the scourge will never be far from his house. If he swears in error, he incurs guilt; if he neglects his obligation, his sin is doubly great. If he swears without reason he cannot be found just, and all his house will suffer affliction. 12 There are words which merit death; may they never be heard among Jacob's heirs. For all such words are foreign to the devout, who do not wallow in sin. 13 Let not your mouth become used to coarse talk, for in it lies sinful matter. 14 u Keep your father and mother in mind when you sit among the mighty, lest in their presence you commit a blunder and disgrace your upbringing, by wishing you had never been born or cursing the day of your birth. 15
A man who has the habit of abusive language will never mature in character as long as he lives.

Sins of the Flesh.* 16 Two types of men
multiply sins, a third* draws down wrath;
for burning passion is a blazing fire, not to be quenched till it burns itself out: a man given to sins of the flesh, who never stops until the fire breaks forth; 17 v the rake to whom all bread is sweet and who is never through till he dies; 18 w and the man who dishonors his marriage bed and says to himself, "Who can see me? Darkness surrounds me, walls hide me; no one sees me; why should I fear to sin?" Of the Most High he is not mindful, 19 fearing only the eyes of men; he does not understand that the eyes of the Lord, ten thousand times brighter than the sun, observe every step a man takes and peer into hidden corners. 20 He who knows all things before they exist still knows them
all after they are made. 21 x Such a man will be punished in the streets of the city;
when he least expects it, he will be apprehended.*

22 So also with the woman who is unfaithful to her husband and offers as heir her son by a stranger. 23 First, she has disobeyed the law of the Most High;
secondly, she has wronged her husband;
thirdly, in her wanton adultery she has borne children by another man.* 24 Such a woman will be dragged before the assembly,* and her punishment will extend to her children; 25 her children will not take root; her branches will not bring forth fruit. 26 She will leave an accursed memory; her disgrace will never be blotted out. 27 y Thus all who dwell on the earth shall know, and all who inhabit the world shall understand, that nothing is better than the fear of the Lord, nothing more salutary than to obey his commandments.

CHAPTER 24.

Praise of Wisdom.* 1 Wisdom sings her own praises, before her own people she proclaims her glory; 2 in the assembly of the Most High she opens her mouth, in the presence of his hosts she declares her worth: 3 z "From the mouth of the Most High I came forth, and mistlike covered the earth. 4 In the highest heavens did I dwell, my throne on a pillar of cloud. 5
The vault of heaven I compassed alone,
through the deep abyss I wandered. 6
Over waves of the sea, over all the land,
over every people and nation I held sway.
7 Among all these I sought a resting place; in whose inheritance should I abide?

8 "Then the Creator of all gave me his command, and he who formed me chose

23, 10: As a slave . . . under scrutiny, so is he who calls on God to witness the truth of what he says.

23, 16-27: From sins of the tongue the author proceeds to treat of sins of the flesh and their dire consequences. The passion of lust tyrannizes over its victims and, like fire, consumes and utterly destroys them (16f. 22-26). The false security of the adulterer serves but to aggravate his inevitable fate (18-21). Only the fear of the Lord and observance of His commandments can assure moral safety (27).

23, 16: Two types . . . a third: three kinds of sins of impurity, with increasing degrees of gravity: solitary sins (16), fornication (17) and adultery (18-21).

23, 21: Cf Lv 20, 10; Dt 22, 22.

23, 23: The detailed evil of adultery includes disobedience to God's law (Ex 20, 14), injustice to a partner in marriage, and disgraceful offspring.

23, 24f: The judgment of the assembly determined the illegitimacy of children born of adultery or incest and excluded them from the "community of the Lord" (Dt 23, 3). Cf Wis 3, 16-19; 4, 3-6.

24, 1-27: In this chapter Wisdom speaks in the first person, describing her origin, her dwelling place in Israel, and the reward she gives her followers. As in Prv 8, Wisdom is described as a being who comes from God and is distinct from Him. While we do not say with certainty that this description applies to a personal being, it does foreshadow the beautiful doctrine of the Word of God later developed in St. John's Gospel (Jn 1, 1-14). In the liturgy this chapter is applied to the Blessed Virgin because of her constant and intimate association with Christ, the Incarnate Wisdom.

the spot for my tent, saying, 'In Jacob make your dwelling, in Israel your inheritance.' [9] Before all ages, in the beginning, he created me, and through all ages I shall not cease to be. [10] In the holy Tent I ministered before him, and in Sion I fixed my abode. [11] Thus in the chosen city he has given me rest, in Jerusalem is my domain. [12] I have struck root among the glorious people, in the portion of the Lord, his heritage.

[13] "Like a cedar on Lebanon I am raised aloft, like a cypress on Mount Hermon, [14] like a palm tree in Engaddi, like a rosebush in Jericho, like a fair olive tree in the field, like a plane tree growing beside the water. [15] a Like cinnamon, or fragrant balm, or precious myrrh, I give forth perfume; like galbanum and onycha and sweet spices, like the odor of incense in the Holy Place.* [16] I spread out my branches like a terebinth, my branches so bright and so graceful. [17] I bud forth delights like the vine, my blossoms become fruit fair and rich. [18] Come to me, all you that yearn for me, and be filled with my fruits;* [19] you will remember me as sweeter than honey, better to have than the honeycomb. [20] b He who eats of me will hunger still, he who drinks of me will thirst for more;* [21] he who obeys me will not be put to shame, he who serves me will never fail."

[28] Now I, like a rivulet from her stream,* channeling the waters into a garden, [29] said to myself, "I will water my plants, my flower bed I will drench"; and suddenly this rivulet of mine became a river, then this stream of mine, a sea. [30] Thus do I send my teachings forth shining like the dawn, to become known afar off. [31] Thus do I pour out instruction like prophecy and bestow it on generations to come.

CHAPTER 25.

Those Who Are Worthy of Praise.* [1] With three things I am delighted, for they are pleasing to the Lord and to men: harmony among brethren, friendship among neighbors, and the mutual love of husband and wife. [2] Three kinds of men I hate; their manner of life I loathe indeed: a proud pauper, a rich dissembler, and an old man lecherous in his dotage.

[3] What you have not saved in your youth, how will you acquire in your old age? [4] How becoming to the gray-haired is judgment, and a knowledge of counsel to those on in years! [5] How becoming to the aged is wisdom, understanding and prudence to the venerable! [6] The crown of old men is wide experience; their glory, the fear of the Lord.

[7] There are nine who come to my mind as blessed, a tenth whom my tongue proclaims: the man who finds joy in his children, and he who lives to see his enemies' downfall. [8] Happy is he who dwells with a sensible wife, and he who plows not like a donkey yoked with an ox.* Happy is he who sins not with his tongue, and he who serves not his inferior.

[9] Happy is he who finds a friend and he who speaks to attentive ears. [10] He who finds wisdom is great indeed, but not greater than he who fears the Lord. [11] Fear of the Lord surpasses all else, its possessor is beyond compare.

a Ex 30, 22-25.—b Is 55, 1; Jn 6, 35.—c Ex 24, 7.—d 23ff: Gn 2, 11-14.

24, 15: These substances were associated with worship, being mentioned in Ex 30, 22f. 34 as the ingredients of the anointing oil and the sacred incense. Israel was a priestly nation.

24, 18: Compare the words of the Savior in Mt 11, 28ff.

24, 20: So pleasing is wisdom to man that, far from being satiated, he will always desire more.

24, 22: Here the author begins to speak once more, Wisdom having ended her discourse in the preceding verse. Wisdom and the Law of Moses are now identified.

24, 25: Gihon: understood by some to have been a name for the Nile; cf Gn 2, 13.

24, 28-31: Spoken by the author. He had at first drawn a small portion of the water of wisdom for his own private benefit, but finding it so useful, he soon began to let others share in this boon by teaching them the lessons of wisdom.

25, 1-11: While praising brotherly love, love of neighbor, and conjugal love, the sage condemns their opposites in the arrogant pauper who despises his brother, the fraudulent rich man who cheats his neighbor, and the lecherous old man unfaithful to his wife (1f). This last, sensual from his youth, lacks the mature blessings of judgment and wisdom of old age (3-6), and the joy of a peaceful household, where honesty and dignity, friendship, wisdom and fear of God prevail (7-11).

25, 8: Like a donkey yoked with an ox: incompatibility between husband and wife.

Wicked and Virtuous Women.* 12 Worst of all wounds is that of the heart, worst of all evils is that of a woman. 13 Worst of all sufferings is that from one's foes, worst of all vengeance is that of one's enemies: 14 No poison worse than that of a serpent, no venom greater than that of a woman. 15 With a dragon or a lion I would rather dwell than live with an evil woman. 16 Wickedness changes a woman's looks, and makes her sullen as a female bear. 17 When her husband sits among his neighbors, a bitter sigh escapes him unawares.

18 There is scarce any evil like that in a woman; may she fall to the lot of the sinner! 19 Like a sandy hill to aged feet is a railing wife to a quiet man. 20 Stumble not through woman's beauty, nor be greedy for her wealth; 21 the man is a slave, in disgrace and shame, when a wife supports her husband.

22 Depressed mind, saddened face, broken heart—this from an evil wife. Feeble hands and quaking knees—from a wife who brings no happiness to her husband. 23 In woman was sin's beginning, and because of her we all die.* 24 Allow water no outlet, and be not indulgent to an erring wife. 25 If she walks not by your side, cut her away from you.

CHAPTER 26.

1 Happy the husband of a good wife,* twice-lengthened are his days; e 2 a worthy* wife brings joy to her husband, peaceful and full is his life. 3 f A good wife is a generous gift bestowed upon him who fears the Lord; 4 be he rich or poor, his heart is content, and a smile is ever on his face.

5 There are three things at which my heart quakes, a fourth before which I quail: Though false charges in public, trial before all the people, and lying testimony are harder to bear than death, 6 a jealous wife is heartache and mourning and a scourging tongue like the other three.* 7 A bad wife is a chafing yoke; he who marries her seizes a scorpion. 8 A drunken wife arouses great anger, for she does not hide her shame. 9 By her eyelids and her haughty stare an unchaste wife can be recognized.

10 g Keep a strict watch over an unruly wife, lest, finding an opportunity, she make use of it; 11 follow close if her eyes are bold, and be not surprised if she betrays you: 12 As a thirsty traveler with eager mouth drinks from any water that he finds, so she sits down before every tent and opens her quiver for every arrow.

Dangers to Integrity and Friendship. 19 h These two bring grief to my heart, and the third arouses my horror: a wealthy man reduced to want; illustrious men held in contempt; and the man who passes from justice to sin, for whom the Lord makes ready the sword.

e Sir 25, 8; Prv 18, 22; 31, 10ff.—f Sir 36, 24.—g Sir 42, 11.—h Ez 18, 24ff.

25, 12-25: Wickedness in a woman is most grievous, painful and bitter to her husband. Through it she becomes vengeful, dangerous and intolerable, jealous, talkative, intemperate and unchaste. Even her very appearance is changed (12-17). The worst of all evils, a source of grief, a snare and a disgrace to her husband, she depresses his mind, saddens and breaks his heart, destroys his strength (18-22). She must not be indulged but made obedient or punished (24f).

25, 23: Sin, the cause, of death, originated in woman. Eve was the first human being to sin; then she induced Adam to follow her example. However, it was through Adam, as head of the human race, that original sin and its punishment of death have passed to all mankind.

26, 1-4. 13-18: A good wife is as a gift from God, bringing joy and peace, happiness and contentment to her husband (1-4) through her thoughtfulness, reserve, modesty and chastity, beauty, grace and virtue (13-18).

26, 2: Worthy: gifted spiritually, mentally and physically. Cf Prv 31, 10.

26, 6-12: A repetition of the thought expressed in Sir 25, 12-25.

26, 17f: The holy lampstand and the golden columns stood in the Holy Place of the ancient Tabernacle (Ex 25, 31-40; 26, 32).

26, 18: Among the additions found here in some manuscripts are the following lines: "My son, take care in the prime of life not to surrender your strength to strangers; single out from the land a goodly field and there with confidence sow the seed of your increase; so shall you have your offspring around you, and in confidence shall they grow up.

"Though a woman for hire be thought of as a trifle, a married woman is a deadly snare for those who embrace her. (Cf Prv 6, 26).

"A wife's complaint should be made in meekness, and show itself in a slight flush; but a loud-mouthed, scolding wife is a trumpet signaling for battle: Any human being who answers that challenge will spend his life amid the turbulence of war."

20 A merchant can hardly remain upright, nor a shopkeeper free from sin;*

CHAPTER 27.

1 For the sake of profit many sin, and the struggle for wealth blinds the eyes.i
2 Like a peg driven between fitted stones, between buying and selling sin is wedged in. 3 Unless you earnestly hold fast to the fear of the Lord, suddenly your house will be thrown down. 4 When a sieve is shaken, the husks appear; so do a man's faults when he speaks. 5 j As the test of what the potter molds is in the furnace, so in his conversation is the test of a man. 6 k The fruit of a tree shows the care it has had; so too does a man's speech disclose the bent of his mind. 7 Praise no man before he speaks, for it is then that men are tested. 8 If you strive after justice you will attain it, and put it on like a splendid robe. 9 Birds nest with their own kind, and fidelity comes to those who live by it. 10 As a lion crouches in wait for prey, so do sins for evildoers. 11 Ever wise are the discourses of the devout, but the godless man, like the moon, is inconstant. 12 Limit the time you spend among fools, but frequent the company of thoughtful men. 13 The conversation of the wicked is offensive, their laughter is wanton guilt. 14 Their oath-filled talk makes the hair stand on end, their brawls make one stop one's ears. 15 l Wrangling among the haughty ends in bloodshed, their cursing is painful to hear.

16 m He who betrays a secret cannot be trusted, he will never find an intimate friend.* 17 Cherish your friend, keep faith with him; but if you betray his confidence, follow him not; 18 for as an enemy might kill a man, you have killed your neighbor's friendship. 19 Like a bird released from the hand, you have let your friend go and cannot recapture him; 20 follow him not, for he is far away, he has fled like a gazelle from the trap. 21 n A wound can be bound up, and an insult forgiven, but he who betrays secrets does hopeless damage.

Malice, Anger and Vengeance. 22 He who has shifty eyes plots mischief and no one can ward him off; 23 o in your presence he uses honeyed talk, and admires your every word, but later he changes his tone and twists your words to your ruin. 24 p There is nothing that I hate so much, and the Lord hates him as well. 25 q As a stone falls back on him who throws it up, so a blow struck in treachery injures more than one. 26 As he who digs a pit falls into it, and he who lays a snare is caught in it, 27 whoever does harm will be involved in it without knowing how it came upon him.

28 Mockery and abuse will be the lot of the proud, and vengeance lies in wait for them like a lion. 29 The trap seizes those who rejoice in pitfalls, and pain will consume them before they die; 30 wrath and anger are hateful things, yet the sinner hugs them tight.

CHAPTER 28.

1 The vengeful will suffer the Lord's vengeance, for he remembers their sins in detail.r 2 Forgive your neighbor's injustice; then when you pray, your own sins will be forgiven.s

3 Should a man nourish anger against his fellows and expect healing from the Lord?t 4 Should a man refuse mercy to his fellows, yet seek pardon for his own sins? 5 If he who is but flesh cherishes wrath, who will forgive his sins? 6 u Remember your last days, set enmity aside; remember death and decay, and cease from sin! 7 Think of the commandments, hate not your neighbor; of the Most High's covenant, and overlook faults.

8 Avoid strife and your sins will be fewer, for a quarrelsome man kindles disputes, 9 v commits the sin of disrupting friendship and sows discord among those at peace. 10 w The more wood, the greater the fire, the more underlying it,

26, 20—27, 15: From proper conduct in family life, the author proceeds to social morality, warning especially against injustice in commerce (26, 20—27, 3), and perversity of speech in business (4-7). The pursuit of justice in these matters is all the more meritorious as it is difficult (8ff). The discourses of the devout are marked with wisdom, but the conversations of the wicked, with offense, swearing, cursing, quarrels and even bloodshed (11-15).

27, 16—28, 11: Betrayal of confidence through indiscretion destroys friendship and does irreparable harm (16-21); cf Sir 22, 22. False friendship based on hypocrisy and deceit is hateful to God and man (22ff); it soon becomes a victim of its own treachery (25ff). The same fate awaits the malicious and vengeful (27, 28—28, 1). They can obtain mercy and forgiveness only by first forgiving their neighbor, being mindful of death and of the commandments of the Most High (28, 2-7). And they must avoid quarrels and strife (8-11).

the fiercer the fight; the greater a man's strength, the sterner his anger, the greater his power, the greater his wrath. [11] Pitch and resin make fires flare up, and insistent quarrels provoke bloodshed.

The Evil Tongue.* [12] If you blow upon a spark, it quickens into flame, if you spit on it, it dies out; yet both you do with your mouth! [13] x Cursed be the gossiper and the double-tongued, for they destroy the peace of many. [14] A meddlesome tongue subverts many, and makes them refugees among the peoples; it destroys walled cities, and overthrows powerful dynasties. [15] A meddlesome tongue can drive virtuous women from their homes and rob them of the fruit of their toil; [16] whoever heeds it has no rest, nor can he dwell in peace.

[17] A blow from a whip raises a welt, but a blow from the tongue smashes bones; [18] y many have fallen by the edge of the sword, but not as many as by the tongue. [19] Happy he who is sheltered from it, and has not endured its wrath; who has not borne its yoke nor been fettered with its chains; [20] for its yoke is a yoke of iron and its chains are chains of bronze! [21] Dire is the death it inflicts, besides which even the nether world is a gain; [22] it will not take hold among the just nor scorch them in its flame, [23] but those who forsake the Lord will fall victims to it, as it burns among them unquenchably! It will hurl itself against them like a lion; like a panther, it will tear them to pieces. [24] z As you hedge round your vineyard with thorns, set barred doors over your mouth; [25] as you seal up your silver and gold, so balance and weigh your words. [26] Take care not to slip by your tongue and fall victim to your foe waiting in ambush.

Loans, Alms and Surety.* [1] He does a kindness who lends to his neighbor, and he fulfills the precepts who holds out a helping hand.a [2] Lend to your neighbor in his hour of need, and pay back your neighbor when a loan falls due; b [3] keep your promise, be honest with him, and you will always come by what you need. [4] Many a man who asks for a loan adds to the burdens of those who help him; [5] when he borrows, he kisses the lender's hand and speaks with respect of his creditor's wealth; but when payment is due he disappoints him and says he is helpless to meet the claim. [6] If the lender is able to recover barely half, he considers this an achievement; if not, he is cheated of his wealth and acquires an enemy at no extra charge; with curses and insults the borrower pays him back, with abuse instead of honor. [7] Many refuse to lend, not out of meanness, but from fear of being cheated.

[8] To a poor man, however, be generous; keep him not waiting for your alms; [9] c because of the precept, help the needy, and in their want, do not send them away empty-handed.

[10] Spend your money for your brother and friend, and hide it not under a stone to perish; [11] d dispose of your treasure as the Most High commands, for that will profit you more than the gold. [12] Store up almsgiving in your treasure house, and it will save you from every evil; [13] better than a stout shield and a sturdy spear it will fight for you against the foe.

[14] e A good man goes surety for his neighbor, and only the shameless would play him false; [15] forget not the kindness of your backer, for he offers his very life for you. [16] The wicked turn a pledge on their behalf into misfortune, and the ingrate abandons his protector; [17] f going surety has ruined many prosperous men and tossed them about like waves of the sea, [18] has exiled men of prominence and sent them wandering through foreign lands. [19] The sinner through surety comes to grief, and he who undertakes too much falls into lawsuits. [20] Go surety for your neighbor according to your means, but take care lest you fall thereby.

28, 12-26: Further treatment of sins of the tongue and their havoc; cf Sir 5, 12—6, 1; 19, 5-16; 20, 17-25; 23, 7-15. Gossipers and the double-tongued destroy domestic peace (12-16). The whip, the sword, chains, even the nether world are not as cruel as the suffering inflicted by an evil tongue (17-21). Not the just but those who forsake the Lord are victims of their evil tongues (22f). Therefore guard your mouth and tongue as you would an enemy (24ff).

29, 1-20: Some practical maxims concerning the use of wealth. Give to a poor man (8f) lend to a needy neighbor, but repay when a loan falls due lest the lender's burden be increased (1-5) and his kindness abused (6f); through charity build up defense against evil (10-13). Go surety for your neighbor according to your means, but take care (20) not to fall, for the shameless play false and bring their protectors and themselves to misfortune and ruin (14-19).

Frugality and Its Rewards.* 21 g Life's prime needs are water, bread, and clothing, a house, too, for decent privacy. 22 h Better a poor man's fare under the shadow of one's own roof than sumptuous banquets among strangers. 23 Be it little or much, be content with what you have, and pay no heed to him who would disparage your home; 24 a miserable life it is to go from house to house, for as a guest you dare not open your mouth. 25 The visitor has no thanks for filling the cups; besides, you will hear these bitter words: 26 "Come here, stranger, set the table, give me to eat the food you have! 27 Away, stranger, for one more worthy; for my brother's visit I need the room!" 28 Painful things to a sensitive man are abuse at home and insults from his creditors.

CHAPTER 30.

The Training of Children.* 1 He who loves his son chastises him often, that he may be his joy when he grows up.i 2 He who disciplines his son will benefit from him, and boast of him among his intimates. 3 He who educates his son makes his enemy jealous, and shows his delight in him among his friends. 4 At the father's death, he will seem not dead; since he leaves after him one like himself, 5 whom he looks upon through life with joy, and even in death, without regret: 6 The avenger he leaves against his foes, and the one to repay his friends with kindness.

7 He who spoils his son will have wounds to bandage, and will quake inwardly at every outcry. 8 A colt untamed turns out stubborn; a son left to himself grows up unruly. 9 Pamper your child and he will be a terror for you, indulge him and he will bring you grief. 10 Share not in his frivolity lest you share in his sorrow, when finally your teeth are clenched in remorse. 11 Give him not his own way in his youth, and close not your eyes to his follies. 12 j Bend him to the yoke when he is young, thrash his sides while he is still small, lest he become stubborn, disobey you, and leave you disconsolate. 13 Discipline your son, make heavy his yoke, lest his folly humiliate you.

Health of Soul and Body.* 14 Better a poor man strong and robust, than a rich man with wasted frame. 15 More precious than gold is health and well-being, contentment of spirit than coral. 16 No treasure greater than a healthy body; no happiness, than a joyful heart! 17 k Preferable is death to a bitter life, unending sleep to constant illness.* 18 l Dainties set before one who cannot eat are like the offerings placed before a tomb. 19 What good is an offering to an idol that can neither taste nor smell? 20 So it is with the afflicted man who groans at the good things his eyes behold!

21 m Do not give in to sadness, torment not yourself with brooding; 22 gladness of heart is the very life of man, cheerfulness prolongs his days. 23 n Distract yourself, renew your courage, drive resentment far away from you; for worry has brought death to many, nor is there aught to be gained from resentment. 24 Envy and anger shorten one's life, worry brings on premature old age. 25 o One who is cheerful and gay while at table benefits from his food.

CHAPTER 31.

The Proper Attitude toward Riches.* 1 Keeping watch over riches wastes the flesh, and the care of wealth drives away rest. 2 Concern for one's livelihood banishes slumber; more than a serious illness it disturbs repose.* 3 The rich man labors to pile up wealth, and his only rest is wanton pleasure; 4 the poor man toils

29, 21-28: The man who provides his own basic needs of food, clothing and dwelling, and is content with what he has, preserves his freedom and self-respect (21ff). But if he lives as a guest, even among the rich, he exposes himself to insult and abuse (24-28).

30, 1-13: Sound discipline and careful education of children correct frivolity and stubbornness, prevent remorse and humiliation, and bring to parents lasting joy and delight, prestige among friends, jealousy of enemies, perpetuation and vindication of themselves through their offspring (1-6). Lack of discipline and overindulgence of children bring sorrow and disappointment, terror and grief (7-13).

30, 14-25: Health of mind and body and joy of heart are judged more precious than wealth (14ff); bitterness, constant illness and affliction, more difficult to bear than death (17-20). Sadness, resentment, anxiety, envy and anger shorten life: they should be dispelled by cheerfulness and gladness of heart, which help to prolong one's days (21-25).

30, 17: Preferable is death . . . constant illness: the true value of human suffering was revealed through the passion and death of Christ. It serves as reparation for sin and as merit for eternal life.

31, 1-11: Solicitude for acquiring wealth and anxiety over preserving it disturb repose and easily lead to sin and ruin (1-7). Cf Mt 6, 25-34. A rich man who has not sinned or been seduced by wealth is worthy of praise (8-11).

31, 2: The Hebrew adds a verse that seems out of place here: "A faithful comrade drives away reproach, and the friend who keeps secrets is as dear as life."

for a meager subsistence and if ever he rests, he finds himself in want. 5 The lover of gold will not be free from sin, for he who pursues wealth is led astray by it. 6 p Many have been ensnared by gold, though destruction lay before their eyes; 7 it is a stumbling block to those who are avid for it, a snare for every fool.

8 q Happy the rich man found without fault, who turns not aside after gain!* 9 Who is he, that we may praise him? he, of all his kindred, has done wonders, 10 for he has been tested by gold and come off safe, and this remains his glory; he could have sinned but did not, could have done evil but would not, 11 r so that his possessions are secure, and the assembly recounts his praises.

Table Etiquette.* 12 If you are dining with a great man, bring not a greedy gullet to his table, nor cry out, "How much food is here!" 13 s Remember that gluttony is evil. No creature is greedier than the eye: therefore it weeps for any cause. 15 Recognize that your neighbor feels as you do, and keep in mind your own dislikes: 14 Toward what he eyes, do not put out a hand; nor reach when he does for the same dish. 16 Behave at table like a favored guest, and be not greedy, lest you be despised. 17 t Be the first to stop, as befits good manners; gorge not yourself, lest you give offense. 18 If there are many with you at table, be not the first to reach out your hand. 19 u Does not a little suffice for a well-bred man? When he lies down, it is without discomfort. 20 Distress and anguish and loss of sleep, and restless tossing for the glutton! Moderate eating ensures sound slumber and a clear mind next day on rising. 21 If perforce you have eaten too much, once you have emptied your stomach,* you will have relief. 22 Listen to me, my son, and scorn me not; later you will find my advice good. In whatever you do, be moderate, and no sickness will befall you. 23 v On a man generous with food, blessings are invoked, and this testimony to his goodness is lasting; 24 he who is miserly with food is denounced in public, and this testimony to his stinginess is lasting. 25 Let not wine-drinking be the proof of your strength, for wine has been the ruin of many. 26 As the furnace probes the work of the smith, so does wine the hearts of the insolent. 27 w Wine is very life to man if taken in moderation. Does he really live who lacks the wine which was created for his joy? 28 Joy of heart, good cheer and merriment are wine drunk freely at the proper time. 29 Headache, bitterness and disgrace is wine drunk amid anger and strife. 30 More and more wine is a snare for the fool; it lessens his strength and multiplies his wounds. 31 Rebuke not your neighbor when wine is served, nor put him to shame while he is merry; use no harsh words with him and distress him not in the presence of others.

CHAPTER 32.

1 If you are chosen to preside at dinner, be not puffed up, but with the guests be as one of themselves; take care of them first before you sit down; 2 when you have fulfilled your duty, then take your place, to share in their joy and win praise for your hospitality. 3 Being older, you may talk; that is only your right, but temper your wisdom, not to disturb the singing. 4 When wine is present, do not pour out discourse and flaunt not your wisdom at the wrong time. 5 Like a seal of carnelian in a setting of gold is a concert when wine is served. 6 Like a gold mounting with an emerald seal is string music with delicious wine. 7 x Young man, speak only when necessary, when they have asked you more than once; 8 be brief, but say much in those few words, be like the wise man, taciturn. 9 When among your elders be not forward, and with officials be not too insistent. 10 Like the lightning that flashes before a storm is the esteem that shines on modesty. 11 When it is time to leave, tarry not; be off for home! There take your ease, 12 and there enjoy doing as you wish, but without sin or words of pride. 13 Above

31, 12–32, 13: A man observing etiquette at table avoids greed and selfishness (31, 12f), is considerate of a neighbor's likes and dislikes and generous toward him (14f. 23f), observes proper manners (16ff), is moderate in eating and drinking (19-22. 25-30). A good host makes himself one with his guests, is solicitous for them (32, 1f), provides conversation and diversion (3-6), is modest in speech (7f. 10), is respectful of elders (9), polite in comportment and grateful to God for His favors (11ff).

31, 21: Emptied your stomach: the practice of induced vomiting, well-known among pagan Romans, and less well-known among the Jews, seems to be referred to here.

all, give praise to your Creator who showers his favors upon you.

The Providence of God.* 14 y He who would find God must accept discipline; he who seeks him obtains his request. 15 z He who studies the Law masters it, but the hypocrite finds it a trap. 16 a His judgment is sound who fears the Lord; out of obscurity he draws forth a clear plan. 17 b The sinner turns aside reproof and distorts the law to suit his purpose. 18 The thoughtful man will not neglect direction; the proud and insolent man is deterred by nothing. 19 c Do nothing without counsel, and then you need have no regrets. 20 Go not on a way that is set with snares, and let not the same thing trip you twice. 21 Be not too sure even of smooth roads, 22 be careful on all your paths. 23 Whatever you do, be on your guard, for in this way you will keep the commandments. 24 He who keeps the Law preserves himself; and he who trusts in the Lord shall not be put to shame.

CHAPTER 33.

1 No evil can harm the man who fears the Lord; through trials, again and again he is safe.d 2 He who hates the Law is without wisdom, and is tossed about like a boat in a storm. 3 The prudent man trusts in the word of the Lord, and the Law is dependable for him as a divine oracle.* 4 Prepare your words and you will be listened to; draw upon your training, and then give your answer.

5 Like the wheel of a cart is the mind of a fool; his thoughts revolve in circles.* 6 A fickle friend is like the stallion that neighs, no matter who the rider. 7 Why is one day more important than another, when it is the sun that lights up every day? 8 e It is due to the Lord's wisdom that they differ; it is through him the seasons and feasts come and go. 9 f Some he dignifies and sanctifies, and others he lists as ordinary days. 10 g So too, all men are of clay, for from earth man was formed; 11 yet with his great knowledge the Lord makes men unlike; in different paths he has them walk. 12 Some he blesses and makes great, some he sanctifies and draws to himself. Others he curses and brings low, and expels them from their place. 13 h Like clay in the hands of a potter, to be molded according to his pleasure, so are men in the hands of their Creator, to be assigned by him their function. 14 i As evil contrasts with good, and death with life, so are sinners in contrast with the just; 15 see now all the works of the Most High: they come in pairs, the one the opposite of the other.

16 *Now I am the last to keep vigil, like a gleaner after the vintage; 17 since by the Lord's blessing I have made progress till like a vintager I have filled my winepress, 18 I would inform you that not for myself only have I toiled, but for every seeker after wisdom.

Property and Servants.* 19 j Listen to me, O leaders of the multitude; O rulers of the assembly, give ear! 20 Let neither son nor wife, neither brother nor friend, have power over you as long as you live. 21 While breath of life is still in you, let no man have dominion over you. Give not to another your wealth, lest then you have to plead with him; 22 far better that your children plead with you than that you should look to their generosity. 23 Keep control over all your affairs; let no one tarnish your glory. 24 When your few days reach their limit, at the time of death distribute your inheritance.

25 Fodder and whip and loads for an ass; the yoke and harness and the rod of his master. 27 Food, correction and work for a slave; and for a wicked slave, punishment in the stocks. 26 k Make a slave

32, 14—33, 4: God is shown to reveal Himself through the discipline of His Law, a clear and safe plan of life for the pious Jew of old. Direction and counsel are aids in following it (14ff. 18-24; 33, 1. 3f). Sinners and hypocrites, hating the Law or distorting it, fail in wisdom and are devoid of security (32, 15. 17f; 33, 2).

33, 3: Oracle: as the answer given through the Urim and Thummim to the high priest is true, so the Law proves itself true to him who obeys it. Cf Ex 28, 30; Nm 27, 21.

33, 5-15: Contrasts observable in the physical universe as well as in the moral order serve the purposes of divine wisdom (5-9). All creatures are as clay in the hands of their Creator—the fool and the wise man, the sinner, and the just (10-15). This does not imply that man is created to be a sinner: God is not the author of wickedness. Cf Jas 1, 13f.

33, 16ff: Here the author refers to himself as the most recent of the writers who have endeavored to present true wisdom to their readers.

33, 19-33: Public officials should reject every influence that would restrict their freedom in the management of their affairs. They must make their own household subservient to them rather than be subservient to it (19-24). Slaves are to be given food and work and correction but never to be treated unjustly (25-29). Great care should be taken of good slaves (30-33).

work and he will look for his rest; let his hands be idle and he will seek to be free. 28 Force him to work that he be not idle, for idleness is an apt teacher of mischief. 29 Put him to work, for that is what befits him; if he becomes unruly, load him with chains. 30 But never lord it over any human being, and do nothing unjust. 31 l If you have but one slave, treat him like yourself, for you have acquired him with your life's blood; 32 if you have but one slave, deal with him as a brother, for you need him as you need your life: 33 If you mistreat him and he runs away, in what direction will you look for him?

CHAPTER 34.

Trust in the Lord and Not in Dreams.* 1 Empty and false are the hopes of the senseless, and fools are borne aloft by dreams. 2 Like a man who catches at shadows or chases the wind, is the one who believes in dreams. 3 What is seen in dreams is to reality what the reflection of a face is to the face itself. 4 m Can the unclean produce the clean? can the liar ever speak the truth? 5 Divination, omens and dreams all are unreal; what you already expect, the mind depicts. 6 Unless it be a vision specially sent by the Most High, fix not your heart on it; 7 for dreams have led many astray, and those who believed in them have perished. 8 The Law is fulfilled without fail, and perfect wisdom is found in the mouth of the faithful man.

9 A man with training gains wide knowledge; a man of experience speaks sense. 10 One never put to the proof knows little, whereas with travel a man adds to his resourcefulness. 11 I have seen much in my travels, learned more than ever I could say. 12 Often I was in danger of death, but by these attainments I was saved.

13 Lively is the courage of those who fear the Lord, for they put their hope in their savior; 14 n he who fears the Lord is never alarmed, never afraid; for the Lord is his hope. 15 Happy the soul that fears the Lord! In whom does he trust, and who is his support? 16 o The eyes of the Lord are upon those who love him; he is their mighty shield and strong support, a shelter from the heat, a shade from the noonday sun, a guard against stumbling, a help against falling. 17 He buoys up the spirits, brings a sparkle to the eyes, gives health and life and blessing.

True Worship of God.* 18 p Tainted his gifts who offers in sacrifice ill-gotten goods! Mock presents from the lawless win not God's favor. 19 The Most High approves not the gifts of the godless, nor for their many sacrifices does he forgive their sins. 20 Like the man who slays a son in his father's presence is he who offers sacrifice from the possessions of the poor. 21 q The bread of charity is life itself for the needy; he who withholds it is a man of blood. 22 He slays his neighbor who deprives him of his living; he sheds blood who denies the laborer his wages.

23 If one man builds up and another tears down, what do they gain but trouble? 24 If one man prays and another curses, whose voice will the Lord hear? 25 r If a man again touches a corpse after he has bathed, what did he gain by the purification? 26 So with a man who fasts for his sins, but then goes and commits them again: Who will hear his prayer, and what has he gained by his mortification?

CHAPTER 35.

1 To keep the Law is a great oblation,s and he who observes the commandments sacrifices a peace offering.* 2 In works of charity one offers fine flour,* and when he gives alms he presents his sacrifice of praise. 3 To refrain from evil pleases the Lord, and to avoid injustice is an atonement. 4 t Appear not before the Lord

34, 1-17: Confidence placed in dreams, divinations and omens is false because these are devoid of reality (1-8). True confidence is founded on knowledge and experience (9-12), and above all on the fear of the Lord, with its accompanying blessings of divine assistance and protection (13-17).

34, 18-26: To be acts of true religion, sacrifice and penance must be accompanied by the proper moral dispositions. To offer to God goods taken from the poor (18-22), or to practice penance without interior reform, is a mockery, worthless in the sight of God (23-26). Cf Mt 15, 4-7; Mk 7, 9-13.

35, 1-24: Keeping the commandments of the Law and avoiding injustice constitute sacrifice pleasing and acceptable to God (1ff). Offerings also should be made to Him, cheerfully and generously; these He repays sevenfold (4-10). Extortion from widows and orphans is injustice, which God quickly repays (11-18). Punishing the proud and the merciless and coming to the aid of the distressed, He requites all according to their deeds (19-24).

35, 2: Fine flour, together with oil and frankincense, was a prescribed offering to God; cf Lv 2, 1ff.

empty-handed, for all that you offer is in fulfillment of the precepts. 5 The just man's offering enriches the altar and rises as a sweet odor before the Most High. 6 The just man's sacrifice is most pleasing, nor will it ever be forgotten. 7 u In generous spirit pay homage to the Lord, be not sparing of freewill gifts. 8 v With each contribution show a cheerful countenance, and pay your tithes in a spirit of joy. 9 Give to the Most High as he has given to you, generously, according to your means.

10 w For the Lord is one who always repays, and he will give back to you sevenfold. 11 x But offer no bribes, these he does not accept! Trust not in sacrifice of the fruits of extortion. 12 y For he is a God of justice, who knows no favorites. 13 *Though not unduly partial toward the weak, yet he hears the cry of the oppressed. 14 z He is not deaf to the wail of the orphan, nor to the widow when she pours out her complaint;

15 Do not the tears that stream down her cheek cry out against him that causes them to fall? 16 He who serves God willingly is heard; his petition reaches the heavens. 17 The prayer of the lowly pierces the clouds; it does not rest till it reaches its goal, 18 nor will it withdraw till the Most High responds, judges justly and affirms the right.

19 a God indeed will not delay, and like a warrior, will not be still 20 till he breaks the backs of the merciless and wreaks vengeance upon the proud; 21 till he destroys the haughty root and branch, and smashes the scepter of the wicked; 22 till he requites mankind according to its deeds, and repays men according to their thoughts; 23 till he defends the cause of his people, and gladdens them by his mercy. 24 Welcome is his mercy in time of distress as rain clouds in time of drought.

36, 18—37, 15: In the choice of wife, friend or associate, experience is a discerner of character (18-21). Beauty and kindly speech make a woman desirable as wife (22f). The good wife becomes her husband's richest treasure, his helpmate in establishing his household (24-27). A true friend fights for his comrade and shares his spoils with him (37, 5f); a false one deceives and abandons him in time of need (1-4). A true counselor and associate should be sought among those who keep the commandments, not among those who break them and seek their own advantage (7-12). In all things pray to God for light and follow conscience (13ff).

CHAPTER 36.

A Prayer for God's People.* 1 Come to our aid, O God of the universe, and put all the nations in dread of you! 2 Raise your hand against the heathen, that they may realize your power. 3 As you have used us to show them your holiness, so now use them to show us your glory. 4 Thus they will know, as we know, that there is no God but you.

5 Give new signs and work new wonders; show forth the splendor of your right hand and arm; 6 b rouse your anger, pour out wrath, humble the enemy, scatter the foe. 7 Hasten the day, bring on the time; 9 crush the heads of the hostile rulers. 8 Let raging fire consume the fugitive, and your people's oppressors meet destruction.

10 Gather all the tribes of Jacob, that they may inherit the land as of old, 11 c show mercy to the people called by your name; Israel, whom you named your first-born. 12 d Take pity on your holy city, Jerusalem, your dwelling place. 13 Fill Sion with your majesty, your temple with your glory.

14 Give evidence of your deeds of old; fulfill the prophecies spoken in your name, 15 reward those who have hoped in you, and let your prophets be proved true. 16 Hear the prayer of your servants, for you are ever gracious to your people; 17 thus it will be known to the very ends of the earth that you are the eternal God.

Choice of Associates.* 18 The throat can swallow any food, yet some foods are more agreeable than others; 19 as the palate tests meat by its savor, so does a keen mind insincere words. 20 A deceitful character causes grief, but an experienced man can turn the tables on him. 21 Though any man may be accepted as a husband, yet one girl will be more suitable than another: 22 e A woman's beauty makes her husband's face light up, for it surpasses all else that charms the eye; 23 and if, besides, her speech is kindly, his lot is beyond that of mortal men. 24 f A wife is her husband's richest treasure, a helpmate, a steadying column. 25 A vineyard with no hedge will be overrun; a man with no wife becomes a homeless wanderer. 26 Who will trust an armed band that shifts from city to city? 27 g Or a man who has no nest, but lodges where night overtakes him?

CHAPTER 37.

1 Every friend declares his friendship, but there are friends who are friends in name only.h 2 Is it not a sorrow unto death when your bosom companion becomes your enemy? 3 "Alas, my companion! Why were you created to blanket the earth with deceit?" 4 A false friend will share your joys, but in time of trouble he stands afar off. 5 A true friend will fight with you against the foe, against your enemies he will be your shield-bearer. 6 Forget not your comrade during the battle, and neglect him not when you distribute your spoils.

7 Every counselor points out a way, but some counsel ways of their own; 8 be on the alert when one proffers advice, find out first of all what he wants. For he may be thinking of himself alone; why should the profit fall to him? 9 He may tell you how good your way will be, and then stand by to watch your misfortune. 10 Seek no advice from one who regards you with hostility; from those who envy you, keep your intentions hidden. 11 Speak not to a woman about her rival, nor to a coward about war, to a merchant about business, to a buyer about value, to a miser about generosity, to a cruel man about mercy, to a lazy man about work, to a seasonal laborer about the harvest, to an idle slave about a great task: pay no attention to any advice they give. 12 Instead, associate with a religious man, who you are sure keeps the commandments; who is like-minded with yourself and will feel for you if you fall. 13 Then, too, heed your own heart's counsel; for what have you that you can depend on more? 14 A man's conscience can tell him his situation better than seven watchmen in a lofty tower. 15 Most important of all, pray to God to set your feet in the path of truth.

Wisdom and Temperance.* 16 i A word is the source of every deed; a thought, of every act. 17 The root of all conduct is the mind; four branches it shoots forth: 18 j Good and evil, death and life, their absolute mistress is the tongue. 19 A man may be wise and benefit many, yet be of no use to himself. 20 Though a man may be wise, if his words are rejected he will be deprived of all enjoyment. 21 When a man is wise to his own advantage, the fruits of his knowledge are seen in his own person; 22 k when a man is wise to his people's advantage, the fruits of his knowledge are enduring: 23 Limited are the days of one man's life, but the life of Israel is days without number. 24 One wise for himself has full enjoyment, and all who see him praise him; 25 l one wise for his people wins a heritage of glory, and his name endures forever.

26 *My son, while you are well, govern your appetite so that you allow it not what is bad for you; 27 m for not every food is good for everyone, nor is everything suited to every taste. 28 n Be not drawn after every enjoyment, neither become a glutton for choice foods, 29 for sickness comes with overeating and gluttony brings on biliousness. 30 Through lack of self-control many have died, but the abstemious man prolongs his life.

CHAPTER 38.

Sickness and Death.* 1 Hold the physician in honor, for he is essential to you, and God it was who established his profession. 2 From God the doctor has his wisdom, and the king provides for his sustenance. 3 His knowledge makes the doctor distinguished, and gives him access to those in authority. 4 God makes the earth yield healing herbs which the prudent man should not neglect; 5 o was not the water sweetened by a twig that men might learn his power? 6 He endows men with the knowledge to glory in his mighty 37, 16-25: Thoughts determine action. Wisdom is the source of good and life; folly, of evil and death (16ff). If the fruits of a man's wisdom benefit himself, he may be praised in his own lifetime; if they benefit his people, his praise endures after him, in their lives (19-25).

37, 26-30: Temperance and self-control should govern a man's appetite for food, which is intended not to destroy but to preserve life.

38, 1-15: The profession of medicine comes from God, who makes the earth yield healing herbs and gives the physician knowledge of their virtue (1-8). In illness the sick man should cleanse his soul from sin and petition God for help through an offering of sacrifice; the physician, too, does well to invoke God that he may understand the illness and apply the proper remedy (9-14). The sinner, in contrast, defies both his Maker and the doctor (15).

works, [7] through which the doctor eases pain and the druggist prepares his medicines; [8] thus God's creative work continues without cease in its efficacy on the surface of the earth.

[9] p My son, when you are ill, delay not, but pray to God, who will heal you: [10] Flee wickedness; let your hands be just, cleanse your heart of every sin; [11] q offer your sweet-smelling oblation and petition, a rich offering according to your means. [12] Then give the doctor his place lest he leave; for you need him too. [13] There are times that give him an advantage, [14] and he too beseeches God that his diagnosis may be correct and his treatment bring about a cure. [15] He who is a sinner toward his Maker will be defiant toward the doctor.

[16] r My son, shed tears for one who is dead with wailing and bitter lament; as is only proper, prepare the body, absent not yourself from his burial:* [17] Weeping bitterly, mourning fully, pay your tribute of sorrow, as he deserves, [18] one or two days, to prevent gossip; then compose yourself after your grief, [19] s for grief can bring on an extremity and heartache destroy one's health. [20] t Turn not your thoughts to him again; cease to recall him; think rather of the end. [21] u Recall him not, for there is no hope of his return; it will not help him, but will do you harm. [22] v Remember that his fate will also be yours; for him it was yesterday, for you today. [23] With the departed dead, let memory fade; rally your courage, once the soul has left.

Vocations of the Craftsman and the Scribe.* [24] The scribe's profession increases his wisdom; whoever is free from toil can become a wise man. [25] How can he become learned who guides the plow, who thrills in wielding the goad like a lance, who guides the ox and urges on the bullock, and whose every concern is for cattle? [26] His care is for plowing furrows, and he keeps a watch on the beasts in the stalls.

[27] So with every engraver and designer who, laboring night and day, fashions carved seals, and whose concern is to vary the pattern. His care is to produce a vivid impression, and he keeps watch till he finishes his design.

[28] So with the smith standing near his anvil, forging crude iron. The heat from the fire sears his flesh, yet he toils away in the furnace heat. The clang of the hammer deafens his ears, his eyes are fixed on the tool he is shaping. His care is to finish his work, and he keeps watch till he perfects it in detail.

[29] So with the potter sitting at his labor, revolving the wheel with his feet. He is always concerned for his products, and turns them out in quantity. [30] With his hands he molds the clay, and with his feet softens it. His care is for proper coloring, and he keeps watch on the fire of his kiln.

[31] All these men are skilled with their hands, each one an expert at his own task; [32] without them no city could be lived in, and wherever they stay, they need not hunger. [33] They do not occupy the judge's bench, nor are they prominent in the assembly; they set forth no decisions or judgments, nor are they found among the rulers; [34] yet they maintain God's ancient handiwork, and their concern is for exercise of their skill.

CHAPTER 39.

[1] How different the man who devotes himself to the study of the Law of the Most High! He explores the wisdom of the men of old and occupies himself with the prophecies; [2] he treasures the discourses of famous men, and goes to the heart of involved sayings; [3] he studies obscure parables, and is busied with the hidden meanings of the sages. [4] He is in attendance on the great, and has entrance to the ruler. [5] He travels among the peoples of foreign lands to learn what is good and evil among men. [6] His care is to seek the Lord, his Maker, to petition the Most High, to open his lips in prayer, to ask

38, 16-23: A period of mourning for the deceased and care for their burial is becoming (16ff). But grief should not be excessive, for it neither helps the dead, who cannot return, nor fails to harm the living. The mourner's own end will quickly follow, and the time to prepare for it is now (19-23).

38, 24—39, 11: More excellent than the useful service of craftsmen—farmer, engraver, smith, potter (25-34)—is the profession of the scribe (24), who studies and meditates on the Law of the Most High, seeks Him in prayer of thanksgiving, petition and repentance for sin (39, 1. 6f), explores the wisdom of the past and present, travels abroad to observe the conduct of many peoples, and attends rulers and great men. Through the spirit of understanding granted by God, he will show forth his wisdom to the glory of God's Law, gaining renown for generations to come (2-5. 8-11).

pardon for his sins. Then, if it pleases the Lord Almighty, he will be filled with the spirit of understanding; he will pour forth his words of wisdom and in prayer give thanks to the Lord, 7 who will direct his knowledge and his counsel, as he meditates upon his mysteries. 8 He will show the wisdom of what he has learned and glory in the Law of the Lord's covenant. 9 w Many will praise his understanding; his fame can never be effaced; unfading will be his memory, through all generations his name will live; 10 peoples will speak of his wisdom, and in assembly sing his praises. 11 While he lives he is one out of a thousand, and when he dies his renown will not cease.

Praise of God the Creator.* 12 Once more I will set forth my theme to shine like the moon in its fullness! 13 Listen, my faithful children: open up your petals, like roses planted near running waters; 14 send up the sweet odor of incense, break forth in blossoms like the lily. Send up the sweet odor of your hymn of praise; bless the Lord for all he has done! 15 Proclaim the greatness of his name, loudly sing his praises, with music on the harp and all stringed instruments; sing out with joy as you proclaim:

16 x The works of God are all of them good; in its own time every need is supplied. 17 y At his word the waters become still as in a flask; he had but to speak and the reservoirs were made. 18 He has but to command and his will is done; nothing can limit his achievement. 19 z The works of all mankind are present to him; not a thing escapes his eye. 20 His gaze spans all the ages; to him there is nothing unexpected. 21 No cause then to say: What is the purpose of this? Everything is chosen to satisfy a need. 22 His blessing overflows like the Nile; like the Euphrates it enriches the surface of the earth. 23 a Again, his wrath expels the nations and turns fertile land into a salt marsh. 24 For the virtuous his paths are level, to the haughty they are steep; 25 good things for the good he provided from the beginning, but for the wicked good things and bad. 26 b Chief of all needs for human life are water and fire, iron and salt, the heart of the wheat, milk and honey, the blood of the grape, and oil, and cloth; 27 for the good all these are good, but for the wicked they turn out evil. 28 There are storm winds created to punish, which in their fury can dislodge mountains; when destruction must be, they hurl all their force and appease the anger of their Maker. 29 In his treasury also, kept for the proper time, are fire and hail, famine, disease, 30 ravenous beasts, scorpions, vipers, and the avenging sword to exterminate the wicked; 31 in doing his bidding they rejoice, in their assignments they disobey not his command. 32 So from the first I took my stand, and wrote down as my theme: 33 c The works of God are all of them good; every need when it comes he fills. 34 No cause then to say: "This is not as good as that"; for each shows its worth at the proper time. 35 So now with full joy of heart proclaim and bless the name of the Holy One.

Joys and Miseries of Life.* 1 A great anxiety has God allotted, and a heavy yoke, to the sons of men; d from the day one leaves his mother's womb to the day he returns to the mother of all the living,* 2 his thoughts, the fear in his heart, and his troubled forebodings till the day he dies—3 whether he sits on a lofty throne or grovels in dust and ashes, 4 whether he bears a splendid crown or is wrapped in the coarsest of cloaks—5 are of wrath and envy, trouble and dread, terror of death, fury and strife. Even when he lies on his bed to rest, his cares at night disturb his sleep. 6 So short is his rest it seems like none, till in his dreams he struggles as he did by day, terrified by what his mind's

39, 12-35: The sage invites his disciples to join him in joyfully proclaiming his favorite theme: The works of God are all of them good; in its own time every need is supplied (12-16. 32-35). He describes God's omniscience, supreme power and wisdom, whereby all created things, good in themselves, are ever present to Him, obey Him, and fulfill their intended purpose (17-21), bringing blessing to the virtuous, but evil and punishment to the wicked who misuse them (22-31). Cf similar hymns of praise, Sir 36, 1-17; 42, 15—43, 35.

40, 1-16: The author contrasts his previous idyllic description of the universe with the sad picture of the evils that afflict humanity. Like a mighty torrent fed by thunderstorms the successive generations of men continually come and go (11ff). The life of every man, high or low, from birth to death is burdened with manifold fears, anxieties and troubles, by day and often by night, the time appointed for rest (1-7). For sinners, the suffering is many times greater (8ff). What was gained by their violence and injustice is quickly destroyed, but the divine mercy endures forever (14ff).

40, 1: Mother of all the living: the earth from which man was taken. Cf Gn 2, 7; 3, 19f; Jb 1, 21; Ps 138 (139), 15.

eye sees, like a fugitive being pursued; 7 as he reaches safety, he wakes up astonished that there was nothing to fear. 8 So it is with all flesh, with man and with beast, but for sinners seven times more. 9 e Plague and bloodshed, wrath and the sword, plunder and ruin, famine and death: 10 for the wicked, these were created evil, and it is they who bring on destruction.

11 All that is of earth returns to earth, and what is from above returns above,* 12 from strand to strand, in an unending stream, like a mighty torrent fed by thunderstorms; 13 there is joy when a child first lifts his hands, yet all too soon comes his final end. 14 f The offshoot of violence will not flourish, for the root of the godless is on sheer rock; 15 or they are like reeds on the riverbank, uprooted before all other plants; 16 thus all bribes and injustice will be effaced, but the divine mercy endures forever.

17 *Wealth or wages can make life sweet, but better than either is finding a treasure. 18 g A child or a city will preserve one's name, but better than either, attaining wisdom. 19 Sheepfolds and orchards bring flourishing repute, but better than either, a devoted wife; 20 h wine and music delight the soul, but better than either, conjugal love. 21 The flute and the harp offer sweet melody, but better than either, a voice that is true. 22 i Charm and beauty delight the eye, but better than either, the flowers of the field. 23 A friend, a neighbor, are timely guides, but better than either, a prudent wife. 24 A brother, a helper, for times of stress; but better than either, charity that rescues. 25 Gold and silver make one's way secure, but better than either, sound judgment. 26 Wealth and vigor build up confidence, but better than either, fear of God. Fear of the Lord leaves nothing wanting; he who has it need seek no other treasure: 27 j The fear of God is a paradise of blessings; its canopy, all that is glorious.

28 *My son, live not the life of a beggar, better to die than to beg; 29 k when one has to look to another's table, his life is not really a life. His neighbor's delicacies bring revulsion of spirit to one who understands inward feelings: 30 In the mouth of the shameless man begging is sweet, but within him it burns like fire.

CHAPTER 41.

1 O death! how bitter the thought of you for the man at peace amid his possessions,* for the man unruffled and always successful, who still can enjoy lifes pleasures. 2 l O death! how welcome your sentence to the weak man of failing strength, tottering and always rebuffed, cynical and despairing. 3 m Fear not death's decree; remember it embraces those before you, and those after. 4 Thus God has appointed for all flesh; why then should you reject the will of the Most High? Whether one has lived a thousand years, a hundred, or ten, in the nether world he has no claim on life.

5 n A reprobate line are the children of sinners, and witless offspring are in the homes of the wicked. 6 Their heritage is lost to sinners' children, and want abides with their descendants. 7 Children curse their wicked father, for they suffer disgrace through him. 8 Woe to you, O sinful men, who forsake the law of the Most High. 9 If you have children, they will be accursed, and death will overtake you as a sudden calamity. 10 o Whatever is of nought returns to nought, so too the godless from void to void. 11 p Man's body is a fleeting thing, but a virtuous name will never be annihilated. 12 q Have a care for your name, for it will stand by you better than precious treasures in the thousands; 13 the boon of life is for limited days, but a good name, for days without number.

True and False Shame.* 14 My children, heed my instruction about shame; judge

40, 17-27: Of the many treasures that make life sweet, such as health, wealth, children, friends, music, the best gifts are described as true conjugal love, wisdom, and, above all, fear of the Lord; cf Sir 25, 6-11.

40, 28ff: Among the Jews, beggary was considered degrading to human dignity; it was agreeable only to the shameless, who had lost their sense of honor. Cf Sir 29, 22f.

41, 1-13: Whether death seems bitter to one who enjoys peace, success and pleasure, or welcome to one who is weak and in despair, it overtakes everyone and should be accepted as the will of God (1-4). As the human body passes away (11), so alike do those who have sinned through the body and their offspring. Needy, without inheritance and accursed, such children pass on with their parents as though they had never been (5-10). The good name of the virtuous alone endures (11ff).

41, 14—42, 8: The author illustrates the subject of true

of disgrace only according to my rules,
for it is not always well to be ashamed,
nor is it always the proper thing to blush:
15 Before father and mother be ashamed of immorality, before master and mistress,
of falsehood; 16 before prince and ruler,
of flattery; before the public assembly, of crime; 17 before friend and companion, of disloyalty, and of breaking an oath or agreement. 18 Be ashamed of hostility toward the people where you settle, and of conflict with him who pitches his tent beside you; 19 of refusing to give when asked, of defrauding another of his appointed share, 20 of failing to return a greeting, and of rebuffing a friend; 21 r of lusting after another's wife, and of trifling with his maid; 22 s of using harsh words with friends, and of accompanying your gifts with insults; 23 t of repeating what you hear, and of betraying secrets—24 these are the things that you should rightly avoid as shameful if you would be looked upon by everyone with favor.

CHAPTER 42.

1 But of these things be not ashamed, lest you sin through human respect: u 2 of the law of the Most High and his precepts, or of the sentence to be passed upon the sinful; 3 of sharing the expenses of a business or a journey, or of dividing an inheritance or property; 4 v of accuracy of scales and balances, or of tested measures and weights; 5 w of acquiring much or little, or of income from business or trade; of constant training of children, or of scourging a disloyal servant; 6 of a seal to keep an erring wife at home, or of a lock placed where there are many hands;
7 of numbering every deposit, or of recording all that is given or received; 8 of chastisement for the silly and the foolish, or of the aged claiming their just due from the young. Thus you will be truly cautious and recognized by all men as discreet.

A Father's Care for His Daughter.* 9
x A daughter is a treasure that keeps her father wakeful, and worry over her drives away rest; lest she pass her prime unmarried, or when she is married, lest she be repudiated; 10 while unmarried, lest she be seduced, or, as a wife, lest she be proved unfaithful; lest she conceive in her father's home, or be sterile in that of her husband.
11 y Keep a close watch on your daughter, lest she make you the sport of your enemies, a byword in the city, a reproach
among the people, an object of derision in public gatherings. See that there is no lattice in her room, no place that overlooks the approaches to the house. 12 z Let her not parade her charms before men,
or spend her time with married women; 13 for just as moths come from garments,
so harm to women comes from women:
14 better a man's harshness than a woman's indulgence whose shameless daughter is a source of disgrace.

The Works of God in Nature.* 15 a Now will I recall God's works; what I have seen, I will describe. At God's word were his works brought into being; they do his will as he has ordained for them. 16 As the rising sun is clear to all, so the glory of the Lord shines upon all his works; 17
yet even God's holy ones must fail in recounting the wonders of the Lord, though God has given these, his hosts, the strength to stand firm before his glory. 18
He plumbs the depths and penetrates the heart; their innermost being he understands. The Lord possesses all knowledge, and sees from of old the things that are to come: 19 He makes known the past and the future, and reveals the deepest secrets. 20 b No understanding does he lack;
no single thing escapes him. 21 Perennial is his almighty wisdom; he is from all eternity one and the same, 22 c with nothing added, nothing taken away; no need of a counselor for him! 23 How beautiful are all his works! yet all that we see is but a flash. 24 God lives and remains forever, and to meet each need all things obey him. 25 d All of them differ, one from another, yet none of them has he made in vain, for each in turn, as it and false shame with numerous and detailed examples of sin (14-24) and virtue (42, 1-8), following the norm of the Commandments.

42, 9-14: The author considers a daughter to be a source of anxiety to her father, lest she fail to marry, or be seduced, or lest, marrying, she be repudiated, prove unfaithful, or find herself sterile (9f). He is advised to keep a close watch on her at home, and on her companionship while abroad, lest he suffer on her account among the people (11-14).

42, 15—43, 35: These verses comprise a new section. In them the author contemplates God's power, beauty and goodness as manifested in the mighty work of creating and preserving the universe (42, 15ff. 23. 25; 43, 1-27), His omniscience (42, 18ff), His perfect wisdom (21f), His eternity (24). The conclusion is a fervent hymn of praise (43, 28-35). Cf Sir 16, 22—18, 13.

comes, is good; can one ever see enough of their splendor?

CHAPTER 43.

1 The clear vault of the sky shines forth like heaven itself, a vision of glory.[e] 2 The sun, resplendent at its rising: what a wonderful work of the Lord it is! 3 At noon it scorches the surface of the earth, and who can bear its fiery heat? 4 Like a blazing furnace for melting metal, the sun in it course sets the mountains aflame; by its fiery darts the land is consumed; the eyes are dazzled by its light. 5 Great indeed is the Lord who made it, at whose orders it urges on its steeds. 6 f The moon, too, that marks the changing times, governing the seasons, their lasting sign, 7 by which we know the feast days and fixed dates, this light-giver which wanes in its course: 8 Month by month it renews itself, how wondrous in this change! 9 g The beauty, the glory of the heavens are the stars, that rise to adorn the heights of God, 10 at whose command they keep their place and never relax in their vigils. A weapon against the flood waters stored on high, lighting up the firmament by its brilliance, 11 h behold the rainbow! Then bless its Maker, for majestic indeed is its splendor; 12 it vaults the heavens with its glory, this bow bent by the hands of God.

13 His power marks out the path for the lightning, and speeds the arrows of his judgment to their goal. 14 Then the storehouse of the storm clouds is opened, and like vultures the clouds hurry forth. 15 In his majesty he gives the storm its power and scatters the hailstones. 16 The thunder of his voice makes the earth writhe; at sight of him the mountains quake. 17 His awesome presence drives on the south wind, the angry north wind, the hurricane and the storm. 18 He sprinkles the snow like fluttering birds; it comes to settle like swarms of locusts. 19 Its shining whiteness blinds the eyes, the mind is baffled by its steady fall. 20 He scatters frost like so much salt, its crystals sparkle like sapphires. 21 Cold northern blasts he sends that turn the ponds to ice. He freezes over every body of water, and clothes each pool with a coat of mail. 22 When the mountain growth is scorched with heat, and the flowering plains as though by flames, 23 the dripping clouds restore them all, and the scattered dew enriches the parched land. 24 His is the plan that calms the deep, and plants the islands in the sea. 25 i Those who go down to the sea tell part of its story, and when we hear them we are thunderstruck; 26 in it are his creatures, stupendous, amazing, all kinds of life, and the monsters of the deep. 27 j For him each messenger succeeds, and at his bidding acomplishes his will.

28 More than this we need not add; let the last word be, he is all in all!* 29 Let us praise him the more, since we cannot fathom him, for greater is he than all his works; 30 awful indeed is the Lord's majesty, and wonderful is his power. 31 Lift up your voices to glorify the Lord, though he is still beyond your power to praise; 32 extol him with renewed strength, and weary not, though you cannot reach the end: Great is the glory which the Most High has measured out, and his grandeur is from remotest time! 33 k For who can see him and describe him? or who can praise him as he is? 34 Beyond these, many things lie hid; only a few of his works have we seen. 35 l It is the Lord who has made all things, and to those who fear him he gives wisdom.

CHAPTER 44.

Praise of Israel's Great Ancestors.* 1 Now will I praise those godly men, our ancestors, each in his own time:* 2 Rulers of the earth by their authority, men of renown for their might, 3 m or counselors in their wisdom, or seers of all things in prophecy; 4 resolute governors of peoples, or judges with discretion; authors skilled in composition, or poets with collected proverbs; 5 composers of melodious psalms, or discoursers on lyric themes; 6

43, 28: All in all: the perfections reflected in creation are found in a transcendent way in God, who alone is their source.

44, 1—50, 24: As in the previous section God's wisdom shone forth in the works of nature, so in these chapters it is also revealed through the history of God's people as seen in the lives of their patriarchs, prophets, priests and rulers. The example of these great men, whose virtues are here recalled, constitutes strong proof of the value of the author's teaching and of his belief in the canonical Scriptures.

44, 1-15: The reader is here introduced to those men of Israel, later mentioned by name, who through various achievements and beneficial social activities have acquired great renown (1-8. 14f); and also to those who, though forgotten, endure through the fruit of their virtues and through their families because of God's covenant with them (9-13).

stalwart men, solidly established and at peace in their own estates—7 all these were glorious in their time, each illustrious in his day. 8 Some of them have left behind a name that is remembered to their praise; 9 but of others there is no memory, for it perished when they perished, and they are as though they had never lived, they and their children after them. 10 Yet these also were godly men whose virtues have not been forgotten; 11 their wealth remains in their families, their heritage with their descendants; 12 through God's covenant with them their family endures, 13 and their hopes are never shattered.

14 n All these are buried in peace, but their name lives on and on. 15 At gatherings their wisdom is retold, and the assembly sings their praises.

The Early Patriarchs. 16 o Henoch* walked with the Lord and was taken up, that succeeding generations might learn by his example. 17 p Noe, found just and perfect, renewed the race in the time of devastation. Because of his worth there were survivors, and with a sign to him the deluge ended; 18 a lasting agreement was made with him, that never should all flesh be destroyed. 19 q Abraham, father of many peoples, kept his glory without stain: 20 r He observed the precepts of the Most High, and entered into an agreement with him; in his own flesh he incised the ordinance,* and when tested he was found loyal. 21 For this reason, God promised him with an oath that in his descendants the nations would be blessed, that he would make him numerous as the grains of dust, and exalt his posterity like the stars; that he would give them an inheritance from sea to sea, and from the River* to the ends of the earth. 22 s And for Isaac he renewed the same promise because of Abraham, his father. The covenant with all his forebears was confirmed, and the blessing rested upon the head of Jacob. 23 God acknowledged him as the first-born and gave him his inheritance. He fixed the boundaries for his tribes, and their division into twelve.

CHAPTER 45.

Praise of Moses, Aaron and Phinees. 1 From him was to spring the man who won the favor of all: dear to God and men, Moses,* whose memory is held in benediction.t 2 u God's honor devolved upon him,* and the Lord strengthened him with fearful powers; v 3 God wrought swift miracles at his words and sustained him in the king's presence.w He gave him the Commandments for his people, and revealed to him his glory. 4 x For his trustworthiness and meekness God selected him from all mankind; 5 he permitted him to hear his voice, and led him into the cloud, where, face to face,* he gave him the Commandments, the law of life and understanding, that he might teach his precepts to Jacob, his judgments and decrees to Israel.

6 y He raised up also, like Moses in holiness, his brother Aaron, of the tribe of Levi.* 7 He made him perpetual in his office when he bestowed on him the priesthood* of his people; he established him in honor and crowned him with lofty majesty; 8 he clothed him with splendid apparel, and adorned him with the glorious vestments: breeches and tunic and robe with pomegranates around the hem, 9 and a rustle of bells round about, through whose pleasing sound at each step he would be heard within the sanctuary, and

45, 1-5: Moses manifested God's power through miracles (1ff), God's authority through the promulgation of the Commandments and the Law (5), and God's mercy through the intimacy granted him by the Lord for his own faithfulness and meekness (4f). The very personification of the Old Covenant, Moses was also a type of Christ, the Prophet and Legislator of the New; cf Dt 18, 15.

45, 2: God's honor devolved upon him: Moses was actually God's substitute in dealing with Pharao; hence God entrusted His own honor to Moses.

45, 6-21: The author here expresses his reverence and esteem for the priesthood of the Old Covenant. He recalls God's choice of Aaron and his sons for this sublime office (6f), and describes in detail the beauty of the high priest's vestments (8-13). He relates the ordination of Aaron at the hands of Moses, his brother (15), and describes the priestly functions, of offering sacrifice to God (16), and of blessing (15), teaching, governing and judging the people (17); the inheritance of the high priest (20ff); the punishment of those families who were jealous of Aaron (18f); and the confirmation of the covenant of the priesthood with Aaron's descendants through Phinees (23ff).

45, 7: The priesthood of Aaron was superseded by the priesthood of Christ; cf Heb 7, 18-28.

the children of his race would be remembered; [10] the sacred vestments of gold, of violet, and of crimson, wrought with embroidery; the breastpiece for decision, the ephod and cincture [11] with scarlet yarn, the work of the weaver; precious stones with seal engravings in golden settings, the work of the jeweler, to commemorate in incised letters each of the tribes of Israel; [12] on his turban the diadem of gold, its plate wrought with the insignia of holiness, majestic, glorious, renowned for splendor, a delight to the eyes, beauty supreme. [13] Before him, no one was adorned with these, nor may they ever be worn by any except his sons and them alone, generation after generation, for all time. [14] His cereal offering is wholly burnt with the established sacrifice twice each day; [15] for Moses ordained him and anointed him with the holy oil, in a lasting covenant with him and with his family, as permanent as the heavens, that he should serve God in his priesthood and bless his people in his name. [16] He chose him from all mankind to offer holocausts and choice offerings, to burn sacrifices of sweet odor for a memorial, and to atone for the people of Israel. [17] He gave to him his laws, and authority to prescribe and to judge: to teach the precepts to his people, and the ritual to the descendants of Israel. [18] z Men of other families were inflamed against him, were jealous of him in the desert, the followers of Dathan and Abiram, and the band of Core in their defiance. [19] But the Lord saw this and became angry, he destroyed them in his burning wrath. He brought down upon them a miracle, and consumed them with his flaming fire. [20] a Then he increased the glory of Aaron and bestowed upon him his inheritance: The sacred offerings he allotted to him, with the showbread as his portion; [21] the oblations of the Lord are his food, a gift to him and his descendants. [22] But he holds no land among the people nor shares with them their heritage; for the Lord himself is his portion, his inheritance in the midst of Israel.

[23] b Phinees too, the son of Eleazar, was the courageous third of his line when, zealous for the God of all, he met the crisis of his people and, at the prompting of his noble heart, atoned for the children of Israel. [24] Therefore on him again God conferred the right, in a covenant of friendship, to provide for the sanctuary, so that he and his descendants should possess the high priesthood forever. [25] c For even his covenant with David, the son of Jesse of the tribe of Juda, was an individual heritage through one son alone; but the heritage of Aaron is for all his descendants.

[26] And now bless the Lord who has crowned you with glory! May he grant you wisdom of heart to govern his people in justice, lest their welfare should ever be forgotten, or your authority, throughout all time.

CHAPTER 46.

Josue, Caleb and the Judges. [1] Valiant leader was Josue,* son of Nun, assistant to Moses in the prophetic office, formed to be, as his name implies, the great savior of God's chosen ones, to punish the enemy and to win the inheritance for Israel.d [2] What glory was his when he raised his arm, to brandish his javelin against the city! e [3] And who could withstand him when he fought the battles of the Lord?* [4] f Did he not by his power stop the sun, so that one day became two? [5] He called upon the Most High God when his enemies beset him on all sides, and God Most High gave answer to him in hailstones of tremendous power, [6] which he rained down upon the hostile army till on the slope he destroyed the foe; that all the doomed nations might know that the Lord was watching over his people's battles. And because he was a devoted follower of God [7] g and in Moses' lifetime showed himself loyal, he and Caleb,* son of Jephonne, when they opposed the rebel assembly, averted God's anger from the people and suppressed the wicked complaint—[8] h because of this, they were the only two spared from the six hundred thousand infantry, to lead the people into 46, 1-6: Josue, whose name means "the Lord is savior" (1), was the instrument through which God delivered His people in miraculous ways (2-6) by destroying their enemies, whose land He gave to the Israelites as an inheritance (1).

46, 3: The battles of the Lord: cf Jos 6—10.

46, 7-10: Caleb, who with Josue advised Moses and the people in the desert to conquer Chanaan, despite the counsel of their companion scouts and the rebellion of the people, merited to lead the Israelites of the succeeding generation into the Promised Land. Caleb in his old age received as his inheritance a portion of land which he himself had previously conquered; cf Jos 15, 13f.

their inheritance, the land flowing with milk and honey. 9 i And the strength he gave to Caleb remained with him even in his old age till he won his way onto the summits of the land; his family too received an inheritance, 10 that all the people of Jacob might know how good it is to be a devoted follower of the Lord.

11 j The Judges,* too, each one of them, whose hearts were not deceived, who did not abandon God: may their memory be ever blessed, 12 their bones return to life from their resting place, and their names receive fresh luster in their children! 13 k Beloved of his people, dear to his Maker, dedicated from his mother's womb, consecrated to the Lord as a prophet, was Samuel, the judge and priest. At God's word he established the kingdom and anointed princes to rule the people. 14 By the law of the Lord he judged the nation, when he visited the encampments of Jacob. 15 As a trustworthy prophet he was sought out and his words proved him true as a seer. 16 l He, too, called upon God, and offered him a suckling lamb; 17 m then the Lord thundered forth from heaven, and the tremendous roar of his voice was heard. 18 He brought low the rulers of the enemy and destroyed all the lords of the Philistines. 19 n When Samuel approached the end of his life, he testified before the Lord and his anointed prince, "No bribe or secret gift have I taken from any man!" and no one dared gainsay him. 20 o Even when he lay buried, his guidance was sought; he made known to the king his fate, and from the grave he raised his voice as a prophet, to put an end to wickedness.

CHAPTER 47.

Nathan, David and Solomon. 1 After him came Nathan p who served in the presence of David.* 2 q Like the choice fat of the sacred offerings, so was David in Israel. 3 r He made sport of lions as though they were kids, and of bears, like lambs of the flock. 4 s As a youth he slew the giant and wiped out the people's disgrace, when his hand let fly the slingstone that crushed the pride of Goliath. 5 Since he called upon the Most High God, who gave strength to his right arm to defeat the skilled warrior and raise up the might of his people, 6 t therefore the women sang his praises and ascribed to him tens of thousands. When he assumed the royal crown, he battled 7 u and subdued the enemy on every side. He destroyed the hostile Philistines and shattered their power till our own day. 8 With his every deed he offered thanks to God Most High, in words of praise. With his whole being he loved his Maker and daily had his praises sung; 9 v he added beauty to the feasts and solemnized the seasons of each year with string music before the altar, providing sweet melody for the psalms 10 so that when the Holy Name was praised, before daybreak the sanctuary would resound. 11 w The Lord forgave him his sins and exalted his strength forever; he conferred on him the rights of royalty and established his throne in Israel.

12 x Because of his merits he had as his successor a wise son, who lived in security: 13 y Solomon* reigned during an era of peace, for God made tranquil all his borders. He built a house to the name of God, and established a lasting sanctuary. 14 z How wise you were when you were young, overflowing with instruction, like the Nile in flood! 15 Your understanding covered the whole earth, and, like a sea, filled it with knowledge. 16 Your fame reached distant coasts, and their peoples came to hear you; 17 with song and story and riddle, and with your answers, you astounded the nations. 18 *You were 46, 11-20: Of the Judges praised and blessed for their fidelity to God in opposing idolatry, Samuel, a man of spotless integrity, was the greatest (11f, 19). He was judge of the entire nation, and was also a prophet and priest who through his sacrificial offering obtained victory over the Philistines. He established the kingdom, anointed kings (13-18), and even after his death foretold the king's fate and put an end to wickedness (20).

47, 1-11: David, a youthful and fearless warrior, the favorite of all Israel, by defeating Goliath, the boastful Philistine giant, removed the people's disgrace and greatly strengthened their power (1-7). With his whole being he loved and praised God, and his devotion to divine worship led him to develop liturgical cult. David fell into sin, but repenting, received pardon from God and the promise of an everlasting kingdom (8-11).

47, 12-24: Solomon, son and successor of David, inherited peace through his father's conquests. He built the magnificent temple of Jerusalem (12f) and received from God the favor of unparalleled wisdom, through which he obtained great fame (14-17). Luxury and sensuality, however, brought disgrace upon him, and because of his oppressive burdens, he disposed the kingdom for division after his death (19-21. 23f). Nevertheless God did not withdraw His promise of establishing His throne in the descendants of David (22).

47, 18: Cf 2 Kgs 12, 25, where Solomon is called Jedidiah, "beloved of the Lord." The same term is used of Israel in Jer 11, 15.

called by that glorious name which was conferred upon Israel. Gold you gathered like so much iron, you heaped up silver as though it were lead; 19 a but you abandoned yourself to women and gave them dominion over your body. 20 You brought dishonor upon your reputation, shame upon your marriage, wrath upon your descendants, and groaning upon your domain; 21 b thus two governments came into being, when in Ephraim kingship was usurped. 22 c But God does not withdraw his mercy, nor permit even one of his promises to fail. He does not uproot the posterity of his chosen one, nor destroy the offspring of his friend. So he gave to Jacob a remnant, to David a root from his own family. 23 d Solomon finally slept with his fathers, and left behind him one of his sons, expansive* in folly, limited in sense, Roboam, who by his policy made the people rebel; until one arose who should not be remembered, the sinner who led Israel into sin, who brought ruin to Ephraim 24 and caused them to be exiled from their land.

Elias and Eliseus.* Their sinfulness grew more and more, 25 and they lent themselves to every evil,

CHAPTER 48.

1 Till like a fire there appeared the prophet whose words were as a flaming furnace.e 2 Their staff of bread he shattered, in his zeal he reduced them to straits; 3 f by God's word he shut up the heavens and three times brought down fire. 4 How awesome are you, Elias! Whose glory is equal to yours? 5 g You brought a dead man back to life from the nether world, by the will of the Lord. 6 h You sent kings down to destruction, and nobles, from their beds of sickness. 7 i You heard threats at Sinai, at Horeb avenging judgments. 8 j You anointed kings who should inflict vengeance, and a prophet as your successor. 9 k You were taken aloft in a whirlwind, in a chariot with fiery horses. 10 l You are destined, it is written, in time to come to put an end to wrath before the day of the Lord, to turn back the hearts of fathers toward their sons, and to re-establish the tribes of Jacob. 11 Blessed is he who shall have seen you before he dies, 12 m O Elias, enveloped in the whirlwind!

Then Eliseus,* filled with a twofold portion of his spirit, wrought many marvels by his mere word. During his lifetime he feared no one, nor was any man able to intimidate his will. 13 n Nothing was beyond his power; beneath him flesh was brought back into life 14 In life he performed wonders, and after death, marvelous deeds. 15 o Despite all this the people did not repent, nor did they give up their sins, until they were rooted out of their land and scattered all over the earth. But Juda remained, a tiny people, with its rulers from the house of David. 16 Some of these did what was right, but others were extremely sinful.

Ezechias and Isaias.* 17 p Ezechias fortified his city and had water brought into it; with iron tools he cut through the rock and he built reservoirs for water. 18 q During his reign Sennacherib led an invasion, and sent his adjutant; he shook his fist at Sion and blasphemed God in his pride. 19 The people's hearts melted within them, and they were in anguish like that of childbirth. 20 r But they called upon the Most High God and lifted up their hands to him; he heard the prayer they uttered, and saved them through Isaias. 21 s God struck the camp of the Assyrians and routed them with a plague. 22 For Ezechias did what was right and held fast to the paths of David, as ordered by the illustrious prophet Isaias, who saw the truth in visions. 23 t In his lifetime he 47, 23: Expansive: the name Roboam means "the people is expansive," that is, widespread. The sinner: Jeroboam; cf 3 Kgs 12, 2. 20. 26-32.

47, 25—48, 11: The prophetic ministry of Elias amid widespread idolatry is here described as a judgment by fire (47, 25f). Through his preaching, miracles and vengeance against God's enemies within and without Israel, the prophet succeeded for a time in destroying idols and in restoring faith and the worship of the true God (48, 2-8). His miraculous departure from this life gave rise to the belief that he did not die but would return before the end of the world to put an end to wrath and restore the tribes of Israel (9ff). Cf Mt 17, 9-13.

48, 12-16: Eliseus fearlessly continued the work of his predecessor by numerous miracles (12ff), but the obstinacy of the people eventually brought on the destruction of the kingdom of Israel and the dispersion of its subjects. Juda, however, survived under the rule of Davidic kings, both good and bad (15f).

48, 17-25: The fidelity, trust and courage of King Ezechias (17. 22), the zeal of the prophet Isaias, and the prayer of the people (20) availed with God. The Assyrian oppressors were routed (18f, 21), the king's life was prolonged, and consolations were granted the people through Isaias' prophecies concerning the future (23ff), especially the coming of the Messias and the establishment of His kingdom; cf Is 7, 15; 9, 6f; 40—65.

turned back the sun and prolonged the life of the king. 24 u By his powerful spirit he looked into the future and consoled the mourners of Sion; 25 he foretold what should be till the end of time, hidden things yet to be fulfilled.

CHAPTER 49.

Josias and the Prophets. 1 The name Josias* is like blended incense, made lasting by a skilled perfumer.v Precious is his memory, like honey to the taste, like music at a banquet. 2 For he grieved over our betrayals and destroyed the abominable idols. 3 He turned to God with his whole heart, and, though times were evil, he practiced virtue. 4 Except for David, Ezechias and Josias, they all were wicked; they abandoned the Law of the Most High, these kings of Juda, right to the very end. 5 So he gave over their power to others, their glory to a foolish foreign nation 6 w who burned the holy city and left its streets desolate, as Jeremias had foretold; 7 x for they had treated him badly who even in the womb had been made a prophet, to root out, pull down, and destroy, and then to build and to plant. 8 y Ezechiel beheld the vision and described the different creatures of the chariot; 9 z he also referred to Job, who always persevered in the right path. 10 Then, too, the Twelve Prophets—may their bones return to life from their resting place!—gave new strength to Jacob and saved him by their faith and hope.

The Heroes after the Exile. 11 a How can we fittingly praise Zorobabel,* who was like a signet ring on God's right hand, 12 and Josue, Josedec's son? In their time they built the house of God; they erected the holy temple, destined for everlasting glory. 13 b Extolled be the memory of Nehemias! He rebuilt our ruined walls, restored our shattered defenses, and set up gates and bars.

The Earliest Patriarchs. 14 c Few on earth have been made the equal of Henoch, for he was taken up bodily.* 15 d Was ever a man born like Joseph? Even his dead body was provided for. 16 e Glorious, too, were Sem and Seth and Enos; but beyond that of any living being was the splendor of Adam.

CHAPTER 50.

Simon, Son of Jochanan. 1 The greatest among his brethren, the glory of his people, was Simon the priest, son of Jochanan,* in whose time the house of God was renovated, in whose days the temple was reinforced. 2 In his time also the wall was built with powerful turrets for the temple precincts; 3 in his time the reservoir was dug, the pool with a vastness like the sea's. 4 He protected his people against brigands and strengthened his city against the enemy. 5 How splendid he was as he appeared from the Tent, as he came from within the veil! 6 Like a star shining among the clouds, like the full moon at the holyday season; 7 like the sun shining upon the temple, like the rainbow appearing in the cloudy sky; 8 like the blossoms on the branches in springtime, like a lily on the banks of a stream; like the trees of Lebanon in summer, 9 like the fire of incense at the sacrifice; like a vessel of beaten gold, studded with precious stones; 10 like a luxuriant olive tree thick with fruit, like a cypress standing against the clouds; 11 f vested in his magnificent robes, and wearing his garments of splendor, as he ascended the glorious altar and lent majesty to the court of the sanctuary.

12 When he received the sundered victims from the priests while he stood before the sacrificial wood, his brethren ringed him about like a garland, like a stand of cedars on Lebanon; 13 all the

49, 1-10: The author's praise of King Josias (1-3), of the prophets Jeremias and Ezechiel and likewise the minor prophets (7-10) derives from their spirit of fidelity to the Lord and His Law amid the infidelity of kings and people (4ff. 10).

49, 11ff: Zorobabel and Josue, in rebuilding the temple, and Nehemias, the governor, in repairing the walls of the Holy City, also restored what these constructions signify, namely, religious and civil authority as prescribed in the Law.

49, 14ff: The patriarchs here mentioned were glorious because of their spirit of religion, i.e., their profound reverence for God and obedience to Him. The splendor of Adam, moreover, was due to his direct origin from God.

50, 1-21: The son of Jochanan here mentioned was Simon II, in whose time as high priest (219-196 B.C.) great works were accomplished for the benefit of public worship and welfare (1-4). The author, a contemporary of this high priest, describes in great detail and by numerous comparisons the impression of awful majesty received, the lofty joy aroused, at sight of the high priest fully vested entering the sanctuary, ascending the altar (6-11), and, in the presence of the whole assembly of Israel, encircled by assistant priests bearing offerings, sacrificing the burnt offering on the Day of Atonement, while the trumpets blast and the people bow down in adoration of the Most High (12-17). The hymnody, the joyful shouts of the multitude, and finally the high priest's blessing, in which he pronounces—once only in the year, on this occasion—the holy name of Yahweh, climax the description of this most solemn Jewish liturgical function (18-21).

sons of Aaron in their dignity clustered around him like poplars, with the offerings to the Lord in their hands, in the presence of the whole assembly of Israel. 14 Once he had completed the services at the altar with the arranging of the sacrifices for the Most High, 15 g and had stretched forth his hand for the cup, to offer blood of the grape, and poured it out at the foot of the altar, a sweet-smelling odor to the Most High God, 16 h the sons of Aaron would sound a blast, the priests, on their trumpets of beaten metal; a blast to resound mightily as a reminder before the Most High. 17 Then all the people with one accord would quickly fall prostrate to the ground in adoration before the Most High, before the Holy One of Israel.

18 Then hymns would re-echo, and over the throng sweet strains of praise resound. 19 All the people of the land would shout for joy, praying to the Merciful One, as the high priest completed the services at the altar by presenting to God the sacrifice due; 20 i then coming down he would raise his hands over all the congregation of Israel. The blessing of the Lord would be upon his lips, the name of the Lord would be his glory. 21 Then again the people would lie prostrate to receive from him the blessing of the Most High.

22 *And now, bless the God of all, who has done wondrous things on earth; who fosters men's growth from their mother's womb, and fashions them according to his will! 23 May he grant you joy of heart and may peace abide among you; 24 may his goodness toward us endure in Israel as long as the heavens are above.

Epilogue and Canticles. 25 My whole being loathes two nations, the third is not even a people: 26 j Those who live in Seir* and Philistia, and the degenerate folk who dwell in Sichem.

27 *Wise instruction, appropriate proverbs, I have written in this book, I, Jesus, son of Eleazar, son of Sirach, as they gushed forth from my heart's understanding. 28 Happy the man who meditates upon these things, wise the man who takes them to heart! 29 If he puts them into practice, he can cope with anything, for the fear of the Lord is his lamp.

CHAPTER 51.

1 I give you thanks, O God of my father;* I praise you, O God my savior! k I will make known your name, refuge of my life; 2 l you have been my helper against my adversaries. You have saved me from death, and kept back my body from the pit, from the clutches of the nether world you have snatched my feet; 3 m you have delivered me, in your great mercy from the scourge of a slanderous tongue, and from lips that went over to falsehood; from the snare of those who watched for my downfall, and from the power of those who sought my life; from many a danger you have saved me, 4 n from flames that hemmed me in on every side; from the midst of unremitting fire, 5 from the deep belly of the nether world; from deceiving lips and painters of lies, 6 o from the arrows of dishonest tongues. I was at the point of death, my soul was nearing the depths of the nether world; 7 p I turned every way, but there was no one to help me, I looked for one to sustain me, but could find no one. 8 But then I remembered the mercies of the Lord, his kindness through ages past; for he saves those who take refuge in him, and rescues them from every evil. 9 So I raised my voice from the very earth, from the gates of the nether world, my cry. 10 q I called out: O Lord, you are my father, you are my champion and my savior; do not abandon me in time of trouble, in the midst of storms and dangers. 11 I will ever praise your name and be constant in my prayers to you. Thereupon the Lord heard my voice, he listened to my appeal; 12 he saved me from evil of every kind and preserved me in time of trouble.* For this reason I thank him and I praise him; I bless the name of the Lord.

13 r When I was young and innocent, I sought wisdom before all else.* 14 In prayer I begged for her, and from my youth I followed after her. 15 She was rich, like ripening grapes; in her was my heart's joy. My feet were steadfast in her path; thus I attained to her at last. For a short time I paid heed, 16 and I acquired great instruction; 17 as in this way I have made progress, I shall return thanks to him who gives me wisdom. 18 When I had considered how I might make her mine, I strove to do well, lest I should be rebuffed; 19 my soul was troubled over her, and I scrutinized my conduct; I stretched forth my hands toward heaven and bewailed the sins of which I was not aware. 20 s I fixed on her my soul's desires, and with its cleansing, I discovered her. At first acquaintance with her, I gained understanding, such that I shall never forsake her. 21 My whole being was stirred with the sight of her; therefore I have made her my prized possession. 22 The Lord has granted me the request I made of him, and my tongue will declare his praises.

23 t Come to me, you who need instruction, and take your place in my school; 24 how long will you be deprived of what you need, how long will your souls remain so sorely parched? 25 u I open my mouth and speak of her: gain, at no cost, wisdom for yourselves. 26 v Submit yourselves to her yoke, let your souls bear her weight; for she is close to those who seek her, and he who is in earnest finds her. 27 See for yourselves! I labored but a little for her sake, and found great rest. 28 Listen, children, to my teaching! you will win silver and gold through me. 29 If you make my lessons your joy, you need feel no shame when you hear my song! 30 w Do your work in due season, and in his own time God will give you your reward.

51, 12: After this verse the Hebrew text gives the litany of praise contained below. It is similar to Ps 135 (136). Though not found in any versions, and therefore of doubtful authenticity, the litany seems from internal evidence to go back to the time of Sirach:

Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to the God of glory, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to the guardian of Israel, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to the creator of the universe, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to the redeemer of Israel, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to him who gathers the dispersed of Israel, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to him who builds his city and his sanctuary, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to him who makes a horn to sprout forth for the house of David, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to him who has chosen for his priests the sons of Sadoc, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to the shield of Abraham, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to the rock of Isaac, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to the mighty one of Jacob, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to him who has chosen Sion, for his mercy endures forever; give thanks to the king over kings of kings; for his mercy endures forever.

He has lifted up the horn of his people, be this his praise from all his faithful ones, from the children of Israel, the people close to him. Alleluia! (Cf Ps 148, 14).

51, 13-30: An alphabetic canticle describing: a) the approach to wisdom through prayer, persistent study and instruction (13-17), purification from sin, enlightenment and ardent desire; b) the possession of wisdom (18-22). The author concludes with an urgent invitation to men to receive instruction in wisdom from him in his school, and to live by it, because wisdom gives herself to those who seek her (23-26) and brings them rest; and for the labor of their lifetime, God will reward them in the end (27-30). THE BOOK OF ISAIA

The greatest of the prophets appeared at a critical moment of Israel's history. The second half of the eighth century B. C. witnessed the collapse of the Northern Kingdom under the hammerlike blows of Assyria (722), while Jerusalem itself saw the army of Sennacherib drawn up before its walls (701). In the year that Ozia, king of Juda, died (742), Isaia received his call to the prophetic office in the Temple of Jerusalem. Close attention should be given to chapter 6, where this divine summons to be the ambassador of the Most High is circumstantially described.

The vision of the Lord enthroned in glory stamps an indelible character on Isaia's ministry and provides the key to the understanding of his message. The majesty, holiness and glory of the Lord took possession of his spirit and, conversely, he gained a new awareness of human pettiness and sinfulness. The enormous abyss between God's sovereign holiness and man's sin overwhelmed the prophet. Only the purifying coal of the seraphim could cleanse his lips and prepare him for acceptance of the call: "Here I am, send me!"

The ministry of Isaia may be divided into three periods, covering the reigns of Joatham (742-735), Achaz (735-715), and Ezechia (715-687). To the first period belong, for the most part, the early oracles (1—5) which exposed the moral breakdown of Juda and its capital, Jerusalem. With the accession of Achaz, the prophet became adviser to the king, whose throne was threatened by the Syro-Ephraimite coalition. Rejecting the plea of Isaia for faith and courage, the weak Achaz turned to Assyria for help. From this period came the majority of Messianic oracles found in the section of Emmanuel prophecies (6—12).

Ezechia succeeded his father and undertook a religious reform which Isaia undoubtedly supported. But the old intrigues began again, and the king was soon won over to the pro-Egyptian party. Isaia denounced this "covenant with death" and again summoned Juda to faith in Yahweh as her only hope. But it was too late; the revolt had already begun. Assyria acted quickly and her army, after ravaging Juda, laid siege to Jerusalem (701). "I shut up Ezechia like a bird in his cage," boasts the famous inscription of Sennacherib. But Yahweh delivered the city, as Isaia had promised: God is the Lord of history, and Assyria but an instrument in His hands.

Little is known about the last days of this great religious leader, whose oracles, of singular poetic beauty and power constantly reminded his wayward people of their destiny and the fidelity of Yahweh to His promises.

The complete Book of Isaia is an anthology of poems composed chiefly by the great prophet, but also by disciples, some of whom came many years after Isaia. In 1—39 most of the oracles come from Isaia and faithfully reflect the situation in eighth-century Juda. To disciples deeply influenced by the prophet belong sections such as the Apocalypse of Isaia (24—27), the oracles against Babylon (13—14), and probably the poems of 34—35.

Chapters 40—55, sometimes called the Deutero-Isaia, are generally attributed to an anonymous poet who prophesied toward the end of the Babylonian Exile. From this section come the great Messianic oracles known as the songs of the Servant, whose mysterious destiny of suffering and glorification is fulfilled in the passion and glorification of Christ. Chapters 56—66 contain oracles from a later period and were composed by disciples who inherited the spirit and continued the work of the great prophet.

The principal divisions of the Book of Isaia are the following: A. The Book of Judgment: I. Indictment of Israel and Juda (1, 1—5, 30). II. Emmanuel Prophecies (6, 1—12, 6). III. Oracles against the Pagan Nations (13, 1—23, 18). IV. Apocalypse of Isaia (24, 1—27, 13). V. The Lord Alone, Israel's and Juda's Salvation (28, 1—33, 24). VI. The Lord, Sion's Avenger (34, 1—35, 10). VII. Historical Appendix (36, 1—39, 8). B. The Book of Consolation: I. The Lord's Glory in Israel's Liberation (40, 1—48, 21). II. Expiation of Sin, Spiritual Liberation of Israel (49, 1—55, 13). III. Return of the First Captives (56, 1—66, 24).

A. THE BOOK OF JUDGMENT

I: INDICTMENT OF ISRAEL AND JUDA

CHAPTER 1.

Israel's Sinfulness. 1 The vision* which Isaia, son of Amos, had concerning Juda and Jerusalem in the days of Ozia, Joatham, Achaz and Ezechia, kings of Juda.

2 a Hear, O heavens, and listen, O earth, for the Lord speaks: Sons have I raised and reared, but they have disowned me! 3 An ox knows its owner, and an ass, its master's manger; but Israel* does not know, my people has not understood. 4 b Ah! sinful nation, people laden with wickedness, evil race, corrupt children! They have forsaken the Lord, spurned the Holy One of Israel,* apostatized. 5 Where would you yet be struck, you that rebel again and again? The whole head is sick, the whole heart faint. 6 From the sole of the foot to the head there is no sound spot: wound and welt and gaping gash, not drained, or bandaged, or eased with salve. 7 Your country is waste, your cities burnt with fire; your land before your eyes strangers devour (a waste, like Sodom overthrown)—8 and daughter Sion is left like a hut in a vineyard, like a shed in a melon patch, like a city blockaded.

1, 1: The title of the book: an editorial addition. Isaia: meaning "the salvation of the Lord," or "The Lord is salvation." Amos: not the minor prophet. Juda: the Southern Kingdom of the tribes of Juda and Benjamin. Ozia: also called Azaria; cf 4 Kgs 15, 1; 2 Par 26, 1.

1, 3: Israel: not the Northern Kingdom, as in Is 9, 7, exclusively, which Isaia usually calls "Ephraim" from the tribe bordering on the Southern Kingdom, but the entire chosen people; cf Is 8, 14.

1, 4: Holy One of Israel: a title used frequently by Isaia, rarely by other writers.

1, 5-8: Sufferings inflicted upon God's people for their sins.

1, 8: Daughter Sion: Jerusalem. Hut . . . shed: for the shelter of watchmen and laborers.

9 c Unless the Lord of hosts* had left us a scanty remnant, we had become as Sodom, we should be like Gomorra. 10 Hear the word of the Lord, princes of Sodom! Listen to the instruction of our God, people of Gomorra! 11 d What care
I for the number of your sacrifices?* says
the Lord. I have had enough of whole-burnt rams and fat of fatlings; in the blood of calves, lambs and goats I find no pleasure.

12 When you come in to visit me, who asks these things of you? 13 e Trample my courts no more! Bring no more worthless offerings; your incense is loathsome to me.
New moon and sabbath, calling of as-semblies, octaves with wickedness:* these I cannot bear. 14 Your new moons and festivals I detest; they weigh me down, I tire of the load. 15 f When you spread out your hands,* I close my eyes to you;
though you pray the more, I will not listen. Your hands are full of blood! 16 Wash yourselves clean! Put away your misdeeds from before my eyes; cease doing evil; 17
g learn to do good. Make justice your aim: redress the wronged, hear the orphan's plea, defend the widow.

18 h Come now, let us set things right, says the Lord: Though your sins be like scarlet, they may become white as snow;
thought they be crimson red, they may become white as wool. 19 If you are willing, and obey, you shall eat the good things of the land; 20 but if you refuse and resist, the sword shall consume you:
for the mouth of the Lord has spoken!

21 i How has she turned adulteress, the faithful city, so upright! Justice used to lodge within her, but now, murderers.*
22 Your silver is turned to dross, your wine is mixed with water. 23 j Your princes are rebels and comrades of thieves; each one of them loves a bribe and looks for gifts. The fatherless they defend not, and the widow's plea does not reach them. 24 k Now, therefore, says
the Lord, the Lord of hosts, the Mighty
One of Israel: Ah! I will take vengeance on my foes and fully repay my enemies!
25 I will turn my hand against you, and refine your dross in the furnace, removing all your alloy. 26 l I will restore your judges as at first, and your counselors as in the beginning; after that you shall be called city of justice, faithful city. 27 Sion shall be redeemed by judgment, and her repentant ones by justice.* 28 Rebels and sinners alike shall be crushed, those who desert the Lord shall be consumed. 29
You shall be ashamed of the terebinths which you prized, and blush for the groves which you chose.* 30 You shall become like a tree with falling leaves, like a garden that has no water. 31 The strong man shall turn to tow, and his work shall become a spark; both shall burn together, and there shall be none to quench
the flames.

CHAPTER 2.

Sion, the Messianic Capital. 1 This is what Isaia, son of Amos, saw concerning Juda and Jerusalem.*

2 m In days to come,* the mountain of the Lord's house n shall be established as the highest mountain and raised above the hills. All nations shall stream toward it;
3 o many peoples shall come and say:
"Come, let us climb the Lord's mountain, to the house of the God of Jacob, that he may instruct us in his ways, and we may walk in his paths." For from Sion shall go forth instruction, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.* 4 p He shall judge between the nations, and impose terms on many peoples. They shall beat their swords into plowshares and

2, 2-4: The Messianic destiny which ensures Juda's later restoration. In the Messianic kingdom the prophets generally see the Lord's house as the seat of authority and the source of clear and certain doctrine; also, its rule willingly accepted by all peoples, maintained by spiritual sanctions, and tending to universal peace. This passage is found substantially unchanged in Mi 4, 1-3; it probably, although not certainly, has Isaia as its author.

their spears into pruning hooks; one nation shall not raise the sword against another, nor shall they train for war again.

5 O house of Jacob, come, let us walk in the light of the Lord!

The Lord's Judgment against Idols. 6 q You have abandoned your people, the house of Jacob, because they are filled with fortunetellers and soothsayers,* like the Philistines; they covenant with strangers. 7 Their land is full of silver and gold, and there is no end to their treasures; their land is full of horses, and there is no end to their chariots. 8 r Their land is full of idols; they worship the works of their hands, that which their fingers have made. 9 But man is abased, each one brought low. [Do not pardon them!] 10 s Get behind the rocks, hide in the dust, from the terror of the Lord and the splendor of his majesty! 11 The haughty eyes of man will be lowered, the arrogance of men will be abased, and the Lord alone will be exalted, on that day.* 12 For the Lord of hosts will have his day against all that is proud and arrogant, all that is high, and it will be brought low; 13 yes, against all the cedars of Lebanon* and all the oaks of Basan, 14 against all the lofty mountains and all the high hills, 15 against every lofty tower and every fortified wall, 16 against all the ships of Tharsis* and all stately vessels. 17 Human pride will be abased, the arrogance of men brought low, and the Lord alone will be exalted, on that day.

18 The idols will perish forever.

19 Men will go into caves in the rocks and into holes in the earth, from the terror of the Lord and the splendor of his majesty, when he arises to overawe the earth.

20 On that day men will throw to the moles and the bats the idols of silver and gold which they made for worship.

21 They go into caverns in the rocks and into crevices in the cliffs, from the terror of the Lord and the splendor of his majesty, when he arises to overawe the earth.

22 As for you, let man alone, in whose nostrils is but a breath; for what is he worth?

CHAPTER 3.

Judgment of Juda and Jerusalem. 1 The Lord, the Lord of Hosts,* shall take away from Jerusalem and from Juda support and prop [all supplies of bread and water]: t 2 hero and warrior, judge and prophet, fortuneteller and elder, 3 the captain of fifty and the nobleman, counselor, skilled magician, and expert charmer. 4 I will make striplings their princes; the fickle shall govern them, 5 and the people shall oppress one another, yes, every man his neighbor. The child shall be bold toward the elder, and the base toward the honorable. 6 When a man seizes his brother in his father's house, saying, "You have clothes! Be our ruler, and take in hand this ruin!" — 7 then shall he answer in that day: "I will not undertake to cure this, when in my own house there is no bread or clothing! You shall not make me ruler of the people."

8 Jerusalem is crumbling, Juda is falling; for their speech and their deeds are before the Lord, a provocation in the sight of his majesty. 9 Their very look bears witness against them; their sin like Sodom they vaunt, they hide it not. Woe to them! they deal out evil to themselves. 10 Happy the just, for it will be well with them, the fruit of their works they will eat. 11 Woe to the wicked man! All goes ill, with the work of his hands he will be repaid. 12 My people—a babe in arms will be their tyrant, and women will rule them! O my people, your leaders mislead, they destroy the paths you should follow.

13 The Lord rises to accuse, standing to try his people. 14 The Lord enters into judgment with his people's elders and princes: It is you who have devoured the vineyard; the loot wrested from the poor is in your houses. 15 u What do you mean by crushing my people, and grinding down the poor when they look to you? says the Lord, the God of hosts.

16 v The Lord said: Because the daughters of Sion are haughty, and walk with necks outstretched ogling and mincing as they go, their anklets tinkling with every step, 17 the Lord shall cover the scalps of Sion's daughters with scabs, and the Lord shall bare their heads.*

18 On that day the Lord will do away with the finery of the 19 anklets, sunbursts, and crescents; the pendants, bracelets, 20 and veils; the headdresses, bangles, cinctures, perfume 21 boxes, and amulets; the signet rings, and the nose rings;* 22 the court dresses, wraps, cloaks, and purses; 23 the mirrors, linen tunics, turbans, and shawls.

24 Instead of perfume there will be stench, instead of the girdle, a rope; and for the coiffure, baldness; for the rich gown, a sackcloth skirt. Then, instead of beauty: 25 Your men will fall by the sword, and your champions, in war; 26 her gates will lament and mourn, as the city sits desolate on the ground.

CHAPTER 4.

1 Seven women will take hold of one man* on that day, saying: "We will eat our own food and wear our own clothing; only let your name be given us, put an end to our disgrace!"

The Messianic Branch. 2 w On that day, the branch of the Lord* will be luster and glory, and the fruit of the earth will be honor and splendor for the survivors of Israel. 3 x He who remains in Sion and he that is left in Jerusalem will be called holy: every one marked down for life* in Jerusalem. 4 When the Lord washes away the filth of the daughters of Sion, and purges Jerusalem's blood from her midst with a blast of searing judgment, 5 y then will the Lord create, over the whole site of Mount Sion and over her place of assembly, a smoking cloud by day and a light of flaming fire by night. 6 For over all, his glory will be shelter and protection: shade from the parching heat of day, refuge and cover from storm and rain.

CHAPTER 5.

The Vineyard Song. 1 Let me now sing of my friend, my friend's song concerning his vineyard. My friend had a vineyard* on a fertile hillside; 2 he spaded it, cleared it of stones, and planted the choicest vines; within it he built a watchtower, and hewed out a wine press. Then he looked for the crop of grapes, but what it yielded was wild grapes.

3 Now, inhabitants of Jerusalem and men of Juda, judge between me and my vineyard: 4 what more was there to do for my vineyard that I had not done? Why, when I looked for the crop of grapes, did it bring forth wild grapes? 5 Now, I will let you know what I mean to do to my vineyard: take away its hedge, give it to grazing, break through its wall, let it be trampled! 6 Yes, I will make it a ruin: it shall not be pruned or hoed, but overgrown with thorns and briers; I will command the clouds not to send rain upon it. 7 The vineyard of the Lord of hosts is the house of Israel, and the men of Juda are his cherished plant; he looked for judgment, but see, bloodshed! for justice, but hark, the outcry!*

Doom of the Unjust. 8 z Woe to you who join house to house,* who connect field with field, till no room remains, and you are left to dwell alone in the midst of the land! 9 a In my hearing the Lord of hosts has sworn: Many houses shall be in ruins, large ones and fine, with no one to live in them. 10 Ten acres* of vineyard shall yield but one bath, and a homor of seed shall yield but an epha. 17 Lambs shall graze there at pasture, and kids shall eat in the ruins of the rich.

11 Woe to those who demand strong drink as soon as they rise in the morning, and linger into the night while wine inflames them! 12 b With harp and lyre, timbrel and flute, they feast on wine; but what the Lord does, they regard not, the work of his hands they see not. 13 Therefore my people go into exile, because they do not understand; their nobles die of hunger, and their masses are parched with thirst. 14 c Therefore the nether world* enlarges its throat and opens its maw without limit; down go their nobility and their masses, their throngs and their revelry. 15 Men shall be abased, each one brought low, and the eyes of the haughty lowered, 16 but the Lord of hosts shall be exalted by his judgment, and God the Holy shall be shown holy by his justice.

3, 21: Nose rings: of gold, a feminine ornament in the East; cf note on Gn 24, 22.

4, 1: Seven women . . . one man: the disproportion of the sexes due to war leaves the female population almost without male partners. The women are eager to marry, not for support, but to avoid the disgrace of being childless.

18 Woe to those who tug at guilt with cords of perversity, and at sin as if with cart ropes! 19 d To those who say, "Let him make haste and speed his work, that we may see it; on with the plan of the Holy One of Israel! let it come to pass, that we may know it!" 20 Woe to those who call evil good, and good evil, who change darkness into light, and light into darkness, who change bitter into sweet, and sweet into bitter! 21 e Woe to those who are wise in their own sight, and prudent in their own esteem! 22 f Woe to the champions at drinking wine, the valiant at mixing strong drink! 23 g To those who acquit the guilty for bribes, and deprive the just man of his rights! 24 Therefore, as the tongue of fire licks up stubble, as dry grass shrivels in the flame, even so their root shall become rotten and their blossom scatter like dust; for they have spurned the law of the Lord of hosts, and scorned the word of the Holy One of Israel. 25 Therefore the wrath of the Lord blazes against his people, he raises his hand to strike them; when the mountains quake, their corpses shall be like refuse in the streets. For all this, his wrath is not turned back, and his hand is still outstretched.

Invasion. 26 *He will give a signal to a far-off nation, and whistle to them from the ends of the earth; speedily and promptly will they come. 27 None of them will stumble with weariness, none will slumber and none will sleep. None will have his waist belt loose, nor the thong of his sandal broken. 28 Their arrows are sharp, and all their bows are bent. The hoofs of their horses seem like flint, and their chariot wheels like the hurricane. 29 Their roar is that of the lion, like the lion's whelps they roar; they growl and seize the prey, they carry it off and none will rescue it. 30 b [They will roar over it, on that day, with a roaring like that of the sea.]

II: EMMANUEL PROPHECIES

CHAPTER 6.

Call of Isaia. 1 In the year king Ozia died,* I saw the Lord seated on a high and lofty throne, i with the train of his garment filling the temple.* 2 Seraphim were stationed above; each of them had six wings: 3 j with two they veiled their faces, with two they veiled their feet, and with two they hovered aloft.

"Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts!" they cried one to the other. "All the earth is filled with his glory!" 4 k At the sound of that cry, the frame of the door shook and the house was filled with smoke.*

5 l Then I said, "Woe is me, I am doomed!* For I am a man of unclean lips, living among a people of unclean lips; yet my eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts!" 6 Then one of the seraphim flew to me, holding an ember which he had taken with tongs from the altar.

7 m He touched my mouth with it. "See," he said, "now that this has touched your lips,* your wickedness is removed, your sin purged."

8 Then I heard the voice of the Lord saying, "Whom shall I send? Who will go for us?" "Here I am," I said; "send me!" 9 n And he replied: *Go and say to this people: Listen carefully, but you shall not understand! Look intently, but you shall know nothing! 10 o You are to make

6, 1ff: Temple: the Holy Place, just in front of the Holy of Holies. Seraphim: literally "the burning ones," are celestial beings who surround the throne of God. Each has six wings. Reverence for the divine majesty causes them to veil their faces with two wings; modesty, to veil their extremities in similar fashion; alacrity in God's service, to extend two wings in preparation for flight. Holy, holy, holy: God's perfect interior holiness whose exterior manifestation is his glory. These words are found in the Roman liturgy just before the Canon of the Mass.

6, 4: Smoke: reminiscent of the clouds which surrounded God at Mount Sinai; cf Ex 19, 16-19; Dt 4, 11f.

6, 5: Doomed: it was popularly believed that to see God would lead to one's death; cf Gn 32, 31; Ex 33, 20; Jgs 13, 22.

6, 7: Touched your lips: Isaia is thus symbolically purified to be worthy of his vocation as God's prophet. In the Roman liturgy, the celebrant at Mass makes reference to this incident just before he reads the Gospel.

6, 9f: The truth that the nation will remain impenitent is vividly foretold, as if its obstinacy would be caused, instead of merely occasioned, by the prophet's warning. Cf Mt 13, 13ff; Mk 4, 12; Lk 8, 10.

the heart of this people sluggish, to dull their ears and close their eyes; else their eyes will see, their ears hear, their heart understand, and they will turn and be healed.

11 "How long, O Lord?" I asked. And he replied: Until the cities are desolate, without inhabitants, houses, without a man, and the earth is a desolate waste. 12 Until the Lord removes men far away,* and the land is abandoned more and more. 13 p If there be still a tenth part in it, then this in turn shall be laid waste; as with a terebinth or an oak whose trunk remains when its leaves have fallen. [Holy offspring is the trunk.]

CHAPTER 7.

Birth of Emmanuel. 1 In the days of Achaz,* king of Juda, son of Joatham, son of Ozia, Rasin, king of Aram and Phacee, king of Israel, son of Romelia, went up to attack Jerusalem,q but they were not able to conquer it. 2 When word came to the house of David that Aram was encamped in Ephraim, the heart of the king and the heart of the people trembled, as the trees of the forest tremble in the wind.

3 r Then the Lord said to Isaia: Go out to meet Achaz, you and your son Shear-Jashub,* at the end of the conduit of the upper pool, on the highway of the fuller's field, and say to him: 4 Take care you remain tranquil and do not fear; let not your courage fail before these two stumps of smoldering brands [the blazing anger of Rasin and the Arameans, and of the son of Romelia], 5 because of the mischief that Aram [Ephraim and the son of Romelia] plots against you, saying, 6 "Let us go up and tear Juda asunder, make it our own by force, and appoint the son of Tabeel* king there."

7 Thus says the Lord: This shall not stand, it shall not be! 8 Damascus is the capital of Aram, and Rasin the head of Damascus; Samaria is the capital of Ephraim, and Romelia's son the head of Samaria. 9 s But within sixty years and five,* Ephraim shall be crushed, no longer a nation. Unless your faith is firm you shall not be firm!

10 Again the Lord spoke to Achaz: 11 Ask for a sign from the Lord, your God; let it be deep as the nether world, or high as the sky!* 12 But Achaz answered, "I will not ask! I will not tempt the Lord!"* 13 Then he said: Listen, O house of David! Is it not enough for you to weary men, must you also weary my God? 14 Therefore the Lord himself will give you this sign: the virgin shall be with child, and bear a son, and shall name him Emmanuel. 15 He shall be living on curds and honey by the time he learns to reject the bad and choose the good. 16 For before the child learns to reject the bad and choose the good, the land of those two kings whom you dread shall be deserted.

17 The Lord shall bring upon you and your people and your father's house days worse than any since Ephraim seceded from Juda. [This means the king of Assyria.] 18 On that day the Lord shall whistle for the fly that is in the farthest streams of Egypt, and for the bee in the land of Assyria. 19 All of them shall come and settle in the steep ravines and in the rocky clefts, on all thornbushes and in all pastures.

20 *On that day the Lord shall shave with the razor hired from across the p Is 10, 22.—q 4 Kgs 16, 5; 2 Par 28, 5-15.—r Is 36, 2; 2 Par 32, 3.—s Is 8, 6ff.

6, 12: Several limited deportations in the time of Isaia would later culminate in the Babylonian Exile.

7, 1: Days of Achaz: who ruled from 735 to 715 B. C. This attack against Jerusalem by the kings of Aram (Syria) and Israel was occasioned by Achaz' refusal to enter with them into an anti-Assyrian alliance; cf 4 Kgs 16.

7, 3: Shear-Jashub: this name means "a remnant will return."

7, 6: Son of Tabeel: an adherent of Jerusalem's enemies. His appointment would interrupt the lawful succession from David.

7, 9: Within sixty years and five: if the text is correct, its reference is unknown.

7, 11: Deep . . . sky: an extraordinary or miraculous sign that would prove God's firm will to save the royal house of David from its oppressors.

7, 12: Tempt the Lord: Achaz expresses in this hypocritical way his preference for depending upon the might of Assyria rather than upon God.

7, 14: The sign proposed by Isaia was concerned with the preservation of Juda in the midst of distress (cf 7, 15. 17), but more especially with the fulfillment of God's earlier promise to David (2 Kgs 7, 12-16) in the coming of Emmanuel (meaning, "With us is God") as the ideal king (cf Is 9, 5-6; 11, 1-5). The Church has always followed St. Matthew in seeing the transcendent fulfillment of this verse in Christ and His Virgin Mother. The prophet need not have known the full force latent in his own words; and some Catholic writers have sought a preliminary and partial fulfillment in the conception and birth of the future King Ezechia, whose mother, at the time Isaia spoke, would have been a young, unmarried woman (Hebrew, almah). The Holy Spirit was preparing, however, for another Nativity which alone could fulfill the divinely given terms of Emmanuel's mission, and in which the perpetual virginity of the Mother of God was to fulfill also the words of this prophecy in the integral sense intended by the divine Wisdom.

7, 15: Curds and honey: the restricted diet of those who remain after devastation has changed the once fertile fields of Juda into grazing land; cf Is 7, 21-25.

7, 20: God will use the Assyrians from across the River (the Euphrates) as His instrument (razor) to inflict disgrace and suffering upon His people.

River [with the king of Assyria] the head, and the hair between the legs. It shall also shave off the beard.

21 On that day a man shall keep a heifer or a couple of sheep, and from their abundant yield of milk he shall live on curds; 22 curds and honey shall be the food of all who remain in the land. 23 On that day every place where there used to be a thousand vines, worth a thousand pieces of silver, shall be turned to briers and thorns. 24 Men shall go there with bow and arrows; for all the country shall be briers and thorns. 25 For fear of briers and thorns you shall not go upon any mountainside which used to be hoed with the mattock; they shall be grazing land for cattle and shall be trampled upon by sheep.

CHAPTER 8.

The Son of Isaia. 1 The Lord said to me: Take a large cylinder-seal and inscribe on it in ordinary letters:* "Belonging to Maher-shalal-hash-baz." 2 And I took reliable witnesses,* Uria the priest, and Zacharia, son of Barachia. 3 Then I went to the prophetess* and she conceived and bore a son. The Lord said to me: Name him Maher-shalal-hash-baz, 4 for before the child knows how to call his father or mother by name, the wealth of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria shall be carried off by the king of Assyria.

t Jn 9, 7. 11.—u Rom 9, 33; I Pt 2, 8.—v Lv 19, 31; Dt 18, 10ff.

8, 1: Ordinary letters: easily read by all. Maher-shalal-hash-baz: a symbolic name to be given to another son of Isaia (v 3); it means "quick spoils; speedy plunder," and describes what the Assyrians will do.

8, 2: Reliable witnesses: who would testify that Isaia had indeed prophesied the future destruction. Uria the priest: cf 4 Kgs 16, 10.

8, 3: The prophetess: wife of Isaia.

8, 6ff: This people: Juda. Waters of Siloe: the stream that flows into the pool of Siloe in Jerusalem, its slow current symbolizing the silent, divine protection which Juda has rejected. God will therefore summon the mighty Assyrian army, symbolized by the River (Euphrates), to devastate Juda, which, however, will not be entirely destroyed, because it is the land of Emmanuel.

8, 10: The plan of Israel's enemies will be thwarted because, as the name "Emmanuel" signifies, With us is God.

8, 16: Kept among my disciples: for preservation and transmission.

8, 18: Signs: Isaia and his sons had symbolic names.

8, 19: Chirp and mutter: a mocking reference to the sounds uttered by necromancers, as if the dead were speaking; all such practices were forbidden.

8, 21f: These verses have been transposed and placed within Is 14, 25, which affords the context in which they can be understood.

8, 23: Zabulon . . . Nephthali: northern Palestine, which was first to be attacked by the Assyrians; God, however, redeems it, as He redeems all His people. Seaward road: from Damascus, across southern Galilee to the Mediterranean Sea. District of the Gentiles: northern Galilee, inhabited by pagans; cf Jos 20, 7; Is 9, 1. Mt 4, 15f refers to this, since Jesus began His public mission in Galilee.

5 Again the Lord spoke to me: 6 t Because this people* has rejected the waters of Siloe that flow gently, and melts with fear before the loftiness of Rasin and Romelia's son, 7 therefore the Lord raises against them the waters of the River, great and mighty [the king of Assyria and all his power]. It shall rise above all its channels, and overflow all its banks; 8 it shall pass into Juda, and flood it all throughout: up to the neck it shall reach; it shall spread its wings the full width of your land, Emmanuel!

9 Know, O peoples, and be appalled! Give ear, all you distant lands! Arm, but be crushed! Arm, but be crushed! 10 Form a plan, and it shall be thwarted; make a resolve, and it shall not be carried out, for "With us is God!"*

Disciples of Isaia. 11 For thus said the Lord to me, taking hold of me and warning me not to walk in the way of this people: 12 Call not alliance what this people calls alliance, and fear not, nor stand in awe of what they fear. 13 But with the Lord of hosts make your alliance—for him be your fear and your awe. 14 u Yet he shall be a snare, an obstacle and a stumbling stone to both the houses of Israel, a trap and a snare to those who dwell in Jerusalem; 15 and many among them shall stumble and fall, broken, snared, and captured.

16 The record is to be folded and the sealed instruction kept among my disciples.* 17 For I will trust in the Lord, who is hiding his face from the house of Jacob; yes, I will wait for him. 18 Look at me and the children whom the Lord has given me: we are signs* and portents in Israel from the Lord of hosts who dwells on Mount Sion. 19 v And when they say to you, "Inquire of mediums and fortune-tellers (who chirp and mutter!); should not a people inquire of their gods, apply to the dead on behalf of the living?" — 20 then this document will furnish its instruction. That kind of thing they will surely say.

The Prince of Peace. 23 First he degraded the land of Zabulon and the land of Nepthali;* but in the end he has glorified the seaward road, the land west of the Jordan, the District of the Gentiles. Anguish has taken wing, dispelled is darkness: for there is no gloom where but now there was distress.

CHAPTER 9.

1 The people [w] who walked in darkness have seen a great light; upon those who dwelt in the land of gloom a light has shone. 2 You have brought them abundant joy and great rejoicing, as they rejoice before you as at the harvest, as men make merry when dividing spoils. 3 For the yoke that burdened them, the pole on their shoulder, and the rod of their taskmaster you have smashed, as on the day of Madian. 4 For every boot that tramped in battle, every cloak rolled in blood, will be burned as fuel for flames.

5 [x] For a child* is born to us, a son is given us; upon his shoulder dominion rests. They name him Wonder-Counselor, God-Hero, Father-Forever, Prince of Peace. 6 [y] His dominion is vast and forever peaceful, from David's throne, and over his kingdom, which he confirms and sustains by judgment and justice, both now and forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will do this!

Fall of the Northern Kingdom. 7 The Lord has sent word against Jacob, it falls upon Israel; 8 and all the people know it, Ephraim and those who dwell in Samaria,
those who say in arrogance and pride of heart, 9 "Bricks have fallen, but we will build with cut stone; sycamores are felled,
but we will replace them with cedars." 10
But the Lord raises up their foes against them and stirs up their enemies to action:
11 Aram* on the east and the Philistines on the west devour Israel with open mouth. For all this, his wrath is not turned back, and his hand is still outstretched!

12 The people do not turn to him who struck them, nor seek the Lord of hosts.
13 So the Lord severs from Israel head and tail, palm branch and reed in one day. 14
[The elder and the noble are the head,
the prophet who teaches falsehood is the tail.] 15 [z] The leaders of this people mislead them and those to be led are engulfed. 16 For this reason, the Lord does not spare their young men, and their orphans and widows he does not pity; they are wholly profaned and sinful, and every mouth gives vent to folly. For all this, his wrath is not turned back, his hand is still outstretched!

17 For wickedness burns like fire, devouring brier and thorn; it kindles the forest thickets, which go up in columns of smoke. 18 At the wrath of the Lord of hosts the land quakes, and the people are like fuel for fire; no man spares his brother, each devours the flesh of his neighbor.
19 Though they hack on the right, they are hungry; though they eat on the left,
they are not filled. 20 Manasse devours Ephraim,* and Ephraim Manasse; together they turn on Juda. For all this, his wrath is not turned back, his hand is still
outstretched!

CHAPTER 10.

Social Injustice. 1 Woe to those who enact unjust statutes and who write oppressive decrees,[a] 2 [b] depriving the needy of judgment and robbing my people's poor of their rights, making widows their plunder, and orphans their prey! 3 What will you do on the day of punishment, when ruin comes from afar? To whom will you flee for help? Where will you leave your wealth, 4 lest it sink beneath the captive or fall beneath the slain? For all this, his wrath is not turned back, his hand is still
outstretched!

Assyria the Unconscious Instrument of God. 5 Woe to Assyria! My rod in anger, my staff in wrath. 6 Against an impious nation* I send him, and against a people under my wrath I order him to seize plunder, carry off loot, and tread them down like the mud of the streets. 7 But this is not what he intends, nor does he have this in mind; rather, it is in his heart to destroy, to make an end of nations not a few. 8 "Are not my commanders all kings?" he says, 9 [c] "is not Chalane like Charchamis, or Hamath like Arphad, or Samaria like Damascus?* 10 Just as my hand reached out to idolatrous kingdoms that had more images than Jerusalem and Samaria, 11 [d] just as I treated Samaria and 9, 5: A child: the Emmanuel of Is 7, 14 and 8, 8; cf Is 11, 1.2.9. In Christian tradition and liturgy, this passage is used to refer to Christ. Upon his shoulder dominion rests: authority. Wonder-Counselor: remarkable for his wisdom and prudence. God-Hero: a warrior and a defender of his people, like God Himself. Father-Forever: ever devoted to his people. Prince of Peace: his reign will be characterized by peace.

her idols, shall I not do to Jerusalem and her graven images?"

12 [But when the Lord has brought to an end all his work on Mount Sion and in Jerusalem, I will punish the utterance of the king of Assyria's proud heart, and the boastfulness of his haughty eyes. 13 For he says:] "By my own power I have done it, and by my wisdom, for I am shrewd. I have moved the boundaries of peoples, their treasures I have pillaged, and, like a giant, I have put down the enthroned. 14 My hand has seized like a nest the riches of nations; as one takes eggs left alone, so I took in all the earth; no one fluttered a wing, or opened a mouth, or chirped!"

15 Will the axe boast against him who hews with it? Will the saw exalt itself above him who wields it? As if a rod could sway him who lifts it, or a staff him who is not wood! 16 Therefore the Lord, the Lord of hosts, will send among his fat ones* leanness, and instead of his glory there will be kindling like the kindling of fire. 17 The Light of Israel will become a fire, Israel's Holy One a flame, that burns and consumes his briers and his thorns in a single day. 18 His splendid forests and orchards will be consumed, soul and body; 19 and the remnant of the trees in his forest will be so few, like poles set up for signals, that any boy can record them. 20 On that day the remnant of Israel, the survivors of the house of Jacob, will no more lean upon him who struck them; but they will lean upon the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, in truth. 21 A remnant will return,* the remnant of Jacob, to the mighty God. 22 e For though your people, O Israel, were like the sand of the sea, only a remnant of them will return; their destruction is decreed as overwhelming justice demands.

23 Yes, the destruction he has decreed, the Lord, the God of hosts, will carry out within the whole land. 24 Therefore thus says the Lord, the God of hosts: O my people, who dwell in Sion, do not fear the Assyrian, though he strikes you with a rod, and raises his staff against you. 25 For only a brief moment more, and my anger shall be over; but them I will destroy in wrath.f 26 Then the Lord of hosts will raise against them a scourge such as struck Madian at the rock of Oreb; and he will raise his staff over the sea as he did against Egypt. 27 *On that day, his burden shall be taken from your shoulder, and his yoke shattered from your neck.

Sennacherib's Invasion. He has come up from the direction of Rimmon, 28 he has reached Aiath, passed through Magron, at Machmas his supplies are stored. 29 They cross the ravine: "We will spend the night at Geba." Rama is in terror, Gabaa of Saul has fled. 30 Cry and shriek, O daughter of Gallim! Hearken, Laisa! Answer her, Anathoth! 31 Medemena is in flight, the inhabitants of Gebim seek refuge. 32 *Even today he will halt at Nobe, he will shake his fist at the mount of daughter Sion, the hill of Jerusalem! 33 Behold, the Lord, the Lord of hosts, lops off the boughs with terrible violence; the tall of stature are felled, and the lofty ones brought low; 34 the forest thickets are felled with the axe, and Lebanon in its splendor falls.

CHAPTER 11.

The Rule of Emmanuel. 1 But a shoot shall sprout from the stump of Jesse,* and from his roots a bud shall blossom.g 2 h The spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him:* a spirit of wisdom and of understanding, a spirit of counsel and of strength, a spirit of knowledge and of fear of the Lord, and his delight shall be the fear of the Lord. 3 Not by appearance shall he judge, nor by hearsay shall he decide, 4 i but he shall judge the poor with justice, and decide aright for the land's afflicted. He shall strike the ruthless with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips he shall slay the wicked. 5 Justice shall be the band around his waist, and faithfulness a belt upon his hips.

6 Then the wolf shall be a guest of the Union of Ephraim and Juda. 10 [l] On that day, the root of Jesse, set up as a signal for the nations, the Gentiles shall seek out, for his dwelling shall be glorious. 11 [m] On that day, the Lord shall again take it in hand to reclaim the remnant of his people that is left from Assyria and Egypt, Phathures, Ethiopia, and Elam, Sennaar, Hamath, and the isles of the sea. 12 He shall raise a signal to the nations and gather the outcasts of Israel; the dispersed of Juda he shall assemble from the four corners of the earth. 13 [n] The envy of Ephraim shall pass away, and the rivalry of Juda be removed; Ephraim shall not be jealous of Juda, and Juda shall not be hostile to Ephraim; 14 but they shall swoop down on the foothills of the Philistines to the west, together they shall plunder the Cedemites;* Edom and Moab shall be their possessions, and the Ammonites their subjects. 15 [o] The Lord shall dry up the tongue of the Sea of Egypt,* and wave his hand over the Euphrates in his fierce anger and shatter it into seven streamlets, so that it can be crossed in sandals. 16 There shall be a highway for the remnant of his people that is left from Assyria, as there was for Israel when he came up from the land of Egypt.

Song of Thanksgiving. 1 On that day, you will say:* I give you thanks, O Lord; though you have been angry with me, your anger has abated, and you have consoled me. 2 [p] God indeed is my savior; I am confident and unafraid. My strength and my courage is the Lord, and he has been my savior.

3 With joy you will draw water at the fountain of salvation, 4 and say on that day: Give thanks to the Lord, acclaim his name; among the nations make known his deeds, proclaim how exalted is his name. 5 [q] Sing praise to the Lord for his glorious achievement; let this be known throughout all the earth. 6 [r] Shout with exultation, O city of Sion, for great in your midst is the Holy One of Israel!

CHAPTER 13.

Babylon. 1 An oracle concerning Babylon; a vision of Isaia, son of Amos.

2 [s] Upon the bare mountains set up a signal; cry out to them,* wave for them to enter the gates of the volunteers.

3 I have commanded my dedicated soldiers,* I have summoned my warriors, eager and bold to carry out my anger.

4 [t] Listen! the rumble on the mountains: that of an immense throng! Listen! the noise of kingdoms, nations assembled! The Lord of hosts is mustering an army for battle. 5 They come from a far-off country, and from the end of the heavens, the Lord and the instruments of his wrath, to destroy all the land.

6 [u] Howl, for the day of the Lord* is near; as destruction from the Almighty it comes. 7 [v] Therefore all hands fall helpless, every man's heart melts 8 [w] in terror. Pangs and sorrows take hold of them, like a woman in labor they writhe; they look aghast at each other, their faces aflame. 9 Lo, the day of the Lord comes cruel, with wrath and burning anger; to lay waste the land and destroy the sinners within it!

10 [x] The stars and constellations of the heavens send forth no light; the sun is dark when it rises, and the light of the moon does not shine. 11 [y] Thus I will punish the world for its evil and the wicked for their guilt. I will put an end to the pride of the arrogant, the insolence of tyrants I will humble. 12 I will make mortals more rare than pure gold, men, than gold of Ophir.* 13 For this I will make the heavens tremble and the earth shall be shaken from its place, at the wrath of the Lord of hosts on the day of his burning anger.

Her time is near at hand and her days shall not be prolonged.

CHAPTER 14.

The King of Babylon. 1 When the Lord has pity on Jacob and again chooses Israel and settles them on their own soil,e the aliens will join them and be counted with the house of Jacob. 2 f The house of Israel will take them and bring them along to its place, and possess them as male and female slaves on the Lord's soil, making captives of its captors and ruling over its oppressors. 3 g On the day the Lord relieves you of sorrow and unrest and the hard service in which you have been enslaved, 4 h you will take up this taunt-song* against the king of Babylon:

How the oppressor has reached his end! how the turmoil is stilled! 5 The Lord has broken the rod of the wicked, the staff of the tyrants 6 that struck the peoples in wrath relentless blows; that beat down the nations in anger, with oppression unchecked.

7 The whole earth rests peacefully, song breaks forth; 8 i the very cypresses rejoice over you, and the cedars of Lebanon: "Now that you are laid to rest, there will be none to cut us down."

9 The nether world below is all astir preparing for your coming; it awakens the shades to greet you, all the leaders of the earth; it has the kings of all nations rise from their thrones. 10 All of them speak out and say to you, "You too have become weak like us, you are the same as we. 11 j Down to the nether world your pomp is brought, the music of your harps. The couch beneath you is the maggot, your covering, the worm."

12 How have you fallen from the heavens, O morning star,* son of the dawn! How are you cut down to the ground, you who mowed down the nations! 13 k You said in your heart: "I will scale the heavens; above the stars of God I will set up my throne; I will take my seat on the Mount of Assembly, in the recesses of the North.* 14 l I will ascend above the tops of the clouds; I will be like the Most High!"

15 Yet down to the nether world you go to the recesses of the pit! 16 When they see you they will stare, pondering over you: "Is this the man who made the earth tremble, and kingdoms quake? 17 Who made the world a desert, razed its cities, and gave his captives no release? 18 All the kings of the nations lie in glory, each in his own tomb; 19 but you are cast forth without burial, loathsome and corrupt, clothed as those slain at sword-point, a trampled corpse. Going down to the pavement of the pit, 20 you will never be one with them in the grave. For you have ruined your land, you have slain your people."

He will not be named forever, that scion of an evil race! 21 Make ready to slaughter his sons for the guilt of their fathers; lest they rise and possess the earth, and fill the breadth of the world with tyrants.

22 m I will rise up against them, says the Lord of hosts, and cut off from Babylon name and remnant, progeny and offspring, says the Lord. 23 I will make it a haunt of hoot owls and a marshland; I will sweep it with the broom of destruction, says the Lord of hosts.

Assyria. 24 The Lord of hosts has sworn: As I have resolved, so shall it be; as I have proposed, so shall it stand: 25 I will break the Assyrian in my land and trample him on my mountains; 21 *he shall pass through it hard-pressed and hungry, and in his hunger he shall become enraged, and curse his king and his gods. He shall look upward, but there shall be strict darkness without any dawn; 22 he shall gaze at the earth, but there shall be distress and darkness, with the light blacked out by its clouds. (25) Then his yoke shall be removed from them, and his burden from their shoulder. 26 This is the plan proposed for the whole earth, and this the hand outstretched over all nations. 27 The Lord of hosts has planned: who can thwart him? His hand is stretched out; who can turn it back?

Philistia. 28 In the year that King Achaz died,* there came this oracle: 29 Rejoice not, O Philistia, not a man of you, that the rod* which smote you is broken; for out of the serpent's root shall come an adder, its fruit shall be a flying saraph. 30 In my pastures the poor shall eat, and the needy lie down in safety; but I will kill your root with famine that shall slay even your remnant. 31 Howl, O gate; cry out, O city! Philistia, all of you melts away! For there comes a smoke from the north, without a straggler in the ranks. 32 n What will one answer the messengers of the nation? "The Lord has established Sion, and in her the afflicted of his people find refuge."

CHAPTER 15.

Moab. 1 Oracle on Moab: o Laid waste in a night, Ar of Moab is destroyed; laid waste in a night, Kir of Moab is destroyed. 2 p Up goes daughter Dibon to the high places to weep; over Nebo and over Madaba Moab wails. Every head is shaved, every beard sheared off.* 3 In the streets they wear sackcloth, lamenting and weeping; on rooftops and in the squares everyone wails. 4 q Hesebon and Eleale cry out, they are heard as far as Jahas. At this the loins of Moab tremble, his soul quivers within him; 5 r the heart of Moab cries out, his fugitives reach Segor [Eglath-Shelishiyah]. The ascent of Luhith they climb weeping; on the way to Horonaim they utter rending cries.

6 The waters of Nemrim have become a waste; the grass is withered, new growth is gone, nothing is green. 7 So now whatever they have acquired or stored away they carry across the Gorge of the Poplars, 8 for the cry has gone round the land of Moab; as far as Eglaim the wailing, and to Beer-elim, the wail. 9 The waters of Dimon were filled with blood,* but I will bring still more upon Dimon: lions for those who are fleeing from Moab and for those who remain in the land!

CHAPTER 16.

1 Send them forth, hugging the earth like reptiles, from Sela across the desert, to the mount of daughter Sion. 2 Like flushed birds, like startled nestlings, are the daughters of Moab at the fords of the Arnon. 3 *Offer counsel, take their part: at high noon let your shadow be like the night, to hide the outcasts, to conceal the fugitives. 4 Let the outcasts of Moab live with you, be their shelter from the destroyer. When the struggle is ended, the ruin complete, and they have done with trampling the land, 5 s a throne shall be set up in mercy, and on it shall sit in fidelity [in David's tent] a judge upholding right and prompt to do justice.

6 t We have heard of the pride of Moab, how very proud he is, with his haughty, arrogant insolence that his empty words do not match.

14, 29: Rod: an Assyrian oppressor whose identity is uncertain. Flying saraph: a poisonous serpent, distinguished by its speedy movement; cf note on Nm 21, 6.

15, 2: Every head . . . sheared off: traditional signs of grief.

15, 9: There is in the Hebrew a play on words: Dimon and dam, the latter signifying "blood."

16, 2: The Arnon: principal river of Moab.

16, 3-5: Directed to Jerusalem, which should receive the suffering Moabites with mercy, as befits the city of David's family, who were partly descended from Ruth the Moabite.

7 Therefore Moab wails [u] for Moab, everywhere they wail; for the raisin cakes of Kir-hareseth they sigh, stricken with grief. 8 The terraced slopes of Hesebon languish, the vines of Sabama, whose clusters overpowered the lords of nations, while they reached as far as Jazer and scattered over the desert,* and whose branches spread forth and extended over
the sea.
9 [v] Therefore I weep with Jazer for the vines of Sabama; I water you with tears, Hesebon and Eleale; for on your summer fruits and harvests the battle cry has fallen. 10 [w] From the orchards are taken away joy and gladness, in the vineyards
there is no singing, no shout of joy; in the wine presses no one treads grapes,
the vintage shout is stilled. 11 [x] Therefore for Moab my breast moans like a lyre,
and my heart for Kir-hareseth. 12 [y] Though Moab shall be seen tiring himself on the high place,* entering his sanctuary to pray, it shall avail him nothing.
13 *This is the word the Lord spoke against Moab in times past. 14 But now
the Lord has spoken: In three years, like those of a hireling, the glory of Moab shall be degraded despite all its great multitude; there shall be a remnant, very small and weak.

CHAPTER 17.

Damascus. 1 Oracle on [z] Damascus:*
Lo, Damascus shall cease to be a city and become a ruin; 2 her cities shall be forever abandoned, given over to flocks to lie in undisturbed. 3 The fortress shall be lost to Ephraim* and the kingdom to Damascus; the remnant of Aram shall have the same glory as the Israelites, says
the Lord of hosts. 4 [a] On that day the glory of Jacob shall fade, and his full body grow thin, 5 like the reaper's mere armful of stalks when he gathers the standing grain; or as when one gleans the ears in the valley of Raphaim.* 6 [b] Only a scattering of grapes shall be left! As when an olive tree has been beaten,* two or three olives remain at the very top, four or five on its fruitful branches, says
the Lord, the God of Israel.
7 [c] On that day man shall look to his maker, his eyes turned toward the Holy One of Israel. 8 He shall not look to the altars, his handiwork, nor shall he regard what his fingers have made: the sacred poles* or the incense stands. 9 [d] On that day his strong cities shall be like those abandoned by the Hevites and Amorrites
when faced with the children of Israel:
they shall be laid waste. 10 [e] For you have forgotten God, your savior, and remembered not the Rock, your strength. Therefore, though you plant your pagan plants*
and set out your foreign vine slips, 11
though you make them grow the day you plant them and make your sprouts blossom on the next morning, the harvest shall disappear on the day of the grievous blow, the incurable blight.
12 Ah! the roaring of many peoples* that roar like the roar of the seas! The surging of nations that surge like the surging of mighty waves! 13 But God shall rebuke them, and they shall flee far away;
windswept, like chaff on the mountains,
like tumbleweed in a storm. 14 In the evening, they spread terror, before morning, they are gone! Such is the portion of those who despoil us, the lot of those who plunder us.

ed near and far, a nation strong and conquering, whose land is washed by rivers. 3 All you who inhabit the world, who dwell on earth, when the signal is raised on the mountain, look! When the trumpet blows, listen!

4 For thus says the Lord to me: I will quietly look on from where I dwell, like the glowing heat of sunshine, like a cloud of dew at harvest time. 5 Before the vintage, when the flowering is ended, and the blooms are succeeded by ripening grapes, then comes the cutting of branches with pruning hooks and the discarding of the lopped-off shoots. 6 They shall all be left to the mountain birds of prey, and to the beasts in the land; the birds of prey shall summer on them and on them all the beasts of the earth shall winter.

7 g Then will gifts be brought to the Lord of hosts from a people tall and bronzed, from a people dreaded near and far, a nation strong and conquering, whose land is washed by rivers,—to Mount Sion where dwells the name of the Lord of hosts.

CHAPTER 19.

Egypt. 1 Oracle on Egypt: See, the Lord is riding on a swift cloud on his way to Egypt; the idols of Egypt tremble before him, the hearts of the Egyptians melt within them. 2 I will rouse Egypt against Egypt: brother will war against brother, neighbor against neighbor, city against city, kingdom against kingdom. 3 h The courage of the Egyptians ebbs away within them, and I will bring to nought their counsel; they shall consult idols and charmers, ghosts and spirits. 4 i I will deliver Egypt into the power of a cruel master,* a harsh king who shall rule over them, says the Lord, the Lord of hosts. 5 j The waters shall be drained from the sea, the river shall shrivel and dry up; 6 its streams shall become foul, and the canals of Egypt shall dwindle and dry up. Reeds and rushes shall wither away, and bulrushes on the bank of the Nile; 7 all the sown land along the Nile shall dry up and blow away, and be no more. 8 The fishermen shall mourn and lament, all who cast hook in the Nile; those who spread their nets in the water shall pine away. 9 k The linen-workers shall be disappointed, the combers and weavers shall turn pale; 10 the spinners shall be crushed, all the hired laborers shall be despondent.

11 Utter fools are the princes of Soan!* the wisest of Pharao's advisers give stupid counsel. How can you say to Pharao, "I am a disciple of wise men, of ancient kings?" 12 Where then are your wise men? Let them tell you and make known what the Lord of hosts has planned against Egypt. 13 The princes of Soan have become fools, the princes of Memphis have been deceived. The chiefs of her tribes have led Egypt astray. 14 The Lord has prepared among them a spirit of dizziness, and they have made Egypt stagger in whatever she does, as a drunkard staggers in his vomit. 15 l Egypt shall have no work to do for head or tail, palm branch or reed.*

16 m On that day the Egyptians shall be like women, trembling with fear, because of the Lord of hosts shaking his fist at them. 17 n And the land of Juda shall be a terror to the Egyptians. Every time they remember Juda, they shall stand in dread because of the plan which the Lord of hosts has in mind for them.

18 On that day there shall be five cities* in the land of Egypt speaking the language of Chanaan and swearing by the Lord of hosts; one shall be called "City of the Sun."

19 On that day there shall be an altar to the Lord in the land of Egypt, and a sacred pillar to the Lord near the boundary. 20 It shall be a sign and a witness to the Lord of hosts in the land of Egypt, when they cry out to the Lord against their oppressors, and he sends them a savior to defend and deliver them. 21 o The Lord shall make himself known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the Lord in that day; they shall offer sacrifices and oblations, and fulfill the vows they make to the Lord. 22 Although the Lord shall smite Egypt severely, he shall heal them; they shall turn to the Lord and he shall be won over and heal them.

23 On that day there shall be a highway from Egypt to Assyria; the Assyrians shall enter Egypt, and the Egyptians enter

24 p On that day Israel shall be a third party with Egypt and Assyria, a blessing in the midst of the land, 25 when the Lord of hosts blesses it: "Blessed be my people Egypt, and the work of my hands Assyria, and my inheritance, Israel."

CHAPTER 20.

Captivity of Egypt and Ethiopia. 1 In the year the general sent by Sargon, king of Assyria, fought against Azotus and captured it, 2 the Lord gave a warning through Isaia, the son of Amos: Go and take off the sackcloth from your waist, and remove the sandals from your feet.* This he did, walking naked and barefoot. 3 Then the Lord said: Just as my servant Isaia has gone naked and barefoot for three years as a sign and portent against Egypt and Ethiopia, 4 so shall the king of Assyria lead away captives from Egypt, and exiles from Ethiopia, young and old, naked and barefoot, with buttocks uncovered [the shame of Egypt]. 5 q They shall be dismayed and ashamed because of Ethiopia, their hope, and because of Egypt, their boast. 6 r The inhabitants of this coastland shall say on that day, "Look at our hope! We have fled here for help and deliverance from the king of Assyria; where can we flee now?"

CHAPTER 21.

Fall of Babylon. 1 Oracle on the wastelands by the sea:* Like whirlwinds sweeping in waves through the Negeb, there comes from the desert, from the fearful land, 2 s a cruel sight, revealed to me: the traitor betrays, the despoiler spoils. "Go up, Elam; besiege, O Media;* I will put an end to all groaning!" 3 t Therefore my loins are filled with anguish, pangs have seized me like those of a woman in labor; I am too bewildered to hear, too dismayed to look. 4 My mind reels, shuddering assails me; my yearning for twilight has turned into dread.
5 They set the table,* spread out the rugs; they eat, they drink. Rise up, O princes, oil the shield!
6 For thus says my Lord to me: Go, station a watchman, let him tell what he sees. 7 If he sees a chariot, a pair of horses, someone riding an ass, someone riding a camel, then let him pay heed, very close heed. 8 u Then the watchman cried, "On the watchtower, O my Lord, I stand constantly by day; and I stay at my post through all the watches of the night. 9 v Here he comes now: a single chariot, a pair of horses; he calls out and says, 'Fallen, fallen is Babylon, and all the images of her gods are smashed to the ground.' "
10 w O my people who have been threshed, beaten on my threshing floor! What I have heard from the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, I have announced to you.

Edom. 11 Oracle on Edom: They call to me from Seir,* "Watchman, how much longer the night? Watchman, how much longer the night?" 12 The watchman replies, "Morning has come, and again night. If you will ask, ask; come back again."

Arabia. 13 Oracle on Arabia:* In the thicket in the nomad country spend the night, O caravans of Dedanites. 14 Meet the thirsty, bring them water; you who dwell in the land of Thema, greet the fugitives with bread. 15 They flee from the sword, from the whetted sword; from the taut bow, from the fury of battle.
16 For thus says the Lord to me: In another year, like those of a hireling,* all the glory of Cedar shall come to an end. 17 Few of Cedar's stalwart archers shall remain, for the Lord, the God of Israel, has spoken.

CHAPTER 22.

Jerusalem. 1 Oracle of the Valley of Vision:* What is the matter with you now, that you have gone up, all of you,

20, 2-6: The symbolic act of the prophet conveyed the idea that Assyria would lead captive the Egyptians and Ethiopians. The Judeans and their allies would then realize the folly of having trusted in them.

21, 2: Elam . . . Media: nations which, under the leadership of Cyrus, captured Babylon in 538 B. C. End to all groaning: those who were captives of Babylon shall be freed.
21, 5: Babylon is destroyed while its leaders are feasting; cf Dn 5. Oil the shield: shields were oiled and greased so as to divert blows more easily.
21, 11f: Seir: another name for Edom. The Edomites ask the prophet how much longer they must suffer (the night of suffering); he answers ambiguously: "Liberation (morning) and further suffering (night)," but perhaps they will later receive a more encouraging answer (ask; come back again).
21, 13f: Arabia: that is, the nomad country. Dedanites: an Arab tribe associated with Edom and Thema, and living east of the Red Sea; cf Gn 10, 7; 25, 3; Jer 25, 23.
21, 16: Year . . . of a hireling: see note on Is 16, 14. Cedar: a nomad tribe in Arabia; cf Is 42, 11; 60, 7; Ps 119 (120), 5.

to the housetops, 2 [x] O city full of noise and chaos, O wanton town! Your slain are not slain with the sword, nor killed in battle. 3 [y] All your leaders fled away together, fled afar off; all who were in you were captured together, captured without the use of a bow. 4 [z] At this I say: Turn away from me, let me weep bitterly; do not try to comfort me for the ruin of the daughter of my people. 5 [a] It is a day of panic, rout and confusion, from the Lord, the God of hosts, in the Valley of Vision. Walls crash; they cry for help to the mountains. 6 Elam takes up the quivers, Aram mounts the horses, and Kir* uncovers the shields. 7 Your choice valleys are filled with chariots, and horses are posted at the gates, 8 and shelter over Juda is removed.

*On that day you looked to the weapons in the House of the Forest; 9 you saw that the breaches in the City of David were many; you collected the water of the lower pool. 10 You numbered the houses of Jerusalem, tearing some down to strengthen the wall; 11 you made a reservoir between the two walls for the water of the old pool. But you did not look to the city's Maker, nor did you consider him who built it long ago.

12 [b] On that day the Lord, the God of hosts, called on you to weep and mourn,
to shave your head and put on sackcloth.
13 [c] But look! you feast and celebrate, you slaughter oxen and butcher sheep, you eat meat and drink wine: "Eat and drink, for tomorrow we die!" 14 This reaches the ears of the Lord of hosts—You shall not be pardoned this wickedness till you die,
says the Lord, the God of hosts.

Sobna and Eliacim. 15 Thus says the Lord, the God of hosts: Up, go to that official, Sobna,* master of the palace, 16 who has hewn for himself a sepulcher on a height and carved his tomb in the rock:
"What are you doing here, and what people have you here, that here you have hewn for yourself a tomb?" 17 The Lord shall hurl you down headlong, mortal man! He shall grip you firmly 18 and roll you up and toss you like a ball into an open land to perish there, you and the chariots you glory in, you disgrace to your master's house! 19 I will thrust you from your office and pull you down from your station.

20 [d] On that day I will summon my servant Eliacim,* son of Helcia; 21 I will clothe him with your robe, and gird him with your sash, and give over to him your authority. He shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to the house of Juda. 22 I will place the key* of the House of David on his shoulder; [e] when he opens, no one shall shut, when he shuts, no one shall open. 23 I will fix him like a peg in a sure spot, to be a place of honor for his family; 24 *on him shall hang all the glory of his family: descendants and offspring, all the little dishes, from bowls to jugs.

25 On that day, says the Lord of hosts,
the peg fixed in a sure spot shall give way,
break off and fall, and the weight that hung on it shall be done away with; for the Lord has spoken.

CHAPTER 23.

Tyre and Sidon. 1 Oracle on Tyre:*
Wail, O ships of Tharsis, for your port is destroyed; from the land of the Chetthim*
the news reaches them. 2 Silence! you who dwell on the coast, you merchants of Sidon, whose messengers crossed the sea 3 over the deep waters. The grain of Si-hor,* the harvest of the Nile, was her revenue, and she the merchant among nations. 4 Shame, O Sidon, fortress on the sea, for the sea has spoken:* "I have not been in labor, nor given birth, nor raised young men, nor reared virgins." 5 When it is heard in Egypt they shall be in anguish at the news of Tyre. 6 Pass over to Tharsis, wailing, you who dwell on the coast! 7 Is this your wanton city, whose origin is from of old, whose feet have taken her to dwell in distant lands? 8 Who has planned such a thing against Tyre,

the bestower of crowns, whose merchants are princes, whose traders are the earth's honored men? 9 f The Lord of hosts has planned it, to disgrace all pride of majesty, to degrade all the earth's honored men. 10 Cross to your own land, O ship of Tharsis; the harbor is no more. 11 His hand he stretches out over the sea, he shakes kingdoms; the Lord has ordered the destruction of Chanaan's strongholds.* 12 g You shall exult no more, he says, you who are now oppressed, virgin daughter Sidon. Arise, pass over to the Chetthim, even there you shall find no rest.

13 [This people is the land of the Chaldeans, not Assyria.]*

She h whom the impious founded, setting up towers for her, has had her castles destroyed, and has been turned into a ruin. 14 Lament, O ships of Tharsis, for your haven is destroyed.

15 i On that day, Tyre shall be forgotten for seventy years.* With the days of another king, at the end of seventy years, it shall be for Tyre as in the song about the harlot: 16 Take a harp, go about the city, O forgotten harlot; pluck the strings skillfully, sing many songs, that they may remember you.

17 j At the end of the seventy years the Lord shall visit Tyre. She shall return to her hire and deal with all the world's kingdoms on the face of the earth. 18 *But her merchandise and her hire shall be sacred to the Lord. It shall not be stored up or laid away, but from her merchandise those who dwell before the Lord shall eat their fill and clothe themselves in choice attire.

IV: APOCALYPSE OF ISAIA*

CHAPTER 24.

Devastation of the World: A Remnant Saved. 1 Lo, the Lord empties the land and lays it waste; k he turns it upside down, scattering its inhabitants: 2 layman and priest alike, servant and master, the maid as her mistress, the buyer as the seller, the lender as the borrower, the creditor as the debtor. 3 The earth is utterly laid waste, utterly stripped, for the Lord has decreed this thing. 4 The earth mourns and fades, the world languishes and fades; both heaven and earth languish. 5 The earth is polluted because of its inhabitants, who have transgressed laws, violated statutes, broken the ancient covenant.*

6 Therefore a curse devours the earth, and its inhabitants pay for their guilt; therefore they who dwell on earth turn pale, and few men are left. 7 l The wine mourns, the vine languishes, all the merry-hearted groan. 8 m Stilled are the cheerful timbrels, ended the shouts of the jubilant, stilled is the cheerful harp. 9 They cannot sing and drink wine; strong drink is bitter to those who partake of it. 10 n Broken down is the city of chaos,* shut against entry, every house. 11 o In the streets they cry out for lack of wine; all joy has disappeared and cheer has left the land. 12 In the city nothing remains but ruin; its gates are battered and desolate. 13 p Thus it is within the land, and among the peoples, as with an olive tree after it is beaten, as with a gleaning when the vintage is done. 14 These* lift up their voice in acclaim; from the sea they proclaim the majesty of the Lord: 15 q "For this, in the coastlands, give glory to the Lord! In the coastlands of the sea, to the name of the Lord, the God of Israel!" 16 From the end of the earth we hear songs: "Splendor to the Just One!"

But I said, "I am wasted, wasted away. Woe is me! The traitors betray: with treachery have the traitors betrayed! 17 r Terror, pit, and trap are upon you, inhabitant of the earth; 18 he who flees at the sound of terror will fall into the pit; he who climbs out of the pit will be caught in the trap. For the windows on high will be opened and the foundations of the earth will shake. 19 The earth will burst asunder, the earth will be shaken apart, the earth will be convulsed. 20 s The earth will reel like a drunkard, and it will sway like a hut; Its rebellion will weigh it down, until it falls, never to rise again."

24, 10: City of chaos: a symbol of godlessness as opposed to Jerusalem, the city of God.

24, 14: These: the saved.

21 t On that day the Lord will punish the host of the heavens* in the heavens,
and the kings of the earth on the earth.
22 They will be gathered together like prisoners into a pit; they will be shut up in a dungeon, and after many days they will be punished. 23 u Then the moon will blush and the sun grow pale, for the Lord of hosts will reign on Mount Sion and in Jerusalem, glorious in the sight of his elders.*

CHAPTER 25.

1 O Lord, v you are my God,* I will extol you and praise your name; for you have fulfilled your wonderful plans of old, faithful and true. 2 w For you have made
the city a heap, the fortified city a ruin;
the castle of the insolent is a city no more,
nor ever to be rebuilt. 3 Therefore a strong people will honor you, fierce nations will fear you. 4 x For you are a refuge to the poor, a refuge to the needy in distress;
shelter from the rain, shade from the heat.
As with the cold rain, 5 as with the desert heat, even so you quell the uproar of the wanton. 6 On this mountain* the Lord of hosts will provide for all peoples a feast of rich food and choice wines, juicy, rich food and pure, choice wines. 7 y On this mountain he will destroy the veil that veils all peoples, the web that is woven over all nations; 8 he will destroy death forever. The Lord God will wipe away the tears from all faces; the reproach of his people he will remove from the whole earth; for the Lord has spoken.

9 z On that day it will be said: "Behold
our God, to whom we looked to save us!
This is the Lord for whom we looked; let us rejoice and be glad that he has saved us!" 10 a For the hand of the Lord will rest on this mountain, but Moab* will be trodden down as a straw is trodden down in the mire. 11 b He will stretch forth his hands in Moab as a swimmer extends his hands to swim; he will bring low their pride as his hands sweep over them. 12
c The high-walled fortress he will raze,
and strike it down level with the earth,
with the very dust.

CHAPTER 26.

The Divine Vindicator. 1 On that day
they will sing this song in the land of Juda: "A strong city have we; he sets up walls and ramparts to protect us. 2 d Open up the gates to let in a nation that is just,
one that keeps faith. 3 e A nation of firm purpose you keep in peace; in peace, for its trust in you."

4 f Trust in the Lord forever! For the Lord is an eternal Rock. 5 g He humbles
those in high places, and the lofty city he brings down; he tumbles it to the ground, levels it with the dust. 6 It is trampled underfoot by the needy, by the footsteps of the poor.

7 h The way of the just is smooth; the path of the just you make level. 8 Yes,
for your way and your judgments, O Lord, we look to you; your name and your title are the desire of our souls. 9
i My soul yearns for you in the night, yes,
my spirit within me keeps vigil for you;
when your judgment dawns upon the earth, the world's inhabitants learn justice. 10 j The wicked man, spared, does not learn justice; in an upright land he acts perversely, and sees not the majesty of the Lord. 11 O Lord, your hand is uplifted, but they behold it not; let them be shamed when they see your zeal for your people: let the fire prepared for your enemies consume them. 12 k O Lord, you mete out peace to us, for it is you who have accomplished all we have done. 13
O Lord, our God, other lords than you have ruled us; it is from you only that we can call upon your name.

14 Dead they are, they have no life, shades that cannot rise; for you have punished and destroyed them, and wiped out all memory of them. 15 l You have increased the nation, O Lord, increased the nation to your own glory, and extended far all the borders of the land. 16 m O Lord, oppressed by your punishment, we cried out in anguish under your chastising.
17 n As a woman about to give birth writhes and cries out in her pains, so were we in your presence, O Lord. 18 We conceived and writhed in pain, giving birth to wind; salvation we have not achieved
for the earth, the inhabitants of the world cannot bring it forth. 19 o But your dead shall live, their corpses shall rise;* awake and sing, you who lie in the dust. For your dew is a dew of light, and the land of shades gives birth.

Day of the Lord: Reward and Punishment. 20 Go, my people, enter your chambers, and close your doors behind you; hide yourselves for a brief moment, until the wrath is past. 21 p See, the Lord goes forth from his place, to punish the wickedness of the earth's inhabitants; the earth will reveal the blood upon her, and no longer conceal her slain.

CHAPTER 27.

1 On that day,q the Lord will punish with his sword that is cruel, great, and strong, Leviathan the fleeing serpent, Leviathan the coiled serpent; and he will slay the dragon* that is in the sea.

2 r On that day—the pleasant vineyard, sing about it! 3 s I, the Lord, am its keeper, I water it every moment; lest anyone harm it, night and day I guard it. 4 t I am not angry, but if I were to find briers and thorns, in battle I should march against them; I should burn them all. 8 u Expunging and expelling, I should strive against them, carrying them off with my cruel wind in time of storm.

6 In days to come Jacob shall take root, Israel shall sprout and blossom, covering all the world with fruit. 7 Is he to be smitten as his smiter was smitten?* or slain as his slayer was slain? 5 v Or shall he cling to me for refuge? He must make peace with me;* peace shall he make with me! 9 This, then, shall be the expiation of Jacob's guilt, this the whole fruit of the removal of his sin: he shall pulverize all the stones of the altars like pieces of chalk; no sacred poles or incense altars shall stand.

10 w For the fortified city* shall be desolate, an abandoned pasture, a forsaken wilderness, where calves shall browse and lie. Its boughs shall be destroyed, 11 x its branches shall wither and be broken off, and women shall come to build a fire with them. This is not an understanding people; therefore their maker shall not spare them, nor shall he who formed them have mercy on them.

12 On that day, the Lord shall beat out the grain between the Euphrates and the valley of Egypt,* and you shall be gleaned one by one, O sons of Israel.

13 y On that day,* a great trumpet shall blow, and the lost in the land of Assyria and the outcasts in the land of Egypt shall come and worship the Lord on the holy mountain, in Jerusalem.

V: THE LORD ALONE, ISRAEL'S AND JUDA'S SALVATION

CHAPTER 28.

The Fate of Samaria. 1 Woe to the majestic garland of the drunkards of Ephraim,* to the fading blooms of his glorious beauty, on the head [of the fertile valley] of those who are stupefied with wine.z 2 a Behold, the Lord has a strong one and a mighty,* who, like a downpour of hail, a destructive storm, like a flood of water, great and overflowing, levels to the ground with violence; 3 with feet that will trample the majestic garland of the drunkards of Ephraim. 4 The fading blooms of his glorious beauty on the head of the fertile valley will be like an early fig before summer: when a man sees it, he picks and swallows it at once.

5 On that day the Lord of hosts will be a glorious crown and a brilliant diadem to the remnant of his people, 6 a spirit of justice to him who sits in judgment, and strength to those who turned back the battle at the gate.

Against Juda. 7 b But these also stagger from wine and stumble from strong drink: priest and prophet stagger from strong drink, overpowered by wine; led astray by strong drink, staggering in their visions, tottering when giving judgment. 8 Yes, all the tables are covered with filthy vomit, with no place left clean.

27, 1: Leviathan . . . dragon: symbols of the forces of evil which God vanquishes even as He overcame primeval chaos; cf notes on Jb 3, 8; 7, 12.

27, 5. 9: Israel will make peace with God and destroy all signs of idolatrous worship.

27, 7: God's people will not be treated as sternly as were their enemies.

27, 10f: The fortified city: symbol of the powers of evil; see note on Is 24, 10.

27, 12: The Euphrates and the valley of Egypt: the ideal borders of Israel; cf Gn 15, 18; 4 Kgs 24, 7.

27, 13: The triumph of God's people is described in eschatological language; they will gather in Jerusalem from Assyria and Egypt.

28, 1: Ephraim: the Northern Kingdom. Its captial, Samaria, was built upon a hill, suggestive of a majestic garland adorning the heads of its drunken revelers.

28, 2: A strong one and a mighty: Assyria.

9 *"To whom would he impart knowledge? To whom would he convey the message? To those just weaned from milk, those taken from the breast? 10 For he says, 'Command on command, command on command, rule on rule, rule on rule, here a little, there a little!' " 11 c *Yes, with stammering lips and in a strange language he will speak to this people 12 to whom he said: This is the resting place, give rest to the weary; here is repose—but they would not listen. 13 So for them the word of the Lord shall be: "Command on command, command on command, rule on rule, rule on rule, here a little, there a little!" So that when they walk, they stumble backward, broken, ensnared, and captured.

14 Therefore, hear the word of the Lord, you arrogant, who rule this people in Jerusalem: 15 d Because you say, "We have made a covenant with death, and with the nether world* we have made a pact; when the overwhelming scourge passes, it will not reach us; for we have made lies our refuge, and in falsehood we have found a hiding place,"—16 e therefore, thus says the Lord God: See, I am laying a stone in Sion,* a stone that has been tested, a precious cornerstone as a sure foundation; he who puts his faith in it shall not be shaken. 17 I will make of right a measuring line, of justice a level. —Hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and waters shall flood the hiding place. 18 Your covenant with death shall be canceled and your pact with the nether world shall not stand. When the overwhelming scourge passes, you shall be trampled down by it. 19 Whenever it passes, it shall take you; morning after morning it shall pass, by day and by night; terror alone shall convey the message. 20 For the bed shall be too short to stretch out in, and the cover too narrow to wrap in. 21 f For the Lord shall rise up as on Mount Pharasim, bestir himself as in the valley of Gabaon,* to carry out his work, his singular work, to perform his deed, his strange deed. 22 g Now, be arrogant no more lest your bonds be tightened, for I have heard from the Lord, the God of hosts, the destruction decreed for the whole earth.

23 Give ear and hear my voice, pay attention and listen to what I say: 24 Is the plowman forever plowing, always loosening and harrowing his land for planting? 25 When he has leveled the surface, does he not scatter gith and sow cumin, put in wheat and barley, with spelt as its border? 26 He has learned this rule, instructed by his God. 27 Gith is not threshed with a sledge, nor does a cartwheel roll over cumin. But gith is beaten out with a staff, and cumin crushed for food with a rod. 28 No, he does not thresh it unendingly, nor does he crush it with his noisy cartwheels and horses. 29 This too comes from the Lord of hosts; wonderful is his counsel and great his wisdom.

CHAPTER 29.

The Fall of Jerusalem. 1 Woe to Ariel,* Ariel, the city where David encamped! h Add year to year, let the feasts come round. 2 i But I will bring distress upon Ariel, with mourning and grief. You shall be to me like Ariel, 3 j I will encamp like David against you; I will encircle you with outposts and set up siege works against you. 4 Prostrate you shall speak from the earth, and from the base dust your words shall come. Your voice shall be like a ghost's from the earth, and your words like chirping* from the dust. 5 k The horde of your arrogant shall be like 28, 9f: The words of those who ridicule Isaia. The Hebrew of v 10, by its very sound, conveys the idea of mocking imitation of what the prophet says, as though he spoke like a stammering child: SAU LASAU, SAU LASAU, CAU LACAU, CAU LACAU, ZE'ER SHAM, ZE'ER SHAM. But in v 13 God repeats these words in deadly earnest, putting them in the mouth of the victorious pagan army.

28, 11: God will answer the mockers and defend Isaia. Strange language: spoken by the invading army.

28, 15.18: A covenant with death, and with the nether world: an alliance with foreign powers, such as Egypt and Babylon, to prevent death and destruction. Have made lies . . . a hiding place: this confidence in human aid proves to be false and deceitful, incapable of averting the dreaded disaster. Overwhelming scourge: the flood of the Assyrian invasion; cf Is 8, 7f.

28, 16: A stone in Sion: the true and sure foundation of salvation promised by God to the Davidic dynasty (cf Is 7, 13-16; 9, 1-6), which the Apostles saw fulfilled in Christ the universal Savior; cf 1 Pt 2, 6-8; Rom 9, 33; 10, 9ff. Cornerstone: the assurance of salvation rejected by Israel in the prophet's time, is reflected by the psalmist (Ps 117 [118], 22) and fulfilled in the Person of Christ; cf Mt 21, 42; Lk 20, 17; Acts 4, 11; Rom 9, 33; 1 Pt 2, 7.

28, 21: Mount Pharasim . . . valley of Gabaon: where David defeated the Philistines; cf 2 Kgs 5, 20. 25; 1 Par 14, 11. 16.

28, 23-29: The practical variation of the farmer's work taught him by God reflects God's dealing with His people, wisely adapted to circumstances of persons and times.

28, 25: Gith . . . cumin: herbs used in seasoning food. Spelt: a variety of wheat.

29, 1f: Ariel: variously interpreted to mean "lion of God" or "hearth (altar) of God," a poetic name for Jerusalem; or perhaps to be read as Uru-el, "foundation of God," an archaic name for the Jebusite city of Jerusalem; like that Arile, against which David encamped, it will be besieged by God.

29, 4: Chirping: see note on Is 8, 19.

fine dust, the horde of the tyrants like flying chaff. Then suddenly, in an instant, 6 you shall be visited by the Lord of hosts, with thunder, earthquake, and great noise, whirlwind, storm, and the flame of consuming fire.

7 *Then like a dream, a vision in the night, shall be the horde of all the nations who war against Ariel with all the earthworks of her besiegers. 8 As when a hungry man dreams he is eating and awakens with an empty stomach, or when a thirsty man dreams he is drinking and awakens faint and dry, so shall the horde of all the nations be, who make war against Mount Sion.

Blindness and Perversity. 9 *Be irresolute, stupefied; blind yourselves and stay blind! l Be drunk, but not from wine, stagger, but not from strong drink! 10 m For the Lord has poured out on you a spirit of deep sleep. He has shut your eyes [the prophets] and covered your heads [the seers].

11 n For you the revelation of all this has become like the words of a sealed scroll. When it is handed to one who can read, with the request, "Read this," he replies, "I cannot; it is sealed." 12 When it is handed to one who cannot read, with the request, "Read this," he replies, "I cannot read."

13 o The Lord said: Since this people draws near with words only and honors me with their lips alone, though their hearts are far from me, and their reverence for me has become routine observance of the precepts of men, 14 p therefore I will again deal with this people in surprising and wondrous fashion: The wisdom of its wise men shall perish and the understanding of its prudent men be hid. 15 q Woe to those who would hide their plans too deep for the Lord! Who work in the dark, saying, "Who sees us, or who knows us?" 16 r Your perversity is as though the potter were taken to be the clay: as though what is made should say of its maker, "He made me not!" Or the vessel should say of the potter, "He does not understand."

Redemption. 17 *But a very little while,s and Lebanon shall be changed into an orchard, and the orchard be regarded as a forest! 18 t On that day the deaf shall hear the words of a book; and out of gloom and darkness, the eyes of the blind shall see. 19 u The lowly will ever find joy in the Lord, and the poor rejoice in the Holy One of Israel. 20 v For the tyrant will be no more and the arrogant will have gone; all who are alert to do evil will be cut off, 21 w those whose mere word condemns a man, who ensnare his defender at the gate, and leave the just man with an empty claim.

22 x Therefore thus says the Lord, the God of the house of Jacob, who redeemed Abraham:* Now Jacob shall have nothing to be ashamed of, nor shall his face grow pale. 23 When his children see the work of my hands in his midst, they shall keep my name holy; they shall reverence the Holy One of Jacob, and be in awe of the God of Israel. 24 Those who err in spirit shall acquire understanding, and those who find fault shall receive instruction.

CHAPTER 30.

Futile Alliance with Egypt. 1 Woe to the rebellious children,y says the Lord, who carry out plans that are not mine, who weave webs that are not inspired by me, adding sin upon sin. 2 z They go down to Egypt, but my counsel they do not seek. They find their strength in Pharao's protection and take refuge in Egypt's shadow; 3 a Pharao's protection shall be your shame, and refuge in Egypt's shadow your disgrace. 4 b When their princes are at Soan and their messengers reach Hanes, 5 c all shall be ashamed of a people that gain them nothing, neither help nor benefit, but only shame and reproach.

6 [Oracle on the Beasts of the Negeb:] Through the distressed and troubled land of the lioness and roaring lion, of the viper and flying saraph,* they carry their riches on the backs of asses and their treasures on the humps of camels to a people good for nothing, 7 to Egypt whose 29, 7f: Just when the Assyrians think their capture of Jerusalem to be certain, the Lord will snatch victory from their hands and save His city.

29, 9-12: Jerusalem in her blindness refuses to believe God's revelation that she will be saved.

29, 17-24: The prophet presents God's plan of redemption in terms of unheard-of natural phenomena as if such changes in nature took place, e. g., the change of the cedars of Lebanon into an orchard (v 17).

help is futile and vain. Therefore I call her "Rahab* quelled."

8 d Now come, write it on a tablet they can keep,* inscribe it in a record; that it may be in future days an eternal witness: 9 e This is a rebellious people, deceitful children, children who refuse to obey the law of the Lord. 10 f They say to the seers, "Have no visions"; to the prophets, "Do not descry for us what is right; speak flatteries to us, conjure up illusions. 11 g Out of the way! Out of our path! Let us hear no more of the Holy One of Israel."

12 Therefore, thus says the Holy One of Israel: Because you reject this word, and put your trust in what is crooked and devious, and depend on it, 13 h this guilt of yours shall be like a descending rift bulging out in a high wall whose crash comes suddenly, in an instant. 14 i It crashes like a potter's jar smashed beyond rescue, and among its fragments cannot be found a sherd to scoop fire from the hearth or dip water from the cistern.

15 j For thus said the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel: By waiting and by calm you shall be saved, in quiet and in trust your strength lies. But this you did not wish. 16 k "No," you said, "upon horses we will flee."—Very well, flee! "Upon swift steeds we will ride."—Not so swift as your pursuers. 17 A thousand shall tremble at the threat of one; if five threaten you, you shall flee, until you are left like a flagstaff on the mountaintop, like a flag on the hill. 18 l Yet the Lord is waiting to show you favor, and he rises to pity you; for the Lord is a God of justice: blessed are all who wait for him!

19 m O people of Sion, who dwell in Jerusalem, no more will you weep; he will be gracious to you when you cry out, as soon as he hears he will answer you. 20 The Lord will give you the bread you need and the water for which you thirst. No longer will your Teacher* hide himself, but with your own eyes you shall see your Teacher, 21 n while from behind, a voice shall sound in your ears: "This is the way; walk in it," when you would turn to the right or to the left. 22 o And you shall consider unclean your silver-plated idols and your gold-covered images; you shall throw them away like filthy rags to which you say, "Begone!"

Sion's Future Prosperity. 23 p He will give rain for the seed that you sow in the ground, and the wheat that the soil produces will be rich and abundant. On that day your cattle will graze in spacious meadows; 24 the oxen and the asses that till the ground will eat silage tossed to them with shovel and pitchfork. 25 q Upon every high mountain and lofty hill there will be streams of running water. On the day of the great slaughter, when the towers fall, 26 r the light of the moon will be like that of the sun and the light of the sun will be seven times greater [like the light of seven days]. On the day the Lord binds up the wounds of his people, he will heal the bruises left by his blows.

Divine Judgment on Assyria. 27 *See the name of the Lord coming from afar in burning wrath, with lowering clouds! His lips are filled with fury, his tongue is like a consuming fire; 28 his breath, like a flood in a ravine that reaches suddenly to the neck, will winnow the nations with a destructive winnowing, and with repeated winnowings will he battle against them [and a bridle on the jaws of the peoples to send them astray].

30 The Lord will make his glorious voice heard, and let it be seen how his arm descends in raging fury and flame of consuming fire, in driving storm and hail. 31 When the Lord speaks, Assyria will be shattered, as he strikes with the rod; 32 while at every sweep of the rod which the Lord will bring down on him in punishment, 29 you will sing as on a night when a feast is observed, and be merry of heart, as one marching along with a flute toward the mountain of the Lord, toward the Rock of Israel, accompanied by the timbrels and lyres. 33 For the pyre* has long been ready, prepared for the king; broad and deep it is piled with dry grass and wood in abundance, and the breath of the Lord, like a stream of sulphur, will set it afire.

CHAPTER 31.

Against the Egyptian Alliance. 1 Woe to those who go down to Egypt for help,[s] who depend upon horses; who put their trust in chariots because of their number, and in horsemen because of their combined power, but look not to the Holy One of Israel nor seek the Lord! 2 Yet he too is wise and will bring disaster; he will not turn from what he has threatened to do. He will rise up against the house of the wicked and against those who help evildoers. 3 t The Egyptians are men, not God, their horses are flesh, not spirit; when the Lord stretches forth his hand, the helper shall stumble, the one helped shall fall, and both of them shall perish together.

4 Thus says the Lord to me: As a lion or a lion cub growling over its prey, with a band of shepherds assembled against it, is neither frightened by their shouts nor disturbed by their noise, so shall the Lord of hosts come down to wage war upon the mountain and hill of Sion. 5 u Like hovering birds, so the Lord of hosts shall shield Jerusalem, to protect and deliver, to spare and rescue it.

6 v Return, O children of Israel, to him whom you have utterly deserted. 7 w On that day each one of you shall spurn his sinful idols of silver and gold, which he made with his hands.

Downfall of Assyria. 8 x Assyria shall fall by a sword not wielded by man, no mortal sword shall devour him; he shall flee before the sword, and his young men shall be impressed as laborers. 9 He shall rush past his crag* in panic, and his princes shall flee in terror from his standard, says the Lord who has a fire in Sion and a furnace in Jerusalem.

CHAPTER 32.

The Kingdom of Justice. 1 See, a king will reign justly y and princes will rule rightly. 2 z Each of them will be a shelter from the wind, a retreat from the rain. They will be like streams of water in a dry country, like the shade of a great rock in a parched land. 3 The eyes of those who see will not be closed; the ears of those who hear will be attentive. 4 The flighty will become wise and capable, and the stutterers will speak fluently and clearly. 5 No more will the fool be called noble, nor the trickster be considered honorable. 6 a For the fool speaks foolishly, planning evil in his heart: How to do wickedness, to speak perversely against the Lord, to let the hungry go empty and the thirsty be without drink. 7 And the trickster uses wicked trickery, planning crimes: how to ruin the poor with lies, and the needy when they plead their case. 8 But the noble man plans noble things, and by noble things he stands.

The Women of Jerusalem. 9 O complacent ladies, rise up and hear my voice, overconfident women, give heed to my words. 10 b In a little more than a year you overconfident ones will be shaken; the vintage will fail, there will be no harvest. 11 c Tremble, you who are complacent! Shudder, you who are overconfident! Strip yourselves bare, with only a loincloth to cover you. 12 Beat your breasts for the pleasant fields, the fruitful vine, 13 d and the soil of my people, overgrown with thorns and briers; for all the joyful houses, the wanton city. 14 e Yes, the castle* will be forsaken, the noisy city deserted; 19 down it comes, as trees come down in the forest! The city will be utterly laid low. Hill and tower will become wasteland forever for wild asses to frolic in, and flocks to pasture, 15 until the spirit from on high is poured out on us.

*Then will the desert become an orchard f and the orchard be regarded as a forest. 16 Right will dwell in the desert and justice abide in the orchard. 17 g Justice will bring about peace; right will produce calm and security. 18 h My people will live in peaceful country, in secure dwellings and quiet resting places. 20 i Happy are you who sow beside every stream, and let the ox and the ass go freely!

betrayed! When you finish destroying, you will be destroyed; when wearied with betraying, you will be betrayed.

2 j O Lord, have pity on us, for you we wait. Be our strength every morning, our salvation in time of trouble! 3 At the roaring sound, peoples flee; when you rise in your majesty, nations are scattered. 4 k Men gather spoil as caterpillars are gathered up; they rush upon it like the onrush of locusts. 5 l The Lord is exalted, enthroned on high; he fills Sion with right and justice. 6 m That which makes her season's lasting, the riches that save her, are wisdom and knowledge; the fear of the Lord is her treasure.

7 See, the men of Ariel* cry out in the streets, the messengers of Salem weep bitterly. 8 n The highways are desolate, travelers have quit the paths, covenants are broken, witnesses are spurned, yet no man gives it a thought. 9 o The country languishes in mourning, Lebanon withers with shame; Saron* is like the steppe, Basan and Carmel are stripped bare.

10 Now will I rise up, says the Lord, now will I be exalted, now be lifted up. 11 You conceive dry grass, bring forth stubble; my spirit shall consume you like fire. 12 p The peoples shall be as in a limekiln, like brushwood cut down for burning in the fire.

13 Hear, you who are far off, what I have done; you who are near, acknowledge my might. 14 q On Sion sinners are in dread, trembling grips the impious: "Who of us can live with the consuming fire? who of us can live with the everlasting flames?" 15 r He who practices virtue and speaks honestly, who spurns what is gained by oppression, brushing his hands free of contact with a bribe, stopping his ears lest he hear of bloodshed, closing his eyes lest he look on evil—16 he shall dwell on the heights, his stronghold shall be the rocky fastness, his food and drink in steady supply.

Restoration of Sion. 17 Your eyes will see a king* in his splendor, they will look upon a vast land. 18 Your mind will dwell on the terror: "Where is he who counted, where is he who weighed? Where is he who counted the towers?" 19 To the people of alien tongue you will look no more, the people of obscure speech, stammering in a language not understood. 20 Look to Sion, the city of our festivals; let your eyes see Jerusalem as a quiet abode, a tent not to be struck, whose pegs will never be pulled up, nor any of its ropes severed.

22 Indeed the Lord will be there with us, majestic; yes, the Lord our judge, the Lord our lawgiver, the Lord our king, he it is who will save us. 21 In a place of rivers and wide streams on which no boat is rowed, where no majestic ship* passes, 23 the rigging hangs slack; it cannot hold the mast in place, nor keep the sail spread out. Then the blind will divide great spoils and the lame will carry off the loot. 24 No one who dwells there will say, "I am sick"; the people who live there will be forgiven their guilt.

VI: THE LORD, SION'S AVENGER

CHAPTER 34.

Judgment upon Edom. 1 Come near, O nations, and hear; be attentive, O peoples! s Let the earth and what fills it listen, the world and all it produces. 2 The Lord is angry with all the nations and is wrathful against all their host; he has doomed them and given them over to slaughter. 3 t Their slain shall be cast out, their corpses shall send up a stench; the mountains shall run with their blood, 4 and all the hills shall rot; u the heavens shall be rolled up like a scroll, and all their host shall wither away, as the leaf wilts on the vine, or as the fig withers on the tree.

5 v When my sword has drunk its fill in the heavens, lo, it shall come down in judgment upon Edom, a people I have doomed. 6 The Lord has a sword filled with blood, greasy with fat, with the blood of lambs and goats, with the fat of rams' kidneys; for the Lord has a sacrifice in Bosra, a great slaughter in the land of Edom. w 7 Wild oxen shall be struck down with fatlings, and bullocks with bulls; their land shall be soaked with blood, and their earth greasy with fat. 8 x For the Lord has a day of vengeance, a year of requital by Sion's defender. 9 Edom's streams shall be changed into pitch and her earth into sulphur, and her land shall become burning pitch; 10 night and day it shall not be quenched, its smoke shall rise forever. From generation to generation she shall lie waste, never again shall anyone pass through her. 11 y But the desert owl and hoot owl shall possess her, the screech owl and raven shall dwell in her. The Lord will measure her with line and plummet to be an empty waste for satyrs* to dwell in.

12 z Her nobles shall be no more, nor shall kings be proclaimed there; all her princes are gone. 13 a Her castles shall be overgrown with thorns, her fortresses with thistles and briers. She shall become an abode for jackals and a haunt for ostriches. 14 Wildcats shall meet with desert beasts, satyrs shall call to one another; there shall the lilith* repose, and find for herself a place to rest. 15 There the hoot owl shall nest and lay eggs, hatch them out and gather them in her shadow; there shall the kites assemble, none shall be missing its mate.

16 b Look in the book of the Lord* and read: No one of these shall be lacking, for the mouth of the Lord has ordered it, and his spirit shall gather them there. 17 It is he who casts the lot for them, and with his hand he marks off their shares of her; they shall possess her forever, and dwell there from generation to generation.

CHAPTER 35.

Israel's Deliverance. 1 The desert and the parched land will exult; c the steppe will rejoice and bloom.* 2 d They will bloom with abundant flowers, and rejoice with joyful song. The glory of Lebanon will be given to them, the splendor of Carmel and Saron; they will see the glory of the Lord, the splendor of our God.

3 e Strengthen the hands that are feeble, make firm the knees that are weak, 4 f say to those whose hearts are frightened: Be strong, fear not! Here is your God, he comes with vindication; with divine recompense he comes to save you. 5 g Then will the eyes of the blind be opened, the ears of the deaf be cleared; 6 h then will the lame leap like a stag, then the tongue of the dumb will sing.

Streams will burst forth in the desert, and rivers in the steppe. 7 The burning sands will become pools, and the thirsty ground, springs of water; the abode where jackals lurk will be a marsh for the reed and papyrus. 8 A highway will be there, called the holy way; no one unclean may pass over it, nor fools go astray on it. 9 i No lion will be there, nor beast of prey go up to be met upon it. It is for those with a journey to make, and on it the redeemed will walk. 10 j Those whom the Lord has ransomed will return and enter Sion singing, crowned with everlasting joy; they will meet with joy and gladness, sorrow and mourning will flee.

VII: HISTORICAL APPENDIX

CHAPTER 36.

Invasion of Sennacherib.* 1 In the fourteenth year k of King Ezechia, Sennacherib, king of Assyria, went on an expedition against all the fortified cities of Juda and captured them. 2 From Lachis the king of Assyria sent his commander with a great army to King Ezechia in Jerusalem. When he stopped at the conduit of the upper pool, on the highway of the fuller's field, 3 there came out to him the master of the palace, Eliacim, son of Helcia, and Sobna the scribe, and the herald Joahe, son of Asaph. 4 The commander said to them, "Tell King Ezechia: Thus says the great king, the king of Assyria, 'On what do you base this confidence of yours? Do you think mere words substitute for strategy and might in war? On whom, then, do you rely, that you rebel against me? 6 l This Egypt, the staff on which you rely, is in fact a broken reed which pierces the hand of anyone who leans on it. That is what Pharao, king of Egypt, is to all who rely on him. 7 m But if you say to me: *"We rely on the Lord, our God," is not he the one whose high 35, 1-10: Similar to the description of the return from the Exile, as found in chaps. 40-55.

36, 1—39, 8: Except for Is 38, 9-20, this historical appendix describing the siege, etc., is paralleled in 4 Kgs 18, 13 — 20, 19, which, however, has certain details proper to itself. The events are also recorded in substantially the same way in the cuneiform inscriptions of Sennacherib.

36, 7: The Assyrians pretend that Ezechia's removal of the high places and altars (illegal sanctuaries) was taken by the Lord as an insult. They declare to Jerusalem's emissaries that the city therefore no longer has a right to the Lord's protection and that they are the ones who truly carry out His will (cf v 10).

places and altars Ezechia removed, commanding Juda and Jerusalem to worship before this altar?'

8 "Now, make a wager with my lord the king of Assyria: 'I will give you two thousand horses, if you can put riders on them.' 9 How then can you repulse even one of the least servants of my lord? And yet you rely on Egypt for chariots and horsemen! 10 n 'Was it without the Lord's will that I have come up to destroy this land? The Lord said to me, "Go up and destroy that land!" ' "

11 Then Eliacim and Sobna and Joahe said to the commander, "Please speak to your servants in Aramaic;* we understand it. Do not speak to us in Judean within earshot of the people who are on the wall."

12 But the commander replied, "Was it to you and your master that my lord sent me to speak these words? Was it not rather to the men sitting on the wall, who, with you, will have to eat their own excrement and drink their own urine?" 13 Then the commander stepped forward and cried out in a loud voice in Judean, "Listen to the words of the great king, the king of Assyria. 14 Thus says the king: 'Do not let Ezechia deceive you, since he cannot deliver you. 15 Let not Ezechia induce you to rely on the Lord, saying, "The Lord will surely save us; this city will not be handed over to the king of Assyria." ' 16 o Do not listen to Ezechia, for the king of Assyria says: 'Make peace with me and surrender! Then each of you will eat of his own vine and of his own fig tree, and drink the water of his own cistern, 17 until I come to take you to a land like your own, a land of grain and wine, of bread and vineyards. 18 p Do not let Ezechia seduce you by saying, "The Lord will save us." Has any of the gods of the nations ever rescued his land from the hand of the king of Assyria? 19 q Where are the gods of Hamath and Arphad? Where are the gods of Sepharvaim? Where are the gods of Samaria? Have they saved Samaria from my hand? 20 Which of all the gods of these lands ever rescued his land from my hand? Will the Lord then save Jerusalem from my hand?' " 21 But they remained silent and did not answer him one word, for the king had ordered them not to answer him.

22 Then the master of the palace, Eliacim, son of Helcia, Sobna the scribe, and the herald Joahe, son of Asaph, came to Ezechia with their garments torn, and reported to him what the commander had said.

CHAPTER 37.

1 When King Ezechia heard this, he tore his garments, wrapped himself in sackcloth, and went into the temple of the Lord. 2 He sent Eliacim, the master of the palace, and Sobna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, wrapped in sackcloth, to tell the prophet Isaia, son of Amos: 3 "Thus says Ezechia: 'This is a day of distress, of rebuke, and of disgrace. Children are at the point of birth, but there is no strength to bring them forth.* 4 Perhaps the Lord, your God, will hear the words of the commander, whom his master, the king of Assyria, sent to taunt the living God, and will rebuke him for the words which the Lord, your God, has heard. Send up a prayer for the remnant that is here.' "

5 When the servants of King Ezechia had come to Isaia, 6 he said to them: r "Tell this to your master: 'Thus says the Lord: Do not be frightened by the words you have heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me. 7 I am about to put in him such a spirit that, when he hears a certain report, he will return to his own land, and there I will cause him to fall by the sword.' "

8 When the commander returned to Lachis and heard that the king of Assyria had left there, he found him besieging Lobna. 9 The king of Assyria heard a report that Tharaca,* king of Ethiopia, had come out to fight against him. Again he sent envoys to Ezechia with this message: 10 "Thus shall you say to Ezechia, king of Juda: s 'Do not let your God on whom you rely deceive you by saying that Jerusalem will not be handed over to the king of Assyria. 11 You yourself have heard what the kings of Assyria have done to 36, 11: The Jewish emissaries ask that the conversation be carried on in Aramaic, not in Judean, for they fear the effect of the Assyrian claims upon the morale of the people.

37, 3: A proverbial expression. In the Bible the pangs of childbirth often typify extreme anguish; cf Is 13, 8; Jer 6, 24; Mi 4, 9f. In this instance there is reference to the desperate situation of Ezechia from which he was scarcely able to free himself.

37, 9: Tharaca: may have been general of the Egyptian army in 701 B. C.; later he became king, one of the Ethiopian dynasty of Egyptian kings (c. 690-664 B. C.) Many consider that this account in Isaia combines features of two originally distinct sieges of Jerusalem by Sennacherib.

all the countries: They doomed them! Will you, then, be saved? 12 Did the gods of the nations whom my fathers destroyed save them? Gozan, Haran, Reseph, and the Edenites in Thalassar? 13 Where is the king of Hamath, the king of Arphad, or a king of the cities of Sepharvaim, Ana or Ava?'"

14 Ezechia took the letter from the hand of the messengers and read it; then he went up to the temple of the Lord, and spreading it out before him, 15 he prayed to the Lord: 16 "O Lord of hosts, God of Israel, enthroned upon the cherubim! You alone are God over all the kingdoms of the earth.* You have made the heavens and the earth. 17 Incline your ear, O Lord, and listen! Open your eyes, O Lord, and see! Hear all the words of the letter that Sennacherib sent to taunt the living God. 18 Truly, O Lord, the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations and their lands, 19 t and cast their gods into the fire; they destroyed them because they were not gods but the work of human hands, wood and stone. 20 Therefore, O Lord, our God, save us from his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that you, O Lord, alone are God."

Punishment of Sennacherib. 21 Then Isaia, son of Amos, sent this message to Ezechia: Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: In answer to your prayer for help against Sennacherib, king of Assyria, 22 this is the word the Lord has spoken concerning him:

She despises you, laughs you to scorn,
the virgin daughter Sion; u behind you she wags her head, daughter Jerusalem. 23 v Whom have you insulted and blasphemed, against whom have you raised your voice and lifted up your eyes on high? Against the Holy One of Israel! 24 Through your servants you have insulted the Lord: you said, "With my many chariots I climbed the mountain heights, the recesses of Lebanon; I cut down its lofty cedars, its choice cypresses; I reached the remotest heights, its forest park. 25 I dug wells and drank water in foreign lands; I dried up with the soles of my feet all the rivers of Egypt."

26 Have you not heard? Long ago I prepared it, from days of old I planned it, now I have brought it to pass: that you should reduce fortified cities into heaps of ruins, 27 while their inhabitants, shorn of power, are dismayed and ashamed, becoming like the plants of the field, like the green growth, like the scorched grass on the housetops. 28 I am aware whether you stand or sit; I know whether you come or go, and also your rage against me. 29 Because of your rage against me and your fury which has reached my ears, I will put my hook in your nose and my bit in your mouth, and make you return the way you came.

30 This shall be a sign for you:* this year you shall eat the aftergrowth, next year, what grows of itself; but in the third year, sow and reap, plant vineyards and eat their fruit! 31 w The remaining survivors of the house of Juda shall again strike root below and bear fruit above. 32 For out of Jerusalem shall come a remnant, and from Mount Sion, survivors. The zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this.

33 Therefore, thus says the Lord concerning the king of Assyria: He shall not reach this city, nor shoot an arrow at it, nor come before it with a shield, nor cast up siegeworks against it. 34 x He shall return by the same way he came, without entering the city, says the Lord. 35 y I will shield and save this city for my own sake, and for the sake of my servant David.

36 z The angel of the Lord went forth and struck down one hundred and eighty-five thousand in the Assyrian camp.* Early the next morning, there they were, all the corpses of the dead. 37 a So Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, broke camp and went back home to Nineve.

38 When he was worshiping in the temple of his god Nesroch, his sons Adramelech and Sarasar slew him* with the sword and fled into the land of Ararat. His son Asarhaddon reigned in his stead.

37, 16: In contrast to the empty boasting of the Assyrians, Ezechia proclaims the Lord as God over all the kingdoms of the earth.

37, 30: You: Ezechia. A sign: it is difficult to know the nature of this sign. Either it is merely a proverbial expression to signify that prosperity follows adversity, or it indicates that after two years the normal conditions of life will be resumed.

37, 36: The destruction of Sennacherib's army is also recorded by Herodotus, a Greek historian of the fifth century B. C. It was probably due to the bubonic plague, but the sacred author attributes it to its ultimate cause, God through His angel.

37, 38: The violent death of Sennacherib (681 B. C.) is also mentioned in non-biblical sources. It occurred twenty years after his invasion of Judea.

CHAPTER 38.

Sickness and Recovery of Ezechia. 1 In those* days,* when Ezechia was mortally ill,[b] the prophet Isaia, son of Amos, came and said to him: "Thus says the Lord: Put your house in order, for you are about to die; you shall not recover." 2 Then Ezechia turned his face to the wall and prayed to the Lord: 3 [c] "O Lord, remember how faithfully and wholeheartedly I conducted myself in your presence, doing what was pleasing to you!" And Ezechia wept bitterly.

4 Then the word of the Lord came to Isaia: 5 "Go, tell Ezechia: Thus says the Lord, the God of your father David: I have heard your prayer and seen your tears. I will heal you: in three days you shall go up to the Lord's temple; I will add fifteen years* to your life. 6 [d] I will rescue you and this city from the hand of the king of Assyria; I will be a shield to this city."

21 Isaia then ordered a poultice of figs to be taken and applied to the boil, that he might recover. 22 Then Ezechia asked, "What is the sign that I shall go up to the temple of the Lord?"

7 [Isaia answered:] "This will be the sign for you from the Lord that he will do what he has promised: 8 [e] See, I will make the shadow cast by the sun on the stairway to the terrace* of Achaz go back the ten steps it has advanced." So the sun came back the ten steps it had advanced.

Ezechia's Hymn of Thanksgiving. 9 The song of Ezechia, king of Juda, after he had been sick and had recovered from his illness: 10 [f] Once I said, "In the noontime of life* I must depart! To the gates of the nether world I shall be consigned for the rest of my years." 11 I said, "I shall see the Lord* no more in the land of the living. No longer shall I behold my fellow men among those who dwell in the world." 12 [g] My dwelling, like a shepherd's tent,* is struck down and borne away from me; you have folded up my life, like a weaver who severs the last thread. Day and night you give me over to torment; 13 I cry out until the dawn. Like a lion he breaks all my bones; [day and night you give me over to torment]. 14 Like a swallow I utter shrill cries; I moan like a dove. My eyes grow weak, gazing heavenward: O Lord, I am in straits; be my surety!

15 What am I to say or tell him?* He has done it! I shall go on through all my years despite the bitterness of my soul. 16 Those live whom the Lord protects; yours . . . the life of my spirit.* You have given me health and life; 17 thus is my bitterness transformed into peace. You have preserved my life from the pit of destruction, when you cast behind your back all my sins.* 18 [h] For it is not the nether world that gives you thanks,* nor death that praises you; neither do those who go down into the pit await your kindness. 19 The living, the living give you thanks, as I do today. Fathers declare to their sons, O God, your faithfulness. 20 The Lord is our savior; we shall sing to stringed instruments in the house of the Lord all the days of our life.

CHAPTER 39.

Embassy from Merodach-baladan. 1 At that time [i] when Merodach-baladan,* son of Baladan, king of Babylon, heard that Ezechia had recovered from his sickness, 38, 1 — 39, 8: The events of this section—sickness and recovery of Ezechia, embassy of Merodach-baladan—point forward to Babylon (cc 40-66). They occurred prior to the events of Is 36, 1—37, 38, which point back to Assyria (Is 1, 1—35, 10).

38, 1: In those days: a time prior to the siege of Jerusalem in 701 B. C.

38, 5: Since Ezechia died in 687 B.C., this sickness of his seems to have been in 702 B. C., that is, fifteen years before.

38, 8: Stairway to the terrace of Achaz: this interpretation is based on a reading of the Hebrew text revised according to the Dead Sea Scroll of Isaia; cf 4 Kgs 23, 12. Many translate the phrase as "steps of Achaz" and understand this as referring to a sundial.

38, 10: In the noontime of life: long before the end of a full span of life; cf Pss 54 (55), 24; 101 (102), 25.

38, 11: See the Lord: go to the Temple and take part in its service.

38, 12: These two metaphors emphasize the suddenness and finality of death.

38, 15: What am I to say or tell him?: a rhetorical question, as if the poet were at a loss in giving fitting expression to his gratitude; cf Ps 115 (116), 12. He has done it: accomplished the cure. Despite the bitterness: even though the one praying was previously so dejected.

38, 16: Yours . . . the life of my spirit: the current Hebrew text is corrupt. The revised Latin psalter renders it: "You have revived my soul."

38, 17: You cast behind your back all my sins: figurative language to express the divine forgiveness of sins, as if God no longer saw or cared about them. This expression is ordinarily used of men forgetting God; cf 3 Kgs 14, 9; Ez 23, 35; Ps 49 (50), 17.

38, 18f: See note on Ps 6, 6

39, 1: Merodach-baladan: twice king of Babylon, probably from 721 to 710 B. C., and again for nine months, in 704-703. This visit of his messengers, certainly before 701, was in reality a political one. Babylon hoped to lead an anti-Assyrian confederation composed of neighboring states.

he sent letters and gifts to him. 2 i Ezechia was pleased at this, and therefore showed the messengers his treasury, the silver and gold, the spices and fine oil, his whole armory, and everything that was in his storerooms; there was nothing in his house or in his whole realm that he did not show them.

3 Then Isaia the prophet came to King Ezechia and asked him, "What did these men say to you? Where did they come from?" Ezechia answered, "They came to me from a distant land, from Babylon." 4 "What did they see in your house?" he asked. Ezechia replied, "They saw everything in my house; there is nothing in my storerooms that I did not show them."

5 Then Isaia said to Ezechia, "Hear the word of the Lord of hosts: 6 k Behold, the days shall come when all that is in your house, and everything that your fathers have stored up until this day, shall be carried off to Babylon;* nothing shall be left, says the Lord. l Some of your own bodily descendants shall be taken and made servants in the palace of the king of Babylon." 8 m Ezechia replied to Isaia, "The word of the Lord which you have spoken is favorable."* For he thought, "There will be peace and security in my lifetime."

B. THE BOOK OF CONSOLATION

I: THE LORD'S GLORY IN ISRAEL'S LIBERATION

CHAPTER 40.

Promise of Salvation. 1 Comfort, give comfort to my people, says your God. 2 n Speak tenderly to Jerusalem, and proclaim to her that her service* is at an end, her guilt is expiated; indeed, she has received from the hand of the Lord double for all her sins.

3 o A voice cries out: *In the desert prepare the way of the Lord! Make straight in the wasteland a highway for our God! 4 Every valley shall be filled in, every mountain and hill shall be made low; the rugged land shall be made a plain, the rough country, a broad valley. 5 Then the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all mankind shall see it together; for the mouth of the Lord has spoken.

6 p A voice says, "Cry out!" I answer, "What shall I cry out?" All mankind is grass, and all their glory like the flower of the field. 7 The grass withers, the flower wilts, when the breath of the Lord blows upon it. [So then, the people is the grass.] 8 Though the grass withers and the flower wilts, the word of our God stands forever."

9 Go up onto a high mountain, Sion, herald of glad tidings; cry out at the top of your voice, Jerusalem, herald of good news! Fear not to cry out and say to the cities of Juda: Here is your God! 10 Here comes with power the Lord God, who rules by his strong arm; here is his reward with him, his recompense before him. 11 q Like a shepherd he feeds his flock; in his arms he gathers the lambs, carrying them in his bosom, and leading the ewes with care.

Power of the Creator To Save His People. 12 Who has cupped in his hand the waters of the sea, and marked off the heavens with a span?* Who has held in a measure the dust of the earth, weighed the mountains in scales and the hills in a balance? 13 r Who has directed the spirit of the Lord, or has instructed him as his counselor? 14 Whom did he consult to gain knowledge? Who taught him the path of judgment, or showed him the way of understanding?

15 Behold, the nations count as a drop of the bucket, as dust on the scales; the coastlands weigh no more than powder. 16 Lebanon* would not suffice for fuel, nor its animals be enough for holocausts. 17 Before him all the nations are as nought, as nothing and void he accounts them.

18 s To whom can you liken God? With what equal can you confront him? 19 t An idol, cast by a craftsman, which the smith plates with gold and fits with silver

39, 6: Because Juda preferred to follow a pro-Babylonian policy, instead of trusting in God, it would later be exiled to Babylon.

39, 8: Favorable: for the Exile would not occur in his lifetime.

40, 2: Service: servitude and exile.

40, 3-5: The figurative language here describes the actual return of the exiles from Babylon to Jerusalem. It is the Lord who leads them; their road is made easy for them. Mt 3, 3 and parallels see in these verses a prophecy of the Baptist and Christ.

40, 12: Span: the distance between the extended little finger and the thumb. Measure: literally, "third"; here a small container.

chains? 20 u Mulberry wood, the choice portion which a skilled craftsman picks out for himself, choosing timber that will not rot, to set up an idol that will not be unsteady?
6 *One man helps another, one says to the other, "Keep on!" 7 The craftsman encourages the goldsmith, the one who beats with the hammer, him who strikes
on the anvil; he says the soldering is good,
and he fastens it with nails to steady it.
21 Do you not know? Have you not heard? Was it not foretold you from the beginning? Have you not understood?
Since the earth was founded 22 v he sits enthroned above the vault of the earth,
and its inhabitants are like grasshoppers;
he stretches out the heavens like a veil,
spreads them out like a tent to dwell in.
23 He brings princes to nought and makes the rulers of the earth as nothing. 24
Scarcely are they planted or sown, scarcely is their stem rooted in the earth, when he breathes upon them and they wither,
and the stormwind carries them away like straw.
25 To whom can you liken me as an equal? says the Holy One. 26 w Lift up your eyes on high and see who has created* these: he leads out their army and numbers them, calling them all by name.
By his great might and the strength of his power not one of them is missing! 27 Why, O Jacob, do you say, and declare, O Israel,* "My way is hidden from the Lord,
and my right is disregarded by my God"?
28 Do you not know or have you not heard? The Lord is the eternal God, creator of the ends of the earth. He does not faint nor grow weary, and his knowledge is beyond scrutiny. 29 He gives strength to the fainting; for the weak he makes vigor abound. 30 Though young men faint and grow weary, and youths stagger and fall, 31 they that hope in the Lord will renew their strength, they will soar as with eagles' wings; they will run and not grow weary, walk and not grow faint.

CHAPTER 41.

The Liberator of Israel. 1 Keep silence
before me, O coastlands;* you peoples, wait for my words! Let them draw near and speak; let us come together for judgment.
2 Who has stirred up from the East the champion of justice,* and summoned him to be his attendant? To him he delivers the nations and subdues the kings;
with his sword he reduces them to dust,
with his bow, to driven straw. 3 He pursues them, passing on without loss, by a path his feet do not even tread. 4 x Who has performed these deeds? He who has called forth the generations since the beginning. I, the Lord, am the first, and with the last I will also be. 5 The coast-lands see, and fear; the ends of the earth tremble: these things are near, they come to pass.
8 y But you, Israel, my servant, Jacob, whom I have chosen, offspring of Abraham my friend—9 you whom I have taken from the ends of the earth and summoned from its far-off places, you whom I have called my servant, whom I have chosen and will not cast off—10 fear not, I am with you; be not dismayed; I am your God. I will strengthen you, and help you, and uphold you with my right hand of
justice.
11 Yes, all shall be put to shame and disgrace who vent their anger against you;
those shall perish and come to nought who offer resistance. 12 You shall seek out, but shall not find, those who strive against you; they shall be as nothing at all who do battle with you.
13 For I am the Lord, your God, who grasp your right hand; it is I who say to you, "Fear not, I will help you." 14 Fear not, O worm Jacob, O maggot Israel; I will help you, says the Lord; your redeemer* is the Holy One of Israel. 15 I will make of you a threshing sledge, sharp, new, and double-edged, to thresh
the mountains and crush them, to make the hills like chaff. 16 When you winnow them, the wind shall carry them off and the storm shall scatter them. But you shall rejoice in the Lord, and glory in the Holy One of Israel.
17 The afflicted and the needy seek

40, 6-7: These two verses have been transposed from Chapter 41.

40, 26: Created: see note on Gn 1, 1. By name: for He is their Creator.

40, 27f: God's people, here called Jacob and Israel, must not give way to discouragement: their Lord is the eternal God.

41, 1-4: It is generally agreed that these verses describe the vocation and victory of Cyrus, whom the Lord used as His instrument to redeem Israel.

41, 2: Cyrus is the champion of justice and God's attendant.

water in vain, their tongues are parched with thirst. I, the Lord, will answer them; I, the God of Israel, will not forsake them. 18 I will open up rivers on the bare heights, and fountains in the broad valleys; I will turn the desert into a marshland, and the dry ground into springs of water. 19 I will plant in the desert the cedar, acacia, myrtle, and olive; I will set in the wasteland the cypress, together with the plane tree and the pine, 20 that all may see and know, observe and understand, that the hand of the Lord has done this, the Holy One of Israel has created it.

21 *Present your case, says the Lord; bring forward your reasons, says the King of Jacob. 22 Let them come near and foretell to us what it is that shall happen! What are the things of long ago? Tell us, that we may reflect on them and know their outcome; or declare to us the things to come! 23 Foretell the things that shall come afterward, that we may know that you are gods! Do something, good or evil, that will put us in awe and in fear. 24 Why, you are nothing and your work is nought! To choose you is an abomination.

25 I have stirred up one from the north, and he comes; from the east I summon him* by name; he shall trample the rulers down like mortar, as the potter treads the clay. 26 Who announced this from the beginning, that we might know; beforehand, that we might say it is true? Not one of you foretold it, not one spoke; no one heard you say, 27 "The first news for Sion: they are coming now," or, "For Jerusalem I will pick out a bearer of the glad tidings." 28 When I look, there is not one, no one of them to give counsel, to make an answer when I question them. 29 Ah, all of them are nothing, their works are nought, their idols are empty wind!

CHAPTER 42.

The Servant of the Lord. 1 Here is my servant* whom I uphold,[z] my chosen one with whom I am pleased, upon whom I have put my spirit; he shall bring forth justice to the nations, 2 not crying out, not shouting, not making his voice heard in the street. 3 A bruised reed he shall not break, and a smoldering wick he shall not quench, 4 until he establishes justice on the earth; the coastlands will wait for his teaching.

5 Thus says God, the Lord, who created the heavens and stretched them out, who spreads out the earth with its crops, who gives breath to its people and spirit to those who walk on it: 6 [a] I, the Lord, have called you for the victory of justice, I have grasped you by the hand; I formed you, and set you as a covenant of the people, a light for the nations, 7 to open the eyes of the blind, to bring out prisoners from confinement, and from the dungeon, those who live in darkness. 8 I am the Lord, this is my name; my glory I give to no other, nor my praise to idols. 9 See, the earlier things have come to pass, new ones I now foretell; before they spring into being, I announce them to you.

The Salvation of Israel despite Its Sins. 10 Sing to the Lord a new song, his praise from the end of the earth: let the sea and what fills it resound, the coastlands, and those who dwell in them. 11 Let the steppe and its cities cry out, the villages where Cedar* dwells; let the inhabitants of Sela exult, and shout from the top of the mountains. 12 Let them give glory to the Lord, and utter his praise in the coastlands.

13 [b] The Lord goes forth like a hero, like a warrior he stirs up his ardor; he shouts out his battle cry, against his enemies he shows his might: 14 I have looked away, and kept silence, I have said nothing, holding myself in; but now, I cry out as a woman in labor, gasping and panting. 15 [c] I will lay waste mountains and hills, all their herbage I will dry up; I will turn the rivers into marshes, and the marshes I will dry up. 16 [d] I will lead the blind on their journey; by paths unknown I will guide them. I will turn darkness into light before them, and make crooked ways straight. These things I do for them, and I will not forsake them.

17 They shall be turned back in utter

Many identifications have been proposed, e. g., historical Israel, ideal Israel, an Old Testament historical character before or during the lifetime of the prophet, the prophet himself. The New Testament and Christian tradition, however, have seen a fulfillment of these prophecies in Jesus Christ.

shame who trust in idols: who say to molten images, "You are our gods." 18 *You who are deaf, listen, you who are blind, look and see! 19 Who is blind but my servant, or deaf like the messenger I send? 20 You see many things without taking note; your ears are open, but without hearing.

21 Though it pleased the Lord in his justice to make his law great and glorious, 22 this is a people* despoiled and plundered, all of them trapped in holes, hidden away in prisons. They are taken as booty, with no one to rescue them, as spoil, with no one to demand their return.

23 Who of you gives ear to this? Who listens and pays heed for the time to come? 24 Who was it that gave Jacob to be plundered, Israel to the despoilers?* Was it not the Lord, against whom we have sinned? In his ways they refused to walk, his law they disobeyed. 25 So he poured out wrath upon them, his anger, and the fury of battle; it blazed round about them, yet they did not realize, it burned them, but they took it not to heart.

CHAPTER 43.

Promises of Redemption and Restoration. 1 But now, thus says the Lord, who created you, O Jacob, and formed you, O Israel: Fear not, for I have redeemed you; I have called you by name: you are mine. 2 When you pass through the water, I will be with you; in the rivers you shall not drown. When you walk through fire, you shall not be burned; the flames shall not consume you. 3 For I am the Lord, your God, the Holy One of Israel, your savior. I give Egypt as your ransom, Ethiopia and Saba* in return for you. 4 e Because you are precious in my eyes and glorious, and because I love you, I give men in return for you and peoples in exchange for your life. 5 Fear not, for I am with you; from the east I will bring back your descendants, from the west I will gather you. 6 f I will say to the north: Give them up! and to the south: Hold not back! Bring back my sons from afar, and my daughters from the ends of the earth: 7 everyone who is named as mine, whom I created for my glory, whom I formed and made. 8 Lead out the people who are blind though they have eyes, who are deaf though they have ears.

9 Let all the nations gather together, let the peoples assemble! Who among them could have revealed this, or foretold to us the earlier things?* Let them produce witnesses to prove themselves right, that one may hear and say, "It is true!" 10 You are my witnesses, says the Lord, my servants whom I have chosen to know and believe in me and understand that it is I. Before me no god was formed and after me there shall be none.

11 It is I, I the Lord; there is no savior but me. 12 It is I who foretold, I who saved; I made it known, not any strange god among you; you are my witnesses, says the Lord. I am God, 13 yes, from eternity I am He; g there is none who can deliver from my hand: who can countermand what I do?

14 *Thus says the Lord, your redeemer, the Holy One of Israel: For your sakes I send to Babylon; I will lower all the bars, and the Chaldeans shall cry out in lamentation. 15 I am the Lord, your Holy One, the creator of Israel, your King. 16 h Thus says the Lord, who opens a way in the sea and a path in the mighty waters, 17 i who leads out chariots and horsemen, a powerful army, till they lie prostrate together, never to rise, snuffed out and quenched like a wick.

18 Remember not the events of the past, the things of long ago consider not;* 19 see, I am doing something new! Now it springs forth, do you not perceive it? In the desert I make a way, in the wasteland, rivers. 20 Wild beasts honor me, jackals and ostriches, for I put water in the desert and rivers in the wasteland for my chosen people to drink, 21 the people whom I formed for myself, that they might announce my praise.

your sacrifices. I did not exact from you the service of offerings, nor weary you

the fat of your sacrifices; instead, you burdened me with your sins, and wearied me with your crimes. 25 It is I, I, who wipe out, for my own sake, your offenses;
your sins I remember no more. 26 Would you have me remember, have us come to trial? Speak up, prove your innocence!
27 Your first father* sinned; your spokesmen rebelled against me 28 till I repudiated the holy gates, put Jacob under the ban, and exposed Israel to scorn.

CHAPTER 44.

1 Hear then, O Jacob, my servant, Israel, whom I have chosen. 2 Thus says
the Lord who made you, your help, who formed you from the womb: Fear not,
O Jacob, my servant, the darling* whom I have chosen. 3 I will pour out water upon the thirsty ground, and streams upon the dry land; I will pour out my spirit upon your offspring, and my blessing upon your descendants. 4 k They shall spring up amid the verdure like poplars beside the flowing waters. 5 l One shall say, "I am the Lord's," another shall be named after Jacob, and this one shall write on his hand,* "The Lord's," and Israel shall be his surname.

The True God and False Gods. 6 m Thus says the Lord, Israel's King and redeemer, the Lord of hosts: I am the first and I am the last; there is no God but me.
7 Who is like me? Let him stand up and speak, make it evident, and confront me with it. Who of old announced future events? Let them foretell to us the things to come. 8 n Fear not, be not troubled:
did I not announce and foretell it long ago? You are my witnesses! Is there a God or any Rock* besides me?

9 *Idol makers all amount to nothing,
and their precious works are of no avail,
as they themselves give witness. o To their shame, they neither see nor know anything; and they are more deaf than men are. 10 Indeed, all the associates of anyone who forms a god, or casts an idol to no purpose, will be put to shame; 11 they will all assemble and stand forth, to be reduced to fear and shame.

12 p The smith fashions an iron image, works it over the coals, shapes it with hammers, and forges it with his strong arm. He is hungry and weak, drinks no water and becomes exhausted.

13 The carpenter stretches a line and marks with a stylus the outline of an idol.
He shapes it with a plane and measures
it off with a compass, making it like a man in appearance and dignity, to occupy a shrine. 14 He cuts down cedars, takes a holm or an oak, and lays hold of other trees of the forest, which the Lord had planted and the rain made grow 15 to serve man for fuel. With a part of their wood he warms himself, or makes a fire for baking bread; but with another part he makes a god which he adores, an idol which he worships. 16 Half of it he burns
in the fire, and on its embers he roasts his meat; he eats what he has roasted until he is full, and then warms himself and says, "Ah! I am warm, I feel the fire." 17 Of what remains he makes a god, his idol, and prostrate before it in worship, he implores it, "Rescue me, for you are my god."

18 The idols have neither knowledge nor reason; their eyes are coated so that they cannot see, and their hearts so that they cannot understand. 19 Yet he does not reflect, nor have the intelligence and sense to say, "Half of the wood I burned in the fire, and on its embers I baked bread and roasted meat which I ate. Shall I then make an abomination out of the rest, or worship a block of wood?" 20 He is chasing ashes*—a thing that cannot save itself when the flame consumes it;
yet he does not say, "Is not this thing in my right hand a fraud?"

21 Remember this, O Jacob, you, O
Israel, who are my servant! I formed you to be a servant to me; O Israel, by me

you shall never be forgotten: 22 I have brushed away your offenses like a cloud, your sins like a mist; return to me, for I have redeemed you.

23 Raise a glad cry, you heavens: the Lord has done this; shout, you depths of the earth. Break forth, you mountains, into song, you forest, with all your trees. For the Lord has redeemed Jacob, and shows his glory through Israel.

Cyrus, Anointed of the Lord, Liberator of Israel. 24 q Thus says the Lord, your redeemer, who formed you from the womb: I am the Lord, who made all things, who alone stretched out the heavens; when I spread out the earth, who was with me? 25 It is I who bring to nought the omens of liars, who make fools of diviners; I turn wise men back and make their knowledge foolish. 26 It is I who confirm the words of my servants, I carry out the plan announced by my messengers; I say to Jerusalem: Be inhabited; to the cities of Juda: Be rebuilt; I will raise up their ruins. 27 r It is I who said to the deep: Be dry; I will dry up your wellsprings. 28 s I say of Cyrus:* My shepherd, who fulfills my every wish; he shall say of Jerusalem, "Let her be rebuilt," and of the temple, "Let its foundations be laid."

CHAPTER 45.

1 Thus says the Lord to his anointed,* Cyrus, whose right hand I grasp, subduing nations before him, and disarming kings, opening doors before him and leaving the gates unbarred: 2 t I will go before you and level the mountains; bronze doors* I will shatter, and iron bars I will snap. 3 I will give you treasures out of the darkness, and riches that have been hidden away, that you may know that I am the Lord, the God of Israel, who calls you by your name. 4 u For the sake of Jacob, my servant, of Israel my chosen one, I have called you by your name, giving you a title, though you knew me not. 5 I am the Lord and there is no other, there is no God besides me. It is I who arm you, though you know me not, 6 so that toward the rising and the setting of the sun men may know that there is none besides me.*

I am the Lord, there is no other; 7 I form the light, and create the darkness, I make well-being and create woe;* I, the Lord, do all these things. 8 v Let justice* descend, O heavens, like dew from above, like gentle rain let the skies drop it down. Let the earth open and salvation bud forth; let justice also spring up! I, the Lord, have created this.

9 w Woe to him who contends with his Maker; a potsherd among potsherds of the earth! Dare the clay say to its modeler, "What are you doing?" or, "What you are making has no hands"?* 10 Woe to him who asks a father, "What are you begetting?" or a woman, "What are you giving birth to?" 11 Thus says the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, his maker: You question me about my children, or prescribe the work of my hands for me! 12 It was I who made the earth and created mankind upon it; it was my hands that stretched out the heavens; I gave the order to all their host. 13 It was I who stirred up one* for the triumph of justice; all his ways I make level. He shall rebuild my city and let my exiles go free without price or ransom, says the Lord of hosts.

14 x Thus says the Lord: The earnings of Egypt, the gain of Ethiopia, and the Sabeans,* tall of stature, shall come over to you and belong to you; they shall follow you, coming in chains. Before you they shall fall prostrate, saying in prayer: "With you only is God, and nowhere else; the gods are nought. 15 y Truly with you God is hidden,* the God of Israel,

45, 1: Anointed: in Hebrew, meshiah, from which the word "Messia" is derived; from its Greek translation, Christos, we have the name "Christ." Applied to kings, it originally referred only to those of Israel, but it is here given to Cyrus because he is the agent of the Lord.

45, 2: Bronze doors: of Babylon.

45, 6: The Gentiles will come to know the true God; cf also vv 20-25.

45, 7: Create woe: God permits evil for the sake of a greater good.

45, 8: The Vulgate rendering gives a more precise Messianic sense to this verse, using "just one" and "savior" in place of justice and salvation. The Advent liturgy uses the Vulgate form, Rorate coeli desuper . . . , to express the world's longing for the coming of Christ.

45, 9: No one may challenge God's freedom of action, exemplified here by the selection of Cyrus as His anointed.

45, 13: One: Cyrus, called by God for the deliverance and restoration of Israel.

45, 14: Egypt . . . Ethiopia . . . Sabeans: the Egyptians and their allies who, when conquered by Cyrus, are seen as acknowledging the God of Israel to be the one true God; cf Is 43, 3.

the savior! [16] Those are put to shame and disgrace who vent their anger against him; those go in disgrace who carve images. [17] Israel, you are saved by the Lord, saved forever! You shall never be put to shame or disgrace in future ages." [18] For thus says the Lord, the creator of the heavens, who is God, the designer and maker of the earth who established it, not creating it to be a waste,* but designing it to be lived in: I am the Lord, and there is no other. [19] I have not spoken from hiding nor from some dark place of the earth, and I have not said to the descendants of Jacob, "Look for me in an empty waste." I, the Lord, promise justice, I foretell what is right.

[20] Come and assemble, gather together, you fugitives from among the gentiles! They are without knowledge who bear wooden idols* and pray to gods that cannot save. [21] Come here and declare in counsel together: Who announced this from the beginning and foretold it from of old? Was it not I, the Lord, besides whom there is no other God? There is no just and saving God but me. [22] Turn to me and be safe, all you ends of the earth, for I am God; there is no other!

[23] z By myself I swear, uttering my just decree and my unalterable word: To me every knee shall bend; by me every tongue shall swear, [24] saying, "Only in the Lord are just deeds and power. Before him in shame shall come all who vent their anger against him. [25] In the Lord shall be the vindication and the glory of all the descendants of Israel."

CHAPTER 46.

The Gods of Babylon. [1] Bel bows down, Nebo* stoops, their idols are upon beasts and cattle; they must be borne up on shoulders, carried as burdens by the weary. [2] They stoop and bow down together; unable to save those who bear them, they too go into captivity.

z Rom 14, 11; Phil 2, 10.—a Is 44, 2.

45, 18: Waste: an allusion to the beginning of creation, when the earth was waste and void (Gn 1, 2), the same Hebrew word, tohu, being used in both passages. The further reference here is to Palestine, which God wishes again to be inhabited by the returning exiles.

45, 20: Who bear wooden idols: in their religious processions. The gods of the pagans have feet but cannot walk; cf Ps 113B (115), 7; Bar 6, 25.

46, 1: Bel . . . Nebo: gods of Babylon; their complete helplessness is here contrasted with God's omnipotence.

46, 11: From the east a bird of prey: Cyrus; cf Is 41, 2-4.

47, 1-15: A taunt song, mocking Babylon, once queen of the nations, now made a slave girl.

[3] a Hear me, O house of Jacob, all who remain of the house of Israel, my burden since your birth, whom I have carried from your infancy. [4] Even to your old age I am the same, even when your hair is gray I will bear you; it is I who have done this, I who will continue, and I who will carry you to safety.

[5] Whom would you compare me with, as an equal, or match me against, as though we were alike? [6] There are those who pour out gold from a purse and weigh out silver on the scales; then they hire a goldsmith to make it into a god before which they fall down in worship. [7] They lift it to their shoulders to carry; when they set it in place again, it stays, and does not move from the spot. Although they cry out to it, it cannot answer; it delivers no one from distress.

[8] Remember this and be firm, bear it well in mind, you rebels; remember the former things, those long ago: [9] I am God, there is no other; I am God, there is none like me. [10] At the beginning I foretell the outcome; in advance, things not yet done. I say that my plan shall stand, I accomplish my every purpose.

[11] I call from the east a bird of prey,* from a distant land, one to carry out my plan. Yes, I have spoken, I will accomplish it; I have planned it, and I will do it.

[12] Listen to me, you fainthearted, you who seem far from the victory of justice: [13] I am bringing on my justice, it is not far off, my salvation shall not tarry; I will put salvation within Sion, and give to Israel my glory.

CHAPTER 47.

The Fall of Babylon. [1] *Come down, sit in the dust, O virgin daughter Babylon; sit on the ground, dethroned, O daughter of the Chaldeans. No longer shall you be called dainty and delicate. [2] Take the millstone and grind flour, remove your veil; strip off your train, bare your legs, pass through the streams. [3] Your nakedness shall be uncovered and your shame be seen; I will take vengeance, I will yield to no entreaty, says our redeemer, [4] whose name is the Lord of hosts, the Holy One of Israel.

[5] Go into darkness and sit in silence, O daughter of the Chaldeans, no longer shall you be called sovereign mistress of kingdoms. [6] Angry at my people, I profaned my inheritance, and I gave them into your hand; but you showed them no mercy, and upon old men you laid a very heavy yoke. 7 b You said, "I shall remain a sovereign mistress forever!" But you did not lay these things to heart, you disregarded their outcome. 8 c Now hear this, voluptuous one, enthroned securely, saying to yourself, "I, and no one else! I shall never be a widow, or suffer the loss of my children"—9 both these things shall come to you suddenly, in a single day: complete bereavement and widowhood shall come upon you for your many sorceries and the great number of your spells.* 10 You felt secure in your wickedness, "No one sees me," you said, your wisdom and your knowledge led you astray, and you said to yourself, "I, and no one else!" 11 But upon you shall come evil against which you know no charm; disaster shall befall you which you cannot allay. Suddenly there shall come upon you ruin which you will not foresee.

12 Keep up your spells and your many sorceries, with which you toiled from your youth; perhaps you can make them avail, perhaps you can strike terror! 13 You wearied yourself with many consultations; let the astrologers stand forth to save you, the stargazers who forecast at each new moon what would happen to you. 14 Lo, they are like stubble, fire consumes them; they cannot save themselves from the spreading flames. This is no warming ember, no fire to sit before. 15 Thus do they serve you through whom you have grown weary, your magicians since your youth; each wanders his own way, with none to save you.

CHAPTER 48.

Exhortations to the Exiles. 1 Hear this, O house of Jacob called by the name Israel, sprung from the stock of Juda, you who swear by the name of the Lord and invoke the God of Israel without sincerity or justice, 2 though you are named after the holy city and rely on the God of Israel, whose name is the Lord of hosts. 3 Things of the past I foretold long ago, they went forth from my mouth, I let you hear of them; then suddenly I took action and they came to be. 4 Because I know that you are stubborn and that your neck is an iron sinew and your forehead bronze, 5 I foretold them to you of old; before they took place I let you hear of them, that you might not say, "My idol did them, my statue, my molten image commanded them." 6 Now that you have heard, look at all this; must you not admit it?

From now on I announce new things to you,d hidden events of which you knew not. 7 Now, not long ago, they are brought into being, and beforetime you did not hear of them, so that you cannot claim to have known them; 8 e you neither heard nor knew, they did not reach your ears beforehand. Yes, I know you are utterly treacherous, a rebel you were called from birth. 9 For the sake of my name I restrain my anger, for the sake of my renown I hold it back from you, lest I should destroy you. 10 f See, I have refined you like silver, tested you in the furnace of affliction. 11 For my sake, for my own sake, I do this; why should I suffer profanation? My glory I will not give to another.

12 Listen to me, Jacob, Israel, whom I named! g I, it is I who am the first, and also the last am I. 13 h Yes, my hand laid the foundations of the earth; my right hand spread out the heavens. When I call them, they stand forth at once.

14 All of you assemble and listen: Who among you foretold these things? The Lord's friend* shall do his will against Babylon and the progeny of Chaldea. 15 I myself have spoken, I have called him, I have brought him, and his way succeeds! 16 Come near to me and hear this! Never from the beginning have I spoken in secret; at the time it comes to pass, I am present. "Now the Lord God has sent me, and his spirit."* 17 Thus says the Lord, your redeemer, the Holy One of Israel: I, the Lord, your God, teach you what is for your good, and lead you on the way you should go. 18 If you would hearken to my commandments, your prosperity would be like a river, and your vindication like the waves of the sea; 19 your descendants would be like the sand, and those born of your stock like its

20 Go forth from Babylon, flee from Chaldea! With shouts of joy proclaim this, make it known; publish it to the ends of the earth, and say, "The Lord has redeemed his servant Jacob. 21 They did not thirst when he led them through dry lands; i water from the rock he set flowing for them; he cleft the rock, and waters welled forth." [There is no peace for the wicked, says the Lord.]

II: EXPIATION OF SIN, SPIRITUAL LIBERATION OF ISRAEL

CHAPTER 49.

The Servant of the Lord.* 1 Hear me, O coastlands,j listen, O distant peoples. The Lord called me from birth, from my mother's womb he gave me my name.* 2 He made of me a sharp-edged sword and concealed me in the shadow of his arm. He made me a polished arrow, in his quiver he hid me. 3 You are my servant, he said to me, Israel, through whom I show my glory.

4 k Though I thought I had toiled in vain, and for nothing, uselessly, spent my strength, yet my reward is with the Lord, my recompense is with my God. 5 For now the Lord has spoken who formed me as his servant from the womb, that Jacob may be brought back to him and Israel gathered to him; and I am made glorious in the sight of the Lord, and my God is now my strength! 6 l It is too little, he says, for you to be my servant, to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and restore the survivors of Israel; I will make you a light to the nations, that my salvation may reach to the ends of the earth.*

49, 1-7: The second of the four "Servant-of-the-Lord" oracles.

49, 1: Gave me my name: designated me for a special office (cf Jer 1, 5), or perhaps, made me renowned (cf Ps 44 [45], 18).

49, 2: The Servant was made ready and fit for the preaching of God's word.

49, 3: Israel: the Servant is identified with the people of Israel as their ideal representative; however, since vv 5f seem to distinguish the Servant from Israel, some regard the word Israel here as a gloss.

49, 6: The Servant's vocation will be not only the restoration of Israel but the conversion of the world; cf Lk 2, 32.

49, 12: Syene: now called Aswan, at the first cataract of the Nile in southern Egypt.

49, 16: Upon the palms . . . name: for continual remembrance; cf Ex 13, 9. 16; Dt 6, 6-9.

7 m Thus says the Lord, the redeemer and the Holy One of Israel, to the one despised, whom the nations abhor, the slave of rulers: When kings see you, they shall stand up, and princes shall prostrate themselves because of the Lord who is faithful, the Holy One of Israel who has chosen you.

The Liberation and Restoration of Sion. 8 n Thus says the Lord: In a time of favor I answer you, on the day of salvation I help you, to restore the land and allot the desolate heritages, 9 o saying to the prisoners: Come out! To those in darkness: Show yourselves! Along the ways they shall find pasture, on every bare height shall their pastures be. 10 p They shall not hunger or thirst, nor shall the scorching wind or the sun strike them; for he who pities them leads them and guides them beside springs of water. 11 q I will cut a road through all my mountains, and make my highways level. 12 See, some shall come from afar, others from the north and the west, and some from the land of Syene.*

13 Sing out, O heavens, and rejoice, O earth, break forth into song, you mountains. For the Lord comforts his people and shows mercy to his afflicted.

14 r But Sion said, "The Lord has forsaken me; my Lord has forgotten me." 15 s Can a mother forget her infant, be without tenderness for the child of her womb? Even should she forget, I will never forget you. 16 See, upon the palms of my hands I have written your name;* your walls are ever before me. 17 Your rebuilders make haste, as those who tore you down and laid you waste go forth from you; 18 look about and see, they are all gathered and coming to you. As I live, says the Lord, you shall be arrayed with them all as with adornments, like a bride you shall fasten them on you.

19 Though you were waste and desolate, a land of ruins, now you shall be too small for your inhabitants, while those who swallowed you up will be far away. 20 The children whom you had lost shall yet say to you, "This place is too small for me, make room for me to live in." 21 t You shall ask yourself: "Who has borne me these? I was bereft and barren [exiled and repudiated]; who has reared them? I was left all alone; where then do these come from?"

22 u Thus says the Lord God: See, I will lift up my hand to the nations, and raise my signal to the peoples; they shall bring your sons in their arms, and your daughters shall be carried on their shoulders. 23 Kings shall be your foster fathers, their princesses your nurses; bowing to the ground, they shall worship you and lick the dust at your feet. Then you shall know that I am the Lord, and those who hope in me shall never be disappointed.

24 Thus says the Lord: Can booty be taken from a warrior? or captives be rescued from a tyrant? 25 Yes, captives can be taken from a warrior, and booty be rescued from a tyrant; those who oppose you I will oppose, and your sons I will save. 26 v I will make your oppressors eat their own flesh, and they shall be drunk with their own blood as with the juice of the grape. All mankind shall know that I, the Lord, am your savior, your redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob.

CHAPTER 50.

Salvation Only through the Lord's Servant. 1 Thus says the Lord: w Where is the bill of divorce with which I dismissed your mother?* Or to which of my creditors have I sold you? It was for your sins that you were sold, for your crimes that your mother was dismissed.

2 *Why was no one there when I came? Why did no one answer when I called? Is my hand too short to ransom? Have I not the strength to deliver? Lo, with my rebuke I dry up the sea, I turn rivers into a desert; x their fish rot for lack of water, and die of thirst. 3 I clothe the heavens in mourning, and make sackcloth their vesture.

4 *The Lord God has given me a well-trained tongue, that I might know how to speak to the weary a word that will rouse them. Morning after morning he opens my ear that I may hear; 5 *and I have not rebelled, have not turned back. 6 *I gave my back to those who beat me, y my cheeks to those who plucked my beard; my face I did not shield from buffets and spitting.

7 z The Lord God is my help, therefore I am not disgraced; I have set my face like flint, knowing that I shall not be put to shame. 8 He is near who upholds my right; if anyone wishes to oppose me, let us appear together. Who disputes my right? Let him confront me. 9 a See, the Lord God is my help; who will prove me wrong? Lo, they will all wear out like cloth, the moth will eat them up.

10 *Who among you fears the Lord, b heeds his servant's voice, and walks in darkness without any light, trusting in the name of the Lord and relying on his God? 11 All of you kindle flames and carry about you fiery darts; walk by the light of your own fire and by the flares you have burnt! This is your fate from my hand: you shall lie down in a place of pain.

CHAPTER 51.

Exhortation To Trust in the Lord. 1 Listen to me, you who pursue justice, c who seek the Lord; look to the rock from which you were hewn, to the pit* from which you were quarried; 2 d look to Abraham, your father, and to Sara, who gave you birth; when he was but one I called him, I blessed him and made him many. 3 Yes, the Lord shall comfort Sion and have pity on all her ruins; her deserts he shall make like Eden, her wasteland like the garden of the Lord; joy and gladness shall be found in her, thanksgiving and the sound of song.

4 *Be attentive to me, my people; my folk, give ear to me. e For law shall go forth from my presence, and my judgment, as the light of the peoples. 5 I will make my justice come speedily; my salvation shall go forth [and my arm shall judge the nations]; in me shall the coastlands hope, and my arm they shall await.

6 Raise your eyes to the heavens, and look at the earth below; though the heavens grow thin like smoke, the earth wears out like a garment and its inhabitants die

50, 1: Responding to the people's complaint of utter abandonment by God, the prophet shows that their sins were responsible for their banishment. Since there was no bill of divorce, the bond between the Lord and His people still exists and He will ultimately save them.

50, 2: Israel's faith in God is weak; she does not answer His call, nor believe in His promises of deliverance.

50, 4-11: The third of the four "Servant-of-the Lord" oracles; in vv 4-9 the Servant speaks; in vv 10f God reproves the people for not following the Servant.

50, 5: The Servant does not refuse the divine vocation.

50, 6: He willingly submits to insults and beatings. Plucked my beard: a grave insult.

50, 10f: Instead of trusting in the Lord and His Servant, the people rely on their own devices, to their own destruction.

51, 1: Rock . . . pit: your glorious ancestry.

51, 4f: The conversion of the Gentiles.

like flies, my salvation shall remain forever and my justice shall never be dismayed.* 7 Hear me, you who know justice, you people who have my teaching at heart: Fear not the reproach of men, be not dismayed at their revilings. 8 f They shall be like a garment eaten by moths, like wool consumed by grubs; but my justice shall remain forever and my salvation, for all generations.

9 g Awake, awake, put on strength, O arm of the Lord! Awake as in the days of old, in ages long ago! Was it not you who crushed Rahab,* you who pierced the dragon? 10 Was it not you who dried up the sea, the waters of the great deep,* who made the depths of the sea into a way for the redeemed to pass over? 11 Those whom the Lord has ransomed will return and enter Sion singing, crowned with everlasting joy; they will meet with joy and gladness, sorrow and mourning will flee.

12 I, it is I who comfort you. Can you then fear mortal man, who is human only, to be looked upon as grass, 13 and forget the Lord, your maker, who stretched out the heavens and laid the foundations of the earth? All the day you are in constant dread of the fury of the oppressor; but when he sets himself to destroy, what is there of the oppressor's fury?

14 The oppressed shall soon be released; they shall not die and go down into the pit, nor shall they want for bread. 15 h For I am the Lord, your God, who stirs up the sea so that its waves roar; the Lord of hosts by name. 16 I have put my words into your mouth and shielded you in the shadow of my hand, I, who stretched out the heavens, who laid the foundations of the earth, who say to Sion: You are my people.

The Cup of the Lord. 17 i Awake, awake! Arise, O Jerusalem, you who drank at the Lord's hand the cup of his wrath; who drained to the dregs the bowl of staggering! 18 She has no one to guide her of all the sons she bore; she has no one to grasp her by the hand, of all the sons she reared! —19 Your misfortunes are double; who is there to condole with you? Desolation and destruction, famine and sword! Who is there to comfort you? 20 Your sons lie helpless at every street corner like antelopes in a net. They are filled with the wrath of the Lord, the rebuke of your God.

21 j But now, hear this, O afflicted one, drunk, but not with wine, 22 thus says the Lord, your Master, your God, who defends his people: See, I am taking from your hand the cup of staggering; the bowl of my wrath you shall no longer drink. 23 I will put it into the hands of your tormentors, those who ordered you to bow down, that they might walk over you, while you offered your back like the ground, like the street for them to walk on.

CHAPTER 52.

Let Sion Rejoice. 1 Awake, awake! Put on your strength, O Sion; put on your glorious garments, O Jerusalem, holy city. No longer shall the uncircumcised or the unclean enter you. 2 Shake off the dust, ascend to the throne, Jerusalem; loose the bonds from your neck, O captive daughter Sion! 3 For thus says the Lord: You were sold for nothing, and without money you shall be redeemed.

4 Thus says the Lord God: To Egypt in the beginning my people went down, to sojourn there; Assyria, too, oppressed them for nought. 5 But now, what am I to do here? says the Lord. My people have been taken away without redress; their rulers make a boast of it, says the Lord; all the day my name is constantly reviled. 6 Therefore on that day my people shall know my renown, that it is I who have foretold it. Here I am! 7 *How beautiful upon the mountains k are the feet of him who brings glad tidings, announcing peace, bearing good news, announcing salvation, and saying to Sion, "Your God is King!"

8 l Hark! Your watchmen raise a cry, together they shout for joy, for they see directly, before their eyes, the Lord restoring Sion. 9 Break out together in song, O ruins of Jerusalem! For the Lord comforts his people, he redeems Jerusalem. 10 The Lord has bared his holy arm in the sight of all the nations; all the ends of the earth will behold the salvation of our God.

11 Depart, depart, come forth from there,* touch nothing unclean! Out from there! Purify yourselves, you who carry the vessels of the Lord. 12 m Yet not in fearful haste will you come out, nor leave in headlong flight, for the Lord comes before you, and your rear guard is the God of Israel.

Suffering and Triumph of the Servant of the Lord.* 13 See, my servant shall prosper, he shall be raised high and greatly exalted. 14 n Even as many were amazed at him—so marred was his look beyond that of man, and his appearance beyond that of mortals—15 o so shall he startle many nations, because of him kings shall stand speechless; for those who have not been told shall see, those who have not heard shall ponder it.

CHAPTER 53.

1 Who would believe what we have heard? p To whom has the arm of the Lord been revealed? 2 *He grew up like a sapling before him,q like a shoot from the parched earth; there was in him no stately bearing to make us look at him, nor appearance that would attract us to him. 3 r He was spurned* and avoided by men, a man of suffering, accustomed to infirmity, one of those from whom men hide their faces, spurned, and we held him in no esteem.

4 *Yet it was our infirmities that he bore,s our sufferings that he endured, while we thought of him as stricken, as one smitten by God and afflicted. 5 t But he was pierced for our offenses, crushed for our sins; upon him was the chastisement that makes us whole, by his stripes we were healed. 6 u We had all gone astray like sheep, each following his own way; but the Lord laid upon him the guilt of us all.

7 v Though he was harshly treated, he submitted and opened not his mouth; like a lamb led to the slaughter or a sheep before the shearers, he was silent and opened not his mouth. 8 Oppressed and condemned, he was taken away, and who would have thought any more of his destiny? When he was cut off from the land of the living, and smitten for the sin of his people, 9 *a grave was assigned him among the wicked and a burial place with evildoers, w though he had done no wrong nor spoken any falsehood. 10 [But the Lord was pleased to crush him in infirmity.]

*If he gives his life as an offering for sin, he shall see his descendants in a long life, and the will of the Lord shall be accomplished through him. 11 Because of his affliction he shall see the light in fullness of days; through his suffering, my servant shall justify many, and their guilt he shall bear. 12 x Therefore I will give him his portion among the great, and he shall divide the spoils with the mighty, because he surrendered himself to death and was counted among the wicked; and he shall take away the sins of many, and win pardon for their offenses.

CHAPTER 54.

The New Sion. 1 Raise a glad cry,* you barren one who did not bear,y break forth in jubilant song, you who were not in labor, for more numerous are the children of the deserted wife than the children of her who has a husband, says the Lord. 2 z Enlarge the space for your tent, spread out your tent cloths unsparingly; lengthen your ropes and make firm your stakes. 3 For you shall spread abroad to the right and to the left; your descendants shall dispossess the nations and shall people the desolate cities.

4 Fear not, you shall not be put to shame; you need not blush, for you shall not be disgraced. The shame of your

An extraordinary description of the sinless Servant, who by his voluntary suffering atones for the sins of his people, and saves them from just punishment at the hands of God. Only in Jesus Christ is the prophecy perfectly fulfilled.

53, 2: Only God appreciated His Servant's true greatness.

53, 3: Because he suffered, he was regarded as a sinner and therefore as one to be spurned.

53, 4ff: He did indeed suffer but it was for the sins of mankind, and through his sufferings men are healed.

53, 9: Even in death his corpse would be deprived of honorable burial.

53, 10ff: Because he fulfilled the divine will by suffering for the sins of others, the Servant will be rewarded by the Lord. See the light: enjoy happiness.

youth you shall forget, the reproach of your widowhood no longer remember. 5 For he who has become your husband is your Maker; his name is the Lord of hosts; your redeemer* is the Holy One of Israel, called God of all the earth.

6 a The Lord calls you back, like a wife forsaken and grieved in spirit, a wife married in youth and then cast off, says your God. 7 For a brief moment I abandoned you, but with great tenderness I will take you back. 8 In an outburst of wrath, for a moment I hid my face from you; but with enduring love I take pity on you, says the Lord, your redeemer.

9 b This is for me like the days of Noe, when I swore that the waters of Noe should never again deluge the earth; so I have sworn not to be angry with you, or to rebuke you. 10 c Though the mountains leave their place and the hills be shaken, my love shall never leave you nor my covenant of peace be shaken, says the Lord, who has mercy on you.

11 *O afflicted one,d storm-battered and unconsoled, I lay your pavements in carnelians, and your foundations in sapphires; 12 I will make your battlements of rubies, your gates of carbuncles, and all your walls of precious stones. 13 All your sons shall be taught by the Lord, and great shall be the peace of your children. 14 In justice shall you be established, far from the fear of oppression, where destruction cannot come near you. 15 Should there be any attack, it shall not be of my making; whoever attacks you shall fall before you.

16 Lo, I have created the craftsman who blows on the burning coals and forges weapons as his work; it is I also who have created the destroyer to work havoc. 17 No weapon fashioned against you shall prevail; every tongue you shall prove false that launches an accusation against you. This is the lot of the servants of the Lord, their vindication from me, says the Lord.

56, 1-8: Participation in the future Messianic salvation is offered to all who believe in the Lord and keep His commandments, regardless of origin or social condition.

CHAPTER 55.

An Invitation to Grace. 1 All you who are thirsty,* come to the water! e You who have no money, come, receive grain and eat; come, without paying and without cost, drink wine and milk! 2 Why spend your money for what is not bread; your wages for what fails to satisfy? Heed me, and you shall eat well, you shall delight in rich fare. 3 f Come to me heedfully, listen, that you may have life. I will renew with you the everlasting covenant, the benefits assured to David. 4 As I made him a witness to the peoples, a leader and commander of nations, 5 g so shall you summon a nation you knew not, and nations that knew you not shall run to you, because of the Lord, your God, the Holy One of Israel, who has glorified you.

6 Seek the Lord while he may be found, call him while he is near. 7 Let the scoundrel forsake his way, and the wicked man his thoughts; let him turn to the Lord for mercy; to our God, who is generous in forgiving. 8 For my thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways my ways, says the Lord. 9 As high as the heavens are above the earth, so high are my ways above your ways and my thoughts above your thoughts.

10 For just as from the heavens the rain and snow come down and do not return there till they have watered the earth, making it fertile and fruitful, giving seed to him who sows and bread to him who eats, 11 so shall my word be that goes forth from my mouth; it shall not return to me void, but shall do my will, achieving the end for which I sent it.

12 Yes, in joy you shall depart, in peace you shall be brought back; mountains and hills shall break out in song before you, and all the trees of the countryside shall clap their hands. 13 In place of the thornbush, the cypress shall grow, instead of nettles,* the myrtle. This shall be to the Lord's renown, an everlasting imperishable sign.

III: RETURN OF THE FIRST CAPTIVES

CHAPTER 56.

The Lord's House Open to All.* 1 Thus says the Lord: Observe what is right, do what is just; for my salvation is about to come, my justice, about to be revealed.

2 Happy is the man who does this, the son of man who holds to it; who keeps the Sabbath free from profanation, and his hand from any evildoing. 3 Let not the foreigner say, when he would join himself to the Lord, "The Lord will surely exclude me from his people"; nor let the eunuch* say, "See, I am a dry tree." 4
h For thus says the Lord: to the eunuchs who observe my Sabbaths and choose what pleases me and hold fast to my covenant, 5 I will give, in my house and within my walls, a monument and a name*
better than sons and daughters; an eternal, imperishable name will I give them.
6 And the foreigners who join themselves to the Lord, ministering to him, loving the name of the Lord, and becoming his servants—all who keep the Sabbath free from profanation and hold to my covenant, 7 i them I will bring to my holy mountain and make joyful in my house of prayer; their holocausts and sacrifices will be acceptable on my altar, for my house shall be called a house of prayer for all peoples. 8 Thus says the Lord God, who gathers the dispersed of Israel: Others will I gather to him besides those already gathered.

Blind Leaders. 9 All you wild beasts
of the field,j come and eat, all you beasts
in the forest! 10 My watchmen are blind,
all of them unaware; they are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark; dreaming as they lie there, loving their sleep. 11 They are relentless dogs, they know not when they have enough. These are the shepherds who know no discretion; each of them goes his own way, every one of them to his own gain: 12 k "Come, I will fetch some wine; let us carouse with strong drink, and tomorrow will be like today, or even greater."

CHAPTER 57.

1 The just man perishes, but no one takes it to heart; devout men are swept away, with no one giving it a thought.
Though he is taken away from the presence of evil, the just man 2 enters into peace; there is rest on his couch for the sincere, straightforward man.

Faithless People. 3 But you, draw near,
you sons of a sorceress, adulterous, wanton race! 4 Of whom do you make sport,
at whom do you open wide your mouth,
and put out your tongue? Are you not rebellious children, a worthless race; 5
l you who are in heat among the terebinths, under every green tree; you who immolate children in the wadies, behind the crevices in the cliffs?

6 Among the smooth stones* of the wady is your portion, these are your lot;
to these you poured out libations, and brought offerings. Should I decide not to punish these things? 7 m Upon a high and lofty mountain you made your bed, and there you went up to offer sacrifice. 8 Behind the door and the doorpost you placed your indecent symbol. Deserting me, you spread out your high, wide bed;
and of those whose embraces you love
you carved the symbol and gazed upon it 9 while you approached the king* with scented oil, and multiplied your perfumes; while you sent your ambassadors far away, down even to the nether world.
10 Though worn out by your many misdeeds, you never said, "It is hopeless";
new strength you found, and so you did not weaken.

11 Of whom were you afraid? Whom did you fear, that you became false and did not remember me or give me any thought? Was I to remain silent and unseeing, so that you would not have me to fear? 12 I will expose your justice* and your works; 13 they shall not help you when you cry out, nor save you in your distress.

All these* the wind shall carry off, the breeze shall bear away; but he who takes refuge in me shall inherit the land, and possess my holy mountain.

56, 5: A monument and a name: a memorial inscription to prevent oblivion for one who had no children; cf 2 Kgs 18, 18.

56, 9—57, 13: This section is apparently pre-exilic, written in the manner of the older prophets who condemned the pagan rites of Baal worship.

56, 9: Wild beasts: foreign nations, which are invited to come and ravage Israel.

57, 6: Smooth stones: the Hebrew word for this expression has the same consonants as the word for "portion"; instead of making the Lord their portion (cf Ps 15 [16], 5), the people adored slabs of stone which they took from the streambeds in valleys and set up as idols; cf Jer 3, 9. Therefore, it is implied, they will be swept away as by a sudden torrent of waters carrying them down the rocky-bottomed gorge to destruction and death without burial.

57, 9: The king: the pagan god Moloch. Ambassadors: children sent to him through a sacrificial death.

57, 12: Justice: here used ironically.

57, 13: All these: the wicked mentioned in 57, 3-10.

Comfort for the Afflicted. 14 n Build up, build up, prepare the way, remove the stumbling blocks from my people's path.
15 o For thus says he who is high and exalted, living eternally, whose name is the Holy One: On high I dwell, and in holiness, and with the crushed and dejected in spirit, to revive the spirits of the dejected, to revive the hearts of the crushed.
16 I will not accuse forever, nor always be angry; for their spirits would faint before me, the souls that I have made. 17 p Because of their wicked avarice I was angry, and struck them, hiding myself in wrath, as they went their own rebellious way. 18 I saw their ways, but I will heal them and lead them; I will give full comfort to them and to those who mourn for them, 19 I, the Creator, who gave them life.

Peace, peace to the far and the near,
says the Lord; and I will heal them. 20
But the wicked are like the tossing sea
which cannot be calmed, and its waters cast up mud and filth. 21 q No peace for the wicked! says my God.

CHAPTER 58.

True Fasting. 1 Cry out full-throated and unsparingly,* lift up your voice like a trumpet blast; tell my people their wickedness, and the house of Jacob their sins.
2 *They seek me day after day, and desire to know my ways, like a nation that has done what is just and not abandoned
the law of their God; they ask me to declare what is due them, pleased to gain access to God. 3 "Why do we fast, and you do not see it? afflict ourselves, and you take no note of it?"

Lo, on your fast day you carry out your own pursuits, and drive all your laborers.
4 Yes, your fast ends in quarreling and fighting, striking with wicked fist. Would that today you might fast so as to make your voice heard on high! 5 r Is this the manner of fasting I wish, of keeping a day of penance: that a man bow his head like a reed, and lie in sackcloth and ashes? Do you call this a fast, a day acceptable to the Lord? 6 This, rather, is the fasting that I wish: releasing those bound unjustly, untying the thongs of the yoke;
setting free the oppressed, breaking every yoke; 7 s sharing your bread with the hungry, sheltering the oppressed and the homeless; clothing the naked when you see them, and not turning your back on your own.

8 Then your light shall break forth like the dawn, and your wound shall quickly be healed; your vindication shall go before you, and the glory of the Lord shall be your rear guard. 9 Then you shall call,
and the Lord will answer, you shall cry for help, and he will say: Here I am! If you remove from your midst oppression,
false accusation and malicious speech; 10
if you bestow your bread on the hungry and satisfy the afflicted; then light shall rise for you in the darkness, and the gloom shall become for you like midday; 11 t then the Lord will guide you always and give you plenty even on the parched land. He will renew your strength, and you shall be like a watered garden, like a spring whose water never fails. 12 u The ancient ruins shall be rebuilt for your sake, and the foundations from ages past you shall raise up; "Repairer of the breach," they shall call you, "Restorer of ruined homesteads."

13 If you hold back your foot on the Sabbath from following your own pursuits on my holy day; if you call the Sabbath a delight, and the Lord's holy day honorable; if you honor it by not following your ways, seeking your own interests, or speaking with malice — 14 then you shall delight in the Lord, and I will make you ride on the heights of the earth; I will nourish you with the heritage of Jacob, your father, for the mouth of the Lord has spoken.

CHAPTER 59.

Sin and Confession. 1 Lo, the hand of the Lord is not too short to save,v nor his ear too dull to hear. 2 Rather, it is your crimes that separate you from your God, it is your sins that make him hide his face so that he will not hear you. 3 w For your hands are stained with blood, your fingers with guilt; your lips speak falsehood, and your tongue utters deceit. 4 No
one brings suit justly, no one pleads truthfully; they trust in emptiness* and tell lies; they conceive mischief and bring forth malice. 5 *They hatch adders' eggs,

and weave spiders' webs: x whoever eats their eggs will die, if one of them is pressed, it will hatch as a viper; 6 their webs cannot serve as clothing, nor can they cover themselves with their works.
Their works are evil works, and deeds of violence come from their hands. 7 y Their feet run to evil, and they are quick to shed innocent blood; their thoughts are destructive thoughts, plunder and ruin are on their highways. 8 The way of peace
they know not, and there is nothing that is right in their paths; their ways they have made crooked, whoever treads them knows no peace.

9 *That is why right is far from us and justice does not reach us. We look for light, and lo, darkness; for brightness, but we walk in gloom! 10 Like blind men we grope along the wall, like people without eyes we feel our way. We stumble at midday as at dusk, in Stygian darkness, like the dead. 11 z We all growl like bears, like doves we moan without ceasing. We look for right, but it is not there; for salvation, and it is far from us. 12 For our offenses
before you are many, our sins bear witness against us. Yes, our offenses are present to us, and our crimes we know:
13 transgressing, and denying the Lord,
turning back from following our God, threatening outrage, and apostasy, uttering words of falsehood the heart has conceived. 14 Right is repelled, and justice stands far off; for truth stumbles in the public square, uprightness cannot enter.
15 Honesty is lacking, and the man who turns from evil is despoiled.

The Redeemer in Sion. 1 The Lord saw this, and was aggrieved that right did not exist. 16 He saw that there was no one,
and was appalled that there was none to intervene; so his own arm brought about the victory, and his justice lent him its support. 17 a He put on justice as his breastplate, salvation, as the helmet on his head; he clothed himself with garments of vengeance, wrapped himself in a mantle of zeal. 18 He repays his enemies their deserts, and requites his foes
with wrath.

19 Those in the west shall fear the name of the Lord, and those in the east, his glory; for it shall come like a pent-up river which the breath of the Lord drives
on. 20 b He shall come to Sion a redeemer to those of Jacob who turn from sin, says
the Lord

21 This is the covenant with them which I myself have made, says the Lord: My spirit which is upon you and my words that I have put into your mouth shall never leave your mouth, nor the mouths of your children nor the mouths of your children's children from now on and forever, says the Lord.

CHAPTER 60.

Glory of the New Sion. 1 Rise up in splendor! Your light has come,* the glory of the Lord shines upon you. 2 See, darkness covers the earth, and thick clouds cover the peoples; but upon you the Lord shines, and over you appears his glory.
3 c Nations shall walk by your light, and kings by your shining radiance. 4 d Raise your eyes and look about; they all gather and come to you: your sons come from afar, and your daughters in the arms of their nurses.

5 Then you shall be radiant at what you see, your heart shall throb and overflow,
for the riches of the sea shall be emptied
out before you, the wealth of nations shall be brought to you. 6 Caravans of camels shall fill you, dromedaries from Madian and Epha; all from Saba shall come bearing gold and frankincense, and proclaiming the praises of the Lord. 7 All the flocks of Cedar shall be gathered for you, the rams of Nabaioth shall be your sacrifices; they will be acceptable offerings on my altar, and I will enhance the splendor of my house.

8 What are these that fly along like clouds, like doves* to their cotes? 9 All the vessels of the sea are assembled, with the ships of Tharsis in the lead, to bring your children from afar with their silver and gold, in the name of the Lord, your God, the Holy One of Israel, who has glorified you.

59, 9-15: Spoken by the people through the mouth of the prophet.

60, 1-6: The Church makes use of these verses for the Epistle of the Mass on the Feast of Epiphany, for she sees in them symbols of her universality.

60, 8f: Like clouds, like doves: the white sails of the ships of Tharsis; cf note on Ps 47 (48), 8.

10 Foreigners shall rebuild your walls,
and their kings shall be your attendants;
though I struck you in my wrath, yet in my good will I have shown you mercy. 11
e Your gates shall stand open constantly;
day and night they shall not be closed but shall admit to you the wealth of nations, and their kings, in the vanguard. 12 For the people or kingdom shall perish that does not serve you; those nations shall be utterly destroyed. 13 f The glory of Lebanon* shall come to you: the cypress,
the plane and the pine, to bring beauty
to my sanctuary, and glory to the place where I set my feet. 14 The children of your oppressors shall come, bowing low before you; all those who despised you shall fall prostrate at your feet. They shall call you "City of the Lord," "Sion of the Holy One of Israel."

15 g Once you were forsaken, hated and unvisited, now I will make you the pride of the ages, a joy to generation after generation. 16 You shall suck the milk
of nations, and be nursed at royal breasts;
you shall know that I, the Lord, am your savior, your redeemer, the mighty one of Jacob. 17 In place of bronze I will bring gold, instead of iron, silver; in place of wood, bronze, instead of stones, iron; I will appoint peace your governor, and justice your ruler.

18 No longer shall violence be heard of in your land, or plunder and ruin within your boundaries. You shall call your walls "Salvation" and your gates "Praise."
19 h No longer shall the sun be your light
by day, nor the brightness of the moon shine upon you at night; the Lord shall be your light forever, your God shall be your glory. 20 No longer shall your sun go down, or your moon withdraw, for the Lord will be your light forever, and the days of your mourning shall be at an end.

21 Your people shall all be just, they shall always possess the land, they, the bud of my planting, my handiwork to show my glory. 22 i The smallest shall become a thousand, the youngest, a mighty nation; I, the Lord, will swiftly accomplish these things when their time comes.

61, 1f: This was spoken by the prophet in regard to the restoration of Sion, but quoted by Christ as referring to His mission; cf Lk 4, 18f. Year of favor . . . day of vindication: the time of God's salvation.

CHAPTER 61.

The Mission to the Afflicted. 1 The spirit* of the Lord God is upon me, j because the Lord has anointed me; he has sent me to bring glad tidings to the lowly, to heal the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives and release to the prisoners, 2 k to announce a year of favor from the Lord and a day of vindication by our God, to comfort all who mourn; 3 to place on those who mourn in Sion a diadem instead of ashes, to give them oil of gladness in place of mourning, a glorious mantle instead of a listless spirit. They will be called oaks of justice, planted by the Lord to show his glory.

The Reward of Israel. 4 l They shall rebuild the ancient ruins, the former wastes they shall raise up and restore the ruined cities, desolate now for generations. 5 Strangers shall stand ready to pasture your flocks, foreigners shall be your farmers and vinedressers. 6 You yourselves shall be named priests of the Lord, ministers of our God you shall be called. You shall eat the wealth of the nations and boast of riches from them.

7 m Since their shame was double and disgrace and spittle were their portion, they shall have a double inheritance in their land, everlasting joy shall be theirs. 8 n For I, the Lord, love what is right, I hate robbery and injustice; I will give them their recompense faithfully, a lasting covenant I will make with them. 9 Their descendants shall be renowned among the nations, and their offspring among the peoples; all who see them shall acknowledge them as a race the Lord has blessed.

10 I rejoice heartily in the Lord, in my God is the joy of my soul; for he has clothed me with a robe of salvation, and wrapped me in a mantle of justice, like a bridegroom adorned with a diadem, like a bride bedecked with her jewels. 11 As the earth brings forth its plants, and a garden makes its growth spring up, so will the Lord God make justice and praise spring up before all the nations.

CHAPTER 62.

Jerusalem the Lord's Bride. 1 For Sion's sake I will not be silent, for Jerusalem's sake I will not be quiet, until her vindication shines forth like the dawn and her victory like a burning torch.

2 o Nations shall behold your vindication, and all kings your glory; you shall be called by a new name* pronounced by the mouth of the Lord. 3 You shall be a glorious crown in the hand of the Lord, a royal diadem held by your God. 4 p No more shall men call you "Forsaken," or your land "Desolate," but you shall be called "My Delight," and your land "Espoused." For the Lord delights in you, and makes your land his spouse. 5 As a young man marries a virgin, your Builder shall marry you; and as a bridegroom rejoices in his bride so shall your God rejoice in you.

Restoration of Sion. 6 Upon your walls, O Jerusalem, I have stationed watchmen; never, by day or by night, shall they be silent. O you who are to remind the Lord, take no rest 7 and give no rest to him,* until he re-establishes Jerusalem and makes of it the pride of the earth.

8 q The Lord has sworn by his right hand and by his mighty arm: No more will I give your grain as food to your enemies; nor shall foreigners drink your wine, for which you toiled. 9 r But you who harvest the grain shall eat it, and you shall praise the Lord; you who gather the grapes shall drink the wine in the courts of my sanctuary.

10 *Pass through, pass through the gates,s prepare the way for the people; build up, build up the highway, clear it of stones, raise up a standard over the nations. 11 t See, the Lord proclaims to the ends of the earth: Say to daughter Sion, your savior comes! Here is his reward with him, his recompense before him. 12 u They shall be called the holy people, the redeemed of the Lord, and you shall be called "Frequented," a city that is not forsaken.

CHAPTER 63.

Punishment of Edom.* 1 Who is this that comes from Edom, in crimsoned garments, from Bosra—this one arrayed in majesty, marching in the greatness of his strength? "It is I, I who announce vindication, I who am mighty to save." 2 v Why is your apparel red, and your garments like those of the wine presser?

3 "The wine press I have trodden alone, and of my people there was no one with me. I trod them in my anger, and trampled them down in my wrath; their blood spurted on my garments; all my apparel I stained. 4 w For the day of vengeance was in my heart, my year for redeeming was at hand. 5 x I looked about, but there was no one to help, I was appalled that there was no one to lend support; so my own arm brought about the victory and my own wrath lent me its support. 6 I trampled down the peoples in my anger, I crushed them in my wrath, and I let their blood run out upon the ground."

Prayer for the Return of God's Favor.* 7 y The favors of the Lord I will recall, the glorious deeds of the Lord, because of all he has done for us; for he is good to the house of Israel, he has favored us according to his mercy and his great kindness.

8 He said: They are indeed my people, children who are not disloyal; so he became their savior 9 z in their every affliction. It was not a messenger or an angel, but he himself who saved them. Because of his love and pity he redeemed them himself, lifting them and carrying them all the days of old. 10 But they rebelled, and grieved his holy spirit; so he turned on them like an enemy, and fought against them.

11 Then they remembered the days of old and Moses, his servant; where is he who brought up out of the sea the shepherd of his flock? Where is he who put his holy spirit in their midst; 12 whose glorious arm was the guide at Moses' right; who divided the waters before them, winning for himself eternal renown; 13 who led them without stumbling through the depths like horses in the open country, 14 like cattle going down into the plain, the spirit of the Lord guiding them? Thus you led your people, bringing glory to your name.

15 a Look down from heaven and re-

63, 1-6: In a dramatic dialogue between God and the prophet, the Lord is portrayed as the sole avenger of justice against His enemies.

63, 7—64, 11: A prayer probably composed toward the end of the Exile, in which the prophet, after recalling God's blessings on Israel in its past history (63, 7-10), especially at the Exodus (11-14), begs the Lord to come once more to the aid of His people (63, 15—64, 3), who now humbly confess their sins (4-11).

gard us from your holy and glorious palace! Where is your zealous care and your might, your surge of pity and your mercy? O Lord, hold not back, 16 for you are our father. Were Abraham not to know us, nor Israel to acknowledge us, you, Lord, are our father, our redeemer you are named forever. 17 Why do you let us wander, O Lord, from your ways, and harden our hearts so that we fear you not? Return for the sake of your servants, the tribes of your heritage. 18 Why have the wicked invaded your holy place, why have our enemies trampled your sanctuary? 19 Too long have we been like those you do not rule, who do not bear your name.

CHAPTER 64.

Oh, that you would rend the heavens and come down, with the mountains quaking before you, 1 as when brushwood is set ablaze, or fire makes the water boil! Thus your name would be made known to your enemies and the nations would tremble before you, 2 while you wrought awesome deeds we could not hope for, 3 such as they had not heard of from of old. b No ear has ever heard, no eye ever seen, any God but you doing such deeds for those who wait for him.

4 Would that you might meet us doing right, that we were mindful of you in our ways! Behold, you are angry, and we are sinful; 5 all of us have become like unclean men, all our good deeds are like polluted rags; we have all withered like leaves, and our guilt carries us away like the wind. 6 There is none who calls upon your name, who rouses himself to cling to you; for you have hidden your face from us and have delivered us up to our guilt. 7 Yet, O Lord, you are our father; we are the clay and you the potter: we are all the work of your hands. 8 Be not so very angry, Lord, keep not our guilt forever in mind; look upon us, who are all your people. 9 c Your holy cities have become a desert, Sion is a desert, Jerusalem a waste. 10 Our holy and glorious temple in which our fathers praised you has been burned with fire; all that was dear to us is laid waste. 11 Can you hold back, O Lord, after all this? Can you remain silent, and afflict us so severely?

CHAPTER 65.

Necessity of Punishment. 1 I was ready to respond to those who asked me not, to be found by those who sought me not.d I said: Here I am! Here I am! to a nation that did not call upon my name.

2 e I have stretched out my hands all the day to a rebellious people, who walk in evil paths and follow their own thoughts, 3 people who provoke me continually, to my face, offering sacrifices in the groves and burning incense on bricks, 4 living among the graves and spending the night in caverns, eating swine's flesh, with carrion broth in their dishes, 5 crying out, "Hold back, do not touch me; I am too sacred for you!"*

These things enkindle my wrath, a fire that burns all the day. 6 Lo, before me it stands written; I will not be quiet until I have paid in full 7 your crimes and the crimes of your fathers as well, says the Lord. Since they burned incense on the mountains, and disgraced me on the hills, I will at once pour out in full measure their recompense into their laps.

Fate of the Good and the Bad in Israel. 8 Thus says the Lord: When the juice is pressed from grapes, men say, "Do not discard them, for there is still good in them"; thus will I do with my servants: I will not discard them all; 9 from Jacob I will save offspring, from Juda, those who are to inherit my mountains; my chosen ones shall inherit the land, my servants shall dwell there. 10 Saron shall be a pasture for the flocks and the valley of Achor a resting place for the cattle of my people who have sought me.

11 But you who forsake the Lord, forgetting my holy mountain, you who spread a table for Fortune and fill cups of blended wine for Destiny,* 12 f you I will destine for the sword; you shall all go down in slaughter. Since I called and you did not answer, I spoke and you did not listen, but did what was evil in my sight and preferred things which displease me, 13 therefore thus says the Lord God: Lo, my servants shall eat, but you shall go hungry; my servants shall drink, but you shall be thirsty; my servants shall rejoice,

65, 5: I am too sacred for you: the uncleanness of pork, obvious to a Semite, is what these people claim has made them sacred! The prophet ridicules them. Some translate: "I will render you sacred," and understand this as referring to the concept of sacredness as something contagious.

65, 11f: Destiny: the Hebrew also has a play on the words: Destiny and destine; meni and manithi.

but you shall be put to shame; [14] my servants shall shout for joy of heart, but you shall cry out for grief of heart and howl for anguish of spirit. [15] The Lord God shall slay you, and the name you leave shall be used by my chosen ones for cursing; but my servants shall be called by another name [16] by which he will be blessed on whom a blessing is invoked in the land; he who takes an oath in the land shall swear by the God of truth; for the hardships of the past shall be forgotten, and hidden from my eyes.

The World Renewed. [17] g Lo, I am about to create new heavens and a new earth; the things of the past shall not be remembered or come to mind. [18] Instead, there shall always be rejoicing and happiness in what I create; for I create Jerusalem to be a joy and its people to be a delight; [19] I will rejoice in Jerusalem and exult in my people. No longer shall the sound of weeping be heard there, or the sound of crying; [20] no longer shall there be in it an infant who lives but a few days, or an old man who does not round out his full lifetime; he dies a mere youth who reaches but a hundred years, and he who fails of a hundred shall be thought accursed.

[21] They shall live in the houses they build, and eat the fruit of the vineyards they plant; [22] they shall not build houses for others to live in, or plant for others to eat. As the years of a tree, so the years of my people; and my chosen ones shall long enjoy the produce of their hands. [23] They shall not toil in vain, nor beget children for sudden destruction; for a race blessed by the Lord are they and their offspring. [24] Before they call, I will answer; while they are yet speaking, I will hearken to them. [25] h The wolf and the lamb shall graze alike,* and the lion shall eat hay like the ox [but the serpent's food shall be dust]. None shall hurt or destroy on all my holy mountain, says the Lord.

CHAPTER 66.

True and False Worship. [1] Thus says the Lord: i The heavens are my throne, the earth is my footstool; what kind of house can you build for me; what is to be my resting place? [2] My hand made all these things when all of them came to be, says the Lord. This is the one whom I approve: the lowly and afflicted man who trembles at my word.

[3] i Merely slaughtering an ox is like slaying a man; sacrificing a lamb, like breaking a dog's neck; bringing a cereal offering, like offering swine's blood; burning incense, like paying homage to an idol. Since these have chosen their own ways and taken pleasure in their own abominations, [4] I in turn will choose ruthless treatment for them and bring upon them what they fear.

*Because, when I called, no one answered,k when I spoke, no one listened; because they did what was evil in my sight, and chose what gave me displeasure, [5] hear the word of the Lord, you who tremble at his word: Your brethren who, because of my name, hate and reject you, say, "Let the Lord show his glory that we may see your joy"; but they shall be put to shame. [6] l A sound of roaring from the city, a sound from the temple, the sound of the Lord repaying his enemies their deserts!

Mother Sion. [7] *Before m she comes to labor, she gives birth; before the pains come upon her, she safely delivers a male child. [8] Who ever heard of such a thing, or saw the like? Can a country be brought forth in one day, or a nation be born in a single moment? Yet Sion is scarcely in labor when she gives birth to her children. [9] Shall I bring a mother to the point of birth, and yet not let her child be born? says the Lord; or shall I who allow her to conceive, yet close her womb? says your God.

[10] Rejoice with Jerusalem and be glad because of her, all you who love her; exult, exult with her, all you who were mourning over her! [11] Oh, that you may suck fully of the milk of her comfort, that you may nurse with delight at her abundant breasts! [12] For thus says the Lord: Lo, I will spread prosperity over her like a river, and the wealth of the nations like an overflowing torrent. As nurslings, you shall be carried in her arms, and fondled in her lap; [13] as a mother comforts her son, so will I comfort you; in Jerusalem you shall find your comfort.

14 When you see this, your heart shall rejoice, and your bodies flourish like the grass; the Lord's power shall be known to his servants, but to his enemies, his wrath.
15 Lo, the Lord shall come in fire, his chariots like the whirlwind, to wreak his wrath with burning heat and his punishment with fiery flames. 16 For the Lord shall judge all mankind by fire and sword,
and many shall be slain by the Lord.
17 n They who sanctify and purify themselves to go to the groves, as followers of one who stands within, they who eat
swine's flesh, loathsome things and mice, shall all perish with their deeds and their thoughts, says the Lord.

Gathering of the Nations. 18 *I come to gather nations of every language; they shall come and see my glory. 19 I will set a sign among them; from them I will send fugitives to the nations: to Tharsis, Phut and Lud, Mosoch, Thubal and Javan, to the distant coastlands that have never heard of my fame, or seen my glory; and they shall proclaim my glory among the nations. 20 They shall bring all your brethren from all the nations as an offering to the Lord, on horses and in chariots, in carts, upon mules and dromedaries, to Jerusalem, my holy mountain, says the Lord, just as the Israelites bring their offering to the house of the Lord in clean vessels. 21 Some of these I will take as priests and Levites, says the Lord.

Lasting Reward and Punishment. 22 o As the new heavens and the new earth which I will make shall endure before me, says
the Lord, so shall your race and your name endure. 23 From one new moon to another, and from one Sabbath to another, all mankind shall come to worship before me, says the Lord. 24 They shall go out and see the corpses of the men who rebelled against me; p their worm shall not die, nor their fire be extinguished; and they shall be abhorrent to all mankind.*

THE BOOK OF JEREMIA

The Book of Jeremia combines history, biography, and prophecy. It portrays a nation in crisis and introduces the reader to an extraordinary leader upon whom the Lord placed the heavy burden of the prophetic office. Jeremia was born about 650 B.C. of a priestly family from the little village of Anathoth, near Jerusalem. While still very young he was called to his task in the thirteenth year of King Josia (628), whose reform, begun with enthusiasm and hope, ended with his death on the battlefield of Mageddo (609) as he attempted to stop the northward march of the Egyptian Pharao Necho.

The prophet heartily supported the reform of the pious King Josia, which began in 629 B.C. Ninive, the capital of Assyria, fell in 612, preparing the way for the new colossus, Babylon, which was soon to put an end to Judean independence.

After the death of Josia, the old idolatry returned. Jeremia opposed it with all his strength. Arrest, imprisonment, and public disgrace were his lot. Jeremia saw in the nation's impenitence the sealing of its doom. Nabuchodonosor captured Jerusalem and carried King Joachin into exile (22, 24).

During the years 598-587, Jeremia attempted to counsel Sedecia in the face of bitter opposition. The false prophet Hanania proclaimed that the yoke of Babylon was broken and a strong pro-Egyptian party in Jerusalem induced Sedecia to revolt. Nabuchodonosor took swift and terrible vengeance; Jerusalem was destroyed in 587 and its leading citizens sent into exile. About this time Jeremia uttered the great oracle of the "New Covenant" (31, 31-34) sometimes called "The Gospel before the Gospel." This passage contains his most sublime teaching and is a landmark in Old Testament theology.

The prophet remained amidst the ruins of Jerusalem, but was later forced into Egyptian exile by a band of conspirators. There, according to an old tradition, he was murdered by his own countrymen. The influence of Jeremia was greater after his death than before. The exiled community read and meditated the lessons of the prophet, and his influence can be seen in Ezechiel, certain of the psalms, and the second part of Isaia. Shortly after the Exile, the Book of Jeremia as we have it today was published in a final edition. It is divided as follows: I. Oracles in the Days of Josia (1, 1–6, 30). II. Oracles Mostly in the Days of Joakim (7, 1–20, 18). III. Oracles in the Last Years of Jerusalem (21, 1–33, 26). IV. Fall of Jerusalem (34, 1–45, 5). V. Oracles against the Nations (46, 1–51, 64). VI. Historical Appendix (52, 1–34).

I: ORACLES IN THE DAYS OF JOSIA

CHAPTER 1.

1 The words of Jeremia, son of Helcia, of a priestly family in Anathoth,* in the land of Benjamin. 2 a The word of the Lord first came to him in the days of Josia, son of Amon, king of Juda, in the thirteenth year of his reign, 3 b and continued through the reign of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda, and until the downfall* and exile of Jerusalem in the fifth month of the eleventh year of Sedecia, son of Josia, king of Juda.

Call of Jeremia. 4 The word of the Lord came to me thus: 5 c Before* I formed you in the womb I knew you, before you were born I dedicated you, a prophet to the nations I appointed you.

6 "Ah, Lord God!" I said, "I know not how to speak; I am too young."*

7 But the Lord answered me: Say not,
"I am too young." To whomever I send you, you shall go; whatever I command you, you shall speak. 8 Have no fear before them, because I am with you to deliver you, says the Lord.

9 d Then the Lord extended his hand and touched my mouth, saying: See, I place my words in your mouth! 10 This day I set you over nations and over kingdoms, to root up and to tear down, to destroy and to demolish, to build and to plant.

11 The word of the Lord came to me with the question: What do you see, Jeremia? "I see a branch of the watching-tree,"* I replied. 12 Then the Lord said to me: Well have you seen, for I am watching to fulfill my word. 13 e A second time the word of the Lord came to me with the question: What do you see? "I see a boiling cauldron," I replied, "that appears from the north."*

14 f And from the north, said the Lord to me, evil will boil over upon all who dwell in the land.

15 g Lo, I am summoning all the kingdoms of the north, says the Lord; each king shall come and set up his throne at the gateways of Jerusalem, opposite her walls all around and opposite all the cities of Juda. 16 h I will pronounce my sentence against them for all their wickedness in forsaking me, and in burning incense to strange gods and adoring their own handiwork.

17 But do you gird your loins; stand up and tell them all that I command you.
Be not crushed on their account, as though I would leave you crushed before them; 18 i for it is I this day who have made you a fortified city, a pillar of iron,
a wall of brass, against the whole land:
against Juda's kings and princes, against its priests and people. 19 They will fight against you, but not prevail over you, for I am with you to deliver you, says the Lord.

CHAPTER 2.

Infidelity of Israel.* 1 This word of the Lord came to me: 2 Go, cry out this message for Jerusalem to hear!

1, 1: Anathoth: a village about three miles northeast of Jerusalem, where Solomon exiled Abiathar (3 Kgs 2, 26f); It is probable that Jeremia belonged to the priestly family of Abiathar.

1, 3: Until the downfall: these words were originally prefixed as a title to a collection of Jeremia's prophecies which lacked chapters 40-44. The new title in Jer 40, 1 and the oracles that follow clearly show that Jeremia continued to prophesy after the destruction of Jerusalem in 587 B. C.

1, 5: Jeremia was destined to the office of prophet before his birth; cf Is 49, 1. 5; Lk 1, 15; Gal 1, 15f. I knew you: I loved you and chose you. I dedicated you: I set you apart to be a prophet. Some Fathers and later theologians understand this to mean that Jeremia was freed from original sin before his birth. The context does not justify this conclusion. The nations: the pagan neighbors of Juda, besides the great world powers—Assyria, Babylonia, Egypt—intimately associated with Juda's destiny.

1, 6: I am too young: Jeremia's youth (he was less than thirty years old) must not be an obstacle to the responsibilities of the prophetic office; God will supply for his human defects (cf vv 7f).

1, 11: The watching-tree: the almond tree, which is the first to blossom in the springtime as though it had not slept. The Hebrew name contains a play on words with "I am watching."

1, 13: Boiling cauldron . . . the north: symbol of an invasion from the north; cf vv 14f.

2, 1–3, 5: These verses probably contain the earliest of Jeremia's preachings. The covenant relationship, symbolized by the figure of a marriage, was frequently broken by Israel, seen here as an unfaithful wife unworthy of reconciliation with God (Jer 3, 1-5).

I remember the devotion* of your youth, how you loved me as a bride, i following me in the desert, in a land unsown.
3 k Sacred to the Lord was Israel, the first fruits* of his harvest; should anyone presume to partake of them, evil would befall him, says the Lord.

4 Listen to the word of the Lord, O house of Jacob! All you clans of the house of Israel, 5 thus says the Lord: l What fault did your fathers find in me that they withdrew from me, went after empty idols, and became empty themselves? 6 m They did not ask, "Where is the Lord who brought us up from the land of Egypt, who led us through the desert, through a land of wastes and gullies, through a land of drought and darkness, through a land which no one crosses, where no man dwells?"

7 n When I brought you into the garden land to eat its goodly fruits, you entered and defiled my land, you made my heritage loathsome. 8 o The priests asked not, "Where is the Lord?" Those who dealt with the law* knew me not; the shepherds rebelled against me. The prophets prophesied by Baal, and went after useless idols. 9 p Therefore will I yet accuse you, says the Lord, and even your children's children I will accuse. 10 Pass over to the coasts of the Chetthim* and see, send to Cedar and carefully inquire:
Where has the like of this been done? 11
q Does any other nation change its gods?
—yet they are not gods at all! But my people have changed their glory for useless things. 12 Be amazed at this, O heavens, and shudder with sheer horror, says the Lord. 13 r Two evils have my people done: they have forsaken me, the source of living waters; they have dug themselves cisterns, broken cisterns, that hold no water.

14 Is Israel a slave, a bondman by birth?* Why then has he become booty?
15 s Against him lions roar full-throated cries. They have made his land a waste; his cities are charred ruins, without inhabitant. 16 Yes, the people of Memphis* and Tahpanhes shave the crown of your head. 17 t Has not the forsaking of the Lord, your God, done this to you? 18 *And now, why go to Egypt, to drink the waters of the Nile? Why go to Assyria, to drink the waters of the Euphrates? 19 u Your own wickedness chastises you, your own infidelities punish you. Know then, and see, how evil and bitter is your forsaking the Lord, your God, and showing no fear of me, says the Lord, the God of hosts.

20 v Long ago you broke your yoke, you tore off your bonds. "I will not serve," you said. On every high hill, under every green tree, you gave yourself to harlotry.*
21 w I had planted you, a choice vine of fully tested stock; how could you turn out obnoxious to me, a spurious vine? 22
x Though you scour it with soap, and use much lye, the stain of your guilt is still before me, says the Lord God. 23 How can you say, "I am not defiled, I have not gone after the Baals"? Consider your conduct in the Valley,* recall what you have done: a frenzied she-camel, coursing near and far, 24 breaking away toward the desert, snuffing the wind in her ardor—who can restrain her lust? No beasts need tire themselves seeking her; in her month they will meet her.

25 y Stop wearing out your shoes and parching your throat! But you say, "No use! no! I love these strangers, and after them I must go." 26 z As the thief is shamed when caught, so shall the house of Israel be shamed: they, their kings and their princes, their priests and their prophets; 27 they who say to a piece of wood, "You are my father," and to a stone,

2, 2: Devotion: Israel's gratitude, fidelity, and love for God.

2, 3: First fruits: an offering to God which became His exclusive property, and could therefore not be put to profane use; cf Lv 22, 1.

2, 8: Those who dealt with the law: the priests. The shepherds: the kings and nobles.

2, 10: Chetthim: a Phoenician colony in Cyprus. Cedar: a nomad tribe of the Syrian desert. These two names represent West and East.

2, 14: Bondman by birth: a perpetual slave, different from the debt-slave, who was to be freed after six years; cf Ex 21, 2.

2, 16: Memphis: the capital of Lower Egypt. Tahpanhes: a frontier city of Egypt, east of the Delta. Shave the crown of your head: the spoliation of Juda at the hands of the Egyptians.

2, 18: Egypt and Assyria were the protecting foreign powers favored by rival parties within Juda. The desire for such foreign alliances is a further desertion of the Lord, the source of living waters, in favor of the above-named powers, symbolized by the Nile and the Euphrates rivers.

2, 20: Harlotry: idolatry (because Israel is the bride of God).

2, 23: The Valley: of Ben-Hinnom, south of Jerusalem, site of the infamous sanctuary of Thopheth where children were sacrificed to Moloch; cf Jer 7, 31.

"You gave me birth." They turn to me their backs, not their faces; yet, in their time of trouble they cry out, "Rise up and save us!" 28 a Where are the gods you made for yourselves? Let them rise up! Will they save you in your time of trouble? For as numerous as your cities are your gods, O Juda! And as many as the streets of Jerusalem are the altars you have set up for Baal.

29 How dare you still plead with me? You have all rebelled against me, says the Lord. 30 b In vain I struck your children; the correction they did not take. Your sword devoured your prophets like a ravening lion. 31 You, of this generation, take note of the word of the Lord: Have I been a desert to Israel, a land of darkness? Why do my people say, "We have moved on, we will come to you no more"? 32 c Does a virgin forget her jewelry, a bride her sash? Yet my people have forgotten me days without number.

33 How well you pick your way when seeking love! You who, in your wickedness, have gone by ways unclean! 34 You, on whose clothing there is the life-blood of the innocent, whom you found committing no burglary; 35 yet withal you say, "I am innocent; at least, his anger is turned away from me." Behold, I will judge you on that word of yours, "I have not sinned." 36 d How very base you have become in changing your course! By Egypt will you be shamed, as you were shamed by Assyria. 37 e From there also shall you go away with hands upon your head; for the Lord has rejected those in whom you trust, with them you will have no success.

CHAPTER 3.

1 If a man sends away his wife and, after leaving him, she marries another man,f does the first husband come back to her?* Would not the land be wholly defiled? But you have sinned with many lovers, and yet you would return to me! says the Lord.

2 g Lift your eyes to the heights, and see, where have men not lain with you? By the waysides you waited for them like an Arab* in the desert. You defiled the land by your wicked harlotry. 3 h Therefore the showers were withheld, the spring rain failed. But because you have a harlot's brow, you refused to blush.

4 Even now do you not call me, "My father, you who are the bridegroom of my youth"? 5 "Will he keep his wrath forever, will he hold his grudge to the end?" This is what you say; yet you do all the evil you can.

Juda and Israel. 6 i The Lord said to me in the days of King Josia: See now what rebellious Israel has done! She has gone up every high mountain, and under every green tree she has played the harlot. 7 And I thought, after she has done all this she will return to me. But she did not return. Then, even though her traitor sister Juda saw 8 j that for all the adulteries rebellious Israel had committed, I put her away and gave her a bill of divorce, nevertheless her traitor sister Juda was not frightened; she too went off and played the harlot. 9 k Eager to sin, she polluted the land, committing adultery with stone and wood. 10 With all this, the traitor sister Juda did not return to me wholeheartedly, but insincerely, says the Lord.

Restoration of Israel. 11 l Then the Lord said to me: Rebel Israel is inwardly more just than traitorous Juda. 12 Go, proclaim these words toward the north, and say:

m Return, rebel Israel, says the Lord,
I will not remain angry with you; for I am merciful, says the Lord, I will not continue my wrath forever. 13 n Only know your guilt: how you rebelled against the Lord, your God, how you ran hither and yon to strangers [under every green tree] and would not listen to my voice, says the Lord.

14 *Return, rebellious children, says the Lord, for I am your Master; I will take you, one from a city, two from a clan, and bring you to Sion.o 15 p I will appoint over you shepherds after my own heart, who will shepherd you wisely and prudently. 16 When you multiply and become fruitful in the land, says the Lord, they will in those days no longer say,

3, 1: Such remarriage of divorced spouses was forbidden by Dt 24, 1-4. Under this figure the prophet sees the presumption of Juda, the unfaithful spouse, who thinks she can return to the Lord after uniting herself to other gods.

3, 2: An Arab: a marauding nomad who lay in wait for caravans.

3, 14-18: A remnant of Israel (14) will reunite with Juda (18). The elementary cult of the Lord represented by the ark of the covenant will now be replaced by a more deeply spiritual and universal alliance, symbolized by His throne in the ideal Jerusalem around which all nations will be gathered together (17).

"The ark of the covenant of the Lord!" They will no longer think of it, or remember it, or miss it, or make another.

17 q At that time they will call Jerusalem the Lord's throne; there all nations will be gathered together to honor the name of the Lord at Jerusalem, and they will walk no longer in their hardhearted wickedness. 18 r In those days the house of Juda will join the house of Israel; together they will come from the land of the north to the land which I gave to your fathers as a heritage.

Conditions for Forgiveness. 19 s I had thought: How I should like to treat you as sons, and give you a pleasant land, a heritage most beautiful among the nations! You would call me, "My Father," I thought, and never cease following me. 20 t But like a woman faithless to her lover, even so have you been faithless to me, O house of Israel, says the Lord. 21 A cry is heard on the heights! the plaintive weeping of Israel's children, because they have perverted their ways and forgotten the Lord, their God. 22 u Return, rebellious children, and I will cure you of your rebelling. "Here we are, we now come to you because you are the Lord, our God. 23 v Deceptive indeed are the hills, the thronging mountains; in the Lord, our God, alone is the salvation of Israel. 24 The shame-god* has devoured our fathers' toil from our youth, their sheep and their cattle, their sons and their daughters. 25 w Let us lie down in our shame, let our disgrace cover us, for we have sinned against the Lord, our God, from our youth to this day, we and our fathers also; we listened not to the voice of the Lord, our God."

CHAPTER 4.

1 If you wish to return, O Israel, says the Lord, return to me. x If you put your detestable things out of my sight, and do not stray, 2 y then you can swear, "As the Lord lives,"* in truth, in judgment, and in justice; then shall the nations use his name in blessing, and glory in him.

3 z For to the men of Juda and to Jerusalem, thus says the Lord: Till your untilled ground, sow not among thorns. 4 a For the sake of the Lord, be circumcised, remove the foreskins of your hearts, O men of Juda and citizens of Jerusalem;* lest my anger break out like fire, and burn till none can quench it, because of your evil deeds.

The Invasion from the North. 5 Proclaim it in Juda, make it heard in Jerusalem; blow the trumpet through the land, summon the recruits! Say, "Fall in, let us march to the fortified cities." 6 Bear the standard to Sion, seek refuge without delay! Evil I bring from the north, and great destruction. 7 b Up comes the lion from his lair, the destroyer of nations has set out, has left his place, to turn your land into desolation, till your cities lie waste and empty. 8 c So gird yourselves with sackcloth, mourn and wail: "The blazing wrath of the Lord is not turned away from us."

9 In that day, says the Lord, the king will lose heart, and the princes; the priests will be amazed, and the prophets stunned. 10 d "Alas! Lord God," they will say, "You only deceived us* when you said: Peace shall be yours; for the sword touches our very soul." 11 At that time it will be said of this people and of Jerusalem, "From the glaring heights through the desert a wind comes toward the daughter of my people." Not to winnow, not to cleanse, 12 e does this wind from the heights come at my bidding; and I myself now pronounce sentence upon them.

13 See! like storm clouds he advances, like a hurricane his chariots; swifter than eagles are his steeds: "Woe to us! we are ruined." 14 Cleanse your heart of evil, O Jerusalem, that you may be saved. How long must your pernicious thoughts lodge within you? 15 Listen! They proclaim it from Dan, from Mount Ephraim they announce destruction: 16 f "Make this known to the nations, announce it to Jerusalem: The besiegers are coming from the distant land, shouting their war cry against the cities of Juda." 17 g Like watchmen of the fields they surround her, for she has rebelled against me, says the Lord. 18 h Your conduct, your misdeeds, have done this to you; how bitter is this disaster of yours, how it reaches to your very heart!

19 *My breast! my breast! how I suffer! The walls of my heart! My heart beats wildly, I cannot be still; for I have heard the sound of the trumpet, the alarm of war. 20 i Ruin after ruin is reported; the whole earth is laid waste. In an instant my tents are ravaged; in a flash, my shelters. 21 How long must I see that signal, hear that trumpet sound!

22 j Fools my people are, they know me not; senseless children they are, having no understanding; they are wise in evil, but know not how to do good. 23 k I looked at the earth, and it was waste and void; at the heavens, and their light had gone out! 24 I looked at the mountains, and they were trembling, and all the hills were crumbling! 25 I looked and behold, there was no man; even the birds of the air had flown away! 26 l I looked and behold, the garden land was a desert, with all its cities destroyed before the Lord, before his blazing wrath.

27 m For thus says the Lord: Waste shall the whole land be; I will [not] wholly destroy it. 28 n Because of this the earth shall mourn, the heavens above shall darken; I have spoken, I will not repent, I have resolved, I will not turn back. 29 At the shout of horseman and bowman each city takes to flight; they shrink into the thickets, they scale the rocks: all the cities are abandoned, and no one dwells in them. 30 You now who are doomed, what do you mean by putting on purple, bedecking yourself with gold, shading your eyes with cosmetics, beautifying yourself in vain? Your lovers spurn you, they seek your life. 31 o Yes, I hear the moaning, as of a woman in travail, like the anguish of a mother with her first child—the cry of daughter Sion gasping, as she stretches forth her hands: "Ah, woe is me! I sink exhausted before the slayers!"

CHAPTER 5.

Universal Corruption. 1 Roam the streets of Jerusalem, look about and observe, search through her public places, to find even one who lives uprightly and seeks to be faithful, and I will pardon her! 2 Though they say, "As the Lord lives," they swear falsely. 3 p O Lord, do your eyes not look for honesty? You struck them, but they did not cringe; you laid them low, but they refused correction; they set their faces harder than stone, and refused to return to you. 4 q It is only the lowly, I thought, who are foolish; for they know not the way of the Lord, their duty to their God. 5 r I will go to the great ones and speak with them; for they know the way of the Lord, their duty to their God. But, one and all, they had broken the yoke, torn off the harness. 6 Therefore lions from the forest slay them, wolves of the desert ravage them, leopards keep watch round their cities: all who come out are torn to pieces for their many crimes and their numerous rebellions.

7 Why should I pardon you these things? Your sons have forsaken me, they swear by gods that are not. I fed them, but they committed adultery; to the harlot's house they throng. 8 s Lustful stallions they are, each neighs after another's wife. 9 Shall I not punish them for these things? says the Lord; on a nation such as this shall I not take vengeance? 10 t Climb to her terraces, and ravage them, destroy them [not] wholly. Tear away her tendrils, they do not belong to the Lord. 11 u For they have openly rebelled against me, both the house of Israel and the house of Juda, says the Lord. 12 v They denied the Lord,* saying, "Not he—no evil shall befall us, neither sword nor famine shall we see. 13 The prophets have become wind, and the word is not in them. May their threats be carried out against themselves!"

14 Now, for this that you have said, says the Lord, the God of hosts—behold, I make my words in your mouth, a fire, and this people is the wood that it shall devour!—15 w beware, I will bring against you a nation from afar, O house of Israel, says the Lord; a long-lived nation, an ancient nation, a people whose language

you know not, whose speech you cannot understand. 16 Their quivers are like open graves; all of them are warriors. 17 x They will devour your harvest and your bread, devour your sons and your daughters, devour your sheep and cattle, devour your vines and fig trees; they will beat flat with the sword the fortified city in which you trust.

18 y Yet even in those days, says the Lord, I will not wholly destroy you. 19 And when they ask, "Why has the Lord done all these things to us?" say to them, "As you have forsaken me to serve strange gods in your own land, so shall you serve strangers in a land not your own."

20 Announce this to the house of Jacob, proclaim it in Juda: 21 z Pay attention to this, foolish and senseless people who have eyes and see not, who have ears and hear not. 22 a Should you not fear me, says the Lord, should you not tremble before me? I made the sandy shore the sea's limit, which by eternal decree it may not overstep. Toss though it may, it is to no avail; though its billows roar, they cannot pass. 23 But this people's heart is stubborn and rebellious, they turn and go away, 24 b and say not in their hearts, "Let us fear the Lord, our God, who gives us rain early and late,* in its time; who watches for us over the appointed weeks of harvest." 25 c Your crimes have prevented these things, your sins have turned back these blessings from you. 26 d For there are among my people criminals; like fowlers they set traps, but it is men they catch. 27 Their houses are full of treachery as a bird-cage is of birds; therefore they grow powerful and rich, 28 e fat and sleek. They go their wicked way; justice they do not defend by advancing the claim of the fatherless or judging the cause of the poor. 29 Shall I not punish these things? says the Lord; on a nation such as this shall I not take vengeance? 30 A shocking, horrible thing has happened in the land: 31 f the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests teach as they wish; yet my people will have it so; what will you do when the end comes?

CHAPTER 6.

The Enemy at the Gates. 1 Flee, sons of Benjamin, out of Jerusalem! Blow the trumpet in Thecua, raise a signal over Beth-haccharem; for evil threatens from the north,g and mighty destruction. 2 O lovely and delicate daughter Sion, you are ruined! 3 h Against her, shepherds come with their flocks;* all around, they pitch their tents, each one grazes his portion. 4 "Prepare for war against her, up! let us rush upon her at midday! Alas! the day is waning, evening shadows lengthen; 5 i up! let us rush upon her by night, destroy her palaces!"

6 For thus says the Lord of hosts: Hew down her trees, throw up a siege mound against Jerusalem.j Woe to the city marked for punishment; nought but oppression within her! 7 k As the well gushes out its waters, so she gushes out her wickedness. Violence and destruction resound in her; ever before me are wounds and blows. 8 Be warned, O Jerusalem, lest I be estranged from you; lest I turn you into a desert, a land where no man dwells.

9 Thus says the Lord of hosts: Glean, glean like a vine the remnant of Israel; pass your hand, like a vintager, repeatedly over the tendrils. 10 l To whom shall I speak? whom shall I warn, and be heard? See! their ears are uncircumcised, they cannot give heed; see, the word of the Lord has become for them an object of scorn, which they will not have. 11 m Therefore my wrath brims up within me, I am weary of holding it in; I will pour it out upon the child in the street, upon the young men gathered together. Yes, all will be taken, husband and wife, graybeard with ancient. 12 n Their houses will fall to strangers, their fields and their wives as well; for I will stretch forth my hand against those who dwell in this land, says the Lord. 13 o Small and great alike, all are greedy for gain; prophet and priest, all practice fraud. 14 p They would repair, as though it were nought,* the injury to my people: "Peace, peace!" they say, though there is no peace. 15

q They are odious; they have done abominable things, yet they are not at all ashamed, they know not how to blush. Hence they shall be among those who fall; in their time of punishment they shall go down, says the Lord.

16 r Thus says the Lord: Stand beside the earliest roads, ask the pathways* of old which is the way to good, and walk it; thus you will find rest for your souls. But they said, "We will not walk it." 17 When I raised up watchmen* for them: "Hearken to the sound of the trumpet!" they said, "We will not hearken." 18 Therefore hear, O nations, and know, O earth, what I will do with them: 19 s See, I bring evil upon this people, the fruit of their own schemes, because they heeded not my words, because they despised my law. 20 t Of what use to me incense that comes from Saba, or sweet cane from far-off lands? Your holocausts find no favor with me, your sacrifices please me not. 21 u Therefore, thus says the Lord: See, I will place before this people obstacles to bring them down; fathers and sons alike, neighbors and friends shall perish.

22 v Thus says the Lord: See, a people comes from the land of the north, a great nation, roused from the ends of the earth. 23 Bow and javelin they wield; cruel and pitiless are they. They sound like the roaring sea as they ride forth on steeds, each in his place, for battle against you, daughter Sion. 24 w We hear the report of them; helpless fall our hands, anguish takes hold of us, throes like a mother's in childbirth. 25 Go not forth into the field, step not into the street, beware of the enemy's sword; terror on every side! 26 x O daughter of my people, gird on sackcloth, roll in the ashes. Mourn as for an only child with bitter wailing, for sudden upon us comes the destroyer.

27 y A tester among my people I have appointed you, to search and test their way. 28 Arch-rebels are they all, dealers in slander, all of them corrupt. 29 The bellows roars, the lead is consumed by the fire; in vain has the smelter refined, the wicked are not drawn off. 30 "Silver rejected" they shall be called, for the Lord has rejected them.

II: ORACLES MOSTLY IN THE DAYS OF JOAKIM

CHAPTER 7.

The Temple Sermon.* 1 The following message came to Jeremia from the Lord: 2 Stand at the gate of the house of the Lord, and there proclaim this message: Hear the word of the Lord, all you of Juda who enter these gates to worship the Lord! 3 Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: z Reform your ways and your deeds, so that I may remain with you in this place. 4 a Put not your trust in the deceitful words: "This is the temple of the Lord! The temple of the Lord! The temple of the Lord!" 5 Only if you thoroughly reform your ways and your deeds; if each of you deals justly with his neighbor; 6 b if you no longer oppress the resident alien,* the orphan, and the widow; if you no longer shed innocent blood in this place, or follow strange gods to your own harm, 7 c will I remain with you in this place, in the land which I gave your fathers long ago and forever.

8 But here you are, putting your trust in deceitful words to your own loss! 9 d Are you to steal and murder, commit adultery and perjury, burn incense to Baal, go after strange gods that you know not, 10 e and yet come to stand before me in this house which bears my name, and say: "We are safe; we can commit all these abominations again"? 11 f Has this house which bears my name become in your eyes a den of thieves? I too see what is being done, says the Lord. 12 g You may go to Silo,* which I made the dwelling place of my name in the beginning. See what I did to it because of the wickedness of my people Israel. 13 And now, because you have committed all these misdeeds, says the Lord, because you did not listen, though I spoke to you untiringly; because you did not answer, though I called you, 14 h I will do to this house named after me, in which you trust, and

7, 6: The resident alien: specially protected by law; cf Ex 20, 10; Nm 9, 14; 15, 14; Dt 5, 14; 28, 43.

7, 12: Silo: original place of worship from the time of Josue to that of Samuel. The sanctuary was later rejected by God and destroyed by the Philistines; cf 1 Kgs 1, 9; 4, 3f; Ps 77 (78), 60. 68f.

to this place which I gave to you and your fathers, just as I did to Silo. 15 i I will cast you away from me, as I cast away all your brethren, all the offspring of Ephraim.

Abuses in Worship. 16 j You, now, do not intercede for this people; raise not in their behalf a pleading prayer! 17 Do not urge me, for I will not listen to you. Do you not see what they are doing in the cities of Juda, in the streets of Jerusalem? 18 k The children gather wood, their fathers light the fire, and the women knead dough to make cakes for the queen of heaven,* while libations are poured out to strange gods in order to hurt me. 19 l Is it I whom they hurt, says the Lord; is it not rather themselves, to their own confusion? 20 m See now, says the Lord God, my anger and my wrath will pour out upon this place, upon man and beast, upon the trees of the field and the fruits of the earth; it will burn without being quenched.

21 Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Heap your holocausts upon your sacrifices; eat up the flesh! 22 In speaking to your fathers on the day I brought them out of the land of Egypt, I gave them no command* concerning holocaust or sacrifice. 23 n This rather is what I commanded them: Listen to my voice; then I will be your God and you shall be my people. Walk in all the ways that I command you, so that you may prosper.

24 o But they obeyed not, nor did they pay heed. They walked in the hardness of their evil hearts and turned their backs, not their faces, to me. 25 p From the day that your fathers left the land of Egypt even to this day, I have sent you untiringly all my servants the prophets. Yet they have not obeyed me nor paid heed; 26 q they have stiffened their necks and done worse than their fathers. 27 When you speak all these words to them, they will not listen to you either; when you call to them, they will not answer you. 28 Say to them: This is the nation which does not listen to the voice of the Lord, its God, or take correction. Faithfulness has disappeared; the word itself is banished from their speech.

29 r Cut off your dedicated hair* and throw it away! on the heights intone an elegy; for the Lord has rejected and cast off the generation that draws down his wrath.

30 s The people of Juda have done what is evil in my eyes, says the Lord. They have defiled the house which bears my name by setting up in it their abominable idols. 31 In the Valley of Ben-Hinnom they have built the high place of Thopheth to immolate in fire their sons and their daughters, such a thing as I never commanded or had in mind. 32 t Therefore, beware! days will come, says the Lord, when Thopheth and the Valley of Ben-Hinnom will no longer be called such, but rather the Valley of Slaughter. For lack of space, Thopheth will be a burial place. 33 u The corpses of this people will be food for the birds of the sky and for the beasts of the field, which no one will drive away. 34 v In the cities of Juda and in the streets of Jerusalem I will silence the cry of joy, the cry of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride; for the land will be turned to rubble.

CHAPTER 8.

1 At that time, says the Lord, w the bones of the kings and princes of Juda, the bones of the priests and the prophets, and the bones of the citizens of Jerusalem will be emptied out of their graves 2 x and spread out before the sun and the moon and the whole army of heaven,* which they loved and served, which they followed, consulted, and worshiped. They will not be gathered up for burial, but will lie like dung upon the ground. 3 Death will be preferred to life by all the survivors of this wicked race who remain in any of the places to which I banish them, says the Lord of hosts.

7, 18: Queen of heaven: the Assyro-Babylonian Ishtar, goddess of fertility, whose worship was introduced under King Manasse and was revived after Josia's death. Cakes shaped like stars (Ishtar was identified with the planet Venus) were offered in her honor.

7, 22: I gave them no command: right conduct rather than mere external cult was God's will concerning His people (v 23).

7, 29: Dedicated hair: the unshorn hair of the Nazirite, regarded as sacred because of a vow, temporary or permanent, to abstain from cutting or shaving the hair, from contact with a corpse, and from all products of the vine; cf Nm 6, 4-8. The cutting of this hair was a sign of extreme mourning.

8, 2: Army of heaven: the stars, worshiped by the pagan nations and even by the inhabitants of Jerusalem during the reigns of Manasse and Amon.

Israel's Conduct Incomprehensible. 4 Tell them: Thus says the Lord: When someone falls, does he not rise again? if he goes astray, does he not turn back? 5 y Why do these people rebel with obstinate resistance? Why do they cling to deceptive idols, refuse to turn back? 6 z I listen closely: they speak what is not true; no one repents of his wickedness, saying "What have I done!" Everyone keeps on running his course, like a steed dashing into battle. 7 a Even the stork in the air knows its seasons; turtledove, swallow and thrush observe their time of return, but my people do not know the ordinance of the Lord.

8 b How can you say, "We are wise, we have the law of the Lord"? Why, that has been changed into falsehood by the lying pen of the scribes!* 9 c The wise are confounded, dismayed and ensnared; since they have rejected the word of the Lord, of what avail is their wisdom?

Shameless in Their Crimes. 10 d Therefore, I will give their wives to strangers, their fields to spoilers. Small and great alike, all are greedy for gain, prophet and priest, all practice fraud. 11 e They would repair, as though it were nought, the injury to the daughter of my people:* "Peace, peace!" they say, though there is no peace. 12 f They are odious; they have done abominable things, yet they are not at all ashamed, they know not how to blush. Hence they shall be among those who fall; in their time of punishment they shall go down, says the Lord.

Threats of Punishment. 13 I will gather them all in, says the Lord: no grapes on the vine, no figs on the fig trees, foliage withered! 14 g Why do we remain here? Let us form ranks and enter the walled cities, to perish there; for the Lord has wrought our destruction, he has given us poison to drink, because we have sinned against the Lord. 15 h We wait for peace to no avail; for a time of healing, but terror comes instead. 16 From Dan is heard the snorting of his steeds; the neighing of his stallions shakes the whole land. They come devouring the land and all it contains, the city and those who dwell in it. 17 i Yes, I will send against you poisonous snakes, against which no charm will work when they bite you, says the Lord.

The Prophet's Grief over the People's Suffering. 18 My grief is incurable, my heart within me is faint. 19 j Listen! the cry of the daughter of my people, far and wide in the land! Is the Lord no longer in Sion, is her King no longer in her midst? [Why do they provoke me with their idols, with their foreign nonentities?] 20 "The harvest has passed, the summer is at an end, and yet we are not safe!" 21 k I am broken by the ruin of the daughter of my people. I am disconsolate; horror has seized me. 22 l Is there no balm in Galaad,* no physician there? Why grows not new flesh over the wound of the daughter of my people? 23 Oh, that my head were a spring of water, my eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night over the slain of the daughter of my people!

CHAPTER 9.

The Corruption of the People. 1 Would that I had in the desert a travelers' lodge! That I might leave my people and depart from them. They are all adulterers, a faithless band. 2 They ready their tongues like a drawn bow; with lying, and not with truth, they hold forth in the land. They go from evil to evil, but me they know not, says the Lord. 3 Be on your guard, everyone against his neighbor; put no trust in any brother. Every brother apes Jacob, the supplanter,* every friend is guilty of slander. 4 m Each one deceives the other, no one speaks the truth. They have accustomed their tongues to lying, and are perverse, and cannot repent. 5 Violence upon violence, deceit upon deceit: they refuse to recognize me, says the Lord.

6 Therefore, thus says the Lord of hosts: I will smelt them and test them; how else should I deal with their wickedness? 7 n A murderous arrow is his tongue, his mouth utters deceit; he speaks cordially with his friends, but in his heart he lays an ambush! [8] o For these things, says the Lord, shall I not punish them? On a nation such as this shall I not take vengeance?

Dirge over the Ravaged Land. [9] p Over the mountains, break out in cries of lamentation, over the pasture lands, intone a dirge: They are scorched, and no man crosses them, unheard is the bleat of the flock; birds of the air as well as beasts, all have fled, and are gone. [10] q I will turn Jerusalem into a heap of ruins, a haunt of jackals; the cities of Juda I will make into a waste, where no one dwells. [11] r Who is so wise that he can understand this? Let him to whom the mouth of the Lord has spoken make it known: Why is the land ravaged, scorched like a wasteland untraversed? [12] The Lord answered: Because they have abandoned my law, which I set before them, and have not followed it or listened to my voice, [13] s but followed rather the hardness of their hearts and the Baals, as their fathers had taught them; [14] t therefore, thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: See now, I will give them wormwood to eat and poison to drink. [15] u I will scatter them among nations whom neither they nor their fathers have known; I will send the sword to pursue them until I have completely destroyed them.

[16] Thus says the Lord of hosts: Attention! tell the wailing women to come, summon the best of them; [17] v let them come quickly and intone a dirge for us, that our eyes may be wet with weeping, our cheeks run with tears. [18] The dirge is heard from Sion: Ruined we are, and greatly ashamed; we must leave the land, give up our homes! [19] Hear, you women, the word of the Lord, let your ears receive his message. Teach your daughters this dirge, and each other this lament. [20] w Death has come up through our windows, has entered our palaces; it cuts down the children in the street, young people in the squares. [21] The corpses of the slain lie like dung on a field, like sheaves behind the harvester, with no one to gather them.

True Glory. [22] x Thus says the Lord: Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, nor the strong man glory in his strength, nor the rich man glory in his riches; [23] but rather, let him who glories, glory in this, that in his prudence he knows me, knows that I, the Lord, bring about kindness, justice and uprightness on the earth; for with such am I pleased, says the Lord.

Circumcision Worthless. [24] y See, days are coming, says the Lord, when I will demand an account of all those circumcised in their flesh. [25] Egypt and Juda, Edom and the Ammonites, Moab and the desert dwellers who shave their temples.* For all these nations, like the whole house of Israel, are uncircumcised in heart.

CHAPTER 10.

The Folly of Idolatry. [1] Hear the word which the Lord speaks to you, O house of Israel. [2] Thus says the Lord: z Learn not the customs of the nations, and have no fear of the signs of the heavens;* though the nations fear them. [3] a For the cult idols of the nations are nothing, wood cut from the forest, wrought by craftsmen with the adze, [4] b adorned with silver and gold. With nails and hammers they are fastened, that they may not totter. [5] c Like a scarecrow in a cucumber field are they, they cannot speak; they must be carried about, for they cannot walk. Fear them not, they can do no harm, neither is it in their power to do good. [6] d No one is like you, O Lord, great are you, great and mighty is your name. [7] e Who would not fear you, King of the nations, for it is your due!

Among all the wisest of the nations, and in all their domain, there is none like you.

[8] One and all they are dumb and senseless, these idols they teach about are wooden: [9] silver strips brought from Tharsis, and gold from Ophir, the work of the craftsman and the handiwork of the smelter, clothed with violet and purple—all of them the work of artisans. [11] f Thus shall you say of them: Let the gods that did not make heaven and earth perish from the earth, and from beneath these heavens! 10 g The Lord is true God, he is the living God, the eternal King, before whose anger the earth quakes, whose wrath the nations cannot endure: 12 h He who made the earth by his power, established the world by his wisdom, and stretched out the heavens by his skill. 13 When he thunders, the waters in the heavens roar, and he brings up clouds from the end of the earth; he makes the lightning flash in the rain, and releases stormwinds from their chambers. 14 i Every man is stupid, ignorant; every artisan is put to shame by his idol: he has molded a fraud, without breath of life. 15 Nothingness are they, a ridiculous work; they will perish in their time of punishment. 16 j Not like these is the portion of Jacob: he is the creator of all things; Israel is his very own tribe, Lord of hosts is his name.

Abandonment of Juda. 17 Lift your bundle and leave the land, O city living in a state of siege! 18 For thus says the Lord: Behold, this time I will sling away the inhabitants of the land; I will hem them in, that they may be taken. 19 Woe is me! I am undone, my wound is incurable; yet I had thought: if I make light of my wound, I can bear it. 20 k My tent is ruined, all its cords are severed. My sons have left me, they are no more: no one to pitch my tent, no one to raise its curtains. 21 l Yes, the shepherds were stupid as cattle, the Lord they sought not; therefore they had no success, and all their flocks were scattered. 22 Listen! a noise! it comes closer, a great uproar from the northern land: to turn the cities of Juda into a desert haunt of jackals.

Prayer of Jeremia. 23 You know, O Lord, that man is not master of his way; man's course is not within his choice, nor is it for him to direct his step. 24 Punish us, O Lord, but with equity, not in anger, lest you have us dwindle away. 25 m Pour out your wrath on the nations that know you not, on the tribes that call not upon your name; for they have devoured Jacob utterly, and laid waste his dwelling.

CHAPTER 11.

Plea for Fidelity to the Covenant. 1 The following message came to Jeremia from the Lord: 2 Speak to the men of Juda and to the citizens of Jerusalem, 3 n saying to them: Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Cursed be the man who does not observe the terms of this covenant, 4 o which I enjoined upon your fathers the day I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, that iron foundry, saying: Listen to my voice and do all that I command you. Then you shall be my people, and I will be your God. Thus I will fulfill the oath which I swore to your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey: the one you have today. "Amen, Lord," I answered.

6 Then the Lord said to me: Proclaim all these words in the cities of Juda and in the streets of Jerusalem: Hear the words of this covenant and obey them. 7 Urgently and constantly I warned your fathers to obey my voice, from the day I brought them up out of the land of Egypt even to this day. 8 p But they did not listen or give ear. Each one followed the hardness of his evil heart, till I brought upon them all the threats of this covenant which they had failed to observe as I commanded them.

9 A conspiracy has been found, the Lord said to me, among the men of Juda and the citizens of Jerusalem. 10 q They have returned to the crimes of their forefathers who refused to obey my words. They also have followed and served strange gods; the covenant which I had made with their fathers, the house of Israel and the house of Juda have broken. 11 r Therefore, thus says the Lord: See, I bring upon them misfortune which they cannot escape. Though they cry out to me, I will not listen to them. 12 s Then the cities of Juda and the citizens of Jerusalem will go and cry out to the gods to which they have been offering incense. But these gods will give them no help whatever when misfortune strikes.

13 t For as numerous as your cities are your gods, O Juda! And as many as the streets of Jerusalem are the altars for offering sacrifice to Baal.

14 u Do not intercede on behalf of this people, nor utter a plea for them. I will not listen when they call to me at the time of their misfortune.

meat turn away your misfortune from you? Will you still be jubilant 16 when you hear the great invasion? A spreading olive tree, goodly to behold, the Lord has named you; now he sets fire to it, its branches burn.

17 v The Lord of hosts who planted you has decreed misfortune for you because of the evil done by the house of Israel and by the house of Juda, who provoked me by sacrificing to Baal.

The Plot against Jeremia. 18 I knew it because the Lord informed me; at that time you, O Lord, showed me their doings.

CHAPTER 12.

1 You would be in the right, O Lord, if I should dispute with you; even so, I must discuss the case with you. Why does the way of the godless prosper, why live all the treacherous in contentment? w 2 x You planted them; they have taken root, they keep on growing and bearing fruit. You are upon their lips, but far from their inmost thoughts. 3 y You, O Lord, know me, you see me, you have found that at heart I am with you. *Pick them out like sheep for the slaughter, set them apart for the day of carnage. 4 How long must the earth mourn, the green of the whole countryside wither? For the wickedness of those who dwell in it beasts and birds disappear, because they say, "God does not see our ways."

5 If running against men has wearied you, how will you race against horses? And if in a land of peace you fall headlong, what will you do in the thickets of the Jordan? 6 z For even your own brothers, the members of your father's house, betray you; they have recruited a force against you. Do not believe them, even if they are friendly to you in their words.

19 *Yet I, like a trusting lamb led to slaughter, had not realized that they were hatching plots against me: "Let us destroy the tree in its vigor; let us cut him off from the land of the living, so that his name will be spoken no more." a

20 b But, you, O Lord of hosts, O just Judge, searcher of mind and heart, let me witness the vengeance you take on them, for to you I have entrusted my cause!

21 c Therefore, thus says the Lord concerning the men of Anathoth who seek your life, saying, "Do not prophesy in the name of the Lord; else you shall die by our hand." 22 d Therefore, thus says the Lord of hosts: I am going to punish them. The young men shall die by the sword; their sons and daughters shall die by famine. 23 e None shall be spared among them, for I will bring misfortune upon the men of Anathoth, the year of their punishment.

The Lord's Complaint. 7 f I abandon my house, cast off my heritage; the beloved of my soul I deliver into the hand of her foes. 8 g My heritage has turned on me like a lion in the jungle; because she has roared against me, I treat her as an enemy. 9 h My heritage is a prey for hyenas, is surrounded by vultures; come, gather together, all you beasts of the field, come and eat! 10 i Many shepherds have ravaged my vineyard, have trodden my heritage underfoot; the portion that delighted me they have turned into a desert waste. 11 They have made it a mournful waste, desolate it lies before me, desolate, all the land, because no one takes it to heart. 12 j Upon every desert height brigands have come up. The Lord has a sword which consumes the land, from end to end: no peace for all mankind. 13 They have sown wheat and reaped thorns, they have tired themselves out to no purpose; they recoil before their harvest, the flaming anger of the Lord.

Juda's Neighbors. 14 k Thus says the Lord against all my evil neighbors* who plunder the heritage which I gave my people Israel as their own: See, I will pluck them up from their land; the house of Juda I will pluck up in their midst. 15 l But after plucking them up, I will pity them again and bring them back, each to his heritage, each to his land. 16 m And if they carefully learn my people's custom of swearing by my name, "As the Lord lives," they who formerly taught my people to swear by Baal shall be built up in the midst of my people. 17 n But if they do not obey, I will uproot and destroy that nation entirely, says the Lord.

CHAPTER 13.

Juda's Corruption.* 1 The Lord said to me: Go buy yourself a linen loincloth; wear it on your loins, but do not put it in water. 2 I bought the loincloth, as the Lord commanded, and put it on. 3 A second time the word of the Lord came to me thus: 4 Take the loincloth which you bought and are wearing, and go now to the Pharat; there hide it in a cleft of the rock. 5 Obedient to the Lord's command, I went to the Pharat and buried the loincloth. 6 After a long interval, he said to me: Go now to the Pharat and fetch the loincloth which I told you to hide there. 7 Again I went to the Pharat, sought out and took the loincloth from the place where I had hid it. But it was rotted, good for nothing! 8 Then the message came to me from the Lord: 9 Thus says the Lord: o So also I will allow the pride of Juda to rot, the great pride of Jerusalem. 10 p This wicked people who refuse to obey my words, who walk in the stubbornness of their hearts, and follow strange gods to serve and adore them, shall be like this loincloth which is good for nothing. 11 q For, as close as the loincloth clings to a man's loins, so had I made the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Juda cling to me, says the Lord; to be my people, my renown, my praise, my beauty. But they did not listen.

The Broken Wineflask. 12 Now speak to them this word: Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Every wineflask is meant to be filled with wine. If they reply, "Do we not know that every wineflask is meant to be filled with wine?" 13 r say to them: Thus says the Lord: Beware! I am filling with drunkenness all the inhabitants of this land, the kings who succeed to David's throne, the priests and prophets, and all the citizens of Jerusalem. 14 s I will dash them against each other, fathers and sons together, says the Lord; I will show no compassion, I will not spare or pity, but will destroy them.

A Last Warning. 15 Give ear, listen humbly, for the Lord speaks. 16 t Give glory to the Lord, your God, before it grows dark; before your feet stumble on darkening mountains; before the light you look for turns to darkness, changes into black clouds. 17 u If you do not listen to this in your pride, I will weep in secret many tears; my eyes will run with tears for the Lord's flock, led away to exile.

Exile. 18 v Say to the king and to the queen mother: come down from your throne; from your heads fall your magnificent crowns. 19 The cities of the Negeb are besieged, with no one to relieve them; all Juda is banished in universal exile.

Jerusalem's Disgrace. 20 w Lift up your eyes and see men coming from the north. Where is the flock entrusted to you, the sheep that were your glory? 21 x What will you say when they place as rulers over you those whom you taught to be your lovers? Will not pangs seize you like those of a woman giving birth? 22 y If you ask in your heart why these things befall you: for your great guilt your skirts are stripped away and you are violated. 23 z Can the Ethiopian change his skin? the leopard his spots? As easily would you be able to do good, accustomed to evil as you are. 24 a I will scatter them like chaff that flies when the desert wind blows. 25 b This is your lot, the portion measured out to you from me, says the Lord. Because you have forgotten me, and trusted in the lying idol, 26 c I now will strip off your skirts from you, so that your shame will appear. 27 d Your adulteries, your neighings, your shameless prostitutions: on the hills in the highlands I see these horrible crimes of yours. Woe to you, Jerusalem, how long will it yet be before you become clean!

CHAPTER 14.

The Great Drought. 1 The word of the Lord that came to Jeremia concerning the drought: e 2 f Juda mourns, her gates are lifeless; her people sink down in mourning: from Jerusalem ascends a cry of anguish. 3 g The nobles send their servants for water, but when they come to the cisterns they find no water and return with empty jars. Ashamed, despairing, they cover their heads [4] h because of the stricken soil; because there is no rain in the land the farmers are ashamed, they cover their heads. [5] Even the hind in the field deserts her offspring because there is no grass. [6] The wild asses stand on the bare heights, gasping for breath like jackals; their eyes grow dim, because there is no vegetation to be seen.

[7] i Even though our crimes bear witness against us, take action, O Lord, for the honor of your name—even though our rebellions are many, though we have sinned against you. [8] O Hope of Israel, O Lord, our savior in time of need! Why should you be a stranger in this land, like a traveler who has stopped but for a night? [9] j Why are you like a man dumbfounded, a champion who cannot save? You are in our midst, O Lord, your name we bear: do not forsake us!

[10] k Thus says the Lord of this people: They so love to wander that they do not spare their feet. The Lord has no pleasure in them; now he remembers their guilt, and will punish their sins.

[11] l Then the Lord said to me: Do not intercede for this people. [12] m If they fast, I will not listen to their supplication. If they offer holocausts or cereal offerings, I will not accept them. Rather, I will destroy them with the sword, famine, and pestilence.

[13] n Ah! Lord God, I replied, it is the prophets who say to them, "You shall not see the sword; famine shall not befall you. Indeed, I will give you lasting peace in this place."

[14] o Lies these prophets utter in my name, the Lord said to me. I did not send them; I gave them no command nor did I speak to them. Lying visions, foolish divination, dreams of their own imagination, they prophesy to you. [15] p Therefore, thus says the Lord: Concerning the prophets who prophesy in my name, though I did not send them; who say, "Sword and famine shall not befall this land": by the sword and famine shall these prophets meet their end. [16] q The people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out into the streets of Jerusalem by famine and the sword. No one shall bury them, their wives, their sons, or their daughters, for I will pour out upon them their own wickedness. [17] Speak to them this word:

r Let my eyes • stream with tears day and night, without rest, over the great destruction which overwhelms the virgin daughter of my people, over her incurable wound. [18] If I walk out into the field, look! those slain by the sword; if I enter the city, look! those consumed by hunger. Even the prophet and the priest forage in a land they know not.

[19] s Have you cast Juda off completely? Is Sion loathsome to you? Why have you struck us a blow that cannot be healed? We wait for peace, to no avail; for a time of healing, but terror comes instead. [20] t We recognize, O Lord, our wickedness, the guilt of our fathers; that we have sinned against you. [21] u For your name's sake spurn us not, disgrace not the throne of your glory; remember your covenant with us, and break it not. [22] v Among the nations' idols is there any that gives rain? Or can the mere heavens send showers? Is it not you alone, O Lord, our God, to whom we look? You alone have done all these things.

CHAPTER 15.

[1] The Lord said to me: Even if Moses and Samuel stood before me, w my heart would not turn toward this people. Send them away from me. [2] x If they ask you where they should go, tell them, Thus says the Lord: Whoever is marked for death, to death; whoever is marked for the sword, to the sword; whoever is marked for famine, to famine; whoever is marked for captivity, to captivity. [3] y Four kinds of scourge I have decreed against them, says the Lord: the sword to slay them; dogs to drag them about; the birds of the sky and the beasts of the earth to devour and destroy them. [4] z And I will make them an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth because of what Manasse, son of Ezechia, king of Juda, did in Jerusalem.

Scene of Tragedy. [5] a Who will pity you, Jerusalem, who will console you? Who will stop to ask about your welfare? [6] b You have disowned me, says the Lord, turned your back upon me; and so I stretched out my hand to destroy you; I was weary of sparing you. [7] c I winnowed them with the fan in every city gate. I destroyed my people through bereavement; they returned not from their evil ways. 8 Their widows were more numerous before me than the sands of the sea. I brought against the mother of youths the spoiler at midday; suddenly I struck her with anguish and terror. 9 d The mother of seven swoons away, gasping out her life; her sun sets in full day, she is disgraced, despairing. Their survivors I will give to the sword before their enemies, says the Lord.

Jeremia's Complaint. 10 e Woe to me, mother, that you gave me birth! a man of strife and contention to all the land! I neither borrow nor lend, yet all curse me. 11 f Tell me, Lord, have I not served you well? Have I not interceded with you for my enemies in the time of their misfortune and anguish? You know I have. 15 g Remember me, Lord, visit me, and avenge me on my persecutors. Because of your long-suffering banish me not; know that for you I have borne insult. 16 When I found your words, I devoured them; they became my joy and the happiness of my heart, because I bore your name, O Lord, God of hosts. 17 h I did not sit celebrating in the circle of merrymakers; under the weight of your hand I sat alone because you filled me with indignation. 18 i Why is my pain continuous, my wound incurable, refusing to be healed? You have indeed become for me a treacherous brook,* whose waters do not abide! 19 Thus the Lord answered me: If you repent, so that I restore you, in my presence you shall stand; if you bring forth the precious without the vile, you shall be my mouthpiece. Then it shall be they who turn to you, and you shall not turn to them; 20 and I will make you toward this people a solid wall of brass. j Though they fight against you, they shall not prevail, for I am with you, to deliver and rescue you, says the Lord. 21 I will free you from the hand of the wicked, and rescue you from the grasp of the violent.

CHAPTER 16.

Jeremia's Life a Warning. 1 This message came to me from the Lord: Do not marry any woman; 2 you shall not have sons or daughters in this place, 3 for thus says the Lord concerning the sons and daughters who will be born in this place, the mothers who will give them birth, the fathers who will beget them in this land: 4 k Of deadly disease they shall die. Unlamented and unburied they will lie like dung on the ground. Sword and famine will make an end of them, and their corpses will become food for the birds of the sky and the beasts of the field.

5 l Go not into a house of mourning, the Lord continued: go not there to lament or offer sympathy. For I have withdrawn my friendship from this people, says the Lord, my kindness and my pity. 6 *They shall die, the great and the lowly, in this land, and shall go unburied and unlamented. No one will gash himself or shave his head for them. m 7 n They will not break bread with the bereaved to console them in their bereavement; they will not give them the cup of consolation to drink over the death of father or mother.

8 Enter not a house where people are celebrating, to sit with them eating and drinking. 9 o For thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Before your very eyes and during your lifetime I will silence from this place the cry of joy and the cry of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride.

10 p When you proclaim all these words to this people and they ask you: "Why has the Lord pronounced all these great evils against us? What is our crime? What sin have we committed against the Lord, our God?"—you shall answer them: 11 q It is because your fathers have forsaken me, says the Lord, and followed strange gods, which they served and worshiped; but me they have forsaken, and my law they have not observed. 12 r And you have done worse than your fathers. Here you are, every one of you, walking in the hardness of his evil heart instead of listening to me. 13 I will cast you out of this land into a land that neither you nor your fathers have known; there you can serve strange gods day and night, because I will not grant you my mercy.

16, 6f: These verses refer to popular mourning practices, sometimes connected with pagan supersition; cf Dt 14, 1f.

Return from Exile. 14 s However, days will surely come, says the Lord, when it will no longer be said, "As the Lord lives, who brought the Israelites out of Egypt"; 15 t but rather, "As the Lord lives, who brought the Israelites out of the land of the north and out of all the countries to which he had banished them." I will bring them back to the land which I gave their fathers.

Double Punishment. 16 u Look! I will send many fishermen, says the Lord, to catch them. After that, I will send many hunters to hunt them out from every mountain and hill and from the clefts of the rocks. 17 v For my eyes are upon all their ways; they are not hidden from me, nor does their guilt escape my view. 18 w I will at once repay them double for their crime and their sin of profaning my land with their detestable corpses of idols, and filling my heritage with their abominations.

Conversion of the Heathen. 19 x O Lord, my strength, my fortress, my refuge in the day of distress! To you will the nations come from the ends of the earth, and say, "Mere frauds are the heritage of our fathers, empty idols of no use." 20 y Can man make for himself gods? These are not gods. 21 z Look, then: I will give them knowledge; this time I will leave them in no doubt of my strength and my power: they shall know that my name is Lord.

CHAPTER 17.

The Sin of Juda and Its Punishment. 1 The sin of Juda is written with an iron stylus, engraved with a diamond point upon the tablets of their hearts.a [And the horns of their altars, 2 when their sons remember their altars and their sacred poles, 3 beside the green trees, on the high hills, the peaks in the highland.] Your wealth and all your treasures I will give as spoil. In recompense for all your sins throughout your borders, 4 b you will relinquish your hold on your heritage which I have given you. I will enslave you to your enemies in a land that you know not: for a fire has been kindled by my wrath that will burn forever.

True Wisdom. 5 c Thus says the Lord: Cursed is the man who trusts in human beings, who seeks his strength in flesh, whose heart turns away from the Lord. 6 He is like a barren bush in the desert that enjoys no change of season, but stands in a lava waste, a salt and empty earth. 7 d Blessed is the man who trusts in the Lord, whose hope is the Lord. He is like a tree planted beside the waters that stretches out its roots to the stream: 8 e it fears not the heat when it comes, its leaves stay green; in the year of drought it shows no distress, but still bears fruit. 9 More tortuous than all else is the human heart, beyond remedy; who can understand it? 10 f I, the Lord, alone probe the mind and test the heart, to reward everyone according to his ways, according to the merit of his deeds. 11 g A partridge that mothers a brood not her own is the man who acquires wealth unjustly: in midlife it will desert him; in the end he is only a fool.

The Source of Life. 12 h A throne of glory, exalted from the beginning, such is our holy place. 13 i O hope of Israel, O Lord! all who forsake you shall be in disgrace; the rebels in the land shall be put to shame; they have forsaken the source of living waters [the Lord].

Prayer for Vengeance. 14 Heal me, Lord, that I may be healed; save me, that I may be saved, for it is you whom I praise. 15 j See how they say to me, "Where is the word of the Lord? Let it come to pass!" 16 Yet I did not press you to send calamity; the day without remedy I have not desired. You know what passed my lips; it is present before you. 17 k Do not be my ruin, you, my refuge in the day of misfortune. 18 l Let my persecutors, not me, be confounded; let them, not me, be broken. Bring upon them the day of misfortune, crush them with repeated destruction.

Observance of the Sabbath. 19 m Thus said the Lord to me: Go, stand at the Gate of Benjamin,* where the kings of Juda enter and leave, and at the other gates of Jerusalem. 20 There say to them: Hear the word of the Lord, you kings of Juda, and all Juda, and all you citizens of Jerusalem who enter these gates! 21 n Thus says the Lord: As you love your lives, take care not to carry burdens on the Sabbath day, to bring them in through the gates of Jerusalem. 22 o Bring no burden from your homes on the Sabbath. Do no work whatever but keep holy the Sabbath, as I commanded your fathers, 23 p though they did not listen or give ear, but stiffened their necks so as not to hear or take correction. 24 q If you obey me wholeheartedly, says the Lord, and carry no burden through the gates of this city on the Sabbath, keeping the Sabbath holy and abstaining from all work on it, 25 r then, through the gates of this city, kings who sit upon the throne of David will continue to enter, riding in their chariots or upon their horses, along with their princes, and the men of Juda, and the citizens of Jerusalem. This city will remain inhabited forever. 26 s To it people will come from the cities of Juda and the neighborhood of Jerusalem, from the land of Benjamin and from the foothills, from the hill country and the Negeb, to bring holocausts and sacrifices, cereal offerings and incense and thank offerings to the house of the Lord. 27 t But if you do not obey me and keep holy the Sabbath, if you carry burdens and come through the gates of Jerusalem on the Sabbath, I will set unquenchable fire to its gates, which will consume the palaces of Jerusalem.

CHAPTER 18.

The Potter's Vessel.* 1 This word came to Jeremia from the Lord: 2 Rise up, be off to the potter's house; 3 there I will give you my message. I went down to the potter's house and there he was, working at the wheel. 4 u Whenever the object of clay which he was making turned out badly in his hand, he tried again, making of the clay another object of whatever sort he pleased. 5 Then the word of the Lord came to me: 6 v Can I not do to you, house of Israel, as this potter has done? says the Lord. Indeed, like clay in the hand of the potter, so are you in my hand, house of Israel. 7 w Sometimes I threaten to uproot and tear down and destroy a nation or a kingdom. 8 x But if that nation which I have threatened turns from its evil, I also repent of the evil which I threatened to do. 9 Sometimes, again, I promise to build up and plant a nation or a kingdom. 10 y But if that nation does what is evil in my eyes, refusing to obey my voice, I repent of the good with which I promised to bless it.

11 z And now, tell this to the men of Juda and the citizens of Jerusalem: Thus says the Lord: Take care! I am fashioning evil against you and making a plan. Return, each of you, from his evil way; reform your ways and your deeds. 12 a But they will say, "No use! We will follow our own devices; each one of us will behave according to the stubbornness of his evil heart!"

Juda's Apostasy Unnatural. 13 b Therefore thus says the Lord: Ask among the nations—who has ever heard the like? Truly horrible things has virgin Israel done! 14 Does the snow of Lebanon* desert the rocky heights? Do the gushing waters dry up that flow fresh down the mountains? 15 c Yet my people have forgotten me: they burn incense to a thing that does not exist. They stumble out of their ways, the paths of old, to travel on bypaths, not the beaten track. 16 d Their land shall be turned into a desert, an object of lasting ridicule: all passers-by will be amazed, will shake their heads. 17 e Like the east wind, I will scatter them before their enemies; I will show them my back, not my face, in their day of disaster.

Another Prayer for Vengeance. 18 f "Come," they said, "let us contrive a plot against Jeremia. It will not mean the loss of instruction from the priests, nor of counsel from the wise, nor of messages from the prophets. And so, let us destroy him by his own tongue; let us carefully note his every word."

19 Heed me, O Lord, and listen to what my adversaries say. 20 g Must good be repaid with evil that they should dig a pit to take my life? Remember that I

May cries be heard from their homes,

plans to slay me. Forgive not their crime, blot not out their sin in your sight! Let them go down before you, proceed against them in the time of your anger.

CHAPTER 19.

Symbol of the Potter's Flask. 1 Thus said the Lord: Go, buy a potter's earthen flask. Take along some of the elders of the people and of the priests, 2 and go out toward the Valley of Ben-Hinnom, at the entrance of the Potsherd Gate;* there proclaim the words which I will speak to you: 3 Listen to the word of the Lord,
kings of Juda and citizens of Jerusalem:
Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to bring such evil upon this place that all who hear of it will feel their ears tingle. 4 [j] This is because they have forsaken me and alienated this place
by burning in it incense to strange gods which neither they nor their fathers knew;
and the kings of Juda have filled this place with the blood of the innocent.
5 [k] They have built high places for Baal
to immolate their sons in fire as holocausts to Baal: such a thing as I neither commanded nor spoke of, nor did it ever enter my mind. 6 [l] Therefore, days will come, says the Lord, when this place will no longer be called Thopheth, or the Valley of Ben-Hinnom, but rather, the Valley of Slaughter. 7 [m] In this place I will foil the plan of Juda and Jerusalem; I will make them fall by the sword before their enemies, by the hand of those that seek their lives. Their corpses I will give as food to the birds of the sky and the beasts of the field. 8 I will make this city an object of amazement and derision. Because of all its wounds, every passer-by will be amazed and will hiss. 9 [n] Moreover, I will have them eat the flesh of their sons and daughters; they shall eat
one another's flesh during the strict siege by which their enemies and those who seek their lives will confine them.

10 And you shall break the flask in the sight of the men who went with you, 11 [o] and say to them: Thus says the Lord of hosts: Thus will I smash this people and this city, as one smashes a clay pot so that it cannot be repaired. And Thopheth shall be a burial place, for lack of place to bury elsewhere. 12 [p] Thus I will do to this place and to its inhabitants, says the Lord;
I will make this city like Thopheth. 13 [q] And the houses of Jerusalem and the palaces of the kings of Juda shall be defiled like the place of Thopheth, all the houses upon whose roofs they burnt incense to the whole host of heaven and poured out libations to strange gods.

14 [r] When Jeremia returned from Thopheth, where the Lord had sent him to prophesy, he stood in the court of the house of God and said to all the people:
15 [s] Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: I will surely bring upon this city all the evil with which I threatened it, because they have stiffened their necks
and have not obeyed my words.

CHAPTER 20.

1 Jeremia was heard prophesying these things by the priest Phassur,[t] son of Emmer, chief officer in the house of the Lord.* 2 [u] So he had the prophet scourged and placed in the stocks at the upper Gate of Benjamin in the house of the Lord. 3 [v] The next morning, after Phassur had released Jeremia from the stocks,
the prophet said to him: Instead of Phas-sur, the Lord will name you "Terror on every side."* 4 For thus says the Lord:
Indeed, I will deliver you to terror, you and all your friends. Your own eyes shall see them fall by the sword of their enemies. All Juda I will deliver to the king of Babylon,* who shall take them captive to Babylon or slay them with the sword. 5 w All the wealth of this city, all it has toiled for, and holds dear, all the treasures of the kings of Juda, I will give as plunder into the hands of their foes, who shall seize it and carry it away to Babylon. 6 x You Phassur, and all the members of your household shall go into exile. To Babylon you shall go, you and all your friends; there you shall die and be buried, because you have prophesied lies to them.

Jeremia's Interior Crisis. 7 You duped me,* O Lord, and I let myself be duped; you were too strong for me, and you triumphed. All the day I am an object of laughter; everyone mocks me. 8 Whenever I speak, I must cry out, violence and outrage is my message; the word of the Lord has brought me derision and reproach all the day. 9 y I say to myself, I will not mention him, I will speak in his name no more. But then it becomes like fire burning in my heart, imprisoned in my bones; I grow weary holding it in, I cannot endure it. 10 z Yes, I hear the whisperings of many: "Terror on every side! Denounce! let us denounce him!" All those who were my friends are on the watch for any misstep of mine. "Perhaps he will be trapped; then we can prevail, and take our vengeance on him." 11 a But the Lord is with me, like a mighty champion: my persecutors will stumble, they will not triumph. In their failure they will be put to utter shame, to lasting, unforgettable confusion. 12 b O Lord of hosts, you who test the just, who probe mind and heart, let me witness the vengeance you take on them, for to you I have entrusted my cause. 13 c Sing to the Lord, praise the Lord, for he has rescued the life of the poor from the power of the wicked!

14 *Cursed be the day on which I was born! May the day my mother gave me birth never be blessed! d 15 Cursed be the man who brought the news to my father, saying, "A child, a son, has been born to you!" filling him with great joy. 16 e Let that man be like the cities which the Lord relentlessly overthrew; let him hear war cries in the morning, battle alarms at noonday, 17 f because he did not dispatch me in the womb! Then my mother would have been my grave, her womb confining me forever. 18 g Why did I come forth from the womb, to see sorrow and pain, to end my days in shame?

III: ORACLES IN THE LAST YEARS OF JERUSALEM

CHAPTER 21.

Fate of Sedecia and Jerusalem. 1 The message which came to Jeremia from the Lord when King Sedecia* sent him Phassur, son of Melchia, and the priest Sophonia, son of Maasia, with this request: 2 Inquire for us of the Lord, because Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, is attacking us. Perhaps the Lord will deal with us according to all his wonderful works, so that he will withdraw from us. 3 But Jeremia answered them: This is what you shall report to Sedecia: 4 h Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: I will turn back in your hands the weapons with which you intend to fight the king of Babylon and the Chaldeans who besiege you outside the walls. These weapons I will pile up in the midst of this city, 5 i and I myself will fight against you with outstretched hand and mighty arm, in anger, and wrath, and great rage! 6 j I will strike the inhabitants of this city, both man and beast; they shall die in a great pestilence. 7 k After that, says the Lord, I will hand over Sedecia, king of Juda, and his ministers and the people in this city who survive pestilence, sword, and famine, into the hand of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, into the hands of their enemies and those who seek their lives. He shall strike them with the edge of the sword, without quarter, without pity or mercy. 8 l And to this people you shall say: Thus says the Lord: See, I am giving you a choice between life and death. 9 Whoever remains in this city shall die by the sword or famine or pestilence. 10 But whoever leaves 20, 4: Babylon: mentioned here for the first time as the land of exile. The prophecy probably dates from after 605 B. C., when Nabuchodonosor defeated Egypt and made the Chaldean empire dominant in Syria and Palestine.

20, 7: You duped me: to be understood in the light of Jeremia's intimate dealings with God; cf Jer 15, 18.

20, 14-18: Deception, sorrow and terror have brought the prophet close to the point of despair; nevertheless he has expressed his utmost confidence in the triumph of God's will (vv 11ff); cf Jb 3, 3-12.

21, 1: Sedecia: brother of Joachim, appointed king by Nabuchodonosor after he had carried Joachin away to captivity (4 Kgs 24, 17). Phassur: different from the one in Jer 20, 1ff, but also one of Jeremia's enemies; cf Jer 38, 1. 4.

and surrenders to the besieging Chaldeans shall live and have his life as booty. For I have turned against this city, for its woe and not for its good, says the Lord. It shall be given into the power of the king of Babylon who shall burn it with fire.*

Oracles regarding the Kings. 11 *To the royal house of Juda: Hear the word of the Lord, 12 m O house of David! Thus says the Lord: Each morning dispense justice, rescue the oppressed from the hand of the oppressor, lest my fury break out like fire which burns without being quenched, because of the evil of your deeds. 13 Beware! I am against you, Valley-site, Rock of the Plain,* says the Lord. You who say, "Who will attack us, who can penetrate our retreats?" 14 n I will punish you, says the Lord, as your deeds deserve! I will kindle a fire in its forest* that shall devour all its surroundings.

CHAPTER 22.

1 The Lord told me this: Go down to the palace of the king of Juda and there deliver this message: 2 o You shall say: Listen to the word of the Lord, king of Juda, who sit on the throne of David, you, your ministers, and your people that enter by these gates! 3 p Thus says the Lord: Do what is right and just. Rescue the victim from the hand of his oppressor. Do not wrong or oppress the resident alien, the orphan, or the widow, and do not shed innocent blood in this place. 4 If you carry out these commands, kings who succeed to the throne of David will continue to enter the gates of this palace, riding in chariots or mounted on horses, with their ministers, and their people. 5 But if you do not obey these commands, I swear by myself, says the Lord: this palace shall become rubble. 6 For thus says the Lord concerning the palace of the king of Juda:

Though you be to me like Galaad, like the peak of Lebanon,* I will turn you into a waste, a city uninhabited. 7 q Against you I will send destroyers, each with his axe: they shall cut down your choice cedars, and cast them into the fire.

8 r Many people will pass by this city and ask one another: "Why has the Lord done this to so great a city?" 9 s And the answer will be given: "Because they have deserted their covenant with the Lord, their God, by worshiping and serving strange gods."

Joachaz. 10 t Weep not for him who is dead,* mourn not for him! Weep rather for him who is going away; never again will he see the land of his birth.

11 Thus says the Lord concerning Sellum,* son of Josia, king of Juda, who succeeded his father as king. He has left this place never to return. 12 Rather, he shall die in the place where they exiled him; this land he shall not see again.

Joakim. 13 u Woe to him who builds his house on wrong, his terraces on injustice; who works his neighbor without pay,* and gives him no wages. 14 Who says, "I will build myself a spacious house, with airy rooms," who cuts out windows for it, panels it with cedar, and paints it with vermillion. 15 *Must you prove your rank among kings by competing with them in cedar? v Did not your father eat and drink? He did what was right and just, and it went well with him. 16 w Because he dispensed justice to the weak and the poor, it went well with him. Is this not true knowledge of me? says the Lord. 17 x But your eyes and heart are set on nothing except on your own gain, on shedding innocent blood, on practicing oppression and extortion.

21, 10: Jeremia consistently pointed out the uselessness of resistance to Babylon, since the Lord had delivered Juda to Nabuchodonosor (Jer 27, 6.). Because of this the prophet was denounced and imprisoned as a traitor (Jer 37, 13f).

21, 11—23, 8: This section contains an editor's collection of Jeremia's oracles against the kings of Juda. They are placed in the chronological order of the kings, and are prefaced by the oracles against the kings of Juda in general (21, 11—22, 9).

21, 13: Valley-site, Rock of the Plain: Mount Sion, surrounded by valleys, was regarded by the royal house as impregnable. Despite this natural fortification, God shows derisively that it is no more than a rock rising from the plain, undefendable against the attack of His fury.

21, 14: Its forest: probably the royal palace, built of cedar wood; cf Jer 22, 14; in 3 Kgs 7, 2 the armory of Solomon's palace is called "the house of the forest of Lebanon."

22, 6: Galaad . . . Lebanon: both were known for their trees; cf v 7.

22, 10: Him who is dead: Josia. His successor, Joachaz, who is going away, was deported by Pharao Necho to Egypt, where he died (4 Kgs 23, 33f).

22, 11: Sellum: Joachaz is called this only here. Presumably it was his name at birth, while Joachaz was his royal name.

22, 13: Without pay: either by forced labor in public works, or in as much as workers were defrauded of their hire. Despite the impoverishment caused in Juda by the payment of foreign tribute, Joakim embarked on a program of lavish building in Jerusalem (v 14). Social injustice is the cause of much of the prophetic condemnation of the kings (v 17).

22, 15f: Josia, the reforming king, prospered materially without oppressing his people; he embodied all the ideals of kingship.

18 y Therefore, thus says the Lord concerning Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda: They shall not lament him, "Alas! my brother"; "Alas! sister."* They shall not lament him, "Alas, Lord! alas, Majesty!" 19 z The burial of an ass* shall he be given, dragged forth and cast out beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

Jechonia. 20 *Scale Lebanon and cry out,[a] in Bashan lift up your voice; cry out from Abarim, for all your lovers are crushed. 21 I spoke to you when you were secure, but you answered, "I will not listen." This has been your way from your youth, not to listen to my voice. 22 The wind shall shepherd all your shepherds, your lovers shall go into exile. Surely then you shall be ashamed and confounded because of all your wickedness. 23 You who dwell on Lebanon, who nest in the cedars, how you shall groan when pains come upon you, like the pangs of a woman in travail!

24 As I live, says the Lord, if you, Conia,* son of Joakim, king of Juda, are a signet ring on my right hand, I will snatch you from it. 25 b I will deliver you into the hands of those who seek your life; the hands of those whom you fear; the hands of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and the Chaldeans. 26 c I will cast you out, you and the mother who bore you,* into a different land from the one you were born in; and there you shall die. 27 d Neither of them shall come back to the land for which they yearn.

28 Is this man Conia a vessel despised, to be broken up, an instrument that no one wants? Why are he and his descendants cast out, why thrown into a land they know not? 29 O land, land, land, hear the word of the Lord—30 Thus says the Lord: e Write this man down as one childless,* who will never thrive in his lifetime! No descendant of his shall achieve a seat on the throne of David as ruler again over Juda.

CHAPTER 23.

Messianic Reign.* 1 Woe to the shepherds who mislead and scatter the flock of my pasture,[f] says the Lord. 2 g Therefore, thus says the Lord, the God of Israel, against the shepherds who shepherd my people: You have scattered my sheep and driven them away. You have not cared for them, but I will take care to punish your evil deeds. 3 h I myself will gather the remnant of my flock from all the lands to which I have driven them and bring them back to their meadow; there they shall increase and multiply. 4 i I will appoint shepherds for them who will shepherd them so that they need no longer fear and tremble; and none shall be missing, says the Lord.

5 j Behold, the days are coming, says the Lord, when I will raise up a righteous shoot to David; as king he shall reign and govern wisely, he shall do what is just and right in the land. 6 k In his days Juda shall be saved, Israel shall dwell in security. This is the name they give him: "The Lord our justice."

7 Therefore, the days will come, says the Lord, when they shall no longer say, "As the Lord lives, who brought the Israelites out of the land of Egypt"; l 8

22, 18: "Alas! my brother"; "Alas! sister": customary cries of mourning.

22, 19: The burial of an ass: no burial at all, except to be cast outside the city as refuse. This prophecy regards the popular feeling toward Joakim rather than the actual circumstances of his burial. According to 4 Kgs 24, 5 he was buried with his fathers in Jerusalem. However, his grave may have been profaned by Nabuchodonosor.

22, 20-23: The prophet first apostrophizes Jerusalem, which is bidden to scale Lebanon, Bashan, and Abarim, i.e., the highest surrounding mountains to the north, northeast, and southeast, to gaze on the ruin of its lovers, i.e., the false leaders of Juda, called its shepherds (22); cf Jer 2, 8. The year is 597 B. C., after Nabuchodonosor's deportation of Joachin. Jerusalem still stands (23), apparently as secure as the heights of Lebanon, but destruction is to follow (cf v 6).

22, 24: Conia: a shortened form of Jechonia, the name which Jeremia gives the king called elsewhere in the Bible Joachin. A signet ring: the seal used by important men—in a sense, their most valuable possession—mounted in a ring worn constantly on the hand. The Lord says that even were Joachin such a precious possession, He would reject him. The words in vv 24-30 date from the short three-month reign of Joachin, before he was carried away by Nabuchodonosor.

22, 26: You and the mother who bore you: the queen mother held a special position in the monarchy of Juda, and in the Books of Kings she is invariably mentioned by name along with the king (3 Kgs 15, 2; 4 Kgs 18, 2). Joachin did indeed die in Babylon.

22, 30: Childless: Joachin is so considered because none of his descendants will be king. From the Book of Ezechiel, who dates his oracles according to Joachin's fictitious regnal years, it is evident that the people expected Joachin to return. The above prophecy of Jeremia was uttered to dispel this hope (Jer 28, 4). Of the seven sons born to Joachin in exile, none became king. His grandson Zorobabel presided for a time over the Jewish community after the return from exile, but not as king.

23, 1-8: With the false rulers who have governed His people the Lord contrasts Himself, the Good Shepherd, who will in the times of restoration appoint worthy rulers (1-4). A Messianic king will arise from the line of David who will rule over Juda and Israel with the justice of the Lord, fulfilling all the kingly ideals (5f). "The Lord our justice" is probably an ironic wordplay on the name of the weak King Sedecia ("The Lord is justice"); the Messianic king will be in reality what Sedecia's name falsely proclaims him. The final verses, 7-8, were probably added during the exile.

but rather, "As the Lord lives, who brought the descendants of the house of Israel up from the land of the north"—and from all the lands to which I banished them; they shall again live on their own land.

The False Prophets.* 9 Concerning the prophets: My heart within me is broken, my bones all tremble; I am like a man who is drunk, overcome by wine, because of the Lord, because of his holy words. 10 m With adulterers the land is filled; on their account the land mourns, the pasture ranges are seared. Theirs is an evil course, theirs is unjust power. 11 n Both prophet and priest are godless! In my very house I find their wickedness, says the Lord. 12 o Hence their way shall become for them slippery ground. In the darkness they shall lose their footing, and fall headlong; evil I will bring upon them: the year of their punishment, says the Lord. 13 p Among Samaria's prophets I saw unseemly deeds: they prophesied by Baal and led my people Israel astray. 14 q But among Jerusalem's prophets I saw deeds still more shocking: adultery, living in lies, siding with the wicked, so that no one turns from evil: to me they are all like Sodom, its citizens like Gomorra.

15 r Therefore, thus says the Lord of hosts against the prophets: Behold, I will give them wormwood to eat, and poison to drink; for from Jerusalem's prophets ungodliness has gone forth into the whole land.

16 Thus says the Lord of hosts: s Listen not to the words of your prophets, who fill you with emptiness; visions of their own fancy they speak, not from the mouth of the Lord. 17 *They say to those who despise the word of the Lord, "Peace shall be yours"; and to everyone who walks in hardness of heart, "No evil shall overtake you." t 18 u Now, who has stood in the council of the Lord, to see him and to hear his word? Who has heeded his word, so as to announce it? 19 v See, the storm of the Lord! His wrath breaks forth in a whirling storm that bursts upon the heads of the wicked. 20 The anger of the Lord shall not abate until he has done and fulfilled what he has determined in his heart. When the time comes, you shall fully understand. 21 w I did not send these prophets, yet they ran; I did not speak to them, yet they prophesied. 22 Had they stood in my council, and did they but proclaim to my people my words, they would have brought them back from evil ways and from their wicked deeds. 23 x Am I a God near at hand only, says the Lord, and not a God far off?* 24 Can a man hide in secret without my seeing him? says the Lord. Do I not fill both heaven and earth? says the Lord.

25 I have heard the prophets who prophesy lies in my name say, "I had a dream! I had a dream!" 26 How long will this continue? Is my name in the hearts of the prophets who prophesy lies and their own deceitful fancies? 27 y By their dreams which they recount to each other, they think to make my people forget my name, just as their fathers forgot my name for Baal. 28 z Let the prophet who has a dream recount his dream; let him who has my word speak my word truthfully!

What has straw to do with the wheat?* says the Lord. 29 Is not my word like fire, says the Lord, like a hammer shattering rocks?

30 a Therefore I am against the prophets, says the Lord, who steal my words from each other. 31 Yes, I am against the prophets, says the Lord, who borrow speeches to pronounce oracles. 32 b Yes, I am against the prophets who prophesy lying dreams, says the Lord, and who lead my people astray by recounting their lies and by their empty boasting. From me they have no mission or command, and they do this people no good at all, says the Lord.

33 *And when this people, or a prophet

23, 9-40: After the collection of oracles against the kings, the editor of the book placed this collection of oracles against the false prophets. With them are associated the priests, for both have betrayed their trust as instructors in the religion of the Lord; cf Jer 2, 8; 4, 9; 6, 13f.

23, 17-20: Not only are the false prophets personally immoral, but they encourage immorality by prophesying good of those who do evil. The true prophet, on the other hand, sees the inevitable consequences of sin.

23, 23: Near at hand only . . . far off: God knows not merely the present but also the future.

23, 28f: Straw . . . wheat: such is the contrast between false and true prophecy. True prophecy is like fire (cf Jer 5, 14; 20, 9), producing violent results (v 29); Jeremia's own life is a testimony of this.

23, 33-40: A wordplay on massa, which means both oracle (usually of woe) and burden. In 34ff it appears that the word massa itself is forbidden the people in the meaning of a divine oracle. Doubtless this was because of some association unknown to us. In Os 2, 1 it is forbidden to call God "Baal" ("master"), because of the association of this title with the Chanaanite god.

or a priest asks you, "What is the burden of the Lord?" you shall answer, "You are the burden, and I cast you off, says the Lord." 34 If a prophet or a priest or anyone else mentions "the burden of the Lord," I will punish that man and his house. 35 Thus you shall ask, when speaking to one another, "What answer did the Lord give?" or, "What did the Lord say?" 36 But the burden of the Lord you shall mention no more. For each man his own word becomes the burden so that you pervert the words of the living God, the Lord of hosts, our God. 37 Thus shall you ask the prophet, "What answer did the Lord give?" or, "What did the Lord say?" 38 But if you ask about "the burden of the Lord," then thus says the Lord: Because you use this phrase, "the burden of the Lord," though I forbade you to use it, 39 therefore I will lift you on high and cast you from my presence, you and the city which I gave to you and your fathers. 40 c And I will bring upon you eternal reproach, eternal, unforgettable shame.

CHAPTER 24.

The Two Baskets of Figs.* 1 The Lord showed me two baskets of figs placed before the temple of the Lord.d—This was after Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, had exiled from Jerusalem Jechonia, son of Joakim, king of Juda, and the princes of Juda, the artisans and the skilled workers, and brought them to Babylon.—2 One basket contained excellent figs, the early-ripening kind. But the other basket contained very bad figs, so bad they could not be eaten. 3 e Then the Lord said to me: What do you see, Jeremia? "Figs," I replied; "the good ones are very good, but the bad ones very bad, so bad they cannot be eaten." 4 Thereupon this word of the Lord came to me: 5 Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: f Like these good figs, even so will I regard with favor Juda's exiles whom I sent away from this place into the land of the Chaldeans. 6 g I will look after them for their good, and bring them back to this land, to build them up, not to tear them down; to plant them, not to pluck them out. 7 h I will give them a heart with which to understand that I am the Lord. They shall be my people and I will be their God, for they shall return to me with their whole heart. 8 i And like the figs that are bad, so bad they cannot be eaten—yes, thus says the Lord—even so will I treat Sedecia, king of Juda, and his princes, the remnant of Jerusalem remaining in this land and those who have settled in the land of Egypt. 9 j I will make them an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth, a reproach and a byword, a taunt and a curse, in all the places to which I will drive them. 10 k I will send upon them the sword, famine, and pestilence, until they have disappeared from the land which I gave them and their fathers.

CHAPTER 25.

Seventy Years of Exile. 1 The word that came to Jeremia concerning all the people of Juda, in the fourth year of Joakim,* son of Josia, king of Juda (the first year of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon).l 2 This word the prophet Jeremia spoke to all the people of Juda and all the citizens of Jerusalem: 3 m Since the thirteenth year of Josia, son of Amon, king of Juda, to this day—these three and twenty years—the word of the Lord has come to me and I spoke to you untiringly, but you would not listen. 4 n Though you refused to listen or pay heed, the Lord has sent you without fail all his servants the prophets 5 with this message: Turn back, each of you, from your evil way and from your evil deeds; then you shall remain in the land which the Lord gave you and your fathers, from of old and forever. 6 o Do not follow strange gods to serve and adore them, lest you provoke me with your handiwork, and I bring evil upon you. 7 p But you would not listen to me, says the Lord, and so you provoked me with your handiwork to your own harm. 8 Hence, thus says the Lord of hosts: Since you would not listen to my words,

24, 1-10: Jeremia, like Ezechiel, saw that no good could be expected from the people who had been left in Juda under Sedecia or who had fled into Egypt; good was to be hoped for only from those who would pass through the purifying experience of the exile to form the new Israel.

25, 1-14: The fourth year of Joakim: 605 B. C. Officially, the first year of Nabuchodonosor began the following year; but as early as his victory over Egypt at Carchemish in 605, Nabuchodonosor was the dominant power in the Near East, in whom Jeremia now saw the fulfillment of his prophecy of the enemy to come from the north (cf Jer 1, 13; 6, 22ff). In vv 11f occurs for the first time the prophecy of the seventy years' exile; cf Jer 29, 10. This Jeremia intends as a round number, to signify that the present generation must die out.

9 q lo! I will send for and fetch all the tribes of the north, says the Lord (and I will send to Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, my servant); I will bring them against this land, against its inhabitants,
and against all these neighboring nations.
I will doom them, making them an object of horror, of ridicule, of everlasting reproach. 10 Among them I will bring to an end the song of joy and the song of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride, the sound of the millstone and the light of the lamp. 11
r This whole land shall be a ruin and a desert. Seventy years these nations shall be enslaved to the king of Babylon; 12
s but when the seventy years have elapsed,
I will punish the king of Babylon and the nation and the land of the Chaldeans for their guilt, says the Lord. Their land
I will turn into everlasting desert. 13 Against that land I will fulfill all the words I have spoken against it, all that is written in this book, which Jeremia prophesied against all the nations. 14
t They also shall be enslaved to great nations and mighty kings, and thus I will repay them according to their own deeds
and according to their own handiwork.

The Cup of Judgment on the Nations. 15
*For thus said the Lord, the God of Israel, to me: u Take this cup of foaming wine from my hand, and have all the nations to whom I will send you drink it.
16 v They shall drink, and be convulsed, and go mad, because of the sword I will send among them. 17 I took the cup from the hand of the Lord and gave drink to all the nations to which the Lord sent me: 18 [Jerusalem, the cities of Juda, her kings and her princes, to make them a ruin and a desert, an object of ridicule and cursing, as they are today;] 19 Pharao, king of Egypt, and his servants, his princes, all the people under him, native 20 and foreign; all the kings of the land of Us;* all the kings of the land of the Philistines: Ascalon, Gaza, Accaron, and the remnant of Azotus; 21 Edom, Moab, and the Ammonites; 22 all the kings of Tyre, of Sidon, and of the shores beyond the sea;* 23 Dedan and Thema and Buz,*
all the desert dwellers who shave their temples; 24 [all the kings of Arabia;]
25 all the kings of Zamri, of Elam, of the Medes; 26 all the kings of the north, near and far, one after the other; all the kingdoms upon the face of the earth [and after them all the king of Sesach* shall drink].

27 Tell them: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: w Drink! become drunk and vomit; fall, never to rise, before the sword that I will send among you! 28 x If they refuse to take the cup
from your hand and drink, say to them:
Thus says the Lord of hosts: You must drink! 29 For since with this city, which is called by my name, I begin to inflict evil, how can you possibly be spared?
You shall not be spared! I will call down
the sword upon all who inhabit the earth,
says the Lord of hosts.

30 y Prophesy against them all these things and say to them: The Lord roars from on high, from his holy dwelling he raises his voice; mightily he roars over the range, a shout like that of vintagers over the grapes. 31 To all who inhabit the earth to its very ends the uproar spreads;
for the Lord has an indictment against the nations, he is to pass judgment upon all mankind: The godless shall be given to the sword, says the Lord.

32 Thus says the Lord of hosts: Lo!
calamity stalks from nation to nation; a great storm is unleashed from the ends of the earth. 33 z On that day, those whom the Lord has slain will be strewn from one end of the earth to the other. None will mourn them, none will gather them for burial; they shall lie like dung on the field.

34 Howl, you shepherds, and wail! roll in the dust, leaders of the flock! The time for your slaughter has come; like choice rams you shall fall. 35 a There is no flight for the shepherds, no escape for the leaders of the flock. 36 Listen! Wailing from the shepherds, howling by the leaders of the flock! For the Lord lays waste their grazing place, 37 desolate lie the peaceful pastures; 38 b the lion leaves his lair, and their land is made desolate by the sweeping sword, by the burning wrath of the Lord.

CHAPTER 26.

Jeremia Threatened with Death. 1 In the beginning of the reign* of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda, this message came from the Lord: 2 Thus says the Lord: c Stand in the court of the house of the Lord and speak to the people of all the cities of Juda who come to worship in the house of the Lord; whatever I command you, tell them, and omit nothing. 3 d Perhaps they will listen and turn back, each from his evil way, so that I may repent of the evil I have planned to inflict upon them for their evil deeds. 4 Say to them: Thus says the Lord: If you disobey me, not living according to the law I placed before you 5 e and not listening to the words of my servants the prophets, whom I send you constantly though you do not obey them, 6 f I will treat this house like Silo, and make this the city which all the nations of the earth shall refer to when cursing another.

7 Now the priests, the prophets, and all the people heard Jeremia speak these words in the house of the Lord. 8 When Jeremia finished speaking all that the Lord bade him speak to all the people, the priests and prophets laid hold of him, crying, "You must be put to death! 9 Why do you prophesy in the name of the Lord: 'This house shall be like Silo,' and 'This city shall be desolate and deserted'?" And all the people gathered about Jeremia in the house of the Lord.

10 When the princes of Juda were informed of these things, they came up from the king's palace to the house of the Lord and held court at the New Gate of the house of the Lord. 11 g The priests and prophets said to the princes and to all the people, "This man deserves death; he has prophesied against this city, as you have heard with your own ears." 12 Jeremia gave this answer to the princes and all the people: "It was the Lord who sent me to prophesy against this house and city and all that you have heard. 13 h Now, therefore, reform your ways and your deeds; listen to the voice of the Lord your God, so that the Lord will repent of the evil with which he threatens you. 14 As for me, I am in your hands; do with me what you think good and right. 15 But mark well: if you put me to death, it is innocent blood you bring on yourselves, on this city and its citizens. For in truth it was the Lord who sent me to you, to speak all these things for you to hear.

16 Thereupon the princes and all the people said to the priests and the prophets, "This man does not deserve death: it is in the name of the Lord, our God, that he speaks to us." 17 At this, some of the elders of the land came forward and said to all the people assembled, 18 i "Michea of Moreseth* used to prophesy in the days of Ezechia, king of Juda, and he told all the people of Juda: Thus says the Lord of hosts: Sion shall become a plowed field, Jerusalem a heap of ruins, and the temple mount a forest ridge. 19 j Did Ezechia, king of Juda, and all Juda condemn him to death? Did they not rather fear the Lord and entreat the favor of the Lord, so that he repented of the evil with which he had threatened them? But we are on the point of committing this great evil to our own undoing."

The Fate of Uria. 20 There was another man who prophesied in the name of the Lord, Uria, son of Semeia, from Cariathjarim; he prophesied the same things against this city and land as Jeremia did. 21 When King Joakim and all his officers and princes were informed of his words, the king sought to kill him. But Uria heard of it and fled in fear to Egypt. 22 Thereupon King Joakim sent Elnathan, son of Achobor, and others with him into Egypt 23 to bring Uria back to the king, who had him slain by the sword and his corpse cast into the common grave. 24 But Ahicam, son of Saphan,* protected Jeremia, so that he was not handed over to the people to be put to death.

26, 24: Ahicam, son of Saphan: one of Josia's officials (4 Kgs 22, 12) and father of Godolia, also Jeremia's friend, who was governor of Juda after Sedecia's deportation (cf Jer 39, 14; 40, 5ff).

27, 1–29, 32: A special collection of Jeremia's prophecies

Josia, king of Juda,]*... this message came to Jeremia from the Lord: 2 Thus said the Lord to me: Make for yourself bands and yoke bars and put them over your shoulders. 3 Send to the kings of Edom, of Moab, of the Ammonites, of Tyre, and of Sidon, through the ambassadors who have come to Jerusalem to Sedecia, king of Juda, 4 and charge them thus: Tell your masters: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: 5 k It was I who made the earth, and man and beast on the face of the earth, by my great power, with my outstretched arm; and I can give them to whomever I think fit. 6 l Now I have given all these lands into the hand of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, my servant; even the beasts of the field I have given him for his use. 7 m All nations shall serve him and his son and his grandson, until the time of his land, too, shall come. Then it in turn shall serve great nations and mighty kings. 8 n Meanwhile, if any nation or kingdom will not serve Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, or will not bend its neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, I will punish that nation with sword, famine, and pestilence, says the Lord, until I give them into his hand.

9 o You, however, must not listen to your prophets,* to your diviners and dreamers, or to your soothsayers and sorcerers, who say to you, "You need not serve the king of Babylon." 10 p For they prophesy lies to you, in order to drive you far from your land, to make me banish you so that you will perish. 11 q The people that submits its neck to the yoke of the king of Babylon to serve him I will leave in peace on its own land, says the Lord, to till it and dwell in it.

12 r To Sedecia, king of Juda, I spoke the same words: Submit your necks to the yoke of the king of Babylon; serve him and his people, so that you may live. 13 s Why should you and your people die by sword, famine, and pestilence, with which the Lord has threatened the nation that will not serve the king of Babylon? 14 t Do not listen to the words of those prophets who say, "You need not serve the king of Babylon," for they prophesy lies to you. 15 u I did not send them, says the Lord, but they prophesy falsely in my name, with the result that I must banish you, and you will perish, you and the prophets who are prophesying to you.

16 v To the priests and to all the people I spoke as follows: Thus says the Lord: Do not listen to the words of your prophets who prophesy to you: "The vessels of the house of the Lord will be brought back from Babylon soon now," for they prophesy lies to you. 17 Do not listen to them! Serve the king of Babylon that you may live; else this city will become a heap of ruins. 18 If they were prophets, if the word of the Lord were with them, they would intercede with the Lord of hosts, that the vessels which remain in the house of the Lord and in the palace of the king of Juda and in Jerusalem might not be taken to Babylon. 19 *For thus says the Lord of hosts concerning the pillars, the bronze sea, the stands, and the rest of the vessels that remain in this city, 20 which Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, did not take when he exiled Jechonia, son of Joakim, king of Juda, from Jerusalem to Babylon, along with all the nobles of Juda and Jerusalem— 21 w yes, thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, concerning the vessels that remain in the house of the Lord, in the palace of the king of Juda, and in Jerusalem: 22 To Babylon they shall be brought, and there they shall remain, until the day I look for them, says the Lord; then I will bring them back and restore them to this place.

CHAPTER 28.

The Two Yokes. 1 That same year, in [the beginning of] the reign of Sedecia, king of Juda, in the fifth month of the fourth year, the prophet Anania, son of Azzur, from Gabaon, said to me in the house of the Lord in the presence of the priests and all the people: 2 "Thus says

k Jer 32, 17.—l Jer 25, 9; 43, 10; Ez 30, 21. 25.—m Jer 25, 11; 2 Par 36, 20.—n Jer 25, 9; Bar 2, 22.—o Jer 29, 8.—p Jer 14, 13-16.—q Bar 2, 21.—r Jer 38, 17.—s Jer 24, 8ff.—t Jer 14, 14; 23, 21.—u Jer 20, 6.—v Jer 28, 3; 2 Par 36, 7. 10. 18.—w 21f: 4 Kgs 25, 13-17; 2 Par 36, 18. 22.

dealing with false prophets. From stylistic peculiarities, quite evident in the Hebrew, it is plain that these three chapters once existed independently of the other prophecies of Jeremia.

27, 1: [In the beginning of the reign of Joakim . . . Juda: this gloss cannot be correct because according to Jer 28, 1 the time is the fourth year of Sedecia, 594 B. C., the occasion of an embassy of the neighboring states (v 3), doubtless for the purpose of laying plans against Nabuchodonosor.

27, 9: Your prophets: seers and diviners served the Gentile kings as the professional prophets served the kings of Juda.

27, 19-22: This prophecy was fulfilled after Sedecia's disastrous defeat; cf 4 Kgs 25, 13ff.

the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: [3] 'I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon. Within two years I will restore to this place all the vessels of the temple of the Lord which Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, took away from this place to Babylon. [4] And I will bring back to this place Jechonia, son of Joakim, king of Juda, and all the exiles of Juda who went to Babylon,' says the Lord, 'for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.'"

[5] The prophet Jeremia answered the prophet Anania in the presence of the priests and all the people assembled in the house of the Lord, [6] and said: Amen! thus may the Lord do! May he fulfill the things you have prophesied by bringing the vessels of the house of the Lord and all the exiles back from Babylon to this place! [7] But now, listen to what I am about to state in your hearing and the hearing of all the people. [8] From of old, the prophets who were before you and me prophesied war, woe, and pestilence against many lands and mighty kingdoms. [9] x But the prophet who prophesies peace is recognized as truly sent by the Lord only when his prophetic prediction is fulfilled.

[10] Thereupon the prophet Anania took the yoke from the neck of the prophet Jeremia, broke it, [11] and said in the presence of all the people: "Thus says the Lord: 'Even so, within two years I will break the yoke of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, from off the neck of all the nations.'" At that, the prophet Jeremia went away.

[12] Some time after the prophet Anania had broken the yoke from off the neck of the prophet Jeremia, the word of the Lord came to Jeremia: [13] Go tell Anania this: Thus says the Lord: By breaking a wooden yoke, you forge an iron yoke! [14] y For thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: A yoke of iron I will place on the necks of all these nations serving Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and they shall serve him; even the beasts of the field I give him.

[15] To the prophet Anania the prophet Jeremia said: Hear this, Anania! The Lord has not sent you, and you have raised false confidence in this people. [16] z For this, says the Lord, I will dispatch you from the face of the earth; this very year you shall die, because you have preached rebellion against the Lord. [17] That same year, in the seventh month, Anania the prophet died.

CHAPTER 29.

Letter to the Exiles in Babylon. [1] This is the contents of the letter which the prophet Jeremia sent from Jerusalem to the remaining elders among the exiles, to the priests, the prophets, and all the people who were exiled by Nabuchodonosor from Jerusalem to Babylon. [2] a This was after King Jechonia and the queen mother, the courtiers, the princes of Juda and Jerusalem, the artisans and the skilled workmen had left Jerusalem. [3] Delivered in Babylon by Elasa,* son of Saphan, and by Gamaria, son of Helcia, whom Sedecia, king of Juda, sent to the king of Babylon, the letter read:

[4] Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, to all the exiles whom I exiled from Jerusalem to Babylon: [5] Build houses to dwell in; plant gardens, and eat their fruits. [6] Take wives and beget sons and daughters; find wives for your sons and give your daughters husbands, so that they may bear sons and daughters. There you must increase in number, not decrease. [7] b Promote the welfare of the city to which I have exiled you; pray for it to the Lord, for upon its welfare depends your own.

[10] c Thus says the Lord: Only after seventy years have elapsed for Babylon will I visit you and fulfill for you my promise to bring you back to this place. [11] For I know well the plans I have in mind for you, says the Lord, plans for your welfare, not for woe! plans to give you a future full of hope. [12] d When you call me, when you go to pray to me, I will listen to you. [13] When you look for me, you will find me. Yes, when you seek me with all your heart, [14] e you will find me with you, says the Lord, and I will change your lot; I will gather you together from all the nations and all the places to which I have banished you, says the Lord, and bring you back to the place from which I have exiled you.

29, 3: Elasa: possibly the brother of Ahicam (cf Jer 26, 24). Gamaria: perhaps the son of the high priest Helcia; cf 4 Kgs 22, 4. Sedecia had dispatched these men to Nabuchodonosor for some other purpose, possibly the payment of tribute, but Jeremia took advantage of their mission to send his letter by them.

16 Thus says the Lord concerning the king who sits on David's throne, and all the people who remain in this city, your brethren who did not go with you into exile; 17 thus says the Lord of hosts: I am sending against them sword, famine and pestilence. 18 f I will make them like rotten figs, too bad to be eaten. I will pursue them with sword, famine, and pestilence, and make them an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth, of malediction, astonishment, ridicule, and reproach to all the nations among which I will banish them. 19 g For they did not listen to my words, says the Lord, though I kept sending them my servants the prophets, only to have them go unheeded, says the Lord.

20 You, now, listen to the word of the Lord, all you exiles whom I sent away from Jerusalem to Babylon. 15 As for your saying, "The Lord has raised up for us prophets here in Babylon"—8 h thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Do not let yourselves be deceived by the prophets and diviners who are among you; do not listen to those among you who dream dreams. 9 i For they prophesy lies to you in my name; I did not send them, says the Lord. 21 j This is what the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, has to say about those who prophesy lies to you in my name, Achab, son of Colia, and Sedecia, son of Maasia: I am handing them over to Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, who will slay them before your eyes. 22 All the exiles of Juda in Babylon will pattern a curse after them: "May the Lord make you like Sedecia and Achab, whom the king of Babylon roasted in the flames." 23 k For they are criminals in Israel, committing adultery with their neighbors' wives, and alleging in my name things I did not command. I know, I am witness, says the Lord.

The False Prophet Semeia. 24 Say this to Semeia, the Nehelamite: 25 Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Because you sent letters on your own authority to all the people of Jerusalem, to all the priests and to Sophonia, the priest, son of Maasia, with this message: 26 *"The Lord has appointed you priest in place of the priest Joiada, so that there may be police officers in the house of the Lord, to take action against all madmen and those who pose as prophets, by putting them into the stocks or the pillory. 27 Why, then, do you not rebuke Jeremia of Anathoth who poses as a prophet among you? 28 For he sent us in Babylon this message: It will be a long time; build houses to live in; plant gardens and eat their fruits. . . ."

29 When the priest Sophonia read this letter to the prophet, 30 the word of the Lord came to Jeremia: 31 Send the message to all the exiles: Thus says the Lord concerning Semeia, the Nehelamite: Because Semeia prophesies to you without a mission from me, and raises false confidence, 32 says the Lord, I will therefore punish Semeia, the Nehelamite, and his offspring. None of them shall survive among this people to see the good I will do to this people, says the Lord, because he preached rebellion against the Lord.

CHAPTER 30.

The Restoration. 1 The following* message came to Jeremia from the Lord: 2 l Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Write all the words I have spoken to you in a book. 3 m For behold, the days will come, says the Lord, when I will change the lot of my people (of Israel and Juda, says the Lord), and bring them back to the land which I gave to their fathers; they shall have it as their possession.

4 These are the words which the Lord spoke to Israel and to Juda: 5 thus says the Lord: A cry of dismay we hear; fear reigns, not peace. 6 n Inquire, and see: since when do men bear children? Why, then, do I see all these men, with their hands on their loins like women in childbirth? Why have all their faces turned deathly pale? 7 o How mighty is that day

29, 26-29: The words of Jeremia to the false prophet Semeia are not fully preserved in the current Hebrew text, as is seen in the incomplete sentence of this translation (vv 25-28). In his letter to Sophonia Semeia reminds him of his authority, as Phassur's successor, to imprison Jeremia. Sophonia, however, merely reads the letter to Jeremia but does not imprison him.

30, 1—31, 40: These two chapters do not belong chronologically to those that precede or follow. They contain mainly oracles of salvation which Jeremia originally uttered on behalf of the conquered remnants of the Northern Kingdom; then, after Juda began to share Samaria's fate, the oracles were extended to include Juda. Their composition is to be placed early in Jeremia's ministry, probably after the fall of Ninive (612 B. C.), when Josia assumed power over the North; cf 4 Kgs 23, 15ff.

—none like it! A time of distress for Jacob, though he shall be saved from it.
8 p On that day, says the Lord of hosts,
"I will break his yoke from off your necks and snap your bonds." Strangers shall no longer enslave them; 9 q instead, they shall serve the Lord, their God, and David, their king,* whom I will raise up for them.
10 r But you, my servant Jacob, fear not, says the Lord, be not dismayed, O Israel! Behold, I will deliver you from the far-off land, your descendants, from their land of exile; Jacob shall again find rest, shall be tranquil and undisturbed,
11 s for I am with you, says the Lord, to deliver you. I will make an end of all the nations among which I have scattered you; but of you I will not make an end. I will chastise you as you deserve, I will not let you go unpunished.
12 For thus says the Lord: t Incurable is your wound, grievous your bruise; 13 there is none to plead your cause, no remedy for your running sore, no healing for you. 14 u All your lovers have forgotten you, they do not seek you. I struck you as an enemy would strike, punished you cruelly; 15 v why cry out over your wound? your pain is without relief. Because of your great guilt, your numerous sins, I have done this to you.
16 w Yet all who devour you shall be devoured, all your enemies shall go into exile. All who plunder you shall be plundered, all who pillage you I will hand over to pillage. 17 x For I will restore you to health; of your wounds I will heal you, says the Lord. "The outcast" they have called you, "with no avenger."
18 Thus says the Lord: y See! I will restore the tents of Jacob, his dwellings I will pity; city shall be rebuilt upon hill, and palace restored as it was. 19 z From them will resound songs of praise, the laughter of happy men. I will make them not few, but many; they will not be tiny, for I will glorify them. 20 a His sons shall be as of old, his assembly before me shall stand firm; I will punish all his oppressors. 21 His leader* shall be one of his own, and his rulers shall come from his kin. When I summon him, he shall approach me; how else should one take the deadly risk of approaching me? says the Lord. 22 b You shall be my people, and I will be your God.
23 c See, the storm of the Lord! His wrath breaks forth in a whirling storm that bursts upon the heads of the wicked.
24 d The anger of the Lord will not abate until he has done and fulfilled what he has determined in his heart. When the time comes, you will fully understand.

CHAPTER 31.

Good News of the Return. 1 At that time, says the Lord, I will be the God of all the tribes of Israel, and they shall be my people.e 2 Thus says the Lord: The people that escaped the sword* have found favor in the desert. As Israel comes forward to be given his rest, 3 f the Lord appears to him from afar: With age-old love I have loved you; so I have kept my mercy toward you. 4 Again I will restore you, and you shall be rebuilt, O virgin Israel; carrying your festive tambourines, you shall go forth dancing with the merrymakers. 5 g Again you shall plant vineyards on the mountains of Samaria; those who plant them shall enjoy the fruits. 6 h Yes, a day will come when the watchmen will call out on Mount Ephraim: "Rise up, let us go to Sion, to the Lord, our God."
The Road of Return. 7 For thus says the Lord: i Shout with joy for Jacob, exult at the head of the nations; proclaim your praise and say: The Lord has delivered his people, the remnant of Israel. 8 j Behold, I will bring them back from the land of the north; I will gather them from the ends of the world, with the blind and the lame in their midst, the mothers and those with child; they shall return as an immense throng. 9 k They departed in 30, 9: David, their king: the Messianic king of the Davidic line, often called David by the prophets; cf Ez 34, 23f; 37, 24f; Os 3, 5.

30, 21: His leader: probably not the Messianic king, but simply any one of the rulers of the restored Israel, who will no longer be foreigners, and with whom the Lord will be on terms of intimacy, as with the whole people. The deadly risk of approaching me: to approach God unsummoned brings death; cf Lv 16, 1f.
31, 2: The people that escaped the sword: the exiles who were not killed but deported; they have found favor in the desert, across which they were driven into captivity. The prophet alludes to the first desert wandering of Israel (Ex 16ff), in which the people found the Lord. His rest: the land of promise. The perfect fulfillment of this promised rest is found only in the New Testament (Heb., chapters 3 and 4).

tears, but I will console them and guide them; I will lead them to brooks of water, on a level road, so that none shall stumble. For I am a father to Israel, Ephraim is my first-born. [10] Hear the word of the Lord, O nations, proclaim it on distant coasts, and say: He who scattered Israel, now gathers them together, he guards them as a shepherd his flock. [11] l The Lord shall ransom Jacob, he shall redeem him from the hand of his conqueror. [12] m Shouting, they shall mount the heights of Sion, they shall come streaming to the Lord's blessings: the grain, the wine, and the oil, the sheep and the oxen; they themselves shall be like watered gardens, never again shall they languish. [13] Then the virgins shall make merry and dance, and young men and old as well. I will turn their mourning into joy, I will console and gladden them after their sorrows. [14] I will lavish choice portions upon the priests, and my people shall be filled with my blessings, says the Lord.

End of Rachel's Mourning. [15] Thus says the Lord: n In Rama* is heard the sound of moaning, of bitter weeping! Rachel mourns her children, she refuses to be consoled because her children are no more. [16] Thus says the Lord: Cease your cries of mourning, wipe the tears from your eyes. The sorrow you have shown shall have its reward, says the Lord, they shall return from the enemy's land. [17] o There is hope for your future, says the Lord; your sons shall return to their own borders.

[18] p I hear, I hear Ephraim pleading: You chastised me, and I am chastened; I was an untamed calf. If you allow me, I will return, for you are the Lord, my God. [19] q I turn in repentance; I have come to myself, I strike my breast; I blush with shame. I bear the disgrace of my youth. [20] r Is Ephraim not my favored son, the child in whom I delight? Often as I threaten him, I still remember him with favor; my heart stirs for him, I must show him mercy, says the Lord.

Summons To Return Home. [21] Set up road markers, put up guideposts; turn your attention to the highway, the road by which you went. Turn back, O virgin Israel, turn back to these your cities. [22] How long will you continue to stray, rebellious daughter?

The Lord has created a new thing upon the earth: the woman must encompass the man* with devotion.

[23] s Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: When I change their lot in the land of Juda and her cities, they shall again repeat this greeting: "May the Lord bless you, holy mountain, abode of justice!" [24] Juda and all her cities, the farmers and those who lead the flock, shall dwell there together. [25] For I will refresh the weary soul; every soul that languishes I will replenish. [26] Upon this I awoke and opened my eyes; but my sleep was sweet to me.* [27] The days are coming, says the Lord, when I will seed the house of Israel and the house of Juda with the seed of man and the seed of beast. [28] t As I once watched over them to uproot and pull down, to destroy, to ruin, and to harm, so I will watch over them to build and to plant, says the Lord. [29] u In those days they shall no longer say, "The fathers ate unripe grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge,"* [30] but through his own fault only shall anyone die: the teeth of him who eats the unripe grapes shall be set on edge.

The New Covenant. [31] The days are coming, says the Lord, when I will make 31, 15: Rama: a village about five miles north of Jerusalem, where Rachel was buried (1 Kgs 10, 2). Rachel: said to mourn for her children since she was the ancestress of Ephraim, the chief of the northern tribes. Mt 2, 18 applies this verse to the slaughter of the innocents by Herod.

31, 22: The woman must encompass the man: the words "with devotion," not in the Hebrew, are added for the sense. No fully satisfactory explanation has been given this text. Among the more probable are these: (a) Formerly the man (the Lord) encompassed the woman (Israel) with mercy and devotion; now in the spiritual religion of Israel which will follow on the restoration, this order will be reversed. (b) So secure will Israel be after the restoration that women will no longer need the natural protection of their husbands, but even weak women can protect men. (c) St. Jerome in his commentary on this verse understood it of Mary's virginal conception of Christ. "The Lord has created a new thing on earth; without seed of man, without carnal union and conception, 'a woman will encompass a man' within her womb—One who, though He will later appear to advance in wisdom and age through the stages of infancy and childhood, yet, while confined for the usual number of months in His mother's womb, will already be perfect man."

31, 26: I awoke . . . sweet to me: probably said by the prophet himself.

31, 29: "The fathers . . . on edge": a proverb used in Israel, expressing the idea that children suffer for the sins of their parents (cf Ez 18, 2). The Israel of the restoration will be characterized instead by personal responsibility and retribution for one's acts (v 30; cf vv 31-34).

a new covenant* with the house of Israel and the house of Juda.[v] 32 [w] It will not be like the covenant I made with their fathers the day I took them by the hand to lead them forth from the land of Egypt; for they broke my covenant, and I had to show myself their master, says the Lord. 33 [x] But this is the covenant which I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the Lord. I will place my law within them, and write it upon their hearts; I will be their God, and they shall be my people. 34 [y] No longer will they have need to teach their friends and kinsmen how to know the Lord. All, from least to greatest, shall know me, says the Lord, for I will forgive their evildoing and remember their sin no more.

Certainty of God's Promise. Thus says the Lord, 35 [z] He who gives the sun to light the day, moon and stars to light the night; who stirs up the sea till its waves roar, whose name is Lord of hosts: 36 [a] If ever these natural laws give way in spite of me, says the Lord, then shall the race of Israel cease as a nation before me forever. 37 Thus says the Lord: If the heavens on high can be measured, or the foundations below the earth be sounded, then will I cast off the whole race of Israel because of all they have done, says the Lord.

Rebuilding of Jerusalem. 38 [b] The days are coming, says the Lord, when the city shall be rebuilt as the Lord's, from the Tower of Hananeel to the Corner Gate.* 39 The measuring line shall be stretched from there straight to the hill Garbe and then turn to Goa. 40 The whole valley of corpses and ashes,* all the slopes toward the Cedron Valley, as far as the corner of the Horse Gate at the east, shall be holy to the Lord. Never again shall the city be rooted up or thrown down.

CHAPTER 32.

Pledge of Restoration.* 1 This message came to Jeremia from the Lord in the tenth year of Sedecia,* king of Juda, the eighteenth year of Nabuchodonosor. 2 [c] At that time the army of the king of Babylon was besieging Jerusalem, and the prophet Jeremia was imprisoned in the quarters of the guard, at the king's palace. 3 [d] Sedecia, king of Juda, had imprisoned him there, remonstrating: "How dare you prophesy: Thus says the Lord: I am handing over this city to the king of Babylon, who will capture it. 4 [e] Neither shall Sedecia, king of Juda, escape the hands of the Chaldeans; rather shall he be handed over to the king of Babylon. They shall meet and speak face to face, 5 [f] and Sedecia shall be taken to Babylon. There he shall remain, until I attend to him, says the Lord; in fighting the Chaldeans, you cannot win!"

6 This message came to me from the Lord, said Jeremia: 7 [g] Hanameel, son of your uncle Sellum, will come to you with the offer: "Buy for yourself my field in Anathoth, since you, as nearest relative, have the first right of purchase." 8 Then, as the Lord foretold, Hanameel, my uncle's son, came to me to the quarters of the guard and said, "Please buy my field in Anathoth, in the district of Benjamin; as nearest relative, you have the first claim to possess it; make it yours." I knew this was what the Lord meant, 9 so I bought the field in Anathoth from my cousin Hanameel, paying him the money, seventeen silver shekels.

10 When I had written and sealed the deed, called witnesses and weighed out the silver on the scales, 11 I accepted the 31, 31-34: The new covenant to be made with Israel is a common theme of the prophets, beginning with Osee. According to Jeremia, the qualities of the new covenant that make it different from the old are: (a) It will not be broken, but will last forever; (b) Its law will be written in the heart, not merely on tablets of stone; (c) The knowledge of God will be so generally shown forth in the life of the people that it will no longer be necessary to put it into words of instruction. In the fullest sense, this prophecy was fulfilled only through the work of Jesus Christ; cf Lk 22, 20; 1 Cor 11, 25.

31, 38: From the Tower of Hananeel to the Corner Gate: from the northeast to the northwest.

31, 40: Valley of corpses and ashes: the Valley of Ben-Hinnom, which joins the Cedron at the southeast of ancient Jerusalem. The Horse Gate: in the eastern city wall, at the southeast corner of the temple area.

32, 1-44: This chapter recounts a prophecy "in action." At the Lord's command, Jeremia fulfills his family duty to purchase the land of his cousin, carrying out all the legal forms, including records, to testify that Juda will be restored and that the life of the past will be resumed.

32, 1: The tenth year of Sedecia: 588 B. C. The eighteenth year of Nabuchodonosor, dating his reign from his victory at Carchemish; see note on Jer 25, 1-14.

32, 6-9: Jeremia's imprisonment by the weak-willed Sedecia was a technical custody that did not deprive him of all freedom of action. The siege maintained by the Chaldeans (v 2) was only now beginning (v 24), and could be by-passed by individual persons going to and fro between Jerusalem and nearby Anathoth.

32, 7: The first right of purchase: the obligation of the closest relative to redeem the property of one in economic distress, so that the ancestral land might remain within the family (Lv 25, 25-28); see note on Ru 2, 20.

deed of purchase, both the sealed copy,* containing title and conditions, and the open one. 12 h This deed of purchase I gave to Baruch, son of Neria, son of Maasia, in the presence of my cousin Hanameel and of the witnesses who had signed the deed, and before all the men of Juda who happened to be in the quarters of the guard.

13 In their presence I gave Baruch this charge: 14 Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Take these deeds, both the sealed and the open deed of purchase, and put them in an earthen jar,* so that they can be kept there a long time. 15 For thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Houses and fields and vineyards shall again be bought in this land.

16 After giving the deed of purchase to Baruch, son of Neria, I prayed thus to the Lord: 17 i Ah, Lord God, you have made heaven and earth by your great might, with your outstretched arm; nothing is impossible to you. 18 j You continue your kindness through a thousand generations; and you repay the fathers' guilt, even into the lap of their sons who follow them. O God, great and mighty, whose name is Lord of hosts, 19 k great in counsel, mighty in deed, whose eyes are open to all the ways of men, giving to each according to his ways, according to the fruit of his deed: 20 l you have wrought signs and wonders in the land of Egypt and to this day, both in Israel and among all other men, until now you have gained renown. 21 With strong hand and outstretched arm you brought your people Israel out of the land of Egypt amid signs and wonders and great terror. 22 m This land you gave them, as you had promised their fathers under oath, a land flowing with milk and honey. 23 n They entered and took possession of it, but they did not listen to your voice; by your law they did not live, and what you commanded they failed to do. Hence you let all these evils befall them. 24 o See, the siegeworks have arrived at this city to breach it; the city will be handed over to the Chaldeans who are attacking it, amid sword, famine, and pestilence. What you threatened has happened, you see it yourself; 25 and yet you tell me, O Lord God: Buy the field with money, call in witnesses. But the city has already been handed over to the Chaldeans!

26 Then this word of the Lord came to Jeremia: 27 I am the Lord, the God of all mankind! Is anything impossible to me? 28 This now is what the Lord says: I will hand over this city to the Chaldeans, for Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, to take. 29 p The Chaldeans who are attacking it shall enter this city and set fire to it, burning it and its houses, on the roofs of which incense was burned to Baal and libations were poured out to strange gods as a provocation to me. 30 q The Israelites and the Judeans from their youth have done only what is evil in my eyes; the Israelites did nothing but provoke me with the works of their hands, says the Lord. 31 From the day it was built to this day, this city has excited my anger and wrath, 32 r so that I must put it out of my sight for all the wickedness the Israelites and Judeans, with their kings and their princes, their priests and their prophets, the men of Juda and the citizens of Jerusalem, have done to provoke me. 33 s They turned their backs to me, not their faces; though I kept teaching them, they would not listen to my correction. 34 t They defiled the house named after me by the horrid idols they set up in it. 35 u They built high places to Baal in the Valley of Ben-Hinnom, and immolated their sons and daughters to Moloch,* bringing sin upon Juda; this I never commanded them, nor did it even enter my mind that they should practice such abominations.

36 Now, therefore, thus says the Lord, the God of Israel, concerning this city, which as you say is handed over to the king of Babylon amid sword, famine, and pestilence: 37 v Behold, I will gather them together from all the lands to which in anger, wrath, and great rage I banish them; I will bring them back to this place and settle them here in safety. They shall be my people, and I will be their God. 38 w One heart and one way I will

them an eternal covenant, never to cease doing good to them; into their hearts I will put the fear of me, that they may never depart from me 41 y I will take delight in doing good to them: I will replant them firmly in this land, with all my heart and soul.

42 For thus says the Lord: z Just as I brought upon this people all this great evil, so I will bring upon them all the good I promise them. 43 a Fields shall again be bought in this land, which you call a desert, without man or beast, handed over to the Chaldeans. 44 b Fields
shall be bought with money, deeds written and sealed, and witnesses shall be used in the land of Benjamin, in the suburbs of Jerusalem, in the cities of Juda and of the hill country, in the cities of the foothills and of the Negeb, when I change their lot, says the Lord.

CHAPTER 33.

Restoration of Jerusalem. 1 The word of the Lord came to Jeremia a second time while he was still imprisoned in the quarters of the guard: Thus says the Lord who made the earth and gave it form and firmness, whose name is Lord: 3 c Call to me, and I will answer you; I will tell to you things great beyond reach of your knowledge. 4 d Thus says the Lord,
the God of Israel, concerning the houses of this city and the palaces of Juda's kings, which are being destroyed in the face of siegeworks and the sword: 5 e men come to battle the Chaldeans, and these houses will be filled with the corpses of those whom I slay in my anger and wrath, when I hide my face from this city for all their wickedness.

6 f Behold, I will treat and assuage the city's wounds; I will heal them, and reveal to them an abundance of lasting peace. 7 g I will change the lot of Juda and the lot of Israel, and rebuild them as of old. 8 h I will cleanse them of all the guilt they incurred by sinning against me;
all their offenses by which they sinned
and rebelled against me, I will forgive. 9 Then Jerusalem shall be my joy, my praise, my glory, before all the nations of the earth, as they hear of all the good I will do among them. They shall be in fear and trembling over all the peaceful benefits I will give her.

10 i Thus says the Lord: In this place of which you say, "How desolate it is, without man, without beast!" and in the cities of Juda, in the streets of Jerusalem that are now deserted, without man, without citizen, without beast, there shall yet be heard 11 j the cry of joy, the cry of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, the voice of the bride, the sound of those who bring thank offerings to the house of the Lord, singing, "Give thanks to the Lord of hosts, for the Lord is good; his mercy endures forever." For I will restore this country as of old, says the Lord.

12 Thus says the Lord of hosts: In this place, now desolate, without man or beast, and in all its cities there shall again be sheepfolds for the shepherds to couch their flocks. 13 In the cities of the hill country, of the foothills, and of the Ne-geb, in the land of Benjamin and the suburbs of Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda, flocks will again pass under the hands of the one who counts them, says
the Lord.

14 *The days are coming, says the Lord, when I will fulfill the promise I made to the house of Israel and Juda. 15
k In those days, in that time, I will raise up for David a just shoot; he shall do what is right and just in the land. 16 In those days Juda shall be safe and Jerusalem shall dwell secure; this is what they shall call her: "The Lord our justice." 17
l For thus says the Lord: Never shall David lack a successor on the throne of the house of Israel, 18 m nor shall priests of Levi ever be lacking, to offer holocausts before me, to burn cereal offerings, and to sacrifice victims.

This word of the Lord also came to Jeremia: 19 Thus says the Lord: 20 n If 33, 14-26: This is the longest continuous passage in the Book of Jeremia that is lacking in the Greek. It appears to be the post-exilic composition of an inspired writer who used parts of the prophecies of Jeremia—often, however, in a sense different from the prophet's. The prediction of an eternal Davidic dynasty (14-17) to fulfill the prophecy of Nathan (2 Kgs 7, 11-16), and of a perpetual priesthood and sacrifice (18), was not to be realized in the restoration of the Jewish nation. It finds its fulfillment only in Jesus of Nazareth, who combined with His Messianic Davidic kingship an eternal priesthood; cf Heb 6, 20; 7, 24f.

you can break my covenant with day, and my covenant with night, so that day and night no longer alternate in sequence, 21
then can my covenant with my servant
David also be broken, so that he will not have a son to be king upon his throne, and my covenant with the priests of Levi who minister to me. 22 Like the host of heaven which cannot be numbered, and the sands of the sea which cannot be counted, I will multiply the descendants of my servant David and the Levites who minister to me.

23 This word of the Lord came to Jer-emia: 24 o Have you not noticed what these people are saying: "The Lord has rejected the two tribes which he had chosen"? They spurn my people as if it were no longer a nation in their eyes. 25
p Thus says the Lord: When I have no covenant with day and night, and have given no laws to heaven and earth, 26
then too will I reject the descendants of Jacob and of my servant David, so as not to take from his descendants rulers for the race of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. For I will change their lot and show them mercy.

IV: FALL OF JERUSALEM

CHAPTER 34.

Fate of Sedecia. 1 This word came to Jeremia from the Lord while Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and his armies and the earth's kingdoms subject to him, as well as the other peoples, were all attacking Jerusalem and all her cities: q 2
r Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel:
Go to Sedecia, king of Juda, and tell him:
Thus says the Lord: I am handing this city over to the king of Babylon; he will destroy it with fire. 3 s Neither shall you escape his hand; rather you will be captured and fall into his hands. You shall see the king of Babylon and speak to him face to face. Then you shall be taken to Babylon.

4 But if you obey the word of the Lord, Sedecia, king of Juda, then, says
the Lord to you, you shall not die by the sword. 5 You shall die in peace, and they will lament you as their lord, and burn spices for your burial as they did for your fathers, the kings who preceded you from the first; it is I who make this promise, says the Lord.

6 The prophet Jeremia told all these things to Sedecia, king of Juda, in Jerusalem, 7 while the armies of the king of Babylon were attacking Jerusalem and the remaining cities of Juda, Lachis, and Azeca,* since these alone were left of the fortified cities of Juda.

The Pact Broken.* 8 This is the word that came to Jeremia from the Lord after King Sedecia had made an agreement with all the people in Jerusalem to issue an edict of emancipation. 9 t Everyone was to free his Hebrew slaves, male and female, so that no one should hold a man of Juda, his brother, in slavery. 10 All the princes and the others who entered the agreement consented to set free their male and female servants, so that they should be slaves no longer. But though they agreed and freed them, 11 afterward they took back their male and female slaves whom they had set free and again forced them into service.

12 Then this word of the Lord came to Jeremia: 13 Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: The day I brought your fathers out of the land of Egypt, out of the place where they were slaves, I made this covenant with them: 14 Every seventh year
each of you shall set free his Hebrew brother who has sold himself to you: six years he shall serve you, but then you shall let him go free. Your fathers, however, did not heed me or obey me. 15 Today you indeed repented and did what is right in my eyes by proclaiming the emancipa-tion of your brethren and making an agreement before me in the house that is named after me. 16 u But then you changed your mind and profaned my name by taking back your male and female slaves to whom you had given their freedom; you forced them once more into slavery. 17 Therefore, thus says the Lord:

o Rom 11, 1f.—p 25f: Jer 31, 36f; 32, 44.—q Jer 52, 4; 4 Kgs 25, 1.—r Jer 21, 10; 32, 3. 28.—s Jer 32, 4; 52, 11.—t Ex 21, 2ff; Lv 25, 39. 46; Dt 15, 12-15.—u Lv 19, 12.

34, 7: Lachis and Azeca: fortress towns to the southwest of Jerusalem which Nabuchodonosor besieged to prevent help coming to Jerusalem from Egypt. Between 1935 and 1938, archaeologists found at Lachis several letters written on pottery fragments which date from 598 or 588 B. C., and which mention both Lachis and Azeca.

34, 8-22: While the Chaldean siege of Jerusalem was in progress, the citizens of Jerusalem made a covenant at Sedecia's instigation to free their brother Judeans who were in slavery. Doubtless this was both to provide additional free defenders for the city and to offer reparation for past violations of the law, according to which Hebrew slaves were to serve no longer than six years (Dt 15, 12-15). But when the siege was temporarily lifted, probably because of the help promised by Pharao Hophra (cf Jer 37, 5), the inhabitants of Jerusalem broke the covenant and once more pressed their brethren into slavery (v 11).

You did not obey me by proclaiming your neighbors and kinsmen free. I now proclaim you free, says the Lord, for the sword, famine, and pestilence. I will make you an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth. 18 *The men who violated my covenant and did not observe the terms of the agreement which they made before me, I will make like the calf which they cut in two, between whose two parts they passed. 19 The princes of Juda and of Jerusalem, the courtiers, the priests, and the common people, who passed between the parts of the calf, 20 v I will hand over, all of them, to their enemies, to those who seek their lives: their corpses shall be food for the birds of the air and the beasts of the field.

21 w Sedecia, too, king of Juda, and his princes, I will hand over to their enemies, to those who seek their lives, to the soldiers of the king of Babylon who have at present withdrawn from you. 22 x I will give the command, says the Lord, and bring them back to this city. They shall attack and capture it, and destroy it with fire; the cities of Juda I will turn into a desert where no man dwells.

CHAPTER 35.

The Faithful Rechabites. 1 This word came to Jeremia from the Lord in the days of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda: 2 Approach the Rechabites* and speak to them; bring them into the house of the Lord, to one of the rooms, and give them wine to drink. 3 So I went and brought Jezonia, son of Jeremia, son of Habsania, his brothers and all his sons, the whole company of the Rechabites, 4 into the house of the Lord, to the room of the sons of Hanan,* son of Jegedelia, the man of God, next to the princes' room, above the room of Maasia, son of Sellum, keeper of the doorway. 5 I set before these Rechabite men bowls full of wine and offered them cups to drink the wine.

6 "We do not drink wine," they said to me: "Jonadab,* Rechab's son, our father, forbade us in these words: 'Neither you nor your children shall ever drink wine. 7 Build no house and sow no seed; neither plant nor own a vineyard. You shall dwell in tents all your life, so that you may live long on the earth where you are wayfarers.' 8 Now we have heeded Jonadab, Rechab's son, our father, in all his prohibitions. All our lives we have not drunk wine, neither we, nor our wives, nor our sons, nor our daughters. 9 We build no houses to live in; we own no vineyards or fields or crops, 10 and we live in tents; we obediently do everything our father Jonadab commanded us. 11 But when Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, invaded this land, we decided to come into Jerusalem to escape the army of the Chaldeans and the army of Aram;* that is why we are now living in Jerusalem."

12 Then this word of the Lord came to Jeremia: 13 Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: y Go, say to the men of Juda and to the citizens of Jerusalem: Will you not take correction and obey my words? says the Lord. 14 z The advice of Jonadab, Rechab's son, by which he forbade his children to drink wine, has been followed: to this day they have not drunk it; they obeyed their father's command. Me, however, you have not obeyed, although I spoke to you untiringly and insistently. 15 a I kept sending you all my servants the prophets, telling you to turn back, all of you, from your evil way; to reform your conduct, and not follow strange gods or serve them, if you would remain on the land which I gave you and your fathers; but you did not heed me or obey me. 16 Yes, the children of Jonadab, Rechab's son, observed the command which their father laid on them; but this people does not obey me! 17 Now, therefore, says the Lord God of hosts, the God of Israel: b I will bring upon Juda and all the citizens of Jerusalem every evil that I threatened; because when I spoke

34, 18f: As the Bible (Gn 15, 10-17) and also contemporary inscriptions make clear, agreements were sometimes ratified by walking between the divided pieces of animals while the contracting parties invoked on themselves a fate similar to that of the slaughtered beast if they should fail to keep their word. The agreement: that mentioned in vv 10. 15.

35, 2: The Rechabites: reactionaries who believed that the Lord could not be well served except by maintaining the original nomadic conditions of Israel's life. Without sharing their convictions, the prophet holds up their fidelity to their ideals as an example to put to shame his faithless countrymen. In the days of Joakim: probably in 599 or 598 B. C.

35, 4: The sons of Hanan: probably the disciples of this man of God or prophet. Maasia: possibly the father of the priest Sophonia (Jer 29, 25; 37, 3). Keeper of the doorway: a priestly function of responsibility; cf Jer 52, 24.

35, 6: Jonadab: a contemporary of King Jehu; cf 4 Kgs 10, 15ff.

they did not obey, when I called they did not answer.

18 But to the company of the Rechabites Jeremia said: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Since you have obeyed the command of Jonadab, your father, kept all his commands and done everything he commanded you, 19 thus therefore says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Never shall there fail to be a descendant of Jonadab, Rechab's son, standing in my service.

CHAPTER 36.

Baruch Writes the Prophecies of Jeremia. 1 In the fourth year of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda, this word came to Jeremia from the Lord: 2 Take a scroll and write on it all the words I have spoken to you against Israel, Juda, and all the nations, from the day I first spoke to you, in the days of Josia, until today. 3 c Perhaps, when the house of Juda hears all the evil I have in mind to do to them, they will turn back each from his evil way, so that I may forgive their wickedness and their sin. 4 So Jeremia called Baruch, son of Neria, who wrote down on a scroll, as Jeremia dictated, all the words which the Lord had spoken to him.

9 In the ninth month, in the fifth year of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda, a fast to placate the Lord was proclaimed for all the people of Jerusalem and all who came from Juda's cities to Jerusalem. 5 Then Jeremia charged Baruch: I cannot go to the house of the Lord; I am prevented* from doing so. 6 Do you go on the fast day and read publicly in the Lord's house the Lord's words from the scroll you wrote at my dictation; read them also to all the men of Juda who come up from their cities. 7 d Perhaps they will lay their supplication before the Lord and will all turn back from their evil way; for great is the fury of anger with which the Lord has threatened this people.

8 Baruch, son of Neria, did everything the prophet Jeremia commanded; from the book-scroll he read the Lord's words in the Lord's house. 10 It was in the room of Gamaria,* son of the scribe Saphan, in the upper court of the Lord's house, at the entrance of the New Temple-Gate, that Baruch publicly read the words of Jeremia from his book.

11 Now Michaia, son of Gamaria, son of Saphan, heard all the words of the Lord read from the book. 12 So he went down to the king's palace, into the scribe's chamber,* where the princes were just then in session: Elisama, the scribe, Dalaia, son of Semeia, Elnathan, son of Achobor, Gamaria, son of Saphan, Sedecia, son of Anania, and the other princes. 13 To them Michaia reported all that he had heard Baruch read publicly from his book. 14 Thereupon the princes sent Judi, son of Nathania, son of Selemia, son of Chusi, to Baruch with the order: "Come, and bring with you the scroll you read publicly to the people." Scroll in hand, Baruch, son of Neria, went to them. 15 "Sit down," they said to him, "and read it to us." Baruch read it to them, 16 and when they heard all its words, they were frightened and said to one another, "We must certainly tell the king all these things." 17 Then they asked Baruch: "Tell us, please, how you came to write down all these words." 18 "Jeremia dictated all these words to me," Baruch answered them, "and I wrote them down with ink in the book." 19 At this the princes said to Baruch, "Go into hiding, you and Jeremia; let not one know where you are."

20 Leaving the scroll in safekeeping in the room of Elisama the scribe, they entered the room where the king was. When they told him everything that had happened, 21 he sent Judi to fetch the scroll. Judi brought it from the room of Elisama the scribe, and read it to the king and to all the princes who were in attendance on the king. 22 Now the king was sitting in his winter house, since it was the ninth month, and fire was burning in a brazier before him. 23 Each time Judi finished reading three or four columns, the king would cut off the piece with a scribe's knife* and cast it into the fire in the brazier, until the entire roll was consumed in the fire. 24 Hearing all these words did not frighten the king and his ministers or cause them to rend their garments. 25 And though Elnathan, Dalaia, and Gamaria urged the king not to burn the scroll, he would not listen to them, 26 but commanded Jeremiel, a royal prince, and Seraia, son of Ezriel, and Selemia, son of Abdeel, to arrest Baruch, the secretary, and the prophet Jeremia. But the Lord kept them concealed.

27 This word of the Lord came to Jeremia, after the king burned the scroll with the text Jeremia had dictated to Baruch: 28 Take another scroll, and write on it everything that the first scroll contained, which Joakim, king of Juda, burned up. 29 And against Joakim, king of Juda, say this: Thus says the Lord: You burned that scroll, saying, "Why did you write on it: Babylon's king shall surely come and lay waste this land and empty it of man and beast?" 30 The Lord now says of Joakim,* king of Juda: e No descendant of his shall succeed to David's throne; his corpse shall be cast out, exposed to the heat of day, to the cold of night. 31 I will punish him and his descendants and his ministers for their wickedness: against them and the citizens of Jerusalem and the men of Juda I will fulfill all the threats of evil which went unheeded.

32 Jeremia took another scroll, and gave it to his secretary, Baruch, son of Neria; he wrote on it at Jeremia's dictation all the words contained in the book which Joakim, king of Juda, had burned in the fire, and many others of the same kind in addition.

CHAPTER 37.

Jeremia in the Dungeon. 1 Jechonia, son of Joakim, was succeeded by King Sedecia, son of Josia; f he was made king over the land of Juda by Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon. Neither he, nor his ministers, nor the people of the land would listen to the words of the Lord spoken by Jeremia the prophet. 3 g Yet King Sedecia sent Juchal, son of Selemia, and Sophonia, son of Maasia the priest, to the prophet Jeremia with this request: "Pray to the Lord, our God, for us." 4 At this time Jeremia had not yet been put into prison;* he still came and went freely among the people. 5 h Also, Pharao's army* had set out from Egypt, and when the Chaldeans who were besieging Jerusalem heard this report they marched away from the city.

6 This word of the Lord then came to the prophet Jeremia: 7 i Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Give this answer to the king of Juda who sent you to me to consult me: Pharao's army which has set out to help you will return to its own land, Egypt. 8 i The Chaldeans shall return to the fight against this city; they shall capture it and destroy it with fire.

9 Thus says the Lord: Do not deceive yourselves with the thought that the Chaldeans will leave you for good, because they shall not leave! 10 k Even if you were to defeat the whole Chaldean army now attacking you, and only the wounded remained, each in his tent, these would rise up and destroy the city with fire.

11 l When the Chaldean army lifted the siege of Jerusalem at the threat of the army of Pharao, 12 Jeremia set out from Jerusalem for the district of Benjamin, to take part with his family in the division of an inheritance. 13 But when he reached the Gate of Benjamin, he met the captain of the guard, a man named Jeria, son of Selemia, son of Anania; he seized the prophet Jeremia, saying, "You are deserting to the Chaldeans!" 14 "That is a lie!" Jeremia answered, "I am not deserting to the Chaldeans." Without listening, Jeria kept Jeremia in custody and brought him to the princes.

15 m The princes were enraged, and had Jeremia beaten and thrown into prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe, which they were using as a jail. 16 And so Jeremia entered the vaulted dungeon, where he remained a long time.

17 n Once King Sedecia had him brought to his palace and he asked him secretly whether there was any message from the Lord. Yes! Jeremia answered: you shall be handed over to the king of Babylon. 18 o Jeremia then asked King Sedecia: In what have I wronged you, or your ministers, or this people, that you should put me in prison? 19 And where are your own prophets now, 20 who prophesied to you that the king of Babylon would not attack you or this land? Hear now, my lord king, and grant my petition: do not send me back into the house of Jonathan the scribe, or I shall die there.

21 p King Sedecia ordered that Jeremia be confined in the quarters of the guard, and given a loaf of bread each day from the bakers' shop until all the bread in the city was eaten up. Thus Jeremia remained in the quarters of the guard.

CHAPTER 38.

Jeremia in the Miry Cistern. 1 Saphatia, son of Mathan, Godolia, son of Phassur,* Juchal, son of Selemia, and Phassur, son of Melchia, heard Jeremia speaking these words to all the people: 2 q Thus says the Lord: He who remains in this city shall die by sword, or famine, or pestilence; but he who goes out to the Chaldeans shall live; his life shall be spared him as booty, and he shall live. 3 Thus says the Lord: This city shall certainly be handed over to the army of the king of Babylon; he shall capture it.

4 r "This man ought to be put to death," the princes said to the king; "he demoralizes the soldiers* who are left in this city, and all the people, by speaking such things to them; he is not interested in the welfare of our people, but in their ruin." 5 King Sedecia answered: "He is in your power"; for the king could do nothing with them. 6 s And so they took Jeremia and threw him into the cistern of Prince Melchia, which was in the quarters of the guard, letting him down with ropes. There was no water in the cistern, only mud, and Jeremia sank into the mud.

7 Now Ebed-melech, a Chusite,* a courtier in the king's palace, heard that they had put Jeremia into the cistern. The king happened just then to be at the Gate of Benjamin, 8 and Ebed-melech went there from the palace and said to him, 9 t "My lord king, these men have been at fault in all they have done to the prophet Jeremia, casting him into the cistern. He will die of famine on the spot, for there is no more food in the city." 10 Then the king ordered Ebed-melech the Chusite to take three men along with him, and draw the prophet Jeremia out of the cistern before he should die. 11 Ebed-melech took the men along with him, and went first to the linen closet in the palace, from which he took some old, tattered rags; these he sent down to Jeremia in the cistern, with ropes. 12 Then he said to Jeremia: "Put the old, tattered rags between your armpits and the ropes." Jeremia did so, 13 and they drew him up with the ropes out of the cistern. But Jeremia remained in the quarters of the guard.

14 u Once King Sedecia summoned the prophet Jeremia to come to him at the third entrance to the house of the Lord. "I have a question to ask you," the king said to Jeremia; "hide nothing from me." 15 v Jeremia answered Sedecia: If I tell you anything, you will have me killed, will you not? If I counsel you, you will not listen to me! 16 But King Sedecia swore to Jeremia secretly: "As the Lord lives who gave us the breath of life, I will not kill you; nor will I hand you over to these men who seek your life."

17 w Thereupon Jeremia said to Sedecia: Thus says the Lord God of hosts, the God of Israel: If you surrender to the princes of Babylon's king, you shall save your life· this city shall not be destroyed with fire, and you and your family shall live. 18 x But if you do not surrender to the princes of Babylon's king, this city shall fall into the hands of the Chaldeans, who shall destroy it with fire, and you shall not escape their hands.

19 y King Sedecia, however, said to Jeremia, "I am afraid of the men of Juda who have deserted to the Chaldeans; I may be handed over to them, and they will mistreat me." 20 z You will not be handed over, Jeremia answered. Please obey the voice of the Lord and do as I tell you; then it shall go well with you, and your life will be spared. 21 But if you refuse to surrender, this is what the Lord shows me: 22 a All the women left in the house of Juda's king shall be brought out to the princes of Babylon's king, and they shall taunt you thus: "They betrayed you, outdid you, your good friends! Now that your feet are stuck in the mud, they slink away."

23 b All your wives and sons shall be led forth to the Chaldeans, and you shall not escape their hands; you shall be handed over to the king of Babylon, and this city shall be destroyed with fire.

24 Then Sedecia said to Jeremia, "Let no one know about this conversation, or you shall die. 25 If the princes hear I spoke to you, if they come and ask you, 'Tell us what you said to the king; do not hide it from us, or we will kill you,' or, 'What did the king say to you?' give them this answerer: 26 'I petitioned the king not to send me back to Jonathan's house to die there.' " 27 When all the princes came to Jeremia, they questioned him, and he answered them in the very words the king had commanded. They said no more to him, for nothing had been heard of the earlier conversation. 28 c Thus Jeremia stayed in the quarters of the guard till the day Jerusalem was taken.

CHAPTER 39.

Jeremia and Godolia. When Jerusalem was taken . . . 1 In the tenth month of the ninth year* of Sedecia, king of Juda, Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and all his army marched against Jerusalem and besieged it.d 2 On the ninth day of the fourth month, in the eleventh year* of Sedecia, a breach was made in the city's defenses. 3 All the princes of the king of Babylon came and occupied the middle gate: Nergal-sarezer, of Sin-magir, the chief officer, Nabu-sezban, the high dignitary, and all the other princes of the king of Babylon. . . . 4 e When Sedecia, king of Juda, saw them, he and all his warriors fled by night, leaving the city on the Royal Garden Road* through the gate between the two walls. He went in the direction of the Araba,* 5 f but the Chaldean army pursued them, and overtook and captured Sedecia in the desert near Jericho. He was brought to Ribla, in the land of Hamath, where Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon pronounced sentence upon him. 6 g As Sedecia looked on, his sons were slain at Ribla by order of the king of Babylon, who slew also all the nobles of Juda. 7 h He then blinded Sedecia and bound him in chains to bring him to Babylon.

8 i The Chaldeans set fire to the king's palace and the houses of the people, and demolished the walls of Jerusalem. 9 j Nabu-zardan, chief of the bodyguard, deported to Babylon the rest of the people left in the city, those who had deserted to him, and the rest of the workmen. 10 k But some of the poor who had no property were left in the land of Juda by Nabu-zardan, chief of the bodyguard, and were given at the same time vineyards and farms.

11 Concerning Jeremia, Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, gave the following orders through Nabu-zardan, chief of the bodyguard: 12 l "Take him and look after him; let no harm befall him, but treat him as he himself requests." 13 Thereupon Nabu-zardan, chief of the bodyguard, and Nabu-sezban, the high dignitary, and Nergal-sarezer, the chief officer, and all the nobles of the king of Babylon, 14 m had Jeremia taken out of the quarters of the guard, and entrusted to Godolia, son of Ahicam, son of Saphan, to be brought home. And so he remained among the people.

A Word of Comfort for Ebed-melech. 15 While Jeremia was still imprisoned in the quarters of the guard, the word of the Lord came to him: 16 n Go, tell this to Ebed-melech the Chusite: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Behold, I am now fulfilling the words I spoke against this city, for evil and not for

CHAPTER 40.

Jeremia Still in Juda. 1 This word* came to Jeremia from the Lord, after Nabu-zardan, captain of the bodyguard, had released him in Rama, where he had found him a prisoner in chains,p among the captives of Jerusalem and Juda who were being exiled to Babylon. 2 When the captain of the bodyguard took charge of Jeremia, he said to him, "The Lord, your God, foretold the ruin of this place. 3 Now he has brought about in deed what he threatened; because you sinned against the Lord and did not obey his voice, this fate has befallen you. 4 q And now, I am freeing you today from the fetters that bind your hands; if it seems good to you to come with me to Babylon, you may come: I will look after you well. But if it does not please you to come to Babylon, you need not come. See, the whole land is before you; go wherever you think good and proper"; 5 r and then, before he left—"or go to Godolia, son of Ahicam, son of Saphan, whom the king of Babylon has appointed ruler over the cities of Juda; stay with him among the people, or go wherever you please." The captain of the bodyguard gave him food and gifts and let him go. 6 s Jeremia went to Godolia, son of Ahicam, in Maspha,* and stayed with him among the people left in the land.

7 When the army leaders who were still in the field with all their men heard that the king of Babylon had given Godolia, son of Ahicam, charge of the land, of men, women, and children, and of those poor who had not been led captive to Babylon, 8 they came with their men to Godolia in Maspha: Ismael, son of Nathania; Johanan, son of Caree; Sarea, son of Tanchumeth; the sons of Ophi of Netopha; and Jezonia* of Beth-Maaca. 9 t Godolia, son of Ahicam, son of Saphan, adjured them and their men not to be afraid to serve the Chaldeans: to stay in the land and submit to the king of Babylon, for their own welfare; 10 saying that he himself would remain in Maspha, as their intermediary with the Chaldeans who should come to them. They were to collect the wine, the fruit, and the oil, to store them in jars, and to settle in the cities they occupied. 11 When the people of Juda in Moab, those among the Ammonites, those in Edom, and those in all other lands heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant in Juda, and had appointed over them Godolia, son of Ahicam, son of Saphan, 12 they all returned to the land of Juda from the places to which they had scattered. They went to Godolia at Maspha and had a rich harvest of wine and fruit.

Assassination of Godolia. 13 Now Johanan, son of Caree, and all the leaders of the armies in the field came to Godolia in Maspha 14 u and asked him whether he did not know that Baalis, the king of the Ammonites,* had sent Ismael, son of Nathania, to assassinate him. 15 But Godolia, son of Ahicam, would not believe them. Then Johanan, son of Caree, said secretly to Godolia in Maspha: "Let me go and kill Ismael, son of Nathania; no one will know it. Why should he be allowed to kill you? All the Jews who have now rallied to you will be dispersed and the remnant of Juda will perish." 16 Nevertheless, Godolia, son of Ahicam, answered Johanan, son of Caree: "You shall do nothing of the kind; you have lied about Ismael."

CHAPTER 41.

1 In the seventh month Ismael, son of Nathania, son of Elisama, of royal descent, one of the king's nobles, came with ten men to Godolia, son of Ahicam, at Maspha.v 2 And while they were together

40, 6: Maspha: some five miles northwest of Jerusalem, where Israel chose its first king (1 Kgs 10, 17-24). Presumably Jerusalem had been damaged too much by the Chaldean conquest to remain a seat of government.

40, 8: Jezonia: the seal ring of a high official of this name was discovered in 1932 at the site usually identified with Maspha, Tell en-Nasbe.

at table in Maspha, Ismael, son of Nathania, and the ten who were with him, rose up and attacked with swords Godolia, son of Ahicam, son of Saphan, whom the king of Babylon had made ruler over the land; and they killed him. 3 Ismael also slew all the men of Juda of military age who were with Godolia and the Chaldean soldiers who were there.

4 The second day after the murder of Godolia, before anyone knew of it, 5 eighty men with beards shaved off, clothes in rags, and with gashes on their bodies came from Sichem, Silo, and Samaria, bringing food offerings and incense for the house of the Lord. 6 Ismael, son of Nathania, went out from Maspha to meet them, weeping as he went. 7 "Come to Godolia, son of Ahicam," he said as he met them. When they were once inside the city, Ismael, son of Nathania, and his men slew them and threw them into the cistern. 8 But there were ten among them who pleaded with Ismael: "Do not kill us; we have stores buried in the field: wheat and barley, oil and honey." And so he spared them and did not kill them, as he had killed their companions. 9 w The cistern into which Ismael threw all the corpses of the men he had killed was the large one made by King Asa to defend himself against Baasa, king of Israel; this cistern Ismael, son of Nathania, filled with the slain.

10 Ismael, son of Nathania, led away the remnant of people left in Maspha and the princesses,* whom Nabu-zardan, captain of the bodyguard, had confided to Godolia, son of Ahicam. With these captives, Ismael, son of Nathania, set out to make his way to the Ammonites.

Flight to Egypt. 11 But when Johanan, son of Caree, and the other army leaders with him heard of the crimes Ismael, son of Nathania, had committed, 12 they took all their men and set out to attack Ismael, son of Nathania. They overtook him at the Great Waters in Gibeon.* At the sight of Johanan, son of Caree, and the other army leaders, the people who were Ismael's captives rejoiced. 14 All of those whom Ismael had brought away from Maspha went over to Johanan, son of Caree. 15 But Ismael, son of Nathania, escaped from Johanan and fled to the Ammonites with eight men. 16 Then Johanan, son of Caree, and all his army leaders took charge of the remnant of the people, both the soldiers and the women and children with their guardians, whom Ismael, son of Nathania, had brought away from Maspha after he killed Godolia, son of Ahicam. From Gibeon, 17 they retreated to the lodging place of Chamaam near Bethlehem, where they stopped, intending to flee into Egypt. 18 They were afraid of the Chaldeans, because Ismael, son of Nathania, had slain Godolia, son of Ahicam, whom the king of Babylon had made ruler in the land of Juda.

CHAPTER 42.

1 Then all the army leaders, Johanan, son of Caree, Azaria, son of Osaia, and all the people, high and low, approached the prophet Jeremia and said, 2 "Grant our petition; pray for us to the Lord, your God, for all this remnant. We are now few who once were many, as you well see. 3 Let the Lord, your God, show us what way we should take and what we should do." 4 x Very well! the prophet Jeremia answered them: I will pray to the Lord, your God, as you desire; whatever the Lord answers you, I will tell you; I will withhold nothing from you. 5 y And they said to Jeremia, "May the Lord be our witness: we will truly and faithfully follow all the instructions the Lord, your God, will send us. 6 z Whether it is pleasant or difficult, we will obey the command of the Lord, our God, to whom we are sending you, so that it will go well with us for obeying the command of the Lord, our God."

7 Ten days passed before the word of the Lord came to Jeremia. 8 Then he called Johanan, son of Caree, his army leaders, and all the people, high and low, and said to them: 9 Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel, to whom you sent me to offer your prayer: 10 a If you remain quietly in this land I will build you up, and not tear you down; I will plant you, not uproot you; for I regret the evil I have done you. 11 b Do not fear the king of Babylon, before whom you are now afraid; do not fear him, says the Lord, for I am with you to save you, to rescue you from his power. 12 c I will grant you mercy, so that he will be sorry for you and let you return to your land. 13 But if you disobey the voice of the Lord, your God, and decide not to remain in this land, saying, 14 d "No, we will go to Egypt, where we will see no more of war, hear the trumpet alarm no longer, nor hunger for bread; there we will live"; 15 then listen to the word of the Lord, remnant of Juda: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: If you are determined to go to Egypt, when you arrive there to stay, 16 e the sword you fear shall reach you in the land of Egypt; the hunger you dread shall cling to you no less in Egypt, and there you shall die. 17 f All those men who determine to go to Egypt to stay, shall die by the sword, famine, and pestilence; not one shall survive or escape the evil that I will bring upon them. 18 g For thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Just as my furious anger was poured out upon the citizens of Jerusalem, so shall my anger be poured out on you when you reach Egypt. You shall become an example of malediction and horror, a curse and a reproach, and you shall never see this place again.

19 It is the Lord who has spoken to you, remnant of Juda; do not go to Egypt! You can never say that I did not warn you this day. 20 At the cost of your lives you have deceived me, sending me to the Lord, your God, saying, "Pray for us to the Lord, our God; make known to us all that the Lord, our God, shall say, and we will do it." 21 h Today I proclaim his message, but you obey the voice of the Lord, your God, in nothing that he has commissioned me to make known to you. 22 i Have no doubt of this, you shall die by the sword, famine, and pestilence in the place where you wish to go and settle.

1 When Jeremia finished speaking to the people all these words of the Lord, their God, with which the Lord had sent him to them, 2 Azaria, son of Osaia, Johanan, son of Caree, and all the insolent men shouted to Jeremia: "You lie; it was not the Lord, our God, who sent you to tell us not to go to Egypt to settle. 3 j It is Baruch, son of Neria, who stirs you up against us, to hand us over to the Chaldeans to be killed or exiled to Babylon."

4 k Johanan, son of Caree, and the rest of the leaders and the people did not obey the Lord's command to stay in the land of Juda. 5 Instead, Johanan, son of Caree, and all the army leaders took along the whole remnant of Juda that had been dispersed among the nations and had returned thence to dwell again in the land of Juda: 6 l men, women, and children, the princesses and everyone whom Nabu-zardan, captain of the bodyguard, had entrusted to Godolia, son of Ahicam, son of Saphan; also Jeremia, the prophet, and Baruch, son of Neria. 7 m Against the Lord's command they went to Egypt, and arrived at Tahpanhes. . . .

Jeremia in Egypt. 8 This word of the Lord came to Jeremia in Tahpanhes: 9 Take with you large stones and sink them in mortar in the brickyard at the entrance to the royal building* in Tahpanhes, while the men of Juda look on, 10 n and then say to them: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: I will send for my servant Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and bring him here. He will set his throne upon these stones which I, Jeremia, have sunk, and stretch his canopy over them. 11 o He shall come and strike the land of Egypt: with death, whoever is marked for death; with exile, everyone destined for exile; with the sword, all who are intended for the sword. 12 p He shall set fire to the temples of Egypt's gods, and burn the gods or carry them off. As a shepherd delouses his cloak, he shall delouse the land of Egypt and depart victorious. 13 He shall smash the obelisks of the temple of the sun in the land of Egypt and destroy with fire the temples of the Egyptian gods.

CHAPTER 44.

1 This word came to Jeremia for all the people of Juda who were living in Egypt, at Magdal, Tahpanhes, and Memphis, and in Upper Egypt: 2 *Thus says the 43, 9: The royal building: residence of the Egyptian governor.

44, 2-30: Chronologically, this is the last of Jeremia's prophecies to his countrymen. The narrative leaves him an old man nearing seventy, rejected by his people. According to tradition, he was murdered in Egypt by fellow Judeans.

Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: [q] You have seen all the evil I brought on Jerusalem and the other cities of Juda. Today they are ruins and uninhabited, [3] [r] because of the evil they did to provoke me, going after strange gods, serving them and sacrificing to them, gods which neither they, nor you, nor your fathers knew. [4] Though I kept sending to you all my servants the prophets, with the plea not to commit this horrible deed which I hate, [5] [s] they would not listen or accept the warning to turn away from the evil of sacrificing to strange gods. [6] Therefore the fury of my anger poured forth in flame over the cities of Juda and the streets of Jerusalem, so that they became the ruinous waste they are today.

[7] Now thus says the Lord God of hosts, the God of Israel: Why do you inflict so great an evil upon yourselves? Will you root out from Juda man and wife, child and nursling, and not leave yourselves even a remnant? [8] [t] Will you go on provoking me by the works of your hands, by sacrificing to strange gods here in the land of Egypt where you have come to live? Will you be rooted out and become a curse and a disgrace among all the nations of the earth? [9] [u] Have you forgotten the evil deeds which your fathers, and the kings of Juda and their wives, and you yourselves and your wives have done in the land of Juda and the streets of Jerusalem? [10] [v] To this day they have not been crushed; they do not fear or follow the law and the statutes which I set before you and your fathers.

[11] Hence, thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: I have determined evil against you; and I will uproot all Juda. [12] [w] I will take away the remnant of Juda who insisted on coming to dwell in Egypt, so that they shall be wholly destroyed. In the land of Egypt they shall fall by the sword or be consumed by hunger. High and low, they shall die by the sword, or by hunger, and become an example of malediction, a horror, a curse and a reproach. [13] [x] Thus will I punish those who live in Egypt, just as I punished Jerusalem with sword, hunger, and pestilence. None of the remnant of Juda that have come to settle in the land of Egypt shall escape or survive. [14] None shall return to the land of Juda, though they yearn to return and live there. Only scattered refugees shall return.

[15] From all the men who knew that their wives were burning incense to strange gods, from all the women who were present in the immense crowd, and from all the people who lived in Lower and Upper Egypt, Jeremia received this answer: [16] [y] "We will not listen to what you say in the name of the Lord. [17] [z] Rather will we continue doing what we had proposed; we will burn incense to the queen of heaven and pour out libations to her, as we and our fathers, our kings and princes have done in the cities of Juda and the streets of Jerusalem. Then we had enough food to eat and we were well off; we suffered no misfortune. [18] But since we stopped burning incense to the queen of heaven and pouring out libations to her, we are in need of everything and are being destroyed by the sword and by hunger. [19] [a] And when we burned incense to the queen of heaven and poured out libations to her, was it without our husbands' consent that we baked for her cakes in her image and poured out libations to her?"

[20] To all the people, men and women, who gave him this answer, Jeremia said: [21] [b] Was it not this that the Lord remembered and brought to mind, that you burned incense in the cities of Juda and the streets of Jerusalem: you, your fathers, your kings and princes, and the people generally? [22] [c] The Lord could no longer bear your evil deeds, the horrible things which you were doing; and so your land became a waste, a desert, a thing accursed and without inhabitants, as it is today. [23] [d] Because you burned incense and sinned against the Lord, not obeying the voice of the Lord, not living by his law, his statutes, and his decrees, this evil has befallen you at the present day.

[24] Jeremia said further to all the people, including the women: Hear the word of the Lord, all you Judeans in the land of Egypt: [25] Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: You and your wives have stated your intentions, and kept them in fact: "We will continue to fulfill the vows we have made to burn incense to the queen of heaven and to pour out libations to her." Very well! keep your vows, carry out your resolutions! 26 But listen then to the word of the Lord, all you people of Juda who live in Egypt: I swear by my own great name, says the Lord, in the whole land of Egypt no man of Juda shall henceforth pronounce my name, saying, "As the Lord God lives." 27 e I am watching over them to do evil, not good. All the men of Juda in Egypt shall perish by the sword or famine until they are utterly destroyed. 28 f Those who escape the sword to return from the land of Egypt to the land of Juda shall be few in number. The whole remnant of Juda who came to settle in Egypt shall know whose word stands, mine or theirs.

29 That you may know how surely my threats of punishment for you shall be fulfilled, this shall be a sign to you, says the Lord, that I will punish you in this place. 30 g Thus says the Lord: See! I will hand over Pharao Hophra,* king of Egypt, to his enemies, to those who seek his life, just as I handed over Sedecia, king of Juda, to his enemy and mortal foe, Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon.

CHAPTER 45.

A Message to Baruch.* 1 This is the message that the prophet Jeremia gave to Baruch, son of Neria,h when he wrote in a book the prophecies that Jeremia dictated in the fourth year of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda: 2 Thus says the Lord, God of Israel, to you, Baruch, 3 i because you said, "Alas! the Lord adds grief to my pain; I am weary from groaning, and can find no rest": 4 j say this to him, says the Lord: What I have built, I am tearing down; what I have planted, I am uprooting: even the whole land. 5 k And do you seek great things for yourself? Seek them not! I am bringing evil on all mankind, says the Lord, but your life I will leave you as booty, wherever you may go.

V: ORACLES AGAINST THE NATIONS*

CHAPTER 46.

1 This is the word of the Lord that came to the prophet Jeremia against the nations.

Against Egypt. 2 Concerning Egypt. Against the army of Pharao Necho, king of Egypt, which was defeated at Charchamis, on the Euphrates* by Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, in the fourth year of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda: 3 Prepare shield and buckler! march to battle! 4 Harness the horses, mount, charioteers! Fall in with your helmets; polish your spears, put on your breastplates. 5 l What do I see? With broken ranks they fall back; their heroes are routed, they flee headlong without making a stand. Terror on every side, says the Lord! 6 The swift cannot flee, nor the hero escape: there in the north, on the Euphrates' bank, they stumble and fall.

7 Who is this that surges forward like the Nile, like rivers of billowing waters? 8 m Egypt surges like the Nile, like rivers of billowing waters. "I will surge forward," he says, "and cover the earth, destroying the city and its people. 9 Forward, horses! drive madly, chariots! Set out warriors, Chus and Phut, bearing your shields, men of Lud, stretching your bows!" 10 n But this is the day of the Lord God of hosts, a day of vengeance, vengeance on his foes! The sword devours, is sated, drunk with their blood: for the Lord God of hosts holds a slaughter feast in the northland, on the Euphrates.

11 o Go up to Galaad, and take balm, O virgin daughter Egypt! No use to multiply remedies; for you there is no cure. 12 p The nations hear of your shame, your cries fill the earth. Warrior trips over warrior, both fall together.

13 q The message which the Lord gave to the prophet Jeremia concerning the advance of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, to attack the land of Egypt:*

e Ez 7, 3-7.—f Dt 28, 62; Is 10, 22.—g Jer 39, 5ff; 46, 25f; Ez 29, 3f; 30, 21.—h Jer 36, 4. 18. 32.—i Lam 1, 3; 5, 5.—j Jer 18, 7; Is 5, 5f.—k Jer 25, 26-29.—l Jer 6, 25; 49, 29.—m Ez 29, 3; 32, 2.—n Dt 32, 42; Is 13, 9; Ez 39, 17-20.—o Jer 8, 22; 51, 8; Ez 30, 21f.—p Ez 32, 9-12.—q Jer 43, 10f; 44, 30; Is 19, 1.

44, 30: Hophra: killed by his own people. The ruler of Egypt at the time of its conquest by Nabuchodonosor was Hophra's successor Amasis, who was also slain by his enemies.

45, 1-5: At the conclusion of his narrative, Baruch appends a prophecy given him personally by Jeremia when he first wrote down Jeremia's words (cf chap 36). The future revealed by the prophet had depressed Baruch; this prophecy was to assure him of his personal safety, while repeating the Lord's determination to destroy Juda.

46–51: In these chapters most of Jeremia's oracles against the foreign nations have been gathered together and placed at the end of his book; in the Greek text they appear with the other oracles against the nations, in chap 25. In general, they are in chronological order: 46, 1—49, 33, from the fourth year of Joakim; 49, 34-39, at the beginning of Sedecia's reign; 50, 1—51, 64, from the fourth year of Sedecia.

46, 2: Charchamis on the Euphrates: the western terminus of the Mesopotamian trade route, where Nabuchodonosor defeated Necho in 605 B. C., thus gaining undisputed control of Syria and Palestine.

46, 13: In 601 B. C. Nabuchodonosor advanced against Egypt and even entered the country, but finally had to withdraw to Syria.

14 [r] Announce it in Egypt, publish it in Magdal, proclaim it in Memphis and Tahpanhes! Say: Take your stand, prepare yourselves, the sword has already devoured your neighbors. 15 Why has Apis* fled, your mighty one failed to stand? The Lord thrust him down; 16 [s] he stumbled repeatedly, and fell. They said one to another, "Up! let us return to our own people, to the land of our birth,
away from the destroying sword."

17 Call Pharao, king of Egypt, by his name "The noise that let its time go by."* 18 As I live, says the King whose name is Lord of hosts, like Thabor among the mountains he shall come, like Carmel* above the sea. 19 Pack your baggage
for exile, capital city of daughter Egypt;
Memphis shall become a desert, an empty ruin.

20 Egypt is a pretty heifer, from the north a horsefly lights upon her. 21 The mercenaries in her ranks are like fatted calves; they too turn and flee together, stand not their ground, when the day of their ruin comes upon them, the time of their punishment. 22 She sounds like a retreating reptile! Yes, they come in force; like woodchoppers, they attack her with axes. 23 They cut down her forest, says the Lord, impenetrable though it be; more numerous than locusts, they cannot be counted. 24 Disgraced is daughter Egypt, handed over to the people of the north.

25 The Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, has said: [t] See! I will punish Amon* of Thebes, and Egypt, her gods and her kings, Pharao, and those who trust in him. 26 [u] I will hand them over to those who seek their lives, to Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and his ministers. But later on Egypt shall be inhabited again,
as in times past, says the Lord.

27 [v] But you, my servant Jacob, fear not; be not dismayed, O Israel. Behold,
I will deliver you from the far-off land,
your descendants, from their land of exile. Jacob shall again find rest, shall be tranquil and undisturbed. 28 [w] You, my servant Jacob, never fear, says the Lord,
for I am with you; I will make an end of all the nations to which I have driven
you, but of you I will not make an end:
I will chastise you as you deserve, I will not let you go unpunished.

CHAPTER 47.

Against the Philistines. 1 This is the word that came from the Lord to the prophet Jeremia concerning the Philistines,[x] before Pharao attacked Gaza:
Thus says the Lord:

2 *Behold: waters are rising from the north, a torrent in flood; it shall flood the land and all that is in it, the cities and their people. All the people of the land set up a wailing cry. 3 They hear the stamping hooves of his steeds, the rattling chariots, the rumbling wheels. Fathers turn not to save their children; their hands fall helpless 4 [y] because of the day
which has come to ruin all the Philistines, and cut off from Tyre and Sidon* the last of their allies. Yes, the Lord is destroying the Philistines, the remnant from the coasts of Caphtor.

5 *Gaza is shaved bald, Ascalon is reduced to silence; Azotus, the remnant of their strength, how long will you gash yourself? [z] 6 *Alas, sword of the Lord!
how long till you find rest? Return into your scabbard; stop, be still! 7 [a] How can it find rest when the Lord has commanded it? Against Ascalon and the seashore
he has appointed it.

CHAPTER 48.

Against Moab.* 1 Concerning Moab,
thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Woe to Nebo, it is laid waste;
Cariathaim is disgraced and captured, disgraced and overthrown is the stronghold:
2 Moab's glory is no more. Evil they plan

46, 18: Thabor . . . Carmel: outstanding mountains of Palestine, symbols of strength, to which Nabuchodonosor is compared.

46, 25: Amon: the sun-god worshiped at Thebes, in Upper Egypt.

47, 2-7: This prophecy was fulfilled in 605/4 B. C.

47, 4: Tyre and Sidon: Phoenician cities associated commercially with the Philistines, and enemies of Nabuchodonosor; cf Jer 27, 1-4. Nabuchodonosor carried out a thirteen-year siege of Tyre which was only partially successful. Caphtor: probably the island of Crete, the traditional place of origin of the Philistines; cf Am 9, 7.

47, 5: Of the ancient Philistine cities, neither Gath nor Accaron (Jer 25, 20) is mentioned in this period of waning independence of the seacoast.

47, 6: Words of the Philistines.

48, 1-47: Moab was one of the Israelites' bitterest enemies. According to Flavius Josephus, Moab and Ammon were conquered by Nabuchodonosor in his twenty-third year, 582 B. C., five years after the destruction of Jerusalem.

against Hesebon: "Come, let us put an end to her as a people." You, too, Madmena, shall be reduced to silence; behind you stalks the sword. 3 b Listen! a cry from Horonaim of ruin and great destruction! 4 Moab is crushed, their outcry is heard in Soar. 5 The ascent of Luith they climb weeping; on the descent to Horonaim the cry of destruction is heard. 6 "Flee, save your lives, to survive like the wild ass in the desert!" 7 c Because you trusted in your works and your treasures, you also shall be captured. Chamos* shall go into exile, his priests and princes with him. 8 The destroyer comes upon every city, not a city escapes; ruined is the valley, wasted the plain, as the Lord has said. 9 Set up a memorial for Moab, for it is an utter wasteland; its cities are turned into ruins where no one dwells. 10 [Cursed be he who does the Lord's work remissly, cursed he who holds back his sword from blood.] 11 d Moab has been tranquil from his youth, has rested upon his lees; he was not poured from one flask to another, he went not into exile. Thus he kept his taste, and his scent was not lost.

12 Hence, the days shall come, says the Lord, when I will send him coopers to turn him over; they shall empty his flasks and break his jars. 13 e Chamos shall disappoint Moab, as Israel was disappointed by Bethel in which they trusted.

14 How can you say, "We are heroes, men valiant in war"? 15 The ravager of Moab and his cities advances, the flower of his youth goes down to be slaughtered, says the King, the Lord of hosts by name. 16 Near at hand is Moab's ruin, his disaster hastens apace. 17 Mourn for him, all you his neighbors, all you who knew him well! Say: How the strong staff is broken, the glorious rod! 18 f Come down from glory, sit on the ground, you that dwell in Dibon; Moab's ravager has come up against you, he has ruined your strongholds. 19 g Stand by the wayside, watch closely, you that dwell in Aroer; ask the man who flees, the woman who tries to escape: say to them, "What has happened?" 20 h Moab is disgraced, yes, destroyed, howl and cry out; publish it at the Arnon, Moab is ruined!

21 i For judgment has come on the land of the plateau: on Helon, Jasa, and Mephaath, 22 on Dibon, Nebo, and Beth-Diblathaim, 23 on Cariathaim, Beth-Gamul, and Beth-Maon, 24 on Carioth and on Bosra: on all the cities of Moab, far and near.

25 Moab's strength is broken, his might is shattered, says the Lord.

26 Because he boasted against the Lord, make Moab drunk so that he retches and vomits, and he too becomes a laughingstock. 27 j Is Israel a laughingstock to you? Was she caught among thieves, that you shake your head whenever you speak of her?

28 Leave the cities, dwell in the crags, you that dwell in Moab. Be like a dove that nests out of reach on the edge of a chasm. 29 k We have heard of the pride of Moab, pride beyond bounds: his loftiness, his pride, his scorn, his insolence of heart. 30 I know, says the Lord, his arrogance; liar in boast, liar in deed. 31 l And so I wail over Moab, over all Moab I cry, over the men of Cir-heres I moan. 32 m More than for Jazer I weep over you, vineyard of Sabama. Your tendrils trailed down to the sea, as far as Jazer they stretched. Upon your harvest, upon your vintage, the ravager has fallen. 33 Joy and jubilation are at an end in the fruit gardens of the land of Moab. I drain the wine from the wine vats, the treader treads no more, the vintage shout is stilled.

34 n The cry of Hesebon and Eleale is heard as far as Jasa; they call from Segor to Horonaim, and to Eglath-shilishiya, for even the waters of Nemrim turn into a desert. 35 I will leave no one in Moab, says the Lord, to offer a holocaust on the high place, or to burn incense to his gods. 36 o Hence the wail of flutes for Moab is in my heart; for the men of Cir-heres the wail of flutes is in my heart: the wealth they acquired has perished. 37 p Every head has been made bald, every beard shaved; every hand is gashed, and the loins of all are clothed in sackcloth. 38 On every roof of Moab and in all his squares there is mourning; I have shattered Moab 39 like a pot that no one wants, says the Lord. How terror seizes Moab, and wailing! How he turns his back in shame! Moab has become a laughingstock and a horror to all his neighbors!

40 q For thus says the Lord: Behold, like an eagle he soars, spreads his wings over Moab. 41 r Cities are taken, strongholds seized: on that day the hearts of Moab's heroes are like the heart of a woman in travail. 42 s Moab shall be destroyed, no more a people, because he boasted against the Lord. 43 t Terror, pit, and trap be upon you, people of Moab, says the Lord. 44 He who flees from the terror falls into the pit; he who climbs from the pit is caught in the trap; for I will bring these things upon Moab in the year of their punishment, says the Lord. 45 u In Hesebon's shadow stop short the exhausted refugees; for fire breaks forth from Hesebon, and a blaze from the house of Sehon: it consumes the brow of Moab, the skull of the noisemakers.

46 Woe to you, O Moab, you are ruined,
O people of Chamos! Your sons are taken into exile, your daughters into captivity. 47 v But I will change the lot of Moab in the days to come, says the Lord.
Thus far the judgment on Moab.

CHAPTER 49.

Against the Ammonites. 1 Concerning the Ammonites, thus says the Lord: Has Israel no sons? has he no heir? Why then has Melchom* disinherited Gad, why have his people settled in Gad's cities? 2 w But the days are coming, says the Lord, when against Rabba of the Ammonites* I will sound the battle alarm; she shall become a mound of ruins, and her daughter cities shall be destroyed by fire. Israel shall inherit those who disinherited her, says the Lord. 3 x Howl, Hesebon, for the ravager approaches, shriek, daughters of Rabba! Put on sackcloth and mourn, run to and fro, gashing yourselves; for Melchom goes into exile along with his priests and captains.

4 Why do you glory in your strength,
your ebbing strength, rebellious daughter?
You who trust in your treasures, saying,
"Who can come against me?" 5 y I am bringing terror upon you, says the Lord God of hosts, from all round about you;
you shall be scattered, each man in headlong flight, with no one to rally the fugitives. 6 But afterward I will change the lot of the Ammonites, says the Lord.

Against Edom.* 7 Concerning Edom, thus says the Lord of hosts: Is there no more wisdom in Theman,* has counsel perished from the prudent, has their wisdom become corrupt? 8 z Flee, retreat, hide in deep holes, you who live in Dedan: for I will bring destruction upon Esau* when I come to punish him. 9 a If vintagers came upon you, they would leave no gleanings; if thieves by night, they would destroy as they pleased. 10 b So I myself will strip Esau; I will uncover his retreats so that he cannot hide. He is ruined: sons, and brothers, and neighbors, so that he is no more. 11 c Leave your orphans behind, I will keep them alive; your widows, let them trust in me.

12 For thus says the Lord: d Even those not sentenced to drink the cup must drink it! Shall you then go unpunished? You shall not go unpunished; you shall surely drink it. 13 e By my own self I have sworn, says the Lord: Bosra* shall become an object of horror and a disgrace, a desolation and a curse; she and all her cities shall become ruins forever.

14 I have heard a report from the Lord,
a herald has been sent among the nations: Gather together, move against her, rise up for battle. 15 f Small will I make you among the nations, despised among men!
16 g The terror you spread beguiled you, and your presumption of heart; you that live in rocky crags, that hold the heights of the hill: though you build your nest high as the eagle, from there I will drag you down, says the Lord.

17 Edom shall become an object of horror. Every passer-by shall be appalled and catch his breath at all her wounds.

18 h As when Sodom, Gomorra, and their neighbors were overthrown, says the Lord, not a man shall dwell there: no
one shall visit there.
19 i As when a lion comes up from the thicket of Jordan to the permanent feeding grounds, so I, in an instant, will drive men off; and whom I choose I will establish there! For who is like me? who can call me to account? What shepherd can stand against me? 20 Therefore, hear the counsel of the Lord, which he has taken against Edom; hear the plans he has made against those that live in Theman: They shall be dragged away, even the smallest sheep, their own pasture shall be aghast because of them. 21 At the noise of their fall the earth quakes, to the Red Sea the outcry is heard! 22 j See! like an eagle he soars aloft, and spreads his wings over Bosra; on that day the hearts of Edom's heroes shall be like the heart of a woman in travail.

Against Damascus. Concerning Damascus. 23 k Hamath and Arphad* are covered with shame, they have heard bad news; worried, they toss like the sea which cannot rest. 24 Damascus is weakened, she turns to flee, panic has seized
her. Distress and pangs take hold of her, like those of a woman in travail. 25 How can the city of glory be forsaken, the town of delight! 26 But now her young men shall fall in her streets, and all her warriors shall be stilled. On that day, says the Lord of hosts, 27 I will set fire to the wall of Damascus, and it shall devour
the palaces of Benadad.*

Against Arabia. 28 l Of Cedar and the kingdoms of Asor, defeated by Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, thus says the Lord: Rise up, attack Cedar, ravage the Easterners. 29 m Their tents and herds shall be taken away, their tent curtains and all their goods; their camels they shall carry off for themselves, and shout
from upon them, "Terror on every side!"
30 Flee! leave your homes, hide in deep holes, you that live in Asor, says the Lord; for counsel has been taken against you, a plan has been formed against you [Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon]. 31 Rise up! set out against a nation that is at peace, that lives secure, says the Lord,
that has no gates or bars, and dwells alone. 32 n Their camels shall be your booty, their many herds your spoil; I will scatter to the winds those who shave their temples, from all sides I will bring ruin upon them, says the Lord. 33 Asor shall become a haunt of jackals, a desert forever, where no man lives, no human being stays.

Against Elam. 34 The following word of the Lord against Elam* came to the prophet Jeremia at the beginning of the reign of Sedecia, king of Juda: 35 Thus says the Lord of hosts: Behold, I will break the bow of Elam, the mainstay of their might. 36 I will bring upon Elam
the four winds from the four ends of the heavens: I will scatter them to all these winds, till there is no nation to which the outcasts of Elam shall not come. 37 I will break Elam before their foes, before those who seek their life; I will bring evil upon them, my burning wrath, says
the Lord. I will send the sword to pursue them until I have completely made an end of them; 38 my throne I will set up in Elam and destroy from there king and princes, says the Lord. 39 But in the days
to come I will change the lot of Elam, says the Lord.

CHAPTER 50.

The First Prophecy against Babylon. 1
The word which the Lord spoke against Babylon,* against the land of the Chal-
deans, through the prophet Jeremia: o
2 Announce and publish it among the nations; publish it, hide it not, but say:
Babylon is taken, Bel* confounded, Merodach shattered; her images are put to shame, her idols shattered. 3 p A people from the north advances against her to turn her land into a desert, so that no one shall live there, because man and beast

49, 34: Elam: the ancient kingdom to the east of Babylonia.

50, 1—51, 58: a collection of miscellaneous prophecies against Babylon which now stands as the introduction to the story in Jer 51, 59-64. The Greek text of 50, 1 omits through the prophet Jeremia, and it is in fact likely that these oracles are not Jeremia's, but were composed by other inspired writers after the fall of Jerusalem, who may have used some of Jeremia's texts. Babylon fell to the Persians in 538 B. C.

50, 2: Bel: originally the name of the god of Nippur in Mesopotamia, then identified with Merodach (Marduk), chief god of Babylon.

have fled away. 4 q In those days, at that time, says the Lord, the men of Israel and of Juda shall come, weeping as they come, to seek the Lord, their God; 5 r to their goal in Sion they shall ask the way. "Come, let us join ourselves to the Lord with covenant everlasting, never to be forgotten." 6 s Lost sheep were my people, their shepherds misled them, straggling on the mountains; from mountain to hill they wandered, losing the way to their fold. 7 t Whoever came upon them devoured them, and their enemies said, "We incur no guilt, because they sinned against the Lord, the hope of their fathers, their abode of justice."

8 u Flee from Babylon, leave the land of the Chaldeans, be like the rams at the head of the flock. 9 v See, I am stirring up against Babylon a band of great nations from the north; from there they advance, and she shall be taken. Their arrows are arrows of the skilled warrior; none shall return empty. 10 Chaldea shall be their plunder, and all her plunderers shall be enriched, says the Lord. 11 Yes, rejoice and exult, you that plunder my portion; frisk like calves on the green, snort like stallions! 12 w Your mother shall be sorely put to shame, she that bore you shall be abashed; see, the last of the nations, a desert, dry and waste. 13 x Because of the Lord's wrath she shall be empty, and become a total desert; everyone who passes by Babylon will be appalled and catch his breath, at all her wounds. 14 y Take your posts encircling Babylon, you who bend the bow; shoot at her, spare not your arrows, 15 z raise the war cry against her on all sides. She surrenders, her bastions fall, her walls are torn down:* vengeance of the Lord is this! Take revenge on her, as she has done, do to her; for she sinned against the Lord. 16 a Cut off from Babylon the sower and him who wields the sickle in harvest time! Before the destroying sword, each of them turns to his own people, everyone flees to his own land.

17 b A stray sheep was Israel that lions pursued; formerly the king of Assyria devoured her, now Nabuchodonosor of Babylon gnaws her bones. 18 c Therefore, thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel:

I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, as once I punished the king of Assyria; 19 d but I will bring back Israel to her fold, to feed on Carmel and Basan, and on Mount Ephraim and Galaad, till she has her fill. 20 e In those days, at that time, says the Lord: They shall seek Israel's guilt, but it shall be no more, and Juda's sins, but these shall no longer be found; for I will forgive the remnant I preserve.

21 Attack the land of Merathaim,* and those who live in Pecod; slaughter and doom them, says the Lord, do all I have commanded you. 22 Battle alarm in the land, dire destruction! 23 f How has the hammer of the whole earth been broken and shattered! What an object of horror Babylon has become among the nations! 24 g You ensnared yourself, and were caught, O Babylon, before you knew it! You were discovered and seized, because you challenged the Lord. 25 h The Lord opens his armory and brings forth the weapons of his wrath; for the Lord God of hosts has work to do in the land of the Chaldeans.

26 Come upon her from every side, open her granaries, pile up her goods in heaps and doom it, leave not a remnant. 27 Slay all her oxen, let them go down to the slaughter; woe to them! their day has come, the time of their punishment. 28 i Listen! the fugitives, the escaped from the land of Babylon: they announce in Sion the vengeance of the Lord, our God. 29 j Call up against Babylon archers, all who bend the bow; encamp around her, let no one escape. Repay her for her deeds; as she has done, do to her, for she insulted the Lord, the Holy One of Israel. 30 k Therefore her young men shall fall in her streets, all her warriors shall perish on that day, says the Lord.

31 I am against you, man of insolence, says the Lord God of hosts; for your day has come, the time for me to punish you. 32 Insolence stumbles and falls; there is no one to raise him up. I will kindle in his cities a fire that shall devour everything around him. 33 Thus says the Lord of hosts: Oppressed are the men of Israel, and with them the men of Juda; all their captors hold them fast and refuse to let them go. 34 l Strong is their avenger, whose name is Lord of hosts; he will defend their cause with success, and give rest to the earth, but unrest to those who live in Babylon.

50, 15: Her walls are torn down: the prophet is not predicting the details of Babylon's downfall, but describing such a downfall in conventional language. Actually, Babylon was surrendered peaceably, without destruction.

50, 21: Merathaim, "twice bitter," and Pecod, "punishment," are here symbolic terms for Babylonia, though probably they suggest also the names of regions in that country.

35 A sword upon the Chaldeans, says the Lord, upon Babylon's people, her princes and wise men! 36 A sword upon the soothsayers, that they may become fools! A sword upon her warriors, that they may tremble; 37 m a sword upon her motley throng, that they may become women! A sword upon her treasures, that they may be plundered; 38 n a sword upon her waters, that they may dry up! For it is a land of idols, and they shall be made frantic by fearful things. 39 o Hence, wildcats and desert beasts shall dwell there, and ostriches shall occupy it; never again shall it be peopled, or lived in, from age to age. 40 p As when God overturned Sodom and Gomorra, with their neighbors, says the Lord, not a man shall dwell there, no human being shall tarry there.

41 q See! a people comes from the north, a great nation, and mighty kings roused from the ends of the earth. 42 Bow and javelin they wield, cruel and pitiless are they; they sound like the roaring sea, as they ride forth on steeds, each in his place for battle against you, daughter Babylon. 43 r The king of Babylon hears news of them, and helpless fall his hands; anguish seizes him, throes like a mother's in childbirth. 44 s As when a lion comes up from the Jordan's thicket to the permanent feeding grounds, so I, in one instant, will drive them off, and whom I choose I will establish there; for who is like me? who calls me to account? what shepherd can stand against me? 45 t Therefore hear the counsel of the Lord which he has taken against Babylon; hear the plans he has made against the land of the Chaldeans: They shall be dragged away, even the smallest sheep; their own pasture shall be aghast because of them. 46 u At the cry "Babylon is captured!" the earth quakes; the outcry is heard among the nations.

CHAPTER 51.

The Second Prophecy against Babylon. 1 Thus says the Lord: See! I rouse against Babylon, and against those who live in Chaldea, a destroying wind. 2 v Against Babylon I will send winnowers to winnow her and lay waste her land; they shall besiege her from all sides on the day of affliction. 3 w Let the bowman draw his bow, and flaunt his coat of mail; spare not her young men, doom her entire army. 4 x The slain shall fall in the land of Chaldea, the transfixed, in her streets; 5 for Israél and Juda are not widowed of their God, the Lord of hosts, and the Chaldean land is full of guilt to be punished by the Holy One of Israel.

6 y Flee out of Babylon; let each one save his life, perish not for her guilt; this is a time of vengeance for the Lord, he pays her her due. 7 z Babylon was a golden cup in the hand of the Lord which made the whole earth drunk; the nations drank its wine, with this they have become mad. 8 a Babylon suddenly falls and is crushed: howl over her! Bring balm for her wounds, in case she can be healed. 9 b "We have tried to heal Babylon, but she cannot be healed. Leave her, let us go, each to his own land." Her judgment reaches heaven, it touches the clouds. 10 c The Lord has brought to light our just cause; come, let us tell in Sion what the Lord, our God, has done.

11 d Sharpen the arrows, fill the quivers; the Lord has stirred up the spirit of Media's kings;* Babylon he is resolved to destroy. Yes, it is the vengeance of the Lord, vengeance for his temple. 12 Against the walls of Babylon raise a signal, make strong the watch; post sentries, arrange ambushes! For the Lord has planned and he will carry out his threat against the inhabitants of Babylon. 13 e You who dwell by mighty waters, rich in treasure, your end has come, the term at which you shall be cut off!

14 The Lord of hosts has sworn by himself: I will fill you with men as numerous as locusts, who shall raise over you the vintage shout! 15 f He has sworn who made the earth by his power, and established the world by his wisdom, and stretched out the heavens by his skill. 16 When he thunders, the waters in the heavens roar, and he brings up clouds from the end of the earth; he makes the lightning flash in the rain, and releases stormwinds from their chambers. 17 Every man is stupid, ignorant; every artisan is put to shame by his idol: he molded a fraud, without breath of life. 18 Nothingness are they, a ridiculous work, that will perish in their time of punishment. 19 Not like these is the portion of Jacob, he is the creator of all things; Israel is his very own tribe, Lord of hosts is his name.

20 You are my hammer, my weapon for war; with you I shatter nations, with you I destroy kingdoms. 21 g With you I shatter horse and rider, with you I shatter chariot and driver. 22 h With you I shatter man and wife, with you I shatter old and young, with you I shatter youth and maiden. 23 With you I shatter the shepherd and his flock, with you I shatter the farmer and his team, with you I shatter satraps and prefects. 24 i Thus will I repay Babylon, and all who live in Chaldea all the evil they did to Sion, as you shall see with your own eyes, says the Lord.

25 j Beware! I am against you, destroying mountain, destroyer of the entire earth, says the Lord; I will stretch forth my hand against you, roll you down over the cliffs, and make you a burnt mountain: 26 k they will not take from you a cornerstone, or a foundation stone: ruins forever shall you be, says the Lord.

27 l Raise a signal on the earth, blow the trumpet among the nations; dedicate peoples to war against her, summon against her the kingdoms, Ararat, Menni, and Aschenez;* appoint recruiting officers against her, send up horses like bristling locusts. 28 Dedicate peoples to war against her: the king of Media, its governors and all its prefects, every land in his domain. 29 The earth quakes and writhes, the Lord's plan against Babylon is carried out, turning the land of Babylon into a desert where no one lives. 30 Babylon's warriors have ceased to fight, they remain in their strongholds; dried up is their strength, they have become women. Burned are their homes, and broken their bars. 31 m One runner meets another herald meets herald, telling the king of Babylon that all his city is taken. 32 The fords have been seized, and the fortresses set on fire, while warriors are in panic.

33 n For thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Daughter Babylon is like a shreshing floor at the time it is trodden; yet a little while, and the harvest time will come for her. 34 He has consumed me,* routed me, [Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon,] he has left me as an empty vessel; he has swallowed me like a dragon: filled his belly with my delights, and cast me out. 35 My torn flesh be upon Babylon, says the city on Sion; my blood upon the people of Chaldea, says Jerusalem. 36 But now, thus says the Lord: Surely I will defend your cause, I will avenge you; I will dry up her sea, and drain her fountain. 37 o Babylon shall become a heap of ruins, a haunt of jackals; a place of horror and ridicule, where no one lives. 38 p They all roar like lions, growl like lion cubs. 39 When they are parched, I will set a drink before them to make them drunk, that they may be overcome with perpetual sleep, never to awaken, says the Lord.

40 I will bring them down like lambs to the slaughter, like rams and goats. 41 q How has she been seized, made captive, the glory of the whole world! What a horror has Babylon become among nations: 42 against Babylon the sea rises, she is overwhelmed by the roaring waves! 43 Her cities have become a desert, parched and arid land where no man lives, and no one passes through. 44 I will punish Bel in Babylon, and make him disgorge what he swallowed; peoples shall stream to him no more. The wall of Babylon falls! 45 Leave her, my people, let each one save himself from the burning wrath of the Lord.

46 r Be not discouraged for fear of rumors spread in the land; this year the rumor comes, then violence in the land, tyrant against tyrant. 47 But behold, the days are coming when I will punish the idols of Babylon; her whole land shall be put to shame, and all her slain shall lie fallen within her. 48 s Then heaven, and earth, and everything in them shall shout over Babylon with joy, when the destroyers come against her from the north, says the Lord. 49 Babylon, too, must fall, O slain of Israel, as at the hands of Babylon have fallen the slain of all the earth.

50 You who have escaped the sword, go on, stand not still; Remember the Lord from afar, let Jerusalem come to your minds. 51 t We are ashamed because we have heard taunts, confusion covers our faces; strangers have entered the holy places of the house of the Lord. 52 But behold, the days are coming, says the Lord, when I will punish her idols, and in her whole land the wounded will groan. 53 u Though Babylon scale the heavens, and make her strong heights inaccessible, destroyers from me shall reach her, says the Lord. 54 Hear! loud cries from Babylon, dire destruction from the land of the Chaldeans; 55 for the Lord lays Babylon waste, stills her loud cry, though her waves were roaring like mighty waters, and their clamor was heard afar. 56 v For the destroyer comes upon her, [Babylon,] her heroes are captured, their bows broken; the Lord is a God who requites, he will surely repay.

57 I will make her princes and her wise men drunk, her governors, her prefects, and her warriors, so that they sleep an eternal sleep, never to awaken, says the King, whose name is the Lord of hosts. 58 w Thus says the Lord of hosts: The walls of spacious Babylon shall be leveled utterly; her lofty gates shall be destroyed by fire. The toil of the nations is for nothing; for the flames the peoples weary themselves.

The Prophecy Sent to Babylon. 59 This was the errand given by the prophet Jeremia to Saraia, son of Neria, son of Maasia, when he went to Babylon for the king in the fourth year of the reign of Sedecia; Saraia* was chief quartermaster. 60 Jeremia had written all the misfortune that was to befall Babylon* in a single book: all these words that were written against Babylon. 61 x And Jeremia said to Saraia: When you reach Babylon, see that you read aloud all these words, 62 and then say: O Lord, you yourself threatened to destroy this place, so that neither man nor beast should dwell in it, since it would remain an everlasting desert. 63 y When you have finished reading this book, tie a stone to it and throw it in the Euphrates, 64 and say: Thus shall Babylon sink. Never shall she rise, because of the evil I am bringing upon her. [To "weary themselves" are the words of Jeremia.]*

VI: HISTORICAL APPENDIX*

CHAPTER 52.

Capture of Jerusalem. 1 Sedecia was twenty-one years old when he became king,z and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Amital, daughter of Jeremia of Lobna. 2 He did what was evil in the eyes of the Lord, just as Joakim had done. 3 Indeed, what was done in Jerusalem and in Juda so angered the Lord that he cast them out from his presence.

Sedecia rebelled against the king of Babylon. 4 a In the tenth month of the ninth year of his reign, on the tenth day of the month,* Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and his whole army advanced against Jerusalem, encamped around it, and built siege walls on every side. The siege of the city continued until the eleventh year of King Sedecia.

6 On the ninth day of the fourth month, when famine had gripped the city and the people had no more bread, 7 the city walls were breached. Then all the soldiers took to flight and left the city by night through the gate between the two walls which was near the king's garden. With the Chaldeans surrounding the city, they went in the direction of the Araba. 8 But the Chaldean army pursued the king and overtook Sedecia in the desert near Jericho, while his whole army fled from him.

9 The king, therefore, was arrested and brought to Ribla, in the land of Hamath, to the king of Babylon, who pronounced sentence on him. 10 As Sedecia looked on, the king of Babylon slew his sons as well as all the princes of Juda at Ribla. 11
Then he blinded Sedecia, bound him with fetters, and had him brought to Babylon and kept in prison until the day of his death.

Destruction of Jerusalem. 12 On the tenth day of the fifth month (this was in the nineteenth year* of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon), Nabu-zardan, captain of the bodyguard, came to Jerusalem as the representative of the king of Babylon.
13 He burned the house of the Lord, the palace of the king, and all the houses of Jerusalem; every large building he destroyed with fire. 14 And the Chaldean troops who were with the captain of the guard tore down all the walls that surrounded Jerusalem.

15 Then Nabu-zardan, captain of the guard, led into exile the rest of the people left in the city, and those who had deserted to the king of Babylon, and the rest of the artisans. 16 But some of the country's poor, Nabu-zardan, captain of the guard, left behind as vinedressers and farmers.

17 The bronze pillars that belonged to the house of the Lord, and the wheeled carts and the bronze sea in the house of the Lord, the Chaldeans broke into pieces;
they carried away all the bronze to Babylon. 18 They took also the pots, the shovels, the snuffers, the bowls, the pans, and all the bronze vessels used for service. 19
The basins also, the fire holders, the bowls, the pots, the lampstands, the pans,
the sacrificial bowls which were of gold or silver, these too the captain of the guard carried off, 20 as well as the two pillars, the one sea, and the twelve oxen of bronze under the sea, and the wheeled carts which King Solomon had made for the house of the Lord. The bronze of all these furnishings could not be weighed.

21 Each of the pillars was eighteen cubits high, and a thread of twelve cubits encircled it; each was four fingers thick, and hollow inside. 22 A bronze capital
five cubits high surmounted the one pillar, and a network with pomegrantes encircled the capital, all of brass; and so for the other pillar. The pomegranates
. . . 23 there were ninety-six pomegranates.
[Space.] There were a hundred pomegranates, all around the network.

24 The captain of the guard also took Saraia, the high priest, Sophonia, the second priest, and the three keepers of the entry. 25 And from the city he took one courtier, a commander of soldiers, and seven men in the personal service of the king who were present in the city, and the scribe of the army commander who mustered the people of the land, and sixty of the common people who were in the city. 26 The captain of the guard, Nabu-zardan, arrested these 27 and brought them to the king of Babylon at Ribla, who had them struck down and put to death in Ribla, in the land of Hamath.

Thus was Juda exiled from her land. 28
*This is the number of the people whom Nabuchodonosor led away captive: in his seventh year, three thousand and twenty-three people of Juda; 29 in the eighteenth year of Nabuchodonosor, eight hundred and thirty-two persons from Jerusalem; 30 in the twenty-third year of Nabuchodonosor, Nabu-zardan, captain of the guard, exiled seven hundred and forty-five people of Juda: four thousand six hundred persons in all.

Favor Shown to Joachin. 31 b In the thirty-seventh year* of the exile of Joa-chin, king of Juda, on the twenty-fifth day of the twelfth month, Evil-Merodach, king of Babylon, in the inaugural year of his reign, took up the case of Joachin, king of Juda, and released him from prison. 32 He spoke kindly to him and gave him a throne higher than that of the other kings* who were with him in Babylon. 33 Joachin took off his prison garb and ate at the king's table as long as he lived. 34 The allowance given him by the king of Babylon was a perpetual allowance, in fixed daily amounts, all the days of his life until the day of his death.

52, 12: On the tenth day of the fifth month . . . nineteenth year: the tenth of Ab—July/August in 587 B. C.

52, 28-30: These verses are missing in the Greek text and have not been taken from 4 Kgs 25, but from some other source using a different system of chronology. Besides the deportations of 598 and 587 B.C., mention is made here of a final one that took place in the year 582/1, possibly as a sequel to the murder of Godolia; cf Jer 41, 2.

52, 31-34: In the year 561/0 B. C., Joachin was released from prison by Nabuchodonosor's successor Awel-Marduk (Evil-Merodach), who reigned only two years. Babylonian records confirm the fact that Joachin and his family were supported at public expense.

THE BOOK OF LAMENTATIONS

The sixth century B. C. was an age of crisis, a turning point in the history of Israel. With the destruction of the temple and the interruption of its ritual, the exile of the leaders and loss of national sovereignty, an era came to an end. Not long after the fall of Jerusalem (587) an eyewitness of the national humiliation composed these five laments. They combine confession of sin, grief over the suffering and humiliation of Sion, submission to merited chastisement, and strong faith in the constancy of Yahweh's love and power to restore. This union of poignant grief and unquenchable hope reflects the constant prophetic vision of the weakness of man and the strength of God's love; it also shows how Israel's faith in Yahweh could survive the shattering experience of national ruin.

As a literary work, the Book of Lamentations is carefully constructed according to a familiar poetic device. The first four poems are acrostics in which the separate stanzas begin with successive letters of the Hebrew alphabet from the first to the last. Far from destroying the spontaneous pathos of the songs, this literary feature permits a symbolic and disciplined expression of the profound grief, the sinful responsibility, and the enduring hope of the suffering community. The figure of Israel as the bride of Yahweh, familiar from the prophets, appears here again; but now Sion is a desolate widow, the Judaea Capta of Titus' memorial coins, sustained only by the faith that God's chastisement will eventually give place to His infinite compassion.

CHAPTER 1.

Jerusalem Abandoned and Disgraced.

1 How lonely she is now, the once crowded city! Widowed is she who was mistress over nations; the princess among the provinces has been made a toiling slave.
2 a Bitterly she weeps at night, tears
upon her cheeks, with not one to console her of all her dear ones; her friends have all betrayed her and become her enemies.
3 b Juda has fled into exile from oppression and cruel slavery; yet where she lives among the nations she finds no place to rest: all her persecutors come upon her where she is narrowly confined.
4 c The roads to Sion mourn for lack of pilgrims going to her feasts; all her gateways are deserted, her priests groan,
her virgins sigh; she is in bitter grief.
5 Her foes are uppermost, her enemies are at ease; the Lord has punished her for her many sins. Her little ones have gone away, captive before the foe.
6 Gone from daughter Sion is all her glory: her princes, like rams that find no pasture, have gone off without strength before their captors.
7 Jerusalem is mindful of the days of her wretched homelessness, when her people fell into enemy hands, and she had no one to help her; when her foes gloated over her, laughed at her ruin.
8 d Through the sin of which she is guilty, Jerusalem is defiled; all who esteemed her think her vile now that they see her nakedness; she herself groans and turns away.
9 Her filth is on her skirt; she gave no thought how she would end. Astounding is her downfall, with no one to console her. Look, O Lord, upon her misery, for the enemy has triumphed!
10 e The foe stretched out his hand to all her treasures; she has seen those nations enter her sanctuary whom you forbade to come into your assembly.
11 f All her people groan, searching for bread; they give their treasures for food, to retain the breath of life. "Look, O Lord, and see how worthless I have become!
12 "Come, all you who pass by the way, look and see whether there is any suffering like my suffering, which has been dealt me when the Lord afflicted me on the day of his blazing wrath.
13 g "From on high he sent fire down into my very frame; he spread a net for my feet, and overthrew me. He left me desolate, in pain all the day.
14 "He has kept watch over my sins; by his hand they have been plaited: they have settled about my neck,* he has brought my strength to its knees; the Lord has delivered me into their grip, I am unable to rise.

15 h "All the mighty ones in my midst the Lord has cast away; he summoned an army against me to crush my young men; the Lord has trodden in the wine press virgin daughter Juda.

16 i "At this I weep, my eyes run with tears: far from me are all who could console me, any who might revive me; my sons were reduced to silence when the enemy prevailed."

17 j Sion stretched out her hands, but there was no one to console her; the Lord gave orders against Jacob for his neighbors to be his foes; Jerusalem has become in their midst a thing unclean.

18 k "The Lord is just; I had defied his command. Listen, all you peoples, and behold my suffering: my maidens and my youths have gone into captivity.

19 l "I cried out to my lovers,* but they failed me. My priests and my elders perished in the city; where they sought food for themselves, they found it not.

20 m "Look, O Lord, upon my distress: all within me is in ferment, my heart recoils within me from my monstrous rebellion. In the streets the sword bereaves, at home death stalks.

21 "Give heed to my groaning; there is no one to console me. All my enemies rejoice at my misfortune: it is you who have wrought it. Bring on the day you have proclaimed, that they may be even as I.

22 n "Let all their evil come before you;* deal with them as you have dealt with me for all my sins; my groans are many, and I am sick at heart."

CHAPTER 2.

The Lord's Wrath against Sion. 1 How the Lord in his wrath has detested daughter Sion! He has cast down from heaven to earth the glory of Israel,* unmindful of his footstool on the day of his wrath.

2 o The Lord has consumed without pity all the dwellings of Jacob; he has torn down in his anger the fortresses of daughter Juda; he has brought to the ground in dishonor her king and her princes.

3 He broke off, in fiery wrath, the horn* that was Israel's whole strength; he withheld the support of his right hand when the enemy approached; he blazed up in Jacob like a flaming fire devouring all about it.

4 p Like an enemy he made taut his bow; with his arrows in his right hand he took his stand as a foe, and slew all on whom the eye doted; over the tent of daughter Sion he poured out his wrath like fire.

5 The Lord has become an enemy, he has consumed Israel: consumed all her castles and destroyed her fortresses; for daughter Juda he has multiplied moaning and groaning.

6 q He has demolished his shelter like a garden booth, he has destroyed his dwelling; in Sion the Lord has made feast and Sabbath to be forgotten; he has scorned in fierce wrath both king and priest.

7 r The Lord has disowned his altar, rejected his sanctuary; the walls of her towers he has handed over to the enemy, who shout in the house of the Lord as on a feast day.

8 s The Lord marked for destruction the wall of daughter Sion: he stretched out the measuring line;* his hand brought ruin, yet he did not relent—he brought grief on wall and rampart till both succumbed.

9 t Sunk into the ground are her gates; he has removed and broken her bars. Her king and her princes are among the pagans; priestly instruction is wanting, and her prophets have not received any vision from the Lord.

10 u On the ground in silence sit the old men of daughter Sion; they strew dust* on their heads and gird themselves with sackcloth; the maidens of Jerusalem bow their heads to the ground.

11 v Worn out from weeping are my eyes, within me all is in ferment; my gall is poured out on the ground* because of 12 w They ask their mothers. "Where is the cereal?"—in vain, as they faint away like the wounded in the streets of the city, and breathe their last in their mothers' arms.

13 x To what can I liken or compare you, O daughter Jerusalem? What example can I show you for your comfort, virgin daughter Sion? For great as the sea is your downfall; who can heal you?

14 y Your prophets had for you false and specious visions; they did not lay bare your guilt, to avert your fate; they beheld for you in vision false and misleading portents.

15 z All who pass by clap their hands at you; they hiss and wag their heads over daughter Jerusalem: "Is this the all-beautiful city, the joy of the whole earth?"

16 a All your enemies open their mouths against you; they hiss and gnash their teeth. They say, "We have devoured her. This at last is the day we hoped for; we have lived to see it!"

17 b The Lord has done as he decreed: he has fulfilled the threat he set forth from days of old; he has destroyed and had no pity, letting the enemy gloat over you and exalting the horn of your foes.

18 Cry out to the Lord; moan, O daughter Sion! Let your tears flow like a torrent day and night; let there be no respite for you, no repose for your eyes.

19 Rise up, shrill in the night, at the beginning of every watch; pour out your heart like water in the presence of the Lord; lift up your hands to him for the lives of your little ones [who faint from hunger at the corner of every street.]

20 c "Look, O Lord, and consider: whom have you ever treated thus? Must women eat their offspring,* their well-formed children? Are priest and prophet to be slain in the sanctuary of the Lord?

21 d "Dead in the dust of the streets lie young and old; my maidens and young men have fallen by the sword; you have slain on the day of your wrath, slaughtered without pity.

22 e "You summoned as for a feast day terrors against me from all sides; there was not, on the day of your wrath, either fugitive or survivor; those whom I bore and reared my enemy has utterly destroyed."

CHAPTER 3.

Sufferings of the Prophet and His People. 1 I am a man who knows affliction*f* from the rod of his anger,* 2 one whom he has led and forced to walk in darkness, not in the light; 3 against me alone he brings back his hand again and again all the day.

4 g He has worn away my flesh and my skin, he has broken my bones; he has beset me round about with poverty and weariness; 6 h he has left me to dwell in the dark like those long dead.

7 He has hemmed me in with no escape and weighed me down with chains; 8 i even when I cry out for help, he stops my prayer; 9 he has blocked my ways with fitted stones, and turned my paths aside.

10 j A lurking bear he has been to me, a lion in ambush! 11 k He deranged my ways, set me astray, left me desolate. 12 l He bent his bow, and set me up as the target for his arrow.

13 m He pierces my sides with shafts from his quiver. 14 n I have become a laughingstock for all nations, their taunt all the day long; 15 o he has sated me with bitter food, made me drink my fill of wormwood.

16 He has broken my teeth with gravel, pressed my face in the dust; 17 my soul is deprived of peace, I have forgotten what happiness is; 18 I tell myself my future is lost, all that I hoped for from the Lord.

19 The thought of my homeless poverty is wormwood and gall; 20 remembering it over and over leaves my soul downcast within me. 21 But I will call this to mind, as my reason to have hope:

22 p The favors of the Lord are not exhausted, his mercies are not spent; 23 they are renewed each morning, so great is his faithfulness. 24 q My portion is the Lord, says my soul; therefore will I hope in him.

25 r Good is the Lord to one who waits

for him, to the soul that seeks him; 26 it is good to hope in silence for the saving help of the Lord. 27 It is good for a man to bear the yoke* from his youth.

28 Let him sit alone and in silence, when it is laid upon him. 29 s Let him put his mouth to the dust;* there may yet be hope. 30 t Let him offer his cheek to be struck, let him be filled with disgrace.

31 u For the Lord's rejection does not last forever; 32 v though he punishes, he takes pity, in the abundance of his mercies; 33 w he has no joy in afflicting or grieving the sons of men.

34 When anyone tramples underfoot all the prisoners in the land, 35 when he distorts men's rights in the very sight of the Most High, 36 when he presses a crooked claim, the Lord does not look on unconcerned.

37 Who commands, so that it comes to pass, except the Lord ordains it; 38 x except it proceeds from the mouth of the Most High, whether the thing be good or bad! 39 y Why should any living man complain, any mortal, in the face of his sins?

40 z Let us search and examine our ways that we may return to the Lord! 41 Let us reach out our hearts toward God in heaven! 42 We have sinned and rebelled; you have not forgiven us.

43 a You veiled yourself in wrath and pursued us, you slew us and took no pity; 44 you wrapped yourself in a cloud which prayer could not pierce. 45 b You have made us offscourings and refuse among the nations.

46 All our enemies have opened their mouths against us; 47 c terror and the pit have been our lot, desolation and destruction; 48 d my eyes run with streams of water over the downfall of the daughter of my people.

49 My eyes flow without ceasing, there is no respite, 50 till the Lord from heaven looks down and sees. 51 My eyes torment my soul at the sight of all the daughters of my city.

52 Those who were my enemies without cause hunted me down like a bird; 53 e they struck me down alive in the pit, and sealed me in with a stone. 54 The waters flowed over my head, and I said, "I am lost!"

55 f I called upon your name, O Lord, from the bottom of the pit; 56 you heard me call, "Let not your ear be deaf to my cry for help!" 57 You came to my aid when I called to you; you said, "Have no fear!"

58 You defended me in mortal danger, you redeemed my life. 59 g You see, O Lord, how I am wronged; do me justice! 60 You see all their vindictiveness, all their plots against me.

61 You hear their insults, O Lord, [all their plots against me], 62 the whispered murmurings of my foes, against me all the day; 63 whether they sit or stand, see, I am their taunt song.

64 Requite them as they deserve, O Lord, according to their deeds; 65 h give them hardness of heart, as your curse upon them; 66 pursue them in wrath and destroy them from under your heavens!

CHAPTER 4.

Miseries of the Besieged City. 1 How tarnished is the gold, how changed the noble metal; how the sacred stones lie strewn at every street corner!

2 i Sion's precious sons, fine gold their counterpart, now worth no more than earthen jars made by the hands of a potter!

3 j Even the jackals bare their breasts and suckle their young; the daughter of my people has become as cruel as the ostrich* in the desert.

4 The tongue of the suckling cleaves to the roof of its mouth in thirst; the babes cry for food, but there is no one to give it to them.

5 k Those accustomed to dainty food perish in the streets; those brought up in purple now cling to the ash heaps.

6 l The punishment of the daughter of my people is greater than the penalty of Sodom, which was overthrown in an instant without the turning of a hand.

7 Brighter than snow were her princes, whiter than milk, more ruddy than coral, more precious than sapphire.

8 m Now their appearance is blacker than soot, they are unrecognized on the streets; their skin shrinks on their bones, as dry as wood.

4, 3: Cruel as the ostrich: see note on Jb 39, 14ff. Jerusalem, in her distress, has abandoned her children.

9 Better for those who perish by the sword than for those who die of hunger,
who waste away, as though pierced through, lacking the fruits of the field!
10 n The hands of compassionate women boiled their own children, to serve them as mourners' food in the downfall of the daughter of my people.
11 o The Lord has spent his anger, poured out his blazing wrath; he has kindled a fire in Sion that has consumed
her foundations.
12 The kings of the earth did not believe, nor any of the world's inhabitants, that enemy or foe could enter the gates of Jerusalem.
13 p Because of the sins of her prophets and the crimes of her priests,* who shed in her midst the blood of the just!— 14 q They staggered blindly in the streets, soiled with blood, so that people could not touch even their garments:
15 "Away, you unclean!" they cried to them, "Away, away, do not draw near!"
If they left and wandered among the nations, nowhere could they remain.
16 The Lord himself has dispersed them, he regards them no more; he does not receive the priests with favor, nor show kindness to the elders.
17 Our eyes ever wasted away, looking in vain for aid; from our watchtower we watched for a nation* that could not save us.
18 Men dogged our steps so that we could not walk in our streets; our end drew near, and came; our time had expired.
19 r Our pursuers were swifter than eagles in the air, they harassed us on the mountains and waylaid us in the desert.
20 s The anointed one of the Lord, our breath of life,* was caught in their snares, he in whose shadow we thought we could live on among the nations.
21 t Though you rejoice and are glad,
O daughter Edom, you who dwell in the land of Us,* to you also shall the cup be passed; you shall become drunk and naked.
22 u Your chastisement is completed, O daughter Sion, he will not prolong your exile; but your wickedness, O daughter Edom, he will punish, he will lay bare your sins.

4, 13ff: The priests and the false prophets lulled the people into an illusory security (Jer 2, 8; 5, 31; 6, 13; etc.), condoning and entering into their crimes so that they themselves became unclean.

4, 17: A nation: Egypt, which failed to give effective aid against Babylon.

4, 20: Our breath of life: the king. This is a royal epithet borrowed from Egyptian usage, while the anointed one of the Lord is Israelite. After the disaster of 598 B. C. (4 Kgs 24, 1-17), Jerusalem could have hoped to live in peace amidst her neighbors; but they (vv 21f) as well as Babylon turned against her to ensure her total devastation in 587 B. C.

5, 6: In its state of abjection, Juda was forced to depend on its traditional enemies to the west and the east for subsistence. Mesopotamia is here called by the name it had long borne, Assyria, though in these times the power of the Assyrians had been superseded by that of the Chaldeans.

5, 7: Our fathers: collective responsibility, for good and for evil, was recognized in the Old Testament; cf Jer 31, 29. But the present generation is also personally guilty of sin (v 16).

5, 8: Administrations imposed by foreign powers were notoriously corrupt and inept. The Hebrew word for "slave" is the same as that used for an official (servant of the ruler); the author doubtless intends the double meaning here.

5, 14: The gate: the place of assembly, where city decisions were made and judgment given by the elders and other notables; see note on Ru 4, 1.

CHAPTER 5.

The Prophet's Lament and Supplication.
1 Remember, O Lord, what has befallen us, look, and see our disgrace: 2 v our inherited lands have been turned over to strangers, our homes to foreigners. 3 We have become orphans, fatherless; widowed are our mothers. 4 The water we drink we must buy, for our own wood we must pay. 5 On our necks is the yoke of those who drive us; we are worn out, but allowed no rest.
6 To Egypt we submitted, and to Assyria, to fill our need of bread. 7 Our fathers, who sinned, are no more; but we bear their guilt. 8 Slaves rule over us;*
there is no one to rescue us from their hands. 9 w At the peril of our lives we bring in our sustenance, in the face of the desert heat; 10 x our skin is shriveled up, as though by a furnace, with the searing blasts of famine.
11 y The wives in Sion were ravished by the enemy, the maidens in the cities of Juda; 12 z princes were gibbeted by them, elders shown no respect. 13 The youths carry the millstones, boys stagger under their loads of wood: 14 the old men have abandoned the gate,* the young men their music.
15 a The joy of our hearts has ceased,
our dance has turned into mourning; 16
the garlands have fallen from our heads:
woe to us, for we have sinned! 17 Over this our hearts are sick, at this our eyes grow dim: 18 that Mount Sion should be desolate, with jackals roaming there!

19 b You, O Lord, are enthroned forever; your throne stands from age to age. 20 c Why, then, should you forget us, abandon us so long a time? 21 d Lead us back to you, O Lord, that we may be restored: give us anew such days as we had of old. 22 e For now you have indeed rejected us, and in full measure turned your wrath against us.

THE BOOK OF BARUCH

The opening verses of this book ascribe it, or at least its first part, to Baruch, the well-known secretary of the prophet Jeremia. It contains five very different compositions, the first and the last in prose, the others in poetic form. The prose sections were certainly composed in Hebrew, though the earliest known form of the book is in Greek.

An observance of the feast of Tabernacles with a public prayer of penitence and petition (1, 15–3, 8), such as is supposed by the introduction (1, 1-14), would not have been possible during the lifetime of Baruch after the fall of Jerusalem; this indeed is suggested in the prayer itself (2, 26). The prayer is therefore to be understood as the pious reflection of a later Jewish writer upon the circumstances of the exiles in Babylon as he knew them from the Book of Jeremia. He expresses in their name sentiments called for by the prophet, and ascribes the wording of these sentiments to the person most intimately acquainted with Jeremia's teaching, namely, Baruch. The purpose of this literary device is to portray for his own and later generations the spirit of repentance which prompted God to bring the Exile to an end.

The lesson thus gained is followed by a hymn in praise of Wisdom (3, 9–4, 4), exalting the Law of Moses as the unique gift of God to Israel, the observance of which is the way to life and peace. The ideal city of Jerusalem is then represented (4, 5-29) as the solicitous mother of all exiles, who is assured in the name of God that all her children will be restored to her (4, 30–5, 9).

The final chapter is really a separate work, with a title of its own (6, 1). It is patterned after the earlier letter of Jeremia (Jer 29), in the spirit of the warnings against idolatry contained in Jer 10 and Is 44. Its earnestness is impressive, but in restating previous inspired teachings at a later day, it does so with no special literary grace.

Thus the principal divisions of the book are seen to be: I. Prayer of the Exiles (1, 1–3, 8). II. Praise of Wisdom in the Law of Moses (3, 9–4, 4). III. Jerusalem Bewails and Consoles Her Captive Children (4, 5–29). IV. Jerusalem Consoled: The Captivity about to End (4, 30–5, 9). V. The Letter of Jeremia against Idolatry (6, 1–72).

I: PRAYER OF THE EXILES

CHAPTER 1.

Meeting in Babylon. 1 Now these are the words of the scroll which Baruch, son of Neria, son of Maasia, son of Sedecia, son of Asadia, son of Helcia, wrote in Babylon,a 2 b in the fifth year [on the seventh day of the month,* at the time when the Chaldeans took Jerusalem and burnt it with fire]. 3 c And Baruch read the words of this scroll for Jechonia, son of Joakim, king of Juda, to hear it, as well as all the people who came to the reading: 4 the nobles, the kings' sons, the elders, and the whole people, small and great alike*d*—all who lived in Babylon by the river Sud.*

5 They wept and fasted and prayed before the Lord, 6 e and collected such funds as each could furnish. 7 These they sent to Jerusalem, to Joakim, son of Helcia, son of Salom, the priest, and to the priests and the whole people who were with him in Jerusalem. 8 [This was when he* received the vessels of the house of the Lord that had been removed from the temple, to restore them to the land of Juda, on the tenth of Sivan. These silver

1, 2: In the fifth year on the seventh day of the month: Jerusalem fell on the seventh day of the fifth month; cf 4 Kgs 25, 8; Jer 52, 12. Either the text read originally "the fifth month," or it refers to the observance of an anniversary of the fall of Jerusalem in 587 B. C.

1, 4: The river Sud: one of the Babylonian canals, not otherwise identified. In ancient non-Biblical Hebrew fragments discovered in 1952, there is reference to a river "Sur" in a similar context.

1, 8f: He: possibly Baruch; less likely Joakim . . . the priest (v 7), a member of the high-priestly family not mentioned elsewhere. The silver vessels here described are distinct from the vessels referred to in 4 Kgs 25, 14 and 1 Esd 1, 7ff. The author of this note may have thought of the fifth year (v 1) of Sedecia, in view of Jer 28, 1; 29, 1ff. A "fifth year," again with no month mentioned, is given in Ez 1, 2 for the inaugural vision of Ezechiel's prophetic career.

vessels Sedecia, son of Josia, king of Juda, had had made [9] after Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, carried off Jechonia, and the princes, and the skilled workers, and the nobles, and the people of the land from Jerusalem, as captives, and brought them to Babylon.]

[10] f Their message was: "We send you funds with which you are to procure holocausts, sin offerings, and frankincense, and to prepare cereal offerings; offer these on the altar of the Lord our God, [11] g and pray for the life of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and that of Baltasar, his son,* that their lifetimes may equal the duration of the heavens above the earth; [12] and that the Lord may give us strength, and light to our eyes, that we may live under the protective shadow of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and that of Baltasar, his son, and serve them long, finding favor in their sight.

Confession of Guilt. [13] "Pray for us also to the Lord, our God; for we have sinned against the Lord, our God, and the wrath and anger of the Lord have not yet been withdrawn from us at the present day. [14] h And read out publicly this scroll which we send you, in the house of the Lord, on the feast day and during the days of assembly.

[15] i "Justice is with the Lord, our God; and we today are flushed with shame, we men of Juda and citizens of Jerusalem, [16] that we, with our kings and rulers and priests and prophets, and with our fathers, [17] have sinned in the Lord's sight [18] and disobeyed him. We have neither heeded the voice of the Lord, our God, nor followed the precepts which the Lord set before us. [19] From the time the Lord led our fathers out of the land of Egypt until the present day, we have been disobedient to the Lord, our God, and only too ready not to heed his voice. [20] j And the evils and the curse which the Lord enjoined upon Moses, his servant, at the time he led our fathers forth from the land of Egypt to give us the land flowing with milk and honey, cling to us even today. [21] For we did not heed the voice of the Lord, our God, in all the words of the prophets whom he sent us, [22] but each one of us went off after the devices of our own wicked hearts, served other gods, and did evil in the sight of the Lord, our God.

CHAPTER 2.

[1] "And the Lord fulfilled the warning he had uttered against us: against our judges, who governed Israel, against our kings and princes, and against the men of Israel and Juda. [2] He brought down upon us evils so great that there has not been done anywhere under heaven what has been done in Jerusalem, as was written in the law of Moses: [3] that one after another* of us should eat the flesh of his son or of his daughter.k [4] l He has made us subject to all the kingdoms round about us, a reproach and a horror among all the nations round about to which the Lord has scattered us. [5] We are brought low, not raised up, because we sinned against the Lord, our God, not heeding his voice.

[6] m "Justice is with the Lord, our God; and we, like our fathers, are flushed with shame even today. [7] All the evils of which the Lord had warned us have come upon us; [8] and we did not plead before the Lord, or turn, each from the figments of his evil heart. [9] n And the Lord kept watch over the evils, and brought them home to us; for the Lord is just in all the works he commanded us to do, [10] but we did not heed his voice, or follow the precepts of the Lord which he set before us.

Prayer for Deliverance. [11] o "And now, Lord, God of Israel, you who led your people out of the land of Egypt with your mighty hand, with signs and wonders and great might, and with your upraised arm, so that you have made for yourself a name till the present day: [12] p we have sinned, been impious, and violated, O Lord, our God, all your statutes. [13] Let your anger be withdrawn from us, for we are left few in number among the nations to which you scattered us. [14] Hear, O Lord, our prayer of supplication, and deliver us for your own sake: grant us favor in the presence of our captors, [15] q that the whole earth may know that you are the Lord, our God, and that Israel and his descendants bear your name. 16 r O Lord, look down from your holy dwelling and take thought of us; turn, O Lord, your ear to hear us. 17 s Look directly at us, and behold: it is not the dead in the nether world, whose spirits have been taken from within them, who will give glory and vindication to the Lord. 18 t He whose soul is deeply grieved, who walks bowed and feeble, with failing eyes and famished soul, will declare your glory and justice, Lord!

19 "Not on the just deeds of our fathers and our kings do we base our plea for mercy in your sight, O Lord, our God. 20 You have brought your wrath and anger down upon us, as you had warned us through your servants the prophets: 21 u 'Thus says the Lord: Bend your shoulders to the service of the king of Babylon, that you may continue in the land I gave your fathers: 22 for if you do not hear the Lord's voice so as to serve the king of Babylon, 23 v I will make to cease from the cities of Juda and from the streets of Jerusalem the sounds of joy and the sounds of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride; and all the land shall be deserted, without inhabitants.' 24 w But we did not heed your voice, or serve the king of Babylon, and you fulfilled the threats you had made through your servants the prophets, to have the bones of our kings and the bones of our fathers brought out from their burial places. 25 x And indeed, they lie exposed* to the heat of day and the frost of night. They died in dire anguish, by hunger and the sword and plague. 26 y And you reduced the house which bears your name* to what it is today, for the wickedness of the kingdom of Israel and the kingdom of Juda.

God's Promises Recalled. 27 "But with us, O Lord, our God, you have dealt in all your clemency and in all your great mercy. 28 This was your warning through your servant Moses, the day you ordered him to write down your law in the presence of the Israelites: 29 If you do not heed my voice, surely this great and numerous throng will dwindle away among the nations to which I will scatter them. 30 z For I know they will not heed me, because they are a stiff-necked people. But in the land of their captivity they shall have a change of heart; 31 a they shall know that I, the Lord, am their God. I will give them hearts, and heedful ears; 32 b and they shall praise me in the land of their captivity, and shall invoke my name. 33 Then they shall turn back from their stiff-necked stubbornness, and from their evil deeds, because they shall remember the fate of their fathers who sinned against the Lord.c 34 And I will bring them back to the land which with my oath I promised to their fathers, to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; and they shall rule it. I will make them increase; they shall not then diminish. 35 And I will establish for them, as an eternal covenant, that I will be their God, and they shall be my people; and I will not again remove my people Israel from the land I gave them.d

CHAPTER 3.

1 "Lord Almighty, God of Israel, afflicted souls and dismayed spirits call to you. 2 Hear, O Lord, for you are a God of mercy; and have mercy on us, who have sinned against you: 3 e for you are enthroned forever, while we are perishing forever. 4 Lord Almighty, God of Israel, hear the prayer of Israel's few, the sons of those who sinned against you; they did not heed the voice of the Lord, their God, and the evils cling to us. 5 Remember at this time not the misdeeds of our fathers, but your own hand and name: 6 for you are the Lord, our God; and you, O Lord, we will praise! 7 f For this, you put into our hearts the fear of you: that we may call upon your name, and praise you in our captivity, when we have removed from our hearts all the wickedness of our fathers who sinned against you. 8 Behold us today in our captivity, where you scattered us, a reproach, a curse, and a requital for all the misdeeds of our fathers, who withdrew from the Lord, our God."

2, 26: The house which bears your name: the temple of Jerusalem. What it is today: during the exile it lay in ruins.

How is it, Israel, that you are in the land of your foes, grown old in a foreign land, defiled with the dead, 11 h accounted with those destined for the nether world? 12 i You have forsaken the fountain of wisdom! 13 j Had you walked in the way of God, you would have dwelt in enduring peace. 14 k Learn where prudence is, where strength, where understanding; that you may know also where are length of days, and life, where light of the eyes, and peace.

15 l Who has found the place of wisdom, who has entered into her treasuries? 16 Where are the rulers of the nations, they who lorded it over the wild beasts of the earth,m 17 and made sport of the birds of the heavens: they who heaped up the silver and the gold in which men trust; of whose possessions there was no end? 18 They schemed anxiously for money, but there is no trace of their work: 19 they have vanished down into the nether world, and others have risen up in their stead.

20 Later generations have seen the light, have dwelt in the land, but the way to understanding they have not known, 21 they have not perceived her paths, or reached her; their offspring were far from the way to her. 22 n She has not been heard of in Chanaan, nor seen in Theman. 23 The sons of Agar who seek knowledge on earth, the merchants of Madian and Theman, the phrasemakers seeking knowledge, these have not known the way to wisdom, nor have they her paths in mind.*

24 O Israel, how vast is the house of God,* how broad the scope of his dominion: 25 vast and endless, high and immeasurable! 26 o In it were born the giants, renowned at the first, stalwarts, skilled in war. 27 p Not these did God choose, nor did he give them the way of understanding; 28 q they perished for lack of prudence, perished through their folly. 29 r Who has gone up to the heavens and taken her, or brought her down from the clouds? 30 Who has crossed the sea and found her, bearing her away rather than choice gold? 31 None knows the way to her, nor has any understood her paths.

32 Yet he who knows all things knows her; he has probed her by his knowledge —he who established the earth for all time, and filled it with four-footed beasts; 33 he who dismisses the light, and it departs, calls it, and it obeys him trembling; 34 before whom the stars at their posts shine and rejoice; 35 s when he calls them, they answer, "Here we are!" shining with joy for their Maker. 36 Such is our God; no other is to be compared to him: 37 t he has traced out all the way of understanding, and has given her to Jacob, his servant, to Israel, his beloved son.

38 u Since then she has appeared on earth, and moved among men.

CHAPTER 4.

1 She is the book of the precepts of God, the Law that endures forever; all who cling to her will live, but those will die who forsake her.v 2 w Turn, O Jacob, and receive her: walk by her light toward splendor. 3 Give not your glory to another, your privileges to an alien race. 4 x Blessed are we, O Israel; for what pleases God is known to us!

III: JERUSALEM BEWAILS AND CONSOLES HER CAPTIVE CHILDREN

5 Fear not, my people! Remember, Israel, 6 y you were sold to the nations not for your destruction; it was because you angered God that you were handed over to your foes. 7 For you provoked your Maker with sacrifices to demons, to no-gods;z 8 you forsook the Eternal God who nourished you, and you grieved Jerusalem who fostered you. 9 She indeed saw coming upon you the anger of God; and she said:

"Hear, you neighbors of Sion! God has brought great mourning upon me, 10 for I have seen the captivity that the Eternal God has brought upon my sons and daughters. 11 With joy I fostered them; but with mourning and lament I let them go. 12 a Let no one gloat over me, a widow, bereft of many: for the sins of my children I am left desolate, because they turned from the law of God, 13 and did not acknowledge his statutes; in the ways of God's commandments they did not walk, nor did they tread the disciplined paths of his justice.

14 "Let Sion's neighbors come, to take note of the captivity of my sons and daughters, brought upon them by the Eternal God. 15 b He has brought against them a nation from afar, a nation ruthless and of alien speech, that has neither reverence for age nor tenderness for childhood; 16 they have led away this widow's cherished sons, have left me solitary, without daughters. 17 What can I do to help you? 18 c He who has brought this evil upon you must himself deliver you from your enemies' hands. 19 Farewell, my children, farewell: I am left desolate. 20 d I have taken off the garment of peace, have put on sackcloth for my prayer of supplication, and while I live I will cry out to the Eternal God.

21 e "Fear not, my children; call upon God, who will deliver you from oppression at enemy hands. 22 I have trusted in the Eternal God for your welfare, and joy has come to me from the Holy One because of the mercy that will swiftly reach you from your eternal savior. 23 f With mourning and lament I sent you forth, but God will give you back to me with enduring gladness and joy. 24 g As Sion's neighbors lately saw you taken captive, so shall they soon see God's salvation come to you, with great glory and the splendor of the Eternal God.

25 h "My children, bear patiently the anger that has come from God upon you; your enemies have persecuted you, and you will soon see their destruction and trample upon their necks.* 26 i My pampered children have trodden rough roads, carried off by their enemies like sheep in a raid. 27 j Fear not, my children; call out to God! He who brought this upon you will remember you. 28 As your hearts have been disposed to stray from God, turn now ten times the more to seek him; 29 k for he who has brought disaster upon you will, in saving you, bring you back enduring joy."

IV: JERUSALEM CONSOLED: THE CAPTIVITY ABOUT TO END

30 l Fear not, Jerusalem! He who gave you your name is your encouragement. 31 Fearful are those who harmed you, who rejoiced at your downfall; 32 m fearful are the cities where your children were enslaved, fearful the city that took your sons. 33 As that city rejoiced at your collapse, and made merry at your downfall, so shall she grieve over her own desolation.n 34 I will take from her the joyous throngs, and her exultation shall be turned to mourning: 35 o for fire shall come upon her from the Eternal God, for a long time, and demons* shall dwell in her from that time on.

36 p Look to the east, Jerusalem! behold the joy that comes to you from God. 37 Here come your sons whom you once let go, gathered in from the east and from the west by the word of the Holy One, rejoicing in the glory of God.

CHAPTER 5.

1 Jerusalem, take off your robe of mourning and misery; put on the splendor of glory from God forever: q 2 r wrapped in the cloak of justice from God, bear on your head the mitre that displays the glory of the eternal name. 3 For God will show all the earth your splendor: 4 s you will be named by God forever the peace of justice, the glory of God's worship.

5 Up, Jerusalem! stand upon the heights; look to the east and see your children gathered from the east and the west at the word of the Holy One, rejoicing that they are remembered by God. 6 t Led away on foot by their enemies they left you: but God will bring them back to you borne aloft in glory as on royal thrones. 7 u For God has commanded that every lofty mountain be made low, and that the age-old depths and gorges be filled to level ground, that Israel may advance secure in the glory of God. 8 v The forests and every fragrant kind of tree have overshadowed Israel at God's command; 9 for God is leading Israel in joy by the light of his glory, with his mercy and justice for company.

to Babylon by the king of the Babylonians, to convey to them what God had commanded him.[w]

For the sins you committed before God, you are being led captive to Babylon by Nabuchodonosor, king of the Babylonians. 2 When you reach Babylon you will be there many years, a period seven generations* long; after which I will bring you back from there in peace. 3 [x] And now in Babylon you will see borne upon men's shoulders gods of silver and gold and wood, which cast fear upon the pagans. 4 Take care that you yourselves do not imitate their alien example and stand in fear of them, 5 when you see the crowd before them and behind worshiping them. Rather, say in your hearts, "You, O Lord, are to be worshiped!"; 6 [y] for my angel is with you, and he is the custodian of your lives.

7 [z] Their tongues are smoothed by woodworkers; they are covered with gold and silver—but they are a fraud, and cannot speak. 8 People bring gold, as to a maiden in love with ornament, 9 and furnish crowns for the heads of their gods. Then sometimes the priests take the silver and gold from their gods and spend it on themselves, 10 or give part of it to the harlots on the terrace.* They trick them out in garments like men, these gods of silver and gold and wood; 11 but though they are wrapped in purple clothing, they are not safe from corrosion or insects. 12 They wipe their faces clean of the house dust which is thick upon them. 13 Each has a scepter, like the human ruler of a district; but none does away with those that offend against it. 14 Each has in its right hand an axe or dagger, but it cannot save itself from war or pillage. Thus it is known they are not gods; do not fear them.

15 As useless as one's broken tools 16 are their gods, set up in their houses; their eyes are full of dust from the feet of those who enter. 17 Their courtyards are walled in like those of a man brought to execution for a crime against the king; the priests reinforce their houses with gates and bars and bolts, lest they be carried off by robbers. 18 They light more lamps for them than for themselves, yet not one of these can they see. 19 They are like any beam in the house; it is said their hearts are eaten away. Though the insects out of the ground consume them and their garments, they do not feel it. 20 Their faces are blackened by the smoke of the house. 21 Bats and swallows alight on their bodies and on their heads; and cats as well as birds. 22 Know, therefore, that they are not gods, and do not fear them.

23 Despite the gold that covers them for adornment, unless someone wipes away the corrosion, they do not shine; nor did they feel anything when they were molded. 24 They are bought at any price, and there is no spirit in them. 25 [a] Having no feet, they are carried on men's shoulders, displaying their shame to all; and those who worship them are put to confusion 26 [b] because, if they fall to the ground, the worshipers must raise them up. They neither move of themselves if one sets them upright, nor come upright if they fall; but one puts gifts beside them as beside the dead. 27 [c] Their priests resell their sacrifices for their own advantage. Even their wives cure parts of the meat, but do not share it with the poor and the weak;* 28 the menstruous and women in childbed handle their sacrifices. Knowing from this that they are not gods, do not fear them.

29 How can they be called gods? For women bring the offerings to these gods of silver and gold and wood; 30 [d] and in their temples the priests squat with torn tunic and with shaven hair and beard, and with their heads uncovered. 31 They shout and wail before their gods as others do at a funeral banquet. 32 The priests take some of their clothing and put it on their wives and children. 33 *Whether they are treated well or ill by anyone, [e] they cannot requite it; they can neither set up a king nor remove him. 34 Similarly, they cannot give anyone riches or coppers; if one fails to fulfill a vow to them, they cannot exact it of him. 35

f They neither save a man from death,
nor deliver the weak from the strong. 36
To no blind man do they restore his sight, nor do they save any man in an emergency. 37 They neither pity the widow nor benefit the orphan. 38 These gilded and silvered wooden statues are like stones
from the mountains; and their worshipers will be put to shame. 39 How then can it be thought or claimed that they are gods?

40 Even the Chaldeans themselves have no respect for them; for when they see a deaf mute, incapable of speech, they bring forward Bel* and ask the god to make noise, as though the man could understand; 41 and they are themselves unable to reflect and abandon these gods, for they have no sense. 42 *And their women, girt with cords, g sit by the roads, burning chaff for incense; 43 and whenever one of them is drawn aside by some passerby who lies with her, she mocks
her neighbor who has not been dignified
as she has, and has not had her cord broken. 44 All that takes place around these gods is a fraud: how then can it be thought or claimed that they are gods?

45 They are produced by woodworkers
and goldsmiths, and they are nothing else than what these craftsmen wish them to be. 46 Even those who produce them are not long-lived; 47 how then can what they have produced be gods? They have left frauds and opprobrium to their successors. 48 For when war or disaster comes upon them, the priests deliberate among themselves where they can hide with them. 49 How then can one not know that these are no-gods, which do not save themselves either from war or from disaster? 50 They are wooden, gilded and silvered; they will later be known for frauds. To all peoples and kings it will be clear that they are not gods, but human handiwork; and that God's work is not in them.

51 Who does not know that they are not gods? 52 They set no king over the land, nor do they give men rain. 53 They neither vindicate their own rights, nor do they recover what is unjustly taken,
for they are unable; 54 they are like crows between heaven and earth. For when fire breaks out in the temple of these wooden or gilded or silvered gods, though the priests flee and are safe, they themselves are burnt up in the fire like beams. 55
They cannot resist a king, or enemy forces. 56 How then can it be admitted or thought that they are gods?

They are safe from neither thieves nor bandits, these wooden and silvered and gilded gods; 57 those who seize them strip
off the gold and the silver, and go away with the clothing that was on them, and they cannot help themselves. 58 h How much better to be a king displaying his valor, or a handy tool in a house, the joy of its owner, than these false gods; or the door of a house, that keeps safe those who are within, rather than these false gods; or a wooden post in a palace,
rather than these false gods! 59 The sun and moon and stars are bright, and obedient in the service for which they are sent.
60 Likewise the lightning, when it flashes,
is a goodly sight; and the same wind
blows over all the land. 61 The clouds, too, when commanded by God to proceed across the whole world, fulfill the order; 62 and fire, sent from on high to burn up the mountains and the forests, does what has been commanded. But these false gods are not their equal, whether in beauty or in power; 63 so that it is unthinkable, and cannot be claimed, that they are gods. They can neither execute judgment, nor benefit man. 64 Know, therefore, that they are not gods, and do not fear them.

65 Kings they neither curse nor bless. 66
They show the nations no signs in the heavens, nor are they brilliant like the sun, nor shining like the moon. 67 The beasts which can help themselves by fleeing to shelter are better than they are. 68 Thus in no way is it clear to us that they are gods; so do not fear them. 69 For like a scarecrow in a cucumber patch, that is no protection, are their wooden, gilded, silvered gods. 70 Just like a thornbush in a garden on which perches every kind of bird, or like a corpse hurled into darkness, are their silvered and gilded wooden gods. 71 From the rotting of the purple and the linen upon them, it can be known that they are not gods; they themselves

THE BOOK OF EZECHIEL

Ezechiel's complex character makes him one of the most interesting figures in Israelite prophecy. In many ways he resembles the more primitive type of prophet represented by Elia and Eliseus; yet he clearly depends on all his predecessors in prophecy, and his teaching is a development of theirs. His unique contribution to the history of prophetism lies in his manifest interest in the temple and the liturgy, an interest paralleled in no other prophet — even Jeremia who, like Ezechiel, was also a priest. Particularly because of this interest, Ezechiel's influence on post-exilic religion was enormous, and not without reason has he been called "the father of Judaism." This has resulted in his prophecies reaching us with the evident marks of editing and addition by the post-exilic circles that shared his intense interest. However, we may be sure that in this book we have throughout what is in substance the prophet's own work.

Ezechiel became a prophet in Babylon — the first prophet to receive the call to prophesy outside the Holy Land. As one of the exiles deported by Nabuchodonosor in 597, his first task was to prepare his fellow countrymen in Babylon for the final destruction of Jerusalem, which they believed to be inviolable. Accordingly, the first part of his book consists of reproaches for Israel's past and present sins and the confident prediction of yet a further devastation of the land of promise and a more general exile. In 587, when Nabuchodonosor destroyed Jerusalem, Ezechiel was vindicated before his unbelieving compatriots.

After this time, Ezechiel's message changes. From now on his prophecy is characterized by the promise of salvation in a new covenant, and he is anxious to lay down the conditions necessary to obtain it. Even as Jeremia had believed, Ezechiel thought that the exiles were the hope of Israel's restoration, once God's allotted time for the Exile had been accomplished. His final eight chapters are an utopian vision of the Israel of the future, rid of its past evils and re-established firmly under the rule of the Lord. The famous vision of the dry bones in chapter 37 expresses his firm belief in a forthcoming restoration, Israel's rising to new life from the graveyard of Babylon. But Ezechiel's new covenant, like Jeremia's, was to see its true fulfillment only in the New Testament.

Perhaps no other prophet has stressed the absolute majesty of God as Ezechiel does. This appears not only in the tremendous vision by the river Chobar with which his prophecy opens, but throughout the book. Ultimately, says Ezechiel, whatever God does to or for man is motivated by zeal for His own holy name. The new heart and the new spirit which must exist under the new covenant cannot be the work of man, they too must be the work of God. By such teachings he helped prepare for the New Testament doctrine of salvation through grace.

The Book of Ezechiel is divided as follows: I. Call of the Prophet (1, 1–3, 27). II. Before the Siege of Jerusalem (4, 1–24, 27). III. Prophecies against Foreign Nations (25, 1–32, 32). IV. Salvation for Israel (33, 1–39, 29). V. The New Israel (40, 1–48, 35).

I: CALL OF THE PROPHET

CHAPTER 1.

The Vision: God on the Cherubim. [1] In the thirtieth year,* on the fifth day of the fourth month, while I was among the exiles by the river Chobar, the heavens opened, and I saw divine visions.[a]—[2] On the fifth day of the month, the fifth year,* that is, of King Joachin's exile, the word of the Lord came to the priest Ezechiel, the son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chobar.—There the hand of the Lord came upon me.

[4] As I looked, a stormwind came from the North,* a huge cloud with flashing fire [enveloped in brightness], from the midst of which [the midst of the fire] something gleamed like electrum. [5] Within it were figures resembling four living creatures* that looked like this: their form was human, 6 but each had four faces and four wings, 7 and their legs went straight down; the soles of their feet were round. They sparkled with a gleam like burnished bronze.

1, 1: The thirtieth year, which corresponds to the fifth year of exile (v 2), has never been satisfactorily explained; possibly it refers to the prophet's age. The river Chobar: probably a canal near Nippur, southeast of Babylon, one of the sites on which the Jewish exiles were settled.

10 *Their faces were like this: [b] each of the four had the face of a man, but on the right side was the face of a lion, and on the left side the face of an ox, and finally each had the face of an eagle. 9 Their faces [and their wings] looked out on all their four sides; they did not turn when they moved, but each went straight forward. 12 [Each went straight forward; wherever the spirit wished to go, there they went; they did not turn when they moved.]

8 Human hands were under their wings, and the wings of one touched those of another. 11 Each had two wings spread out above so that they touched one another's, while the other two wings of each covered his body. 13 In among the living creatures something like burning coals of fire could be seen; they seemed like torches, moving to and fro among the living creatures. The fire gleamed, and from it came forth flashes of lightning.

15 As I looked at the living creatures, I saw wheels on the ground, one beside each of the four living creatures. 16 The wheels had the sparkling appearance of chrysolite, and all four of them looked the same: they were constructed as though one wheel were within another. 17 They could move in any of the four directions they faced, without veering as they moved. 18 [c] The four of them had rims, and I saw that their rims were full of eyes all around. 19 When the living creatures moved, the wheels moved with them; and when the living creatures were raised from the ground, the wheels also were raised. 20 Wherever the spirit wished to go, there the wheels went, and they were raised together with the living creatures; for the spirit of the living creatures was in the wheels.

22 *Over the heads of the living creatures, something like a firmament could be seen, seeming like glittering crystal, stretched straight out above their heads. 23 Beneath the firmament their wings were stretched out, one toward the other. [Each of them had two covering his body.] 24 Then I heard the sound of their wings, like the roaring of mighty waters, like the voice of the Almighty. When they moved, the sound of the tumult was like the din of an army. [And when they stood still, they lowered their wings.]

26 Above the firmament over their heads something like a throne could be seen, looking like sapphire. Upon it was seated, up above, one who had the appearance of a man.* 27 Upward from what resembled his waist I saw what gleamed like electrum; downward from what resembled his waist I saw what looked like fire; he was surrounded with splendor. 28 Like the bow which appears in the clouds on a rainy day was the splendor that surrounded him. Such was the vision of the likeness of the glory of the Lord.

CHAPTER 2.

Eating of the Scroll. When I had seen it, I fell upon my face and heard a voice that said to me: 1 Son of man,* stand up! I wish to speak with you. 2 As he spoke to me, spirit* entered into me and set me on my feet, and I heard the one who was speaking 3 say to me: Son of man, I am sending you to the Israelites, rebels who have rebelled against me; they and their fathers have revolted against me to this very day. 4 Hard of face and obstinate of heart are they to whom I am sending you. But you shall say to them: Thus says the Lord God! 5 And whether they heed or resist—for they are a rebellious house—they shall know that a prophet has been among them. 6 But as for you, son of man, fear neither them nor their words when they contradict you and reject you, and when you sit on scorpions.* Neither fear their words nor be dismayed at their looks, for they are a rebellious house. 7 [But speak my words to them, whether they heed or resist, for they are rebellious.] 8 As for you, son of man, obey me when I speak to you: be not rebellious like this house of rebellion, but open your mouth and eat what I shall give you.

9 d It was then I saw a hand stretched out to me, in which was a written scroll 10 which he unrolled before me. It was covered with writing front and back, and written on it was: Lamentation and wailing and woe!

CHAPTER 3.

1 He said to me: Son of man, eat what is before you; eat this scroll, then go, speak to the house of Israel. 2 So I opened my mouth and he gave me the scroll to eat. 3 e Son of man, he then said to me, feed your belly and fill your stomach with this scroll I am giving you. I ate it, and it was as sweet as honey* in my mouth. He said: 4 Son of man, go now to the house of Israel, and speak my words to them.

5 Not to a people with difficult speech and barbarous language am I sending you, 6 nor to the many peoples [with difficult speech and barbarous language] whose words you cannot understand. If I were to send you to these, they would listen to you; 7 but the house of Israel will refuse to listen to you, since they will not listen to me. For the whole house of Israel is stubborn of brow and obstinate in heart. 8 But I will make your face as hard as theirs, and your brow as stubborn as theirs, 9 like diamond, harder than flint. Fear them not, nor be dismayed at their looks, for they are a rebellious house.

10 Son of man, he said to me, take into your heart all my words that I speak to you; hear them well. 11 Now go to the exiles, to your countrymen, and say to them: Thus says the Lord God!—whether they heed or resist!

12 Then spirit lifted me up, and I heard behind me the noise of a loud rumbling as the glory of the Lord* rose from its place: 13 the noise made by the wings of the living creatures striking one another, and by the wheels alongside them, a loud rumbling. 14 The spirit which had lifted me up seized me, and I went off spiritually stirred, while the hand of the Lord rested heavily upon me. 15 Thus I came to the exiles who lived at Tel Abib* by the river Chobar, and for seven days I sat among them distraught.

The Prophet as Watchman.* 17 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: Son of man, I have appointed you a watchman for the house of Israel. f When you hear a word from my mouth, you shall warn them for me.

18 If I say to the wicked man, You shall surely die; and you do not warn him or speak out to dissuade him from his wicked conduct so that he may live: that wicked man shall die for his sin, but I will hold you responsible for his death. 19 If, on the other hand, you have warned the wicked man, yet he has not turned away from his evil nor from his wicked conduct, then he shall die for his sin, but you shall save your life.

20 If a virtuous man turns away from virtue and does wrong when I place a stumbling block before him, he shall die. He shall die for his sin, and his virtuous deeds shall not be remembered; but I will hold you responsible for his death if you did not warn him. 21 When, on the other hand, you have warned a virtuous man not to sin, and he has in fact not sinned, he shall surely live because of the warning, and you shall save your own life.

Ezechiel's Dumbness.* 22 The hand of the Lord came upon me, and he said to me: Get up and go out into the plain, where I will speak with you. 23 g So I got up and went out into the plain, and I saw that the glory of the Lord was in that place, like the glory I had seen by the river Chobar. I fell prone, 24 but then spirit entered into me and set me on my feet, and he spoke with me.

He said to me: Go shut yourself up in your house. 25 [As for you, son of man, they will put cords upon you and bind you with them, so that you cannot go out among them.] 26 I will make your tongue stick to your palate so that you will be dumb* and unable to rebuke them for

3, 17-21: This passage refers to one of the prophet's most characteristic qualities. It was placed here by an editor, though it properly belongs to a later stage in Ezechiel's ministry; cf chapter 33.

3, 22-27: This passage also belongs to a later period, with Ez 24, 25ff and 33, 21f, during the time of the final siege of Jerusalem, when Ezechiel's prophecies consisted mainly of symbolic actions rather than words.

being a rebellious house. 27 Only when I speak with you and open your mouth, shall you say to them: Thus says the Lord God! Let him heed who will, and let him resist who will, for they are a rebellious house.

II: BEFORE THE SIEGE OF JERUSALEM

CHAPTER 4.

Acts Symbolic of Siege and Exile. 16 At the end of seven days . . .:* 1 As for you, son of man, take a clay tablet; lay it in front of you, and draw on it a city [Jerusalem]. 2 Raise a siege against it: build a tower, lay out a ramp, pitch camps, and set up battering rams all around. 3 Then take an iron griddle and set it up as an iron wall between you and the city. Fix your gaze on it: it shall be in the state of siege, and you shall besiege it. This shall be a sign for the house of Israel. 4 Then you shall lie on your left side, while I place the sins of the house of Israel upon you. As many days as you lie thus, you shall bear their sins. 5 For the years of their sins I allot you the same number of days, three hundred and ninety, during which you will bear the sins of the house of Israel. 6 When you finish this, you are to lie down again, but on your right side, and bear the sins of the house of Juda forty days;* one day for each year I have allotted you. 7 Fixing your gaze on the siege of Jerusalem, with bared arm* you shall prophesy against it. 8 See, I will bind you with cords so that you cannot turn from one side to the other until you have completed the days of your siege.

9 *Again, take wheat and barley, and beans and lentils, and millet and spelt; put them in a single vessel and make bread out of them. Eat it for as many days as you lie upon your side, three hundred and ninety. 10 The food you eat shall be twenty shekels a day by weight; each day the same. 11 And the water you drink shall be the sixth of a hin by measure; each day the same. 16 h Then he said to me: Son of man, I am breaking the staff of bread* in Jerusalem. They shall eat bread which they have weighed out anxiously, and they shall drink water which they have measured out fearfully, 17 so that, owing to the scarcity of bread and water, everyone shall be filled with terror and waste away because of his sins.

12 For your food you must bake barley loaves over human excrement in their sight, said the Lord. 13 i Thus the Israelites shall eat their food unclean among the nations where I scatter them. 14 "Oh no, Lord God!" I protested. "Never have I been made unclean, and from my youth till now, never have I eaten carrion flesh or that torn by wild beasts; never has any unclean meat entered my mouth." 15 Very well, he replied, I allow you cow's dung in place of human excrement; bake your bread on that.

1 As for you, son of man, take a sharp sword and use it like a barber's razor, passing it over your head and beard. Then take a set of scales and divide the hair you have cut. 2 Burn a third in the fire, within the city,* when the days of your siege are completed; place another third around the city and strike it with the sword; the final third strew in the wind, and pursue it with the sword. 3 [But of the last take a small number and tie them in the hem of your garment. 4 Then take some of these and throw them in the midst of the fire and burn them.]

Say to the whole house of Israel: 5 Thus says the Lord God: This is Jerusalem. In the midst of the nations I placed her, surrounded by foreign countries. 6 But she rebelled against my ordinances more wickedly than the nations, and against my statutes more than the foreign countries surrounding her; she has spurned my ordinances and has not lived by my statutes. 7 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you have been more rebellious than the nations surrounding you, not living by my statutes nor fulfilling my ordinances, but acting according to the ordinances of the surrounding nations; 8 therefore thus says the Lord

h Ez 5, 16; 14, 13.—i Os 9, 4.

3, 16: At the end of seven days . . .: the incomplete sentence probably contained some such words as "the word of the Lord came to me." For seven days, see v 15. (This verse has been transposed from ch 3.)

4, 5f: Three hundred and ninety days . . . forty days: symbolically representing the respective lengths of the periods of exile of northern Israelites and Judaites. Northern Israel had already fallen to Assyria in 722 B. C. The letters in the Hebrew phrase for the days of your siege (v 8), each of which has its own numerical value, add up to three hundred and ninety. Forty years represent one generation.

4, 7: Bared arm: a symbol of unrestrained power.

4, 9-17: This action represents the scarcity of food during the siege of Jerusalem, and the consequent need to eat whatever is at hand. Twenty shekels: about nine ounces. The sixth of a hin: about one quart.

4, 16: Breaking the staff of bread: reducing the supply of bread which sustains the life of man as the walking staff sustains the traveler on his journey; cf Ez 5, 16; 14, 13; Lv 26, 26; Ps 104 (105), 16; Is 3, 1.

5, 2: The city: the one drawn on the tablet.

God: See, I am coming at you!* I will inflict punishments in your midst while the nations look on. [9] Because of all your abominations I will do with you what I have never done before, the like of which I will never do again. [10] This means that fathers within you shall eat sons, and sons shall eat fathers.* I will inflict punishments upon you and scatter all that remain of your people in every direction.

[11] Therefore, as I live, says the Lord God, because you have defiled my sanctuary with all your detestable abominations, I swear to cut you down. I will not look upon you with pity nor have mercy. [12] A third of your people shall die of pestilence and perish of hunger within you; another third shall fall by the sword all around you; and a third I will scatter in every direction, and I will pursue them with the sword. [16] j When I loose against you the cruel, destructive arrows of hunger, I will break your staff of bread; [17] I will send famine against you, and wild beasts that shall rob you of your children. Pestilence and bloodshed shall stalk through you, and I will bring the sword upon you. I, the Lord, have spoken!

[13] Thus shall my anger spend itself, and I will wreak my fury upon them till I am appeased; they shall know that I, the Lord, have spoken in my jealousy when I spend my fury upon them. [14] I will make you a waste and a reproach among the nations that surround you, which every passer-by may see. [15] When I execute judgment upon you in anger and fury and with furious chastisements, you shall be a reproach and an object of scorn, a terrible warning to the nations that surround you. I, the Lord, have spoken!

Against the Mountains of Israel. [1] Thus the word of the Lord came to me: [2] Son of man, turn toward the mountains of Israel, and prophesy against them: [3] Mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God. Thus says the Lord God [to the mountains and hills, the ravines and valleys]: k See, I am bringing a sword against you, and I will destroy your high places.* [4] Your altars shall be laid waste, your incense stands shall be broken, and I will cast down your slain ones before your idols; [5] I will scatter their bones all around your altars.* [6] In all your dwelling places cities shall be made desolate and high places laid waste, so that your altars will be made desolate and laid waste, your idols broken and removed, and your incense stands smashed to bits. [7] [The slain shall fall in your midst, and you shall know that I am the Lord. [8] I have warned you.]

When some of your people have escaped to other nations from the sword, and have been scattered over the foreign lands, [9] then those who have escaped will remember me among the nations to which they have been exiled, after I have broken their adulterous hearts that turned away from me [and their eyes which lusted after idols]. They shall loathe themselves because of their evil deeds, all their abominations. [10] Then they shall know that it was not in vain that I, the Lord, threatened to inflict this calamity upon them.

[11] Thus says the Lord God: Clap your hands, stamp your feet,* and cry "Alas!" because of all the abominations of the house of Israel, for which they shall fall by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence. [12] He that is far off shall die of pestilence, he that is near shall fall by the sword, and he that is besieged shall perish by famine; so will I spend my fury upon them. [13] Then shall they know that I am the Lord, when their slain shall lie amid their idols, all about their altars, on every high hill and mountaintop, beneath every green tree and leafy oak,* wherever they offered appeasing odors to any of their gods. [14] I will stretch out my hand against them, and wherever they live I will make the land a desolate waste, from the desert to Ribla;* thus shall they know that I am the Lord.

CHAPTER 7.

The End Has Come. [1] Thus the word of the Lord came to me: [2] Son of man, now

j Ez 4, 16; 14, 13.—k Ez 36, 1.

5, 8: I am coming at you: an expression borrowed from the language of warfare in which enemies attacked one another with the sword. You in vv 8-17 is Jerusalem.

5, 10: Fathers . . . shall eat sons, and sons . . . fathers: see note on Lam 2, 20.

6, 3: High places: the sanctuaries on the mountaintops where illegal worship, whether of the Lord or of Chanaanite deities, was performed.

6, 5: Scatter their bones . . . altars: dead men's bones defiled a place; cf 4 Kgs 23, 14.

6, 11: Clap your hands, stamp your feet: here evidently signs of mourning; in Ez 25, 6, signs of joy.

6, 13: Every green tree and leafy oak: sacred groves had a long history in Palestine as places of worship; cf Dt 12, 2; note on Gn 12, 6.

6, 14: From the desert to Ribla: the whole land, from the far south to the far north.

say: Thus says the Lord God to the land of Israel: An end! The end has come upon the four corners of the land! 3 Now the end is upon you; I will unleash my anger against you and judge you according to your conduct and lay upon you the consequences of all your abominations. 4 I will not look upon you with pity nor have mercy; I will bring your conduct down upon you, and the consequences of your abominations shall be in your midst; then shall you know that I am the Lord.

5 Thus says the Lord God: Disaster upon disaster! See it coming! 6 An end is coming, the end is coming upon you! See it coming! 7 The climax has come for you who dwell in the land! The time has come, near is the day: a time of consternation, not of rejoicing. 8 Soon now I will pour out my fury upon you and spend my anger upon you; I will judge you according to your conduct and lay upon you the consequences of all your abominations. 9 I will not look upon you with pity nor have mercy; I will deal with you according to your conduct, and the consequences of your abominations shall be in your midst; then shall you know that it is I, the Lord, who strike.

10 See, the day of the Lord! See, the end is coming! Lawlessness is in full bloom, insolence flourishes, 11 violence has risen to support wickedness. It shall not be long in coming, nor shall it delay. 12 *The time has come, the day dawns. Let not the buyer rejoice nor the seller mourn, for wrath shall be upon all the throng. 13 The seller shall not regain what he sold as long as he lives, for wrath shall be upon all the throng. Because of his sins, no one shall preserve his life. 14 They shall sound the trumpet and make everything ready, yet no one shall go to war, for my wrath is upon all the throng.

15 The sword is outside; pestilence and hunger are within. He that is in the country shall die by the sword; pestilence and famine shall devour those in the city. 16 Even those who escape and flee to the mountains like the doves of the valleys—I will put them all to death, each one for his own sins. 17 All their hands shall be limp, and all their knees shall run with water. 18 l They shall put on sackcloth, and horror shall cover them; shame shall be on all their faces and baldness* on all their heads. 19 They shall fling their silver into the streets, and their gold shall be considered refuse.m Their silver and gold cannot save them on the day of the Lord's wrath. They shall not be allowed to satisfy their craving or fill their bellies, for this has been the occasion of their sin. 20 In the beauty of their ornaments they put their pride: they made of them their abominable images [their idols]. For this reason I make them refuse. 21 I will hand them over as booty to foreigners, to be spoiled and defiled by the wicked of the earth. 22 I will turn away my face from them, and my treasure* shall be profaned: robbers shall enter and profane it.

23 They shall wreak slaughter, for the land is filled with bloodshed and the city full of violence. 24 I will bring in the worst of the nations, who shall take possession of their houses. I will put an end to their proud strength, and their sanctuaries shall be profaned. 25 When anguish comes they shall seek peace, but there will be none. 26 There shall be disaster after disaster, rumor after rumor. Prophetic vision shall fade; instruction shall be lacking to the priest, and counsel to the elders, 27 while the prince shall be enveloped in terror, and the hands of the common people shall tremble. I will deal with them according to their conduct, and according to their judgments I will judge them; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

CHAPTER 8.

Vision of Abominations in the Temple. 3 Spirit lifted me up in the air and brought me in divine vision to Jerusalem,n to the entrance of the north gate, where stood the statue of jealousy which stirs up jealousy.* 5 He* said to me: Son of man, look toward the north! I looked toward the north and saw northward of the gate the altar of the statue of jealousy. 6 Son of man, he asked me, do you see what they

7, 12f: Mundane affairs will cease to have any meaning in view of the disaster that is to come.

7, 18: Baldness: shaving the head was a sign of mourning.

7, 22: My treasure: the temple of Jerusalem.

8, 3: The statue of jealousy which stirs up jealousy: the statue which provokes the Lord's jealousy for his honor. This was probably the statue of the goddess Ashera erected by the wicked King Manasse (cf 4 Kgs 21, 7; 2 Par 33, 7. 15). Though it had been removed by King Josia (4 Kgs 23, 6), it had no doubt been set up again in the repaganizing of Jerusalem that followed on Josia's death.

8, 5: He: an angel accompanies Ezechiel in these visions and represents the voice of the Lord; cf Ez 40, 3f.

are doing? Do you see the great abominations that the house of Israel is practicing here, so that I must depart from my sanctuary? But you shall see still greater abominations!

7 Then he brought me to the entrance of the court, where I saw there was a hole in the wall. 8 Son of man, he ordered, dig through the wall. I dug through the wall and saw a door. 9 Enter, he said to me, and see the abominable evils which they are doing here. 10 I entered and saw that all around upon the wall were pictured the figures of all kinds of creeping things and loathsome beasts* [all the idols of the house of Israel]. 11 Before these stood seventy of the elders of the house of Israel, among whom stood Jezonia, son of Saphan, each of them with his censer in his hand, and the fragrance of the incense was rising upward. 12 Then he said to me: Do you see, son of man, what each of these elders of the house of Israel is doing in his idol room? They think: "The Lord cannot see us; the Lord has forsaken the land." 13 He continued: You shall see still greater abominations that they are practicing.

14 Then he brought me to the entrance of the north gate of the temple, and I saw sitting there the women who were weeping for Tammuz.* 15 Then he said to me: Do you see this, son of man? You shall see other abominations, greater than these!

16 Then he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's house, and there at the door of the Lord's temple, between the vestibule and the altar, were about twenty-five men with their backs to the Lord's temple and their faces toward the east; they were bowing down to the sun.* 17 Do you see, son of man? he asked me. Is it such a trivial matter for the house of Juda to do the abominable things they have done here—for they have filled the land with violence, and again and again they have provoked me—that now they must also put the branch to my nose?* 18 Therefore I in turn will act furiously: I will not look upon them with pity nor will I show mercy.

o Ex 12, 7; Ap 7, 3.

8, 10: Creeping things and loathsome beasts: probably Egyptian deities, which were represented in animal form. During the last days of Jerusalem King Sedecia was allied with Egypt, trusting in it for protection against the Chaldeans.

8, 14: Weeping for Tammuz: the withering of trees and plants in autumn was thought to be due to the descent of Tammuz, the Babylonian god of fertility, to the nether world of the dead; this descent was bewailed by the women.

8, 16: Bowing down to the sun: sun worship had been made an important part of Judaite idolatry by the impious kings; cf 4 Kgs 23, 11.

8, 17: Put the branch to my nose: the meaning is uncertain. Perhaps it refers to an Egyptian practice imported into Juda: the Egyptian sun god Re is pictured with a vine branch at his nose, signifying the transfer of creative power (divine breath) to living things. Such rites were abominable to the Lord.

9, 4: Ezechiel is pre-eminently the prophet of personal retribution; the innocent inhabitants of Jerusalem are to be spared when the idolatrous are punished. An X: literally, the Hebrew letter taw, which had the form of a cross.

CHAPTER 9.

Slaughter of the Idolaters. 1 Then he cried loud for me to hear: Come, you scourges of the city! 2 With that I saw six men coming from the direction of the upper gate which faces the north, each with a destroying weapon in his hand. In their midst was a man dressed in linen, with a writer's case at his waist. They entered and stood beside the bronze altar. 3 Then he called to the man dressed in linen with the writer's case at his waist, 4 o saying to him: *Pass through the city [through Jerusalem] and mark an X on the foreheads of those who moan and groan over all the abominations that are practiced within it. 5 To the others I heard him say: Pass through the city after him and strike! Do not look on them with pity nor show any mercy! 6 Old men, youths and maidens, women and children—wipe them out! But do not touch any marked with the X; begin at my sanctuary. So they began with the men [the elders] who were in front of the temple. 7 Defile the temple, he said to them, and fill the courts with the slain; then go out and strike in the city.

8 As they began to strike, I was left alone. I fell prone, crying out, "Alas, Lord God! Will you destroy all that is left of Israel when you pour out your fury on Jerusalem?" 9 He answered me: The sins of the house of Israel are great beyond measure; the land is filled with bloodshed, the city with lawlessness. They think that the Lord has forsaken the land, that he does not see them. 10 I, however, will not look upon them with pity, nor show any mercy. I will bring down their conduct upon their heads.

11 Then I saw the man dressed in linen with the writing case at his waist make his report: "I have done as you ordered."

24 *Spirit lifted me up and brought me back to the exiles in Chaldea [in a vision, by God's spirit]. Then the vision I had seen left me, 25 and I told the exiles everything the Lord had shown me.

CHAPTER 10.

God's Glory Leaves Jerusalem. 1 On the fifth day of the sixth month, in the sixth year, as I was sitting in my house, and the elders of Juda sat before me, the hand of the Lord God fell upon me there. 2 I looked up and saw a form that looked like a man. Downward from what seemed to be his waist, there was fire; from his waist upward there seemed to be a brightness like the sheen of electrum. He stretched out what appeared to be a hand and seized me by the hair of my head . . .*

4 I saw there the glory of the God of Israel, like the vision I had seen in the plain. The cherubim were stationed to the right of the temple; 20 these were the living creatures I had seen beneath the God of Israel by the river Chobar,[p] whom I now recognized to be cherubim. 21 Each had four faces and four wings; something like human hands were under their wings. 22 Their faces looked just like those I had seen by the river Chobar; each one went straight forward. 14 [q] Each had four faces: the first face was that of an ox, the second that of a man, the third that of a lion, and the fourth that of an eagle. 15 Such were the living creatures I had seen by the river Chobar.

9 [r] I also saw four wheels beside them, one wheel beside each cherub; the wheels appeared to have the luster of chrysolite stone. 10 All four of them seemed to be made the same, as though there were a wheel within a wheel. 11 When they moved, they went in any one of their four directions without veering as they moved; for in whichever direction they were faced, they went straight towards it without veering as they moved. 12 [s] The rims of the four wheels were full of eyes all around. 13 I heard the wheels given the name "wheelwork." 16 [t] When the cherubim moved, the wheels went beside them; when the cherubim lifted their wings to rise from the earth, even then the wheels did not leave their sides. 17 When they stood still, the wheels stood still; when they rose, the wheels rose with them; for the living creatures' spirit was in them.

1 I looked and saw in the firmament above the cherubim what appeared to be sapphire stone; something like a throne could be seen upon it. 2 He said to the man dressed in linen: Go within the wheelwork under the cherubim; fill both your hands with burning coals* from among the cherubim, then scatter them over the city. As I looked on, he entered.

The glory of the God of Israel had gone up from the cherubim, upon which it had been, to the threshold of the temple. 3 As the man entered, the cloud filled the inner court, 4 and the glory of the Lord rose from over the cherubim to the threshold of the temple; the temple was filled with the cloud, and all the court was bright with the glory of the Lord. 5 The noise of the wings of the cherubim could be heard as far as the outer court; it was like the voice of God the Almighty when he speaks.

6 When he had commanded the man dressed in linen to take fire from within the wheelwork, among the cherubim, the man entered and stood by one of the wheels. 7 Thereupon its cherub stretched out his hand toward the fire that was among the cherubim. He took up some of it and put it in the hands of the one dressed in linen, who took it and came out. 8 [Something like human hands could be seen under the wings of the cherubim.]

18 Then the glory of the Lord left the threshold of the temple and rested upon the cherubim. 19 These lifted their wings, and I saw them rise from the earth, the wheels rising along with them. They stood at the entrance of the eastern gate of the Lord's house, and the glory of the God of Israel was up above them. 22 *Then the cherubim lifted their wings, and the wheels went along with them, while up above them was the glory of the God of Israel. 23 And the glory of the Lord rose from the city and took a stand on the mountain which is to the east of the city.

CHAPTER 11.

Judgment of the Princes. 1 Spirit lifted me up and brought me to the east gate of the temple. At the entrance of the gate I saw twenty-five men, among whom were Jezonia, son of Azur, and Pheltia, son of Banaia, princes of the people. 2 The Lord said to me: Son of man, these are the men who are planning evil and giving wicked counsel in this city. 3 "Shall we not," they say, "be building houses soon? The city is the kettle, and we are the meat."* 4 Therefore prophesy against them, son of man, prophesy! 5 Then the spirit of the Lord fell upon me, and he told me to say: Thus says the Lord: This is the way you talk, house of Israel, and what you are plotting I well know. 6 You have slain many in this city and have filled its streets with your slain. 7 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Your slain whom you have placed within it, they are the meat, and the city is the kettle; but you I will take out of it. 8 You fear the sword, but the sword I will bring upon you, says the Lord God. 9 I will bring you out of the city, and hand you over to foreigners, and inflict punishments upon you. 10 By the sword you shall fall; at the boundaries of Israel I will judge you; thus you shall know that I am the Lord. 11 The city shall not be a kettle for you, nor shall you be the meat within it. At the boundaries of Israel I will judge you, 12 and you shall know that I am the Lord, by whose statutes you have not lived, and whose ordinances you have not kept; rather, you have acted according to the ordinances of the nations around you.

u Ez 36, 26; Jer 31, 33.

10, 22f: These verses have been transposed from ch 11.

11, 3: These words reflect the false confidence of the inhabitants of Jerusalem in the face of the Chaldean invasion. Jerusalem, they think, is like an iron kettle protecting the meat within it from harm; but cf Ez 24, 3-6.

11, 15-21: Like Jeremia (cf chapter 29), Ezechiel knows that no reform is to be expected from the men of Juda who remained in Palestine; but the exiles will be the ones to form the new Israel. The new, spiritual covenant will replace the former covenant; cf Jer 24, 7.

12, 5: Dig a hole in the wall: the exiles are to leave Jerusalem through the broken walls of the ruined city.

13 While I was prophesying, Pheltia, the son of Banaia, died. I fell prone and cried out in a loud voice: "Alas, Lord God! will you utterly wipe out what remains of Israel?"

Restoration of the Exiles. 14 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 15 *Son of man, it is about your kinsmen, your fellow exiles, and the whole house of Israel that the inhabitants of Jerusalem say, "They are far away from the Lord; to us the land of Israel has been given as our possession." 16 Therefore say: Thus says the Lord God: Though I have removed them far among the nations and scattered them over foreign countries—and was for a while their only sanctuary in the countries to which they had gone—17 I will gather you from the nations and assemble you from the countries over which you have been scattered, and I will restore to you the land of Israel. 18 They shall return to it and remove from it all its detestable abominations. 19 u I will give them a new heart and put a new spirit within them; I will remove the stony heart from their bodies, and replace it with a natural heart, 20 so that they will live according to my statutes, and observe and carry out my ordinances; thus they shall be my people and I will be their God. 21 But as for those whose hearts are devoted to their detestable abominations, I will bring down their conduct upon their heads, says the Lord God.

CHAPTER 12.

Acts Symbolic of the Exile. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, you live in the midst of a rebellious house; they have eyes to see but do not see, and ears to hear but do not hear, for they are a rebellious house. 3 Now, son of man, during the day while they are looking on, prepare your baggage as though for exile, and again while they are looking on, migrate from where you live to another place; perhaps they will see that they are a rebellious house. 4 You shall bring out your baggage like an exile in the daytime while they are looking on; in the evening, again while they are looking on, you shall go out like one of those driven into exile; 5 while they look on, dig a hole in the wall* and pass through it; 6 while they look on, shoulder the burden and set out in the darkness; cover your face that you may not see the land, for I have made you a sign for the house of Israel.

7 I did as I was told. During the day I brought out my baggage as though it were that of an exile, and at evening I dug a hole through the wall with my hand and, while they looked on, set out in the darkness, shouldering my burden.

8 Then, in the morning, the word of the Lord came to me: 9 Son of man, did not the house of Israel, that rebellious house, ask you what you were doing? 10 Tell them: Thus says the Lord God: This oracle concerns Jerusalem and the whole house of Israel within it. 11 I am a sign for you: as I have done, so shall it be done to them; as captives they shall go into exile. 12 The prince who is among them shall shoulder his burden and set out in darkness, going through a hole that he has dug in the wall, and covering his face lest he be seen by anyone. 13 v But I will spread my net over him, and he shall be taken in my snare. I will bring him to Babylon, into the land of the Chaldeans —but he shall not see it*—and there he shall die. 14 All his retinue, his aides, and his troops I will scatter in every direction, and pursue them with the sword. 15 Then shall they know that I am the Lord, when I disperse them among the nations and scatter them over foreign lands. 16 Yet I will leave a few of them to escape the sword, famine and pestilence, so that they may tell of all their abominations among the nations to which they will come; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

17 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 18 Son of man, eat your bread trembling, and drink your water shaking with anxiety. 19 Then say to the people of the land: Thus says the Lord God of the inhabitants of Jerusalem [to the land of Israel]: They shall eat their bread in anxiety and drink their water in horror, that their land may be emptied of the violence of all its inhabitants that now fills it. 20 Inhabited cities shall be in ruins, and the land shall be a waste; thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

Prophecy Ridiculed. 21 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 22 Son of man, what is this proverb that you have in the land of Israel: "The days drag on, and no vision ever comes to anything"?* 23 Say to them therefore: Thus says the Lord God: I will put an end to this proverb; they shall never quote it again in Israel. Rather, say to them: The days are at hand, and also the fulfillment of every vision. 25 Whatever I speak is final, and it shall be done without further delay. In your days, rebellious house, whatever I speak I will bring about, says the Lord God.

24 There shall no longer be any false visions or deceitful divinations within the house of Israel, because it is I, the Lord, who will speak.

26 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 27 Son of man, listen to the house of Israel saying, "The vision he sees is a long way off; he prophesies of the distant future!" 28 Say to them therefore: Thus says the Lord God: None of my words shall be delayed any longer; whatever I speak is final, and it shall be done, says the Lord God.

CHAPTER 13.

Against the Prophets of Peace. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel, prophesy! Say to those who prophesy their own thought: Hear the word of the Lord: 5 You did not step into the breach, nor did you build a wall about the house of Israel that would stand firm against attack on the day of the Lord. 7 Was not the vision you saw false, and your divination lying? 8 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you have spoken falsehood and have seen lying visions, therefore see! I am coming at you, says the Lord God.

10 For the very reason that they led my people astray, saying, "Peace!" when there was no peace, and that, as one built a wall, they would cover it with whitewash,* 11 say then to the whitewashers: I will bring down a flooding rain; hailstones shall fall, and a stormwind shall break out. 12 And when the wall has fallen, will you not be asked: Where is the whitewash you spread on?

13 Therefore thus says the Lord God: In my fury I will let loose stormwinds;

v Ez 17, 20; 32, 3.

12, 13: But he shall not see it: Sedecia was blinded by Nabuchodonosor before being deported to Babylonia; cf 4 Kgs 25, 7.

12, 22. 27: These words were used against Ezechiel because of the apparent failure of his prophecies; cf Jer 20, 7ff.

13, 10: To the confidence which the people had in their defenses against the Chaldeans, the false prophets contributed the illusion of security by predictions of peace, like men who whitewash a wall rather than allow its defects to be seen.

because of my anger there shall be a flooding rain, and hailstones shall fall with destructive wrath. 14 I will tear down the wall that you have whitewashed and level it to the ground, laying bare its foundations. When it falls, you shall be crushed beneath it; thus you shall know that I am the Lord. 15 When I have spent my fury on the wall and its whitewashers, I tell you there shall be no wall, nor shall there be whitewashers—16 those prophets of Israel who prophesied to Jerusalem and saw for it visions of peace when there was no peace, says the Lord God.

Against False Prophets in Chaldea. 3 [w] Thus says the Lord God: Woe to those prophets who are fools, who follow their own spirit and have seen no vision. 4 Like foxes among ruins are your prophets, O Israel! 6 Their visions are false and their divination lying. They say, "Thus says the Lord!" though the Lord did not send them; then they wait for him to fulfill their word! 9 But I will stretch out my hand against the prophets who have false visions and who foretell lies. They shall not belong to the community of my people, nor be recorded in the register of the house of Israel, nor enter the land of Israel; thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

Against False Prophetesses. 17 Now, son of man, turn toward the daughters of your people who prophesy their own thoughts; against these, prophesy: Thus says the Lord God: 22 Because you have disheartened the upright man with lies when I did not wish him grieved, and have encouraged the wicked man not to turn from his evil conduct and save his life; 23 therefore you shall no longer see false visions and practice divination, but I will rescue my people from your power. Thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

Against Sorceresses. 18 Woe to those who sew bands for everyone's wrists and make veils* for every size of head so as to entrap their owners. Do you think to entrap the lives of my people, yet keep yourselves alive? 19 You dishonor me before my people with handfuls of barley and crumbs of bread,* killing those who should not die and keeping alive those who should not live, lying to my people who willingly hear lies. 20 Therefore thus says the Lord God: See! I am coming at those bands of yours in which you entrap men's lives: I will tear them from their arms and set free those you have caught. 21 I will tear off your veils and rescue my people from your power, so that they shall no longer be prey to your hands. Thus you shall know I am the Lord.

[w] Ez 14, 9; 34, 2; Jer 23, 1.—[x] 3 Kgs 22, 23.

13, 18: Sew bands . . . make veils: magical practices believed to give to the sorceresses power over those on whom they placed these objects.

13, 19: Handfuls of barley and crumbs of bread: used in divination and forecasting the future.

14, 9: I, the Lord, shall have beguiled that prophet: the ancient Israelites attributed to God every action, good or evil; cf 1 Kgs 18, 10; 2 Kgs 24, 1ff. We would say, rather, that God permitted this deceit.

CHAPTER 14.

Prophecy Useless for Idolaters. 1 When certain elders of Israel came and sat down before me, 2 the word of the Lord came to me: 3 Son of man, these men have the memory of their idols fresh in their hearts, and they keep the occasion of their sin before them. Why should I allow myself to be consulted by them? 4 Therefore speak with them, and say to them: Thus says the Lord God: If anyone of the house of Israel, holding the memory of his idols in his heart and keeping the occasion of his sin before him, has recourse to a prophet, I, the Lord, will be his answer in person because of his many idols. 5 Thus would I bring back to their senses the house of Israel, who have become estranged from me through all their idols.

6 Therefore say to the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord God: Return and be converted from your idols; turn yourselves away from all your abominations. 7 For if anyone of the house of Israel or any alien resident in Israel is estranged from me, and holds the memory of his idols in his heart and keeps the occasion of his sin before him, yet asks a prophet to consult me for him, I, the Lord, will be his answer in person. 8 I will turn against that man, and make of him an example and a byword. I will cut him off from the midst of my people. Thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

9 [x] As for the prophet, if he is beguiled into speaking a word, I, the Lord, shall have beguiled that prophet;* I will stretch out my hand against him and root him out of my people Israel. 10 Each shall receive punishment for his sin, the inquirer and the prophet shall be punished alike, 11 so that the house of Israel may no longer stray from me and may no longer be defiled by all their sins. Thus they shall be my people, and I will be their God, says the Lord God.

Personal Responsibility.* 12 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 13 y Son of man, when a land sins against me by breaking faith, I stretch out my hand against it and break its staff of bread, I let famine loose upon it and cut off from it both man and beast; 14 and even if these three men were in it, Noe, Daniel, and Job,* they could save only themselves by their virtue, says the Lord God. 15 If I were to cause wild beasts to prowl the land, depopulating it so that it became a waste, traversed by none because of the wild beasts, 16 and these three men were in it, as I live, says the Lord God, I swear they could save neither sons nor daughters; they alone would be saved, and the land would be a waste. 17 Or if I brought the sword upon this country, commanding the sword to pass through the land cutting off from it man and beast, 18 and these three men were in it, as I live, says the Lord God, they would be unable to save either sons or daughters; they alone would be saved. 19 Or if I were to send pestilence into this land, pouring out upon it my bloodthirsty fury, cutting off from it man and beast, 20 even if Noe, Daniel, and Job were in it, as I live, says the Lord God, I swear that they could save neither son nor daughter; they would save only themselves by their virtue.

21 Thus says the Lord God: Even though I send Jerusalem my four cruel punishments, the sword, famine, wild beasts, and pestilence, to cut off from it man and beast, 22 still some survivors shall be left in it who will bring out sons and daughters; when they come out to you, you shall see their conduct and their actions and be consoled regarding the evil I have brought on Jerusalem [all that I have brought upon it]. 23 They shall console you when you see their conduct and actions, for you shall then know that it was not without reason that I did to it what I did, says the Lord God.

CHAPTER 15.

Parable of the Vine. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, what makes the wood of the vine better than any other wood? That branch among the trees of the forest! 3 Can you use its wood to make anything worthwhile? Can you make even a peg from it, to hang on it any kind of vessel? 4 If you throw it on the fire as fuel and the fire devours both ends and even the middle is scorched, is it still good for anything? 5 Why, even when it was whole it was good for nothing; how much less, when the fire has devoured and scorched it, can it be used for anything! 6 Therefore, thus says the Lord God: Like the wood of the vine among the trees of the forest, which I have destined as fuel for the fire, do I make the inhabitants of Jerusalem. 7 I will set my face against them; they have escaped from the fire, but the fire shall devour them. Thus you shall know that I am the Lord, when I turn my face against them. 8 I will make the land a waste, because they have broken faith, says the Lord God.

CHAPTER 16.

The Faithless Spouse. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, make known to Jerusalem her abominations: 3 Thus says the Lord God to Jerusalem: By origin and birth you are of the land of Chanaan; your father was an Amorrite and your mother a Hethite.* 4 As for your birth, the day you were born your navel cord was not cut; you were neither washed with water nor anointed, nor were you rubbed with salt, nor swathed in swaddling clothes. 5 No one looked on you with pity or compassion to do any of these things for you. Rather, you were thrown out on the ground as something loathsome, the day you were born.

6 Then I passed by and saw you weltering in your blood. I said to you: Live in your blood 7 and grow like a plant in the field. You grew and developed, you came to the age of puberty; your breasts were formed, your hair had grown, but you were still stark naked. 8 Again I passed by you and saw that you were now old enough for love. So I spread the corner

y Ez 4, 16.

14, 12-23: The doctrine of personal responsibility before God was not new (cf Ez 3, 16-21; 18; 33, 1-20); but it had not been emphasized by the prophets before the Exile, who mostly predicted national retribution and called for national repentance.

14, 14: Noe, Daniel, and Job: proverbially virtuous men. The Daniel named here may be the traditional just judge of the ancient past, celebrated in Chanaanite literature, who is possibly reflected in Dn 13, but is not the hero of Dn 1-12.

of my cloak over you to cover your nakedness;* I swore an oath to you and entered into a covenant with you; you became mine, says the Lord God. 9 Then I bathed you with water, washed away your blood, and anointed you with oil. 10 I clothed you with an embroidered gown, put sandals of fine leather on your feet; I gave you a fine linen sash and silk robes to wear. 11 I adorned you with jewelry: I put bracelets on your arms, a necklace about your neck, 12 a ring in your nose, pendants in your ears, and a glorious diadem upon your head. 13 Thus you were adorned with gold and silver; your garments were of fine linen, silk, and embroidered cloth. Fine flour, honey, and oil were your food. You were exceedingly beautiful, with the dignity of a queen. 14 You were renowned among the nations for your beauty, perfect as it was, because of my splendor which I had bestowed on you, says the Lord God.

15 But you were captivated by your own beauty, you used your renown to make yourself a harlot, and you lavished your harlotry on every passer-by, whose own you became. 16 *You took some of your gowns and made for yourself gaudy high places, where you played the harlot. . . . 17 You took the splendid gold and silver ornaments that I had given you and made for yourself male images, with which also you played the harlot. 18 You took your embroidered gowns to cover them; my oil and my incense you set before them; 19 the food that I had given you, the fine flour, the oil, and the honey with which I fed you, you set before them as an appeasing odor, says the Lord God. 20 z The sons and daughters you had borne me you took and offered as sacrifices* to be devoured by them! Was it not enough that you had become a harlot? 21 a You slaughtered and immolated my children to them, making them pass through fire. 22 And through all your abominations and harlotries you remembered nothing of when you were a girl, stark naked and weltering in your blood.

23 Then after all your evildoing—woe, woe to you! says the Lord God—24 you raised for yourself a platform and a dais* in every public place. 25 b At every street corner you built a dais for yourself to use your beauty obscenely, spreading your legs for every passer-by, playing the harlot countless times. 26 You played the harlot with the Egyptians, your lustful neighbors, so many times that I was provoked to anger. 27 Therefore I stretched out my hand against you, I diminished your allowance and delivered you over to the will of your enemies, the Philistines, who revolted at your lewd conduct. 28 You also played the harlot with the Assyrians, because you were not satisfied; and after playing the harlot with them, you were still not satisfied. 29 Again and again you played the harlot, now going to Chaldea, the land of the traders; but despite this, you were still not satisfied.

30 How wild your lust! says the Lord God, that you did all these things, acting like a shameless prostitute, 31 building your platform at every street corner and erecting your dais in every public place! Yet you were unlike a prostitute, since you disdained payment. 32 The adulterous wife receives, instead of her husband, payment. 33 All harlots receive gifts. But you rather bestowed your gifts on all your lovers, bribing them to come to you from all sides for your harlotry. 34 Thus in your harlotry you were different from all other women. No one sought you out for prostitution. Since you gave payment instead of receiving it, how different you were!

35 Therefore, harlot, hear the word of the Lord! 36 Thus says the Lord God: Because you poured out your lust and revealed your nakedness in your harlotry with your lovers and abominable idols, and because you sacrificed the lifeblood of your children to them, 37 c I will now gather together all your lovers whom you tried to please, whether you loved them or loved them not; I will gather them against you from all sides and expose you naked for them to see. 38 I will inflict on you the sentence of adulteresses and murderesses; I will wreak fury and jealousy

upon you. 39 I will hand you over to them to tear down your platform and demolish
your dais; they shall strip you of your garments and take away your splendid ornaments, leaving you stark naked. 40 They shall lead an assembly against you to stone
you and hack you with their swords. 41
d They shall burn your apartments with fire and inflict punishments on you while many women look on. Thus I will put an end to your harlotry, and you shall never again give payment. 42 When I have wreaked my fury upon you I will cease to be jealous of you, I will be quiet and no longer vexed. 43 Because you did not remember what happened when you were a girl, but enraged me with all these things,
therefore in return I am bringing down your conduct upon your head, says the Lord God. For did you not add lewdness to the rest of your abominable deeds?

44 See, everyone who is fond of proverbs will say of you, 'Like mother, like daughter.' 45 Yes, you are the true daughter of the mother* who spurned her husband and children, and you are a true sister to those who spurned their husbands and children—your mother was a Hethite and your father an Amorrite. 46 Your elder sister was Samaria* with her daughters, living to the north of you; and your younger sister, living to the south of you, was Sodom with her daughters. 47 Yet not only in their ways did you walk, and act
as abominably as they did; in a very short time you became more corrupt in all your ways than they. 48 As I live, says the Lord God, I swear that your sister Sodom, with her daughters, has not done as you and your daughters have done! 49 e And look at the guilt of your sister Sodom: she and her daughters were proud, sated with food, complacent in their prosperity, and they gave no help to the poor and needy.
50 Rather, they became haughty and committed abominable crimes in my presence;
then, as you have seen, I removed them.
51 Samaria did not commit half your sins!
You have done more abominable things than they, and have even made your sisters appear just, with all the abominable deeds you have done. 52 You, then, bear your shame; you are an argument in favor of your sisters! In view of your sinful deeds, more abominable than theirs,
they appear just in comparison with you.
Blush for shame, and bear the shame of having made your sisters appear just.

53 I will restore their fortunes, the fortune of Sodom and her daughters and of Samaria and her daughters [and I will restore your fortune along with them], 54
that you may bear your shame and be disgraced for all the comfort you brought them. 55 Yes, your sisters, Sodom and her daughters, Samaria and her daughters, shall return to their former state [you and your daughters shall return to your former state]. 56 Was not your sister Sodom kept in bad repute by you while you felt proud of yourself, 57 before your wickedness became evident? Now you are like her, reproached by the Edomites and all your neighbors, despised on all sides by the Philistines. 58 The penalty of your lewdness and your abominations—you must bear it all, says the Lord.

59 For thus speaks the Lord God: I will deal with you according to what you have done, you who despised your oath, breaking a covenant. 60 Yet I will remember the covenant I made with you when you were a girl, and I will set up an everlasting covenant with you. 61 Then you shall remember your conduct and be ashamed when I take your sisters, those older and younger than you, and give them to you as daughters, even though I am not bound by my covenant with you. 62 For I will re-establish my covenant with you, that you may know that I am the Lord, 63
that you may remember and be covered with confusion, and that you may be utterly silenced for shame when I pardon
you for all you have done, says the Lord
God.

CHAPTER 17.

The Eagles and the Vine. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, propose a riddle, and speak this proverb to the house of Israel: 3 Thus speaks the Lord God: The great eagle, with great wings, with long pinions, with thick plumage, many-hued, came to Lebanon. He took the crest of the cedar, 4 tearing off its topmost branch, and brought it to a land of tradesmen, set it in a city of merchants.

d 4 Kgs 25, 9.—e Gn 19, 24.

16, 45: True daughter of the mother: Jerusalem has followed in the footsteps of its heathen forebears; cf v 3.

16, 46: Your elder sister was Samaria: Samaria can be called an elder sister in view of the relatively greater importance of the Northern Kingdom, Israel, during most of Old Testament history. Also, the relatively insignificant Sodom of ancient history can be called your younger sister.

5 Then he took some seed of the land, and planted it in a seedbed; a shoot by plentiful waters, like a willow he placed it, 6 to sprout and grow up a vine, dense and low-lying, its branches turned toward him, its roots lying under him. Thus it became a vine, produced branches and put forth shoots. 7 But there was another great eagle, great of wing, rich in plumage; to him this vine bent its roots, sent out its branches, that he might water it more freely than the bed where it was planted. 8 In a fertile field by plentiful waters it was planted, to grow branches,
bear fruit, and become a majestic vine.

9 Say: Thus says the Lord God: Can it prosper? Will he not rather tear it out by the roots and strip off its fruit, so that all its green growth will wither when he pulls it up by the roots? [No need of a mighty arm or many people to do this.]
10 True, it is planted, but will it prosper?
Will it not rather wither, when touched by the east wind, in the bed where it grew?

11 *Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 12 Son of man, say now to the rebellious house: Do you not understand what this means? It is this: The king of Babylon came to Jerusalem and took away its king and princes with him to Babylon. 13
Then he selected a man of the royal line with whom he made a covenant, binding him under oath, while removing the nobles of the land, 14 so that the kingdom would remain a modest one, without aspirations, and would keep his covenant and obey him. 15 But this man rebelled against him, sending envoys to Egypt to obtain horses and a great army. Can he prosper? Can he who does such things escape? Can he break a covenant and still go free? 16 As I live, says the Lord God, in the home of the king who set him up to rule, whose oath he spurned, whose covenant with him he broke, there in Babylon I swear he shall die! 17 When ramps are cast up and siege towers are built for the destruction of many lives, he shall not be saved in the conflict by Pharao with a great army and numerous troops. 18 He spurned his oath, breaking his covenant. Though he gave his hand in pledge, he did all these things. He shall not escape!

19 Therefore say: Thus says the Lord
God: As I live, my oath which he spurn-ed, my covenant which he broke, I swear to bring down upon his head. 20 f I will spread my net over him, and he shall be taken in my snare. I will bring him to Babylon and enter into judgment with him there over his breaking faith with me.
21 All the crack troops among his forces shall fall by the sword, and the survivors shall be scattered in every direction. Thus you shall know that I, the Lord, have spoken.

22 Therefore say: Thus says the Lord God: I, too, will take from the crest of the cedar, from its topmost branches tear off a tender shoot, and plant it* on a high and lofty mountain; 23 on the mountain heights of Israel I will plant it. It shall put forth branches and bear fruit, and become a majestic cedar. Birds of every kind shall dwell beneath it, every winged thing in the shade of its boughs. 24 And all the trees of the field shall know that I, the Lord, bring low the high tree, lift high
the lowly tree, wither up the green tree, and make the withered tree bloom. As I,
the Lord, have spoken, so will I do.

CHAPTER 18.

Personal Responsibility. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 g Son of man,
what is the meaning of this proverb that you recite in the land of Israel: "Fathers have eaten green grapes, thus their children's teeth are on edge"?* 3 As I live, says the Lord God: I swear that there shall no longer be anyone among you who will repeat this proverb in Israel.
4 For all lives are mine; the life of the father is like the life of the son, both are mine; only the one who sins shall die.

5 If a man is virtuous—if he does what is right and just, 6 if he does not eat on

f Ez 12, 13; 32, 3.—g Jer 31, 29.

17, 11-21: These verses explain the foregoing allegory. In 597 B. C. Nabuchodonosor removed King Joachin and took him into exile; in his place he set Sedecia, Joachin's uncle, on the throne and received from him the oath of loyalty. But Sedecia was beguiled into rebellion by Pharao Hophra of Egypt, and thereby merited punishment; cf 4 Kgs 24, 10—25, 7.

17, 22f: I, too, will take from the crest of the cedar . . . plant it: the Lord will restore Israel under a Messianic king from the same Davidic dynasty.

18, 2: Fathers . . . on edge: a proverb by which the people claimed that they were being punished for their ancestors' sins rather than for their own; cf Jer 31, 29.

the mountains,* nor raise his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel; if he does not defile his neighbor's wife, nor have relations with a woman in her menstrual period; [7] h if he oppresses no one, gives back the pledge received for a debt, commits no robbery; if he gives food to the hungry and clothes the naked; [8] if he does not lend at interest nor exact usury; if he holds off from evildoing, judges fairly between a man and his opponent; [9] if he lives by my statutes and is careful to observe my ordinances, that man is virtuous —he shall surely live, says the Lord God.

[10] But if he begets a son who is a thief, a murderer, or who does any of these things [11] (though the father does none of them), a son who eats on the mountains, defiles the wife of his neighbor, [12] oppresses the poor and needy, commits robbery, does not give back a pledge, raises his eyes to idols, does abominable things, [13] lends at interest and exacts usury—this son certainly shall not live. Because he practiced all these abominations, he shall surely die; his death shall be his own fault.

[14] On the other hand, if a man begets a son who, seeing all the sins his father commits, yet fears and does not imitate him; [15] a son who does not eat on the mountains, or raise his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, or defile his neighbor's wife; [16] who does not oppress anyone, or exact a pledge, or commit robbery; who gives his food to the hungry and clothes the naked; [17] who holds off from evildoing, accepts no interest or usury, but keeps my ordinances and lives by my statutes—this one shall not die for the sins of his father, but shall surely live. [18] Only the father, since he violated rights, and robbed, and did what was not good among his people, shall in truth die for his sins. [19] You ask: "Why is not the son charged with the guilt of his father?" Because the son has done what is right and just, and has been careful to observe all my statutes, he shall surely live. [20] i Only the one who sins shall die. The son shall not be charged with the guilt of his father, nor shall the father be charged with the guilt of his son. The virtuous man's virtue shall be his own, as the wicked man's wickedness shall be his.

[21] But if the wicked man turns away from all the sins he commited, if he keeps all my statutes and does what is right and just, he shall surely live, he shall not die. [22] None of the crimes he committed shall be remembered against him; he shall live because of the virtue he has practiced. [23] j Do I indeed derive any pleasure from the death of the wicked? says the Lord God. Do I not rather rejoice when he turns from his evil way that he may live?

[24] And if the virtuous man turns from the path of virtue to do evil, the same kind of abominable things that the wicked man does, can he do this and still live? None of his virtuous deeds shall be remembered, because he has broken faith and committed sin; because of this, he shall die. [25] k You say, "The Lord's way is not fair!" Hear now, house of Israel: Is it my way that is unfair, or rather, are not your ways unfair? [26] When a virtuous man turns away from virtue to commit iniquity, and dies, it is because of the iniquity he committed that he must die. [27] But if a wicked man, turning from the wickedness he has committed, does what is right and just, he shall preserve his life; [28] since he has turned away from all the sins which he committed, he shall surely live, he shall not die. [29] And yet the house of Israel says, "The Lord's way is not fair!" Is it my way that is not fair, house of Israel, or rather, is it not that your ways are not fair?

[30] l Therefore I will judge you, house of Israel, each one according to his ways, says the Lord God. Turn and be converted from all your crimes, that they may be no cause of guilt for you. [31] Cast away from you all the crimes you have committed, and make for yourselves a new heart and a new spirit. Why should you die, O house of Israel? [32] m For I have no pleasure in the death of anyone who dies, says the Lord God. Return and live!

CHAPTER 19.

[1] As for you, son of man, raise a lamentation over the prince of Israel:

Allegory of the Lions.* [2] What a lioness was your mother, a lion of lions! Among young lions she couched to rear her whelps. [3] One whelp she raised up, a 18, 6: Eat on the mountains: partake of ritual meals at the heathen high places.

19, 2-9: The meaning of this allegory is uncertain. Probably the two young lions are Joachaz and Sedecia, sons of the same mother, who were deported to Egypt and Babylonia respectively. Cf 4 Kgs 23, 31-34; 24, 18ff.

young lion he became; he learned to seize prey, men he devoured. 4 Then nations raised cries against him, in their pit he was caught; they took him away with hooks to the land of Egypt. 5 Then she saw that in vain she had waited, her hope was destroyed. She took another of her whelps, him she made a young lion. 6 He prowled among the lions, a young lion he became; he learned to seize prey, men he devoured; 7 he ravaged their strongholds, their cities he wasted. The land and all in it were appalled at the noise of his roar.
8 Nations laid out against him snares all about him; they spread their net to take him, in their pit he was caught. 9 They put him in a cage and took him away to the king of Babylon, so that his voice would not be heard on the mountains of Israel.

Allegory of the Vine Branch. 10 Your mother was like a vine* planted by the water; fruitful and branchy was she because of the abundant water. 11 One strong branch she put out as a royal scepter. Stately was her height amid the dense foliage; notably tall was she with her many clusters. 12 n But she was torn up in fury and flung to the ground; the east wind withered her up, her fruit was torn off; then her strong branch withered up, fire devoured it. 13 So now she is planted in the desert, in a land dry and parched, 14 for fire came out of the branch and devoured her shoots; she is now without a strong branch, a ruler's scepter.

This is a lamentation and serves as a lamentation.

CHAPTER 20.

Israel's History of Infidelity. 1 In the seventh year, on the tenth day of the fifth month,* some of the elders of Israel came to consult the Lord and sat down before me. 2 Then the word of the Lord came to me: 3 Son of man, speak with the elders of Israel and say to them: Thus says the Lord God: Have you come to consult me? As I live! I swear I will not allow myself to be consulted by you, says
the Lord God.

4 Will you judge them? Will you judge, son of man? Make known to them the abominations of their ancestors 5 in these words: Thus speaks the Lord God: The day I chose Israel, I swore to the descendants of the house of Jacob; in the land of Egypt I revealed myself to them and swore: I am the Lord, your God. 6 That day I swore to bring them out of the land of Egypt to the land I had scouted for them, a land flowing with milk and honey, a jewel among all lands. 7 Then I said to them: Throw away, each of you,
the detestable things that have held your eyes; do not defile yourselves with the idols of Egypt: I am the Lord, your God.

8 But they rebelled against me and refused to listen to me; none of them threw away the detestable things that had held their eyes, they did not abandon the idols of Egypt. Then I thought of pouring out my fury on them and spending my anger on them there in the land of Egypt; 9 but I acted for my name's sake, that it should not be profaned in the sight of the nations among whom they were, in whose presence I had made myself known to them, revealing that I would bring them out of the land of Egypt. 10 Therefore I led them out of the land of Egypt and brought them into the desert. 11 o Then I gave them my statutes and made known to them my ordinances, which everyone must keep, to have life through them. 12 p I also gave them my Sabbaths to be a sign between me and them, to show that it was I, the Lord, who made them holy.

13 But the house of Israel rebelled against me in the desert. They did not observe my statutes, and they despised my ordinances that bring life to those who keep them. My Sabbaths, too, they desecrated grievously. Then I thought of pouring out my fury on them in the desert to put an end to them, 14 but I acted for my name's sake, that it should not be profaned in the sight of the nations in whose presence I had brought them out.
15 Nevertheless I swore to them in the desert not to bring them to the land I had given them, a land flowing with milk and honey, a jewel among all lands. 16
So much were their hearts devoted to their idols, they had not lived by my statutes, but despised my ordinances and desecrated my Sabbaths. 17 But I looked on them with pity, not wanting to destroy them, so I did not put an end to them in the desert.

n Os 13, 15.—o Lv 18, 5; Rom 10, 5.—p Ex 20, 8; 31, 13; Dt 5, 12.

19, 10-14: A vine: Juda. One strong branch: the Davidic king.

20, 1: The seventh year, on the tenth day of the fifth month: August 14, 591 B. C.

18 Then I said to their children in the desert: Do not observe the statutes of your parents or keep their ordinances; do not defile yourselves with their idols. 19 I am the Lord, your God: observe my statutes and be careful to keep my ordinances; 20 keep holy my Sabbaths, as a sign between me and you to show that I am the Lord, your God. 21 But their children rebelled against me: they did not observe my statutes or keep my ordinances that bring life to those who observe them, and my Sabbaths they desecrated. Then I thought of pouring out my fury on them, of spending my anger on them in the desert; 22 but I stayed my hand, acting for my name's sake, lest it be profaned in the sight of the nations in whose presence I brought them out. 23
Nevertheless I swore to them in the desert that I would disperse them among the nations and scatter them over foreign lands; 24 for they did not keep my ordinances, but despised my statutes and desecrated my Sabbaths, with eyes only for the idols of their fathers. 25 Therefore I gave them statutes that were not good,*
and ordinances through which they could not live. 26 I let them become defiled by their gifts, by their immolation of every first-born, so as to make them an object of horror.

27 Therefore speak to the house of Israel, son of man, and tell them: Thus says the Lord God: In this way also your fathers blasphemed me, breaking faith with me: 28 when I had brought them to the land I had sworn to give them,
and they saw all its high hills and leafy trees, there they offered their sacrifices [there they brought their offensive offerings], there they sent up appeasing odors,
and there they poured out their libations.
29 I asked them: To what sort of high place do you betake yourselves?—and so they call it a high place even to the present day. 30 Therefore say to the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord God: Will you defile yourselves like your fathers? Will you lust after their detestable idols? 31 By offering your gifts, by making your children pass through the fire, you defile yourselves with all your idols even to this day. Shall I let myself be consulted by you, house of Israel? As I live! says the Lord God: I swear I will not let myself be consulted by you.

32 What you are thinking of shall never happen: "We shall be like the nations, like the peoples of foreign lands, serving wood and stone." 33 As I live, says the Lord God, with a mighty hand and outstretched arm, with poured-out wrath, I swear I will be king over you! 34 With a mighty hand and outstretched arm, with poured-out wrath, I will bring you out from the nations and gather you from the countries over which you are scattered; 35 *then I will lead you to the desert of the peoples, where I will enter into judgment with you face to face. 36
Just as I entered into judgment with your fathers in the desert of the land of Egypt,
so will I enter into judgment with you,
says the Lord God. 37 I will count you with the staff and bring back but a small number. 38 I will separate from you those who have rebelled and transgressed against me; from the land where they sojourned as aliens I will bring them out,
but they shall not return to the land of Israel. Thus you shall know that I am
the Lord.

39 As for you, house of Israel, thus says
the Lord God: Come, each one of you, destroy your idols! Then listen to me, and never again profane my holy name with your gifts and your idols. 40 For on my holy mountain, on the mountain height of Israel, says the Lord God, there the whole house of Israel without exception shall worship me; there I will accept them, and there I will claim your tributes and the first fruits of your offerings, and all that you dedicate. 41 As a pleasing odor I will accept you, when I have brought you from among the nations and gathered you out of the countries over which you were scattered; and by means of you I will manifest my holiness in the sight of the nations. 42 Thus you shall know that I am the Lord, when I bring you back to the land of Israel,
the land which I swore to give to your fathers. 43 There you shall recall your conduct and all the deeds by which you defiled yourselves; and you shall loathe yourselves because of all the evil things

20, 25f: I gave them statutes that were not good: the Lord permitted them to adopt pagan practices, including the abominable sacrifice of their newborn infants, which could only merit their destruction. See note on Ez 14, 9.

20, 35-38: Exile in the pagan lands will serve the same purpose as the desert journey after the Exodus from Egypt: the rebellious will be eliminated, and only a remnant will survive.

you did. 44 And you shall know that I am the Lord when I deal with you thus, for my name's sake, and not according to your evil conduct and corrupt actions, O house of Israel, says the Lord God.

CHAPTER 21.

The Sword of the Lord. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 *Son of man, look southward, preach toward the south, and prophesy against the forest of the southern land. 3 Hear the word of the Lord! you shall say to the southern forest. Thus says the Lord God: See! I am kindling a fire in you that shall devour all trees, the green as well as the dry. The blazing flame shall not be quenched, but from south to north every face shall be scorched by it. 4 Everyone shall see that I, the Lord, have kindled it, and it shall not be quenched.

5 But I said, "Alas! Lord God, they say to me, 'Is not this the one who is forever spinning parables?' " 6 Then the word of the Lord came to me: 7 Son of man, look toward Jerusalem, preach against their sanctuary, and prophesy against the land of Israel, 8 saying to the land of Israel: Thus says the Lord: See! I am coming at you; I will draw my sword from its sheath and cut off from you the virtuous and the wicked.* 9 Thus my sword shall leave its sheath against everyone from south to north, 10 and everyone shall know that I, the Lord, have drawn my sword from its sheath, and it shall not be sheathed again.

Act Symbolic of the City's Fall. 11 As for you, son of man, groan! with shattered strength groan bitterly while they look on. 12 And when they ask you, "Why are you groaning?", you shall say: Because of a report;* when it comes every heart shall fail, every hand shall fall helpless, every spirit shall be daunted, and every knee shall run with water. See, it is coming, it is here! says the Lord God.

Song of the Sword. 13 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 14 Son of man, prophesy! say: Thus says the Lord: A sword, a sword has been sharpened, a sword, a sword has been burnished: 15 to work slaughter has it been sharpened, to flash lightning has it been burnished. Why should I now withdraw it? You have spurned the rod and every judgment! 16 I have given it over to the burnisher that he might hold it in his hand, a sword sharpened and burnished to be put in the hand of a slayer. 17 Cry out and wail, son of man, for it is destined for my people; it is for all the princes of Israel, victims of the sword with my people. Therefore, slap your thigh,*18 for the sword has been tested; and why should it not be so? says the Lord God, since you have spurned the rod.

19 As for you, son of man, prophesy, brushing one hand against the other: while the sword is doubled and tripled, this sword of slaughter, this great sword of slaughter which threatens all around, 20 that every heart may tremble; for many will be the fallen. At all their gates I have appointed the sword for slaughter, fashioned to flash lightning, burnished for slaughter. 21 Cleave to the right! destroy! to the left! wherever your edge is turned. 22 Then I, too, shall brush one hand against the other* and wreak my fury. I, the Lord, have spoken.

Nabuchodonosor at the Crossroads. 23 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 24 Son of man, make for yourself two roads over which the sword of the king of Babylon can come. Both roads shall lead out from the same land. Then put a signpost at the head of each road, 25 so that the sword can come to Rabbah of the Ammonites or to Juda's capital, Jerusalem. 26 For at the fork where the two roads divide stands the king of Babylon, divining;* he has shaken the arrows, inquired of the teraphim, inspected the liver. 27 In his right hand is the divining arrow marked "Jerusalem,"* bidding him to give the order for slaying, to raise his voice in the battle cry, to post battering-rams at the gates, to cast up a ramp, to build a siege tower. 28 In their eyes this 21, 2ff: The Southern Kingdom, Juda, is likened to a forest about to be burned; cf Jer 21, 14.

21, 8: Cut off from you the virtuous and the wicked: a more complete devastation of Jerusalem than that described in Ez 9, 6.

21, 12: A report: the news of the fall of Jerusalem; cf Ez 33, 21f.

21, 17: Slap your thigh: a gesture signifying grief and dread.

21, 22: Brush one hand against the other: a gesture signifying the rejection of responsibility; cf Ez 22, 13; Nm 24, 10.

21, 26: Three forms of divination are mentioned: arrow divination, consisting in the use of differently marked arrows extracted or shaken from a case at random; the consultation of the teraphim or household idols; and liver divination, scrutiny of the configurations of the livers of newly slaughtered animals, a common form of divination in Mesopotamia.

21, 27f: An arrow marked "Jerusalem" is picked out, which marks the guilt of the city's inhabitants for having broken their oath of allegiance to Nabuchodonosor.

is but a lying oracle; yet they are bound by the oaths they have sworn, and the arrow taken in hand marks their guilt.

29 Therefore thus says the Lord God:
Because you have drawn attention to your guilt, with your crimes laid bare and your sinfulness in all your wicked deeds revealed (because attention has been drawn to you), you shall be taken in hand. 30 And as for you, depraved and wicked prince of Israel, whose day is coming when your life of crime will be ended, 31 thus says the Lord God: Off with the turban and away with the crown! Nothing shall be as it was! Up with the low and down with the high! 32 Twisted, twisted, twisted will I leave it; it shall not be the same until he comes who has the claim against the city; and to him I will hand it over.

Against the Ammonites.* 33 As for you, son of man, prophesy: Thus says the Lord God against the Ammonites and their insults: A sword, a sword is drawn for slaughter, burnished to consume and to flash lightning, 34 because you planned with false visions and lying divinations to lay it on the necks of depraved and wicked men whose day has come when their crimes are at an end. 35 Return it to its sheath! In the place where you were created, in the land of your origin, I will judge you. 36 I will pour out my indignation upon you, breathing my fiery wrath upon you; I will hand you over to ravaging men, artisans of destruction. 37 You shall be fuel for the fire, your blood shall flow throughout the land. You shall not be remembered, for I, the Lord, have spoken.

CHAPTER 22.

Crimes of Jerusalem. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 You, son of man, would you judge, would you judge the bloody city? Then make known all her abominations, 3 and say: Thus says the Lord God: Woe to the city which sheds blood within herself so that her time has come, and which has made idols for her own defilement. 4 By the blood which you shed you have been made guilty, and with the idols you made you have become defiled; you have brought on your day, so that the end of your years has come. Therefore I make you an object of scorn to the nations and a laughingstock to all foreign lands. 5 Those near you and those far off shall deride you because of your foul reputation and your great perversity. 6 See! the princes of Israel, family by family, are in you only for bloodshed. 7 Within you, father and mother are despised; in your midst, they extort from the resident alien; within you, they oppress orphans and widows. 8 What is holy to me you have spurned, and my Sabbaths you have desecrated. 9 There are those in you who slander to cause bloodshed; within you are those who feast on the mountains; in your midst are those who do lewd things. 10 In you are those who uncover the nakedness of their fathers, and in you those who coerce women in their menstrual period. 11 q There are those in you who do abominable things with the wives of their neighbors, men who defile their daughters-in-law by incest, men who coerce their sisters, the daughters of their own fathers. 12 There are those in you who take bribes to shed blood. You exact interest and usury; you despoil your neighbors violently; and me you have forgotten, says the Lord God.

13 See, I am brushing one hand against the other because of the unjust profits you have made and because of the bloodshed in your midst. 14 Can your heart remain firm, will your hands be strong, in the days when I deal with you? I, the Lord, have spoken, and I will act. 15 I will disperse you among the nations and scatter you over foreign lands, so that I may purge your uncleanness. 16 In you I will allow myself to be profaned in the eyes of the nations; thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

17 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 18 Son of man, the house of Israel has become dross for me. All of them are bronze and tin, iron and lead [in the midst of a furnace]: dross from silver have they become. 19 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because all of you have become dross, therefore I must gather you together within Jerusalem. 20 Just as silver, bronze, iron, lead, and tin are gathered into a furnace and smelted in the

q Jer 5, 7f.

21, 33-37: In the preceding section Nabuchodonsor is represented as deciding whether to attack Jerusalem or Rabbath-Ammon. As it happened, Jerusalem was chosen for attack; later, however, the Chaldeans also invaded Ammon. The present oracle against Ammon is inserted here, rather than in chapters 25-32, in order to complement the oracle against Jerusalem.

roaring flames, so I will gather you together in my furious wrath, put you in, and smelt you. 21 When I have assembled you, I will blast you with the fire of my anger and smelt you with it. 22 You shall be smelted by it just as silver is smelted in a furnace. Thus you shall know that I, the Lord, have poured out my fury on you.

23 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 24 Son of man, say to her: You are a land unrained on [that is, not rained on] at the time of my fury. 25 Her princes are like roaring lions that tear prey; they devour people, seizing their wealth and precious things, and make widows of many within her. 26 Her priests violate my law and profane what is holy to me; they do not distinguish between the sacred and the profane, nor teach the difference between the unclean and the clean; they pay no attention to my Sabbaths, so that I have been profaned in their midst. 27 [r] Her nobles within her are like wolves that tear prey, shedding blood and destroying lives to get unjust gain. 28 Her prophets cover them with whitewash, pretending to visions that are false and performing lying divinations, saying, "Thus says the Lord God," although the Lord has not spoken. 29 The people of the land practice extortion and commit robbery; they afflict the poor and the needy, and oppress the resident alien without justice. 30 Thus I have searched among them for someone who could build a wall or stand in the breach before me to keep me from destroying the land; but I found no one. 31 Therefore I have poured out my fury upon them; with my fiery wrath I have consumed them; I have brought down their conduct upon their heads, says the Lord God.

CHAPTER 23.

The Two Sisters. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, there were two women, daughters of the same mother, 3 who even as young girls played the harlot in Egypt. There the Egyptians caressed their bosoms and fondled their virginal breasts. 4 Ohola was the name of the elder, and the name of her sister was Oholiba.* They became mine and bore sons and daughters. [As for their names: Samaria is Ohola, and Jerusalem is Oholiba.] 5 Ohola became a harlot faithless to me; she lusted after her lovers, the Assyrians, warriors 6 dressed in purple, governors and officers, all of them attractive young men, knights mounted on horses. 7 Thus she gave herself as a harlot to them, to all the elite of the Assyrians, and she defiled herself with all those for whom she lusted [with all their idols]. 8 She did not give up the harlotry which she had begun in Egypt, when they had lain with her as a young girl, fondling her virginal breasts and pouring out their impurities on her. 9 Therefore I handed her over to her lovers, the Assyrians for whom she had lusted. 10 [s] They exposed her nakedness, her sons and daughters they took away, and herself they slew with the sword. Thus she became a byword for women, for they punished her grievously.

11 Though her sister Oholiba saw all this, her lust was more depraved than her sister's, and she outdid her in harlotry. 12 She too lusted after the Assyrians, governors and officers, warriors impeccably clothed, knights mounted on horses, all of them attractive young men. 13 I saw that she had defiled herself. Both had gone down the same path, 14 yet she went further in her harlotry. When she saw men drawn on the wall, the images of Chaldeans drawn with vermillion, 15 with sashes girded about their waists, flowing turbans on their heads, all looking like chariot warriors, the portraits of Babylonians, natives of Chaldea, 16 she lusted for them; no sooner had she set eyes on them than she sent messengers to them in Chaldea. 17 Then the Babylonians came to her, to the love couch, and defiled her with their intercourse. As soon as she was defiled by them, she became disgusted with them. 18 Her harlotry was discovered and her shame was revealed, and I became disgusted with her as I had become disgusted with her sister. 19 But she played the harlot all the more, recalling the days of her girlhood, when she had been a harlot in the land of Egypt. 20 She lusted for the lechers of Egypt, whose members are like that of an ass, and whose heat is like that of stallions.

21 You yearned for the lewdness of

r Mi 3, 11; So 3, 3.—s Ez 16, 37.

23, 4: Ohola . . . Oholiba: symbolic names. The first, standing for Samaria, may be read to mean "her own tent"; the latter, standing for Jerusalem, means "my tent is in her." The references seem to be to the schismatic temple and cult of the Lord in Samaria, as opposed to their authentic counterpart in Jerusalem.

your girlhood, when the Egyptians fondled your breasts, caressing your bosom. 22 Therefore, Oholiba, thus says the Lord God: I will now stir up your lovers against you, those with whom you are disgusted, and I will bring them against you from every side: 23 the men of Babylon and all of Chaldea, Pecod, Shoa and Coa,* along with all those of Assyria, attractive young men, all of them governors and officers, charioteers and warriors, all of them horsemen. 24 They shall come against you from the north with chariots and wagons and many peoples. Shields, bucklers, and helmets they shall array against you everywhere. 25 I will leave it to them to judge, and they will judge you by their own ordinances. I will let loose my jealousy against you, so that they shall deal with you in fury, cutting off your nose and ears; and what is left of you shall fall by the sword. They shall take away your sons and daughters, and what is left of you shall be devoured by fire. 26 They shall strip off your clothes and seize your splendid ornaments. 27 I will put an end to your lewdness and to the harlotry you began in Egypt; you shall no longer look toward it, nor shall you remember Egypt again.

28 For thus says the Lord God: I am now handing you over to those whom you hate, to those who fill you with disgust. 29 They shall deal with you in hatred, seizing all that you have worked for and leaving you stark naked, so that your indecent nakedness is exposed. Your lewdness and harlotry 30 have brought these things upon you, because you played the harlot with the nations by defiling yourself with their idols.

31 Because you followed in the path of your sister, I will hand you her cup. 32 Thus says the Lord God: The cup of your sister you shall drink, so wide and deep, which holds so much, 33 filled with destruction and grief, a cup of dismay, the cup of your sister. 34 You shall drain it dry, and gnaw at the very sherds of the cup, and you shall tear out your breasts; for I have spoken, says the Lord God. 35 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you have forgotten me and cast me behind your back, it is for you to bear the penalty of your lewdness and harlotry.

36 Then the Lord said to me: Son of man, would you judge Ohola and Oholiba? Then make known to them their abominations. 37 For they committed adultery, and blood is on their hands. They committed adultery with their idols; to feed them they immolated the children they had borne me. 38 [This, too, they did to me: they defiled my sanctuary and desecrated my Sabbaths. 39 On the very day they slew their children for their idols, they entered my sanctuary to desecrate it. Thus they acted within my house.] 40 Moreover, they sent for men who had to come from afar,* to whom messengers were sent. And so they came —and for them you bathed yourself, painted your eyes, and put on ornaments. 41 You sat on a couch prepared for them, with a table spread before it, on which you had set my incense and oil. 42 Then was heard the shout of a carefree mob in the city, and these were men brought in from the desert, who put bracelets on the women's arms and splendid diadems on their heads. 43 So I said: "Oh, this woman jaded with adulteries! Now they will commit whoredom with her, and as for her . . ." 44 And indeed they did come to her as men come to a harlot. Thus they came to Ohola and Oholiba, the lewd women. 45 But just men shall punish them with the sentence meted out to adulteresses and murderesses, for they have committed adultery, and blood is on their hands.

46 Thus says the Lord God: Summon an assembly against them, and deliver them over to terror and plunder. 47 The assembly shall stone them and hack them to pieces with their swords. They shall slay their sons and daughters, and burn their houses with fire. 48 Thus I will put an end to lewdness in the land, and all the women will be warned not to imitate your lewdness. 49 They shall inflict on you the penalty of your lewdness, and you shall pay for your sins of idolatry. Thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

CHAPTER 24.

Allegory of the Pot. 1 On the tenth day of the tenth month, in the ninth year,* the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son

23, 23: Pecod, Shoa and Coa: peoples living about the Tigris, part of "greater Babylonia."

23, 40: Men who had to come from afar: ambassadors from Assyria and Babylon. Alliances with these countries aided in the corruption of both Israel and Juda.

24, 1: The tenth day of the tenth month, in the ninth year, January 15, 588 B. C. The same date is given in Jer 52, 4.

of man, write down this date today, for this very day the king of Babylon has invested Jerusalem. 3 Propose this parable to the rebellious house: Thus says the Lord God: *Set up the pot, set it up, then pour in some water. 4 Put in it pieces of meat, all good pieces: thigh and shoulder; fill it with the choicest joints taken from the pick of the flock. 5 Then pile the wood beneath it; bring to a boil these pieces and the joints that are in it. 6 Take out its pieces, one by one, without casting lots for it.

Therefore, thus says the Lord God: Woe to the bloody city,[t] a pot containing rust, whose rust has not been removed. 7 For the blood she shed is in her midst: she poured it on the bare rock; she did not pour it out on the earth, to be covered with dust.* 8 To work up my wrath, to excite my vengeance, she put her blood on the bare rock, not to be covered.

9 Therefore, thus says the Lord God: I, too, will heap up a great bonfire, 10 piling on wood and kindling the fire, till the meat has been cooked, till the broth has boiled. 11 Then I will set the pot empty on the coals till its metal glows red hot, till the impurities in it melt, and its rust disappears. 12 Yet not even with fire will its great rust be removed. 13 Because you have sullied yourself with lewdness when I would have purified you, and you refused to be purified of your uncleanness, therefore you shall not be purified until I wreak my fury on you. 14 I, the Lord, have spoken; it is coming, for I will bring it about without fail. I will not have pity nor repent. By your conduct and your deeds you shall be judged, says the Lord God.

Symbol of the Destruction of the Temple. 15 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 16 Son of man, by a sudden blow I am taking away from you the delight of your eyes, but do not mourn or weep or shed any tears. 17 Groan in silence, make no lament for the dead, bind on your turban, put your sandals on your feet, do not cover your beard, and do not eat the customary bread.* 18 That evening my wife died, and the next morning I did as I had been commanded. 19 Then the people asked me, "Will you not tell us what all these things that you are doing mean for us?" I therefore spoke to the people that morning, 20 saying to them: Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 21 Say to the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord God: I will now desecrate my sanctuary, the stronghold of your pride, the delight of your eyes, the desire of your soul. The sons and daughters you left behind shall fall by the sword. 24 Ezechiel shall be a sign for you: all that he did you shall do when it happens. Thus you shall know that I am the Lord. 22*You shall do as I have done, not covering your beards nor eating the customary bread. 23 Your turbans shall remain on your heads, your sandals on your feet. You shall not mourn or weep, but you shall rot away because of your sins and groan one to another.

End of Ezechiel's Dumbness. 25 As for you, son of man, truly, on the day I take away from them their bulwark, their glorious joy, the delight of their eyes, the desire of their soul, and the pride of their hearts, their sons and daughters, 26 that day the fugitive will come to you, that you may hear it for yourself; 27 that day your mouth shall be opened and you shall be dumb no longer. Thus you shall be a sign to them, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

III: PROPHECIES AGAINST FOREIGN NATIONS

CHAPTER 25.

Against Ammon. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, turn toward the Ammonites and prophesy against them. 3 [u] Say to the Ammonites: Hear the word of the Lord! Thus says the Lord God: Because you cried out your joy over the desecration of my sanctuary, the devastation of the land of Israel, and the exile of the house of Juda, 4 therefore I will deliver you into the possession of the Easterners.* They shall set up their encampments among you and pitch their tents; they shall eat your fruits

t Na 3, 1; Hb 2, 12.—u Jer 40, 14; 41, 10; 49, 2; Am 1, 13ff; So 2, 8ff.

24, 3ff: This present comparison of the inhabitants of Jerusalem to meat boiled in a pot symbolizes their punishment rather than their supposed protection as in Ez 11, 3.

24, 7: Blood . . . to be covered with dust: since blood was sacred to God, it had to be covered with earth (Lv 17, 13); the blood of a murdered man that was left uncovered cried to heaven for vengeance; cf Jb 16, 18; Gn 4, 10.

24, 17: The customary bread: eaten as a mourning observance; cf Jer 16, 7. The other gestures here forbidden were also popular mourning customs.

24, 22f: The fall of the city will be so sudden and final that the exiles will have no time to go into mourning.

25, 4: The Easterners: nomadic tribes to the east of Ammon and Moab.

and drink your milk. 5 I will make Rabba
a pasture for camels, and the villages of the Ammonites a resting place for flocks.
Thus you shall know that I am the Lord.
6 For thus says the Lord God: Because you clapped your hands and stamped your feet, rejoicing most maliciously in your heart over the land of Israel, 7 therefore I will stretch out my hand against
you. I will make you plunder for the nations, I will cut you off from the peoples, and remove you from the lands. I will destroy you, and thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

Against Moab. 8 v Thus says the Lord God: Because Moab said, "See! the house of Juda is like all other nations," 9 therefore I will clear the shoulder of Moab*
totally of its cities, the jewels of the land:
Beth-Jesimoth, Baal-Maon, and Cariath-aim. 10 I will hand her over, along with the Ammonites, into the possession of the Easterners, that she may not be remembered among the peoples. 11 Thus I will execute judgment upon Moab, that they may know that I am the Lord.

Against Edom. 12 w Thus says the Lord God: Because Edom has taken vengeance on the house of Juda and has made itself grievously guilty by taking vengeance on them, 13 therefore thus says the Lord God: I will stretch out my hand against Edom and cut off from it man and beast.
I will make it a waste from Theman to Dedan; they shall fall by the sword. 14
My vengeance upon Edom I will entrust to my people Israel, who will deal with Edom in accordance with my anger and my fury; thus they shall know my vengeance, says the Lord God.

Against the Philistines. 15 Thus says the Lord God: Because the Philistines have acted revengefully, and have taken vengeance with destructive malice in their hearts, with an undying enmity, 16 therefore thus says the Lord God: See! I am stretching out my hand against the Philistines; I will cut off the Cherethites* and wipe out the remnant on the seacoast. 17
I will execute great acts of vengeance on them, punishing them furiously. Thus they shall know that I am the Lord, when I wreak my vengeance on them.

CHAPTER 26.

Against the City of Tyre. 1 On the first day of the . . . month in the eleventh year, the word of the Lord came to me: 2
Son of man, because of what Tyre said of Jerusalem: "Aha! It is broken, the gateway to the peoples; now that it is ruined, its wealth reverts to me!" 3 therefore thus says the Lord God: x See! I am coming at you, Tyre; I will churn up against you many nations, even as the sea churns up its waves; 4 they shall destroy the walls of Tyre and raze her towers. I will scrape the ground from her and leave her a bare rock;* 5 she shall be a drying place for nets in the midst of the sea. I have spoken, says the Lord God: and she shall be booty for the nations. 6 And her daughters* on the mainland shall be slaughtered
by the sword; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

7 For thus says the Lord God: I am now bringing up against Tyre from the north Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon, the king of kings, with horses and chariots, with cavalry and a great and mighty army.

8 Your daughters on the mainland he shall slay with the sword; he shall place
a siege tower against you, cast up a ramp about you, and raise his shields against
you. 9 He shall pound your walls with battering-rams and break down your towers with his weapons. 10 The surge of his horses shall cover you with dust, amid the noise of steeds, of wheels and of chariots. Your walls shall shake as he enters your gates, even as one enters a city that is breached. 11 With the hoofs of his horses he shall trample all your streets;
your people he shall slay by the sword;
your mighty pillars he shall pull to the ground. 12 Your wealth shall be plundered, your merchandise pillaged; your walls shall be torn down, your precious houses demolished; your stones, your timber, and your clay shall be cast into the sea. 13 I will put an end to the noise of your songs, and the sound of your lyres shall be heard no more. 14 I will make you a bare rock; a drying place for nets shall

you be. Never shall you be rebuilt, for I have spoken, says the Lord God.

15 Thus says the Lord God to Tyre: At the noise of your fall, at the groaning of the wounded, when the sword slays in your midst, shall not the isles quake? 16 All the princes of the sea* shall step down from their thrones, lay aside their robes, and strip off their embroidered garments. They shall be clothed in mourning and, sitting on the ground, they shall tremble at every moment and be horrified at you. 17 Then they shall utter a lament over you: How you have perished, gone from the seas, city most prized! Once she was mighty on the sea, she and her dwellers, who spread terror into all that dwelt by the sea. 18 On this, the day of your fall, the islands quake! The isles in the sea are terrified at your passing.

19 For thus says the Lord God: When I make you a city desolate like cities that are no longer inhabited, when I churn up the abyss against you, and its mighty waters cover you, 20 then I will thrust you down with those who descend into the pit,* those of the bygone age; and I will make you dwell in the nether lands, in the everlasting ruins, with those who go down to the pit, so that you may never return to take your place in the land of the living. 21 I will make you a devastation, and you shall be no more; you shall be sought, but never again found, says the Lord God.

CHAPTER 27.

The Ship Tyre. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 As for you, son of man, utter a lament over Tyre, 3 and say to Tyre that is situated at the approaches of the sea, that brought the trade of the peoples to many a coastland: Thus says the Lord God: Tyre, you said, "I am a ship, perfect in beauty." 4 In the midst of the sea your builders placed you, perfected your beauty. 5 With cypress from Sanir* they built for you all of your decks; cedar from Lebanon they took to make you a mast; 6 from the highest oaks of Basan* they made your oars; your bridge they made of cypress wood from the isles of Chetthim. 7 Fine embroidered linen from Egypt became your sail [to serve you as a banner]. Purple and scarlet from the isles of Elisa* covered your cabin. 8 Citizens of Sidon and Arad served as your oarsmen; skilled men of Samar were in you to be your mariners; 9 the elders and experts of Gebal* were in you to caulk your seams. Every ship and sailor on the sea came to you to carry trade. 10 Persia and Lud and Phut were in your army as warriors; shield and helmet they hung upon you, increasing your splendor. 11 The men of Arad were all about your walls, and the Gammadites were in your towers; they hung their bucklers all around on your walls, and made perfect your beauty. 12 Tharsis traded with you, so great was your wealth, exchanging silver, iron, tin, and lead for your wares. 13 Javan, Thubal, and Mosoch were also traders with you, exchanging slaves and articles of bronze for your goods. 14 From Beth-Thogorma horses, steeds, and mules were exchanged for your wares. 15 The Rodanites trafficked with you; many coastlands traded with you; ivory tusks and ebony wood they gave you for payment. 16 Edom traded with you, so many were your products, exchanging garnets, purple, embroidered cloth, fine linen, coral, and rubies for your wares. 17 Juda and the land of Israel trafficked with you, exchanging Mennith wheat, figs, honey, oil, and balm for your goods. 18 Damascus traded with you, so great was your wealth, exchanging Helbon wine and Sahar wool. 19 Javan exchanged wrought iron, cassia, and aromatic cane from Uzal for your wares. 20 Dedan traded with you for riding gear. 21 The trade of Arabia and of all the sheikhs of Cedar belonged to you; they dealt in lambs, rams, and goats. 22 The merchants of Saba and Regma also traded with you, exchanging for your wares the very choicest spices, all kinds of precious stones, and gold. 23 Haran, Chene, and Eden, the merchants of Saba, Assur, and Chelmad 24 traded with you, marketing with you rich garments, violet mantles, embroidered cloth, varicolored carpets, and firmly woven cords. 25 Ships of Tharsis journeyed for you in your merchandising.

26, 16: The princes of the sea: the rulers of the islands and coastal cities leagued commercially with Tyre.

26, 20: Those who descend into the pit: the dead, pictured as dwelling in a place or cave of darkness.

27, 5: Sanir: another name for Mount Hermon; cf Dt 3, 9.

27, 6: Basan: northern Transjordan, which, like Lebanon, was noted for its great forests. Chetthim: probably Cyprus.

27, 7: Elisa: probably another term for Cyprus.

27, 8f: Sidon . . . Arad . . . Samar . . . Gebal: Phoenician cities in Tyre's orbit of influence; the last-named is the classical Byblos.

You were full and heavily laden in the heart of the sea. 26 Through the deep waters your oarsmen brought you home, but the east wind smashed you in the heart of the sea. 27 Your wealth, your goods, your wares, your sailors, and your crew, [the caulkers of your seams, those who traded for your goods, all your warriors who were in you, and all the great crowd within you] sank into the heart of the sea on the day of your shipwreck. 28 Hearing the shouts of your mariners, the shores begin to quake. 29 Down from their ships come all who ply the oar; the sailors, all the mariners of the sea, stand on the shore, 30 making their voice heard on your behalf, shouting bitter cries, strewing dust on their heads, rolling in the ashes. 31 For you they shave their heads and put on sackcloth, for you they weep in anguish, with bitter lament. 32 In their mourning they utter a lament over you; thus they wail over you: Who was ever destroyed like Tyre in the midst of the sea? 33 With your goods which you drew from the seas you filled many peoples; with your great wealth and merchandise you enriched the kings of the earth. 34 Now you are wrecked in the sea, in the watery depths; your wares and all your crew have gone down with you. 35 All who dwell on the coastlands are aghast over you, their kings are terrified, their faces convulsed. 36 The traders among the peoples now hiss at you; you have become a horror, and you shall be no more.

CHAPTER 28.

The Prince of Tyre. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, say to the prince of Tyre: Thus says the Lord God: Because you are haughty of heart, and say, "A god am I! I occupy a godly throne in the heart of the sea!"—and yet you are a man, and not a god, however you may think yourself like a god. 3 Oh yes, you are wiser than Daniel,* there is no secret that is beyond you. 4 By your wisdom and your intelligence you have made riches for yourself; you have put gold and silver into your treasuries. 5 By your great wisdom applied to your trading you have heaped up your riches; your heart has grown haughty from your riches —6 therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you have thought yourself to have the mind of a god, 7 therefore I will bring against you foreigners, the most barbarous of nations. They shall draw their swords against your beauteous wisdom, they shall run them through your splendid apparel. 8 They shall thrust you down to the pit, there to die a bloodied corpse, in the heart of the sea. 9 Will you then say, "I am a god!" when you face your murderers? No, you are a man, not a god, handed over to those who will slay you. 10 You shall die the death of the uncircumcised at the hands of foreigners, for I have spoken, says the Lord God.

11 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 12 Son of man, utter a lament over the king of Tyre, saying to him: Thus says the Lord God: You were stamped with the seal of perfection, of complete wisdom and perfect beauty. 13 In Eden, the garden of God, you were, and every precious stone was your covering [carnelian, topaz, and beryl, chrysolite, onyx, and jasper, sapphire, garnet and emerald]; of gold your pendants and jewels were made, on the day you were created. 14 With the Cherub I placed you; you were on the holy mountain of God, walking among the fiery stones. 15 Blameless you were in your conduct from the day you were created, until evil was found in you, 16 the result of your far-flung trade; violence was your business, and you sinned. Then I banned you from the mountain of God; the Cherub drove you from among the fiery stones. 17 You became haughty of heart because of your beauty; for the sake of splendor you debased your wisdom. I cast you to the earth, so great was your guilt; I made you a spectacle in the sight of kings. 18 Because of your great guilt, your sinful trade, I have profaned your sanctuaries, and I have brought out fire from your midst which will devour you. I have reduced you to dust on the earth in the sight of all who should see you. 19 Among the peoples, all who knew you stand aghast at you; you have become a horror, you shall be no more.

28, 3: Wiser than Daniel: see note on Ez 14, 14.

28, 12-19: This picture of Tyre and its fall recalls images of the earthly paradise portraying the creation of man in perfection and his fall (Gn, chapters 2-3).

28, 14: The holy mountain of God: the residence of God was sometimes designated as a mountain; cf Is 14, 13. The fiery stones: associated with the divine presence; cf Ez 1, 13; Ps 17 (18), 13.

Against Sidon. 20 y Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 21 z Son of man, look toward Sidon, and prophesy against it: 22 Thus says the Lord God: a See! I am coming at you, Sidon; I will be glorified in your midst. Then they shall know that I am the Lord, when I inflict punishments upon it and use it to manifest my holiness. 23 Into it I will send pestilence, and blood shall flow in its streets. Within it shall fall those slain by the sword that comes against it from every side. Thus they shall know that I am the Lord. 24
Sidon shall no longer be a tearing thorn
for the house of Israel, a brier that scratches them more than all the others about them who despise them; thus they shall
know that I am the Lord.

25 Thus says the Lord God: When I gather the house of Israel from the peoples among whom they are scattered, then I will manifest my holiness through them in the sight of the nations. Then they shall live on their land which I gave to my servant Jacob; 26 they shall live on it in security, building houses and planting vineyards. They shall dwell secure while I inflict punishments on all their neighbors who despised them; thus they shall know that I, the Lord, am their God.

CHAPTER 29.

Egypt the Crocodile. 1 On the twelfth day of the tenth month in the tenth year,*
the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son
of man, set your face against Pharao,
king of Egypt, and prophesy against him
and against all Egypt.* 3 Say this to him:
Thus says the Lord God: See! I am coming at you, Pharao, king of Egypt, great crouching monster amidst your Niles:* who say, "The Niles are mine;
it is I who made them!" 4 I will put hooks in your jaws and make the fish of your Niles stick to your scales, then draw you up from the midst of your Niles along with all the fish of your Niles sticking to your scales. 5 I will cast you into the desert, you and all the fish of your Niles; you shall fall upon the open field, you shall not be taken up or buried; to the beasts of the earth and the birds of the air I give you as food, 6 b that all who dwell in Egypt may know that I am the Lord. Because you have been a reed staff for the house of Israel: 7 when they held you in hand, you splintered, throwing every shoulder out of joint; when they leaned on you, you broke, bringing each one of them down headlong; 8 therefore thus says the Lord God: See! I will bring the sword against you, and cut off from you both man and beast. 9 The land of Egypt shall become a desolate waste; thus
they shall know that I am the Lord.

Because you said, "The Niles are mine;
it is I who made them," 10 therefore see!
I am coming at you and against your Niles; I will make the land of Egypt a waste and a desolation from Magdol to Syene,* and even to the frontier of Ethiopia. 11 No foot of man or beast shall pass through it; they shall not pass through it, and it will be uninhabited for forty years. 12 I will make the land of Egypt the most desolate of lands, and its cities shall be the most deserted of cities for forty years; and I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations and strew them over foreign lands. 13 Yet thus says
the Lord God: At the end of forty years
I will gather the Egyptians from the peoples among whom they are scattered, 14
and I will restore Egypt's fortune, bringing them back to the land of Phathures, the land of their origin,* where it will be the lowliest 15 of kingdoms, never more to set itself above the nations. I will make them few, that they may not dominate the nations. 16 No longer shall they be for the house of Israel to trust in, but the living reminder of its guilt for having turned to follow after them. Thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

The Wages of Nabuchodonosor. 17 On the first day of the first month in the twenty-seventh year,* the word of the Lord came to me: 18 Son of man, Nabu-chodonosor, the king of Babylon, has led his army in an exhausting campaign against Tyre.* Their heads became bald

29, 18f: The fulfillment of Ezechiel's prophecy against Tyre (chapters 26-28) was a thirteen-year siege of the city by Nabuchodonosor (587-574 B. C.). Tyre seems to have been taken, but its resources were exhausted and the booty was small. Therefore Ezechiel now prophesies that Nabuchodonosor will collect his wages as God's instrument in the punishment of Tyre, by plundering Egypt.

and their shoulders were galled; but neither he nor his army received any wages from Tyre for the campaign he led against it. 19 Therefore thus says the Lord God: [c] I am now giving the land of Egypt to Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon. He shall carry off its riches, plundering and pillaging it for the wages of his soldiers, who did it for me; 20 as payment for his toil I have given him the land of Egypt, says the Lord God.

21 On that day I will make a horn sprout for the house of Israel, and I will cause you to speak out in their midst; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

CHAPTER 30.

The Day of the Lord against Egypt. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, speak this prophecy: Thus says the Lord God: Cry, Oh, the day! 3 for near is the day, near is the day of the Lord; a day of clouds, doomsday for the nations shall it be. 4 Then a sword shall come upon Egypt, and anguish shall be in Ethiopia, when the slain fall in Egypt, when her riches are seized and her foundations are overthrown. 5 Ethiopia, Phut, Lud, all Arabia, Libya, and people of the allied territory shall fall by the sword with them. 6 Those who support Egypt shall fall, and down shall come her proud strength; from Magdal to Syene they shall fall there by the sword, says the Lord God. 7 She shall be the most devastated of lands, and her cities shall be the most desolate of all. 8 Then they shall know that I am the Lord, when I set fire to Egypt and when all who help her are broken. 9 On that day messengers shall hasten forth at my command to terrify unsuspecting Ethiopia; they shall be in anguish on the day of Egypt, which is surely coming.

10 Thus says the Lord God: I will put an end to the throngs of Egypt by the hand of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon. 11 He and his people with him, the most ruthless of nations, shall be brought in to devastate the land. They shall draw their swords against Egypt, and fill the land with the slain. 12 I will turn the Niles into dry land and sell the land over to the power of the wicked. The land and everything in it I will hand over to foreigners to devastate. I, the Lord, have spoken.

13 [d] Thus says the Lord God: I will put an end to the great ones of Memphis and the princes of the land of Egypt, that they may be no more. I will cast fear into the land of Egypt, and devastate Phathures. 14 I will set fire to Tanis, and inflict punishments on Thebes. 15 I will pour out my wrath on Pelusium, Egypt's stronghold, and cut down the crowds in Memphis. 16 I will set fire to Egypt; Syene shall writhe in anguish; Thebes shall be breached and its walls shall be demolished. 17 The young men of On and of Bubastis shall fall by the sword, and the cities themselves shall go into captivity. 18 In Tahpanhes the day shall be darkened when I break the scepter of Egypt. Her haughty pride shall cease from her, clouds shall cover her, and her daughters shall go into captivity. 19 Thus will I inflict punishments on Egypt, that they may know that I am the Lord.

Pharao's Broken Arm. 20 On the seventh day of the first month in the eleventh year,* the word of the Lord came to me: 21 *Son of man, I have broken the arm of Pharao, the king of Egypt, and see, it has not been bound up with bandages and healing remedies that it may be strong enough to hold the sword. 22 Therefore thus says the Lord God: See! I am coming at Pharao, the king of Egypt. I will break his strong arm, so that the sword drops from his hand. 23 I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations and strew them over foreign lands. 24 But I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and put my sword in his hand, which he will bring against Egypt so as to plunder and pillage it. 25 [I will make the arms of the king of Babylon strong, but the arms of Pharao shall drop.] Then they shall know that I am the Lord, when I put my sword in the hand of the king of Babylon for him to wield against the land of Egypt. 26 [I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations and strew them over foreign lands.] Thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

c Jer 46, 2.—d Za 13, 2.

30, 20: The seventh day of the first month in the eleventh year: April 29, 587 B. C.

30, 21-26: This oracle was uttered during the siege of Jerusalem, which has now lasted more than a year (Ez 24, 1). Pharao Hophra went to the aid of Jerusalem, causing the Chaldeans to lift the siege temporarily; cf Jer 34, 21; 37, 6f. In the prophet's eyes, this was interfering with the divine punishment of Juda that was to be inflicted by the Chaldeans. The Egyptians were routed by the Chaldeans, and were able to offer no more help to Jerusalem; cf chapter 31.

CHAPTER 31.

Allegory of the Cypress. 1 On the first day of the third month in the eleventh year,* the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, say to Pharao, the king of Egypt, and to his hordes: What are you like in your greatness?

3 Behold, a cypress [cedar] in Lebanon, beautiful of branch, lofty of stature, amid the very clouds lifted its crest. 4 Waters made it grow, the abyss made it flourish, sending its rivers round where it was planted, turning its streams to all the trees of the field. 5 Thus it grew taller than every other tree of the field, and longer of branch because of the abundant water. 6 In its boughs nested all the birds of the air, under its branches all beasts of the field gave birth, in its shade dwelt numerous peoples of every race. 7 It became beautiful and stately in its spread of foliage, for its roots were turned toward abundant water. 8 The cedars in the garden of God were not its equal, nor could the fir trees match its boughs, neither were the plane trees like its branches; no tree in the garden of God matched its beauty. 9 I made it beautiful, with much foliage, the envy of all Eden's trees in the garden of God. 10 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because it became lofty in stature, raising its crest among the clouds, and because it became proud in heart at its height, 11 I have handed it over to the mightiest of the nations, which has dealt with it in keeping with its wickedness. I humiliated it. 12 Foreigners, the most ruthless of the nations, cut it down and left it on the mountains. Its foliage was brought low in all the valleys, its branches lay broken in all the ravines of the land, and all the peoples of the land withdrew from its shade, abandoning it. 13 On its fallen trunk rested all the birds of the air, and by its branches were all the beasts of the field. 14 Thus no tree may grow lofty in stature or raise its crest among the clouds; no tree fed by water may stand by itself in its loftiness. For all of them are destined for death, for the land below, for the company of mortals, those who go down into the pit.

e Ez 12, 13; 17, 20.—f Is 13, 10; Jl 2, 10; 4, 15; Mt 24, 29.

31, 1: The first day of the third month in the eleventh year: June 21, 587 B. C.

32, 1: The first day of the twelfth month in the twelfth year: March 3, 585 B. C.

15 Thus says the Lord God: On the day he went down to the nether world I made the abyss close up over him; I stopped its streams so that the deep waters were held back. I cast gloom over Lebanon because of him, so that all the trees in the land drooped on his account. 16 At the crash of his fall I made the nations rock, when I cast him down to the nether world with those who go down into the pit. In the land below, all Eden's trees were consoled, Lebanon's choice and best, all that were fed by water. 17 They too have come down with him to the nether world, to those slain by the sword; those who dwelt in his shade are dispersed among the nations. 18 Which was your equal in glory or size among the trees of Eden? Yet you have been brought down with the trees of Eden to the land below. You shall lie with the uncircumcised, with those slain by the sword. Such are Pharao and all his hordes, says the Lord God.

CHAPTER 32.

Dirge over Pharao. 1 On the first day of the twelfth month in the twelfth year,* the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, utter a lament over Pharao, the king of Egypt, saying to him: Lion of the nations, you are destroyed. You were like a monster in the sea, spouting in your streams, stirring the water with your feet and churning its streams. 3 e Thus says the Lord God: I will spread my net over you [with a host of many nations], and draw you up in my seine. 4 I will leave you on the land; on the open field I will cast you. I will have all the birds of the air alight on you, and all the beasts of the earth eat their fill of you. 5 I will leave your flesh on the mountains, and fill the valleys with your carcass. 6 I will water the land with what flows from you, and the river beds shall be filled with your blood. 7 f When I snuff you out I will cover the heavens, and all their stars I will darken; the sun I will cover with clouds, and the moon shall not give its light. 8 All the shining lights in the heavens I will darken on your account, and I will spread darkness over your land, says the Lord God.

9 I will grieve the hearts of many peoples when I lead you captive among the nations, to lands which you do not know. 10 Many peoples shall be appalled at you, and their kings shall shudder over you in horror when they see me brandish my sword, and on the day of your downfall every one of them shall continuously tremble for his own life. 11 For thus says the Lord God: The sword of the king of Babylon shall come upon you.

12 I will cut down your horde with the blades of warriors, all of them the most ruthless of the nations; they shall lay waste the glory of Egypt, and all her hordes shall be destroyed. 13 I will have all of her animals perish beside her abundant waters; the foot of man shall stir them no longer, nor shall the hoof of beast disturb them. 14 Then will I make their waters clear, and their streams flow like oil, says the Lord God.

15 When I turn Egypt into a waste, the land shall be devastated of all that is in it; when I strike all who live there, they shall know that I am the Lord. 16 This is a dirge, and it shall be sung: the daughters of the nations shall chant it; over Egypt and all its hordes shall they chant it, says the Lord God.

Dirge over Egypt. 17 On the fifteenth day of the first month in the twelfth year, the word of the Lord came to me: 18 Son of man, lament over the throngs of Egypt, for the mighty nations have thrust them down to the bottom of the earth, with those who go down into the pit. 20 In the midst of those slain by the sword shall they fall, and place shall be made with them for all their hordes. Then from the midst of the nether world, the mighty warriors shall speak to Egypt: 19 "Whom do you excel in beauty? 21 Come down, you and your allies, lie with the uncircumcised, with those slain by the sword."

22 There is Assyria with all her company, all of them slain, 23 whose graves have been made in the recesses of the pit; her company is around Egypt's grave, all of them slain, fallen by the sword, who spread terror in the land of the living. 24 There is Elam with all her throng about Egypt's grave, all of them slain, fallen by the sword: they have gone down uncircumcised to the bottom of the earth, who spread their terror in the land of the living, and they bear their disgrace with those who go down into the pit; 25 in the midst of the slain they are placed. 26 There are Mosoch and Thubal and all their throng about her grave, all of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword, for they spread their terror in the land of the living.

27 They do not lie with the mighty men fallen of old,* who went down to the nether world with their weapons of war, whose swords were placed under their heads and whose shields were laid over their bones, though the mighty men caused terror in the land of the living. 28 But in the midst of the uncircumcised shall you lie, with those slain by the sword.

29 There are Edom, her kings, and all her princes, who despite their might have been placed with those slain by the sword; with the uncircumcised they lie, and with those who go down into the pit. 30 There are all the princes of the north and all the Sidonians, who have gone down with the slain, because of the terror their might inspired; they lie uncircumcised with those slain by the sword and bear their disgrace with those who go down to the pit. 31 When Pharao sees these, he shall be comforted for all his hordes slain by the sword—Pharao and all his army, says the Lord God. 32 Since he spread his terror in the land of the living, therefore is he laid to rest among the uncircumcised, with those slain by the sword—Pharao and all his hordes, says the Lord God.

IV: SALVATION FOR ISRAEL

CHAPTER 33.

The Prophet a Watchman. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, speak thus to your countrymen: When I bring the sword against a country, and the people of this country select one of their number to be their watchman, 3 and the watchman, seeing the sword coming against the country, blows the trumpet to warn the people, 4 anyone hearing but not heeding the warning of the trumpet and therefore slain by the sword that comes against him, shall be responsible for his own death. 5 He heard the trumpet blast yet refused to take warning; he is responsible for his own death, for had he taken warning he would have escaped with his life. 6 But if the watchman sees the sword coming and fails to blow the 32, 27: The mighty men fallen of old: the semilegendary heroes of the prehistoric past, who were thought to have once dominated the world; cf Is 14, 9.

warning trumpet, so that the sword comes and takes anyone, I will hold the watchman responsible for that person's death, even though that person is taken because of his own sin.

7 g You, son of man, I have appointed watchman for the house of Israel; when you hear me say anything, you shall warn them for me. 8 If I tell the wicked man that he shall surely die, and you do not speak out to dissuade the wicked man from his way, he [the wicked man] shall die for his guilt, but I will hold you responsible for his death. 9 But if you warn the wicked man, trying to turn him from his way, and he refuses to turn from his way, he shall die for his guilt, but you shall save yourself.

Individual Retribution. 10 As for you, son of man, speak to the house of Israel: You people say, "Our crimes and our sins weigh us down; we are rotting away because of them. How can we survive?" 11 h Answer them: As I live, says the Lord God, I swear I take no pleasure in the death of the wicked man, but rather in the wicked man's conversion, that he may live. Turn, turn from your evil ways! Why should you die, O house of Israel?

12 As for you, son of man, tell your countrymen: The virtue which a man has practiced will not save him on the day that he sins; neither will the wickedness that a man has done bring about his downfall on the day that he turns from his wickedness [nor can the virtuous man, when he sins, remain alive]. 13 Though I say to the virtuous man that he shall surely live, if he then presumes on his virtue and does wrong, none of his virtuous deeds shall be remembered; because of the wrong he has done, he shall die. 14 And though I say to the wicked man that he shall surely die, if he turns away from his sin and does what is right and just, 15 giving back pledges, restoring stolen goods, living by the statutes that bring life, and doing no wrong, he shall surely live, he shall not die. 16 None of the sins he committed shall be held against him; he has done what is right and just, he shall surely live.

17 Yet your countrymen say, "The way of the Lord is not fair!"; but it is their way that is not fair. 18 When a virtuous man turns away from what is right and does wrong, he shall die for it. 19 But when a wicked man turns away from wickedness and does what is right and just, because of this he shall live. 20 i And still you say, "The way of the Lord is not fair!"? I will judge every one of you according to his ways, O house of Israel.

The Fugitive from Jerusalem.* 21 On the fifth day of the tenth month, in the twelfth year of our exile, the fugitive came to me from Jerusalem and said, "The city is taken!" 22 The hand of the Lord had come upon me the evening before the fugitive arrived, and he opened my mouth when the fugitive reached me in the morning. My mouth was opened, and I was dumb no longer.

The Survivors in Juda.* 23 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 24 Son of man, they who live in the ruins on the land of Israel reason thus: "Abraham, though but a single individual, received possession of the land; we, therefore, being many, have as permanent possession the land that has been given to us." 25 Give them this answer: Thus says the Lord God: You eat on the mountains, you raise your eyes to your idols, you shed blood—yet you would keep possession of the land? 26 You rely on your sword, you do abominable things, each one of you defiles his neighbor's wife—yet you would keep possession of the land? 27 Tell them this: Thus says the Lord God: As I live, those who are in the ruins I swear shall fall by the sword; those who are in the open field I have given to the wild beasts for food; and those who are in fastnesses and in caves shall die by the plague. 28 I will make the land a desolate waste, so that its proud strength will come to an end, and the mountains of Israel shall be so desolate that no one will cross them. 29 Thus they shall know that I am the Lord, when I make the land a desolate waste because of all the abominable things they have done.

The Prophet's False Popularity. 30 As for you, son of man, your countrymen are 33, 21f: January 8, 585 B. C. According to Jeremia (39, 2), Jerusalem was taken in July, 587. Some MSS read "eleventh" for twelfth year (January, 586); even so, there was ample time between the fall of Jerusalem and the arrival of the fugitive from that city to journey to Babylon. However, this is the fugitive sent to fulfill the promise of Ez 24, 25. 27, the eyewitness who would release Ezechiel from his dumbness; cf Ez 3, 26f.

33, 23-29: News brought by the fugitive furnished the occasion of this prophecy. Like Jeremia, Ezechiel rejects the idea that the survivors in Juda have any claim to the land. The new Israel is to be formed from the exiles.

talking about you along the walls and in the doorways of houses. They say to one another, "Come and hear the latest word that comes from the Lord."* 31 My people come to you as people always do; they sit down before you and hear your words, but they will not obey them, for lies are on their lips and their desires are fixed on dishonest gain. 32 For them you are only a ballad singer, with a pleasant voice and a clever touch. They listen to your words, but they will not obey them. 33 But when it comes—and it is surely coming!—they shall know that there was a prophet among them.

CHAPTER 34.

Parable of the Shepherds. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 2 Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel,* in these words prophesy to them [to the shepherds]: Thus says the Lord God: Woe to the shepherds of Israel who have been pasturing themselves! j Should not shepherds, rather, pasture sheep? 3 You have fed off their milk, worn their wool, and slaughtered the fatlings, but the sheep you have not pastured. 4 You did not strengthen the weak nor heal the sick nor bind up the injured. You did not bring back the strayed nor seek the lost, but you lorded it over them harshly and brutally. 5 So they were scattered for lack of a shepherd, and became food for all the wild beasts. My sheep were scattered 6 and wandered over all the mountains and high hills; my sheep were scattered over the whole earth, with no one to look after them or to search for them.

7 Therefore, shepherds, hear the word of the Lord: 8 As I live, says the Lord God, because my sheep have been given over to pillage, and because my sheep have become food for every wild beast, for lack of a shepherd; because my shepherds did not look after my sheep, but pastured themselves and did not pasture my sheep; 9 because of this, shepherds, hear the word of the Lord: 10 Thus says the Lord God: I swear I am coming against these shepherds. I will claim my sheep from them and put a stop to their shepherding my sheep so that they may no longer pasture themselves. I will save my sheep, that they may no longer be food for their mouths.

11 For thus says the Lord God: I myself will look after and tend my sheep. 12 As a shepherd tends his flock when he finds himself among his scattered sheep, so will I tend my sheep. I will rescue them from every place where they were scattered when it was cloudy and dark. 13 I will lead them out from among the peoples and gather them from the foreign lands; I will bring them back to their own country and pasture them upon the mountains of Israel [in the land's ravines and all its inhabited places]. 14 In good pastures will I pasture them, and on the mountain heights of Israel shall be their grazing ground. There they shall lie down on good grazing ground, and in rich pastures shall they be pastured on the mountains of Israel. 15 I myself will pasture my sheep; I myself will give them rest, says the Lord God. 16 The lost I will seek out, the strayed I will bring back, the injured I will bind up, the sick I will heal [but the sleek and the strong I will destroy], shepherding them rightly.

Separation of the Sheep. 17 As for you, my sheep, says the Lord God, I will judge between one sheep and another, between rams and goats. 18 Was it not enough for you to graze on the best pasture, that you had to trample the rest of your pastures with your feet? Was it not enough for you to drink the clearest water, that you had to foul the remainder with your feet? 19 Thus my sheep had to graze on what your feet had trampled and drink what your feet had fouled. 20 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Now will I judge between the fat and the lean sheep. 21 Because you push with side and shoulder, and butt all the weak sheep with your horns until you have driven them out, 22 I will save my sheep so that they may no longer be despoiled, and I will judge between one sheep and another. 23 k I will appoint one shepherd over them to pasture them, my servant David;* he shall pasture them and be their shepherd. 24 I, the Lord, will be their God, and my servant David shall be prince among them. I, the Lord, have spoken.

33, 30: The fulfillment of Ezechiel's prophecies about Jerusalem was responsible for this temporary enthusiasm among the unstable people.

34, 23: One shepherd . . . my servant David: a Messianic Davidic king who will rule over the restored Israel (vv 25-31) in the name of the Lord.

25 I will make a covenant of peace with them, and rid the country of ravenous beasts, that they may dwell securely in the desert and sleep in the forests. 26 I will place them about my hill, sending rain in due season, rains that shall be a blessing to them. 27 The trees of the field shall bear their fruits, and the land its crops, and they shall dwell securely on their own soil. Thus they shall know that I am the Lord when I break the bonds of their yoke and free them from the power of those who enslaved them. 28 They shall no longer be despoiled by the nations or devoured by beasts of the earth, but shall dwell secure, with no one to frighten them. 29 I will prepare for them peaceful fields for planting; they shall no longer be carried off by famine in the land, or bear the reproaches of the nations. 30
Thus they shall know that I, the Lord, am their God, and they are my people, the house of Israel, says the Lord God. 31 [You, my sheep, you are the sheep of my pasture, and I am your God, says the Lord God.]

CHAPTER 35.

Against Edom.* 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: l 2 Son of man, set your face against Mount Seir, and prophesy against it. 3 Say to it: Thus says the Lord God: See! I am coming at you, Mount Seir. I will stretch out my hand against you and make you a desolate waste. 4 Your cities I will turn into ruins, and you shall be a waste; thus you shall
know that I am the Lord.

5 Because you never let die your hatred
for the Israelites, whom you delivered over to the power of the sword at the time of their trouble, when their crimes came to an end, 6 therefore, as I live, says the Lord God, you have been guilty of blood, and blood, I swear, shall pursue you. 7 I will make Mount Seir a desolate waste, and cut off from it any traveler. 8 With the slain I will fill your hills, your valleys,
and all your ravines [in them the slain shall fall by the sword]: 9 desolate will I make you forever, and leave your cities without inhabitants; thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

10 Because you said: The two nations
and the two lands* have become mine;
we shall possess them—although the Lord was there—11 therefore, as I live, says the Lord God, I will deal with you according to your anger and your envy which you have exercised [in your hatred] against them. I will make myself known among you when I judge you, 12 and you shall
know that I am the Lord.

I have heard all the contemptuous things you have uttered against the mountains of Israel: "They are desolate, they have been given us to devour." 13 I have heard the insolent and wild words you have spoken against me. 14 Thus says the Lord God: Just as you rejoiced over my land because it was desolate, so will I do to you. 15 In keeping with your glee over the devastation of the inheritance of the house of Israel, so will I treat you. A waste shall you be, Mount Seir, you and the whole of Edom. Thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

CHAPTER 36.

Regeneration of the Land. 1 As for you,
son of man, prophesy to the mountains of Israel: Mountains of Israel,m hear the word of the Lord! 2 Thus says the Lord God: Because the enemy has said of you,
"Ha! the everlasting heights have become our possession" 3 [therefore prophesy in these words: Thus says the Lord God:];
because you have been ridiculed and despised on all sides for having become a possession for the rest of the nations, and have become a byword and a popular jeer; 4 therefore, mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord: [Thus says the Lord God to the mountains and hills, the ravines and valleys, the desolate ruins and abandoned cities, which have been given over to the pillage and mockery of the remaining nations round about; 5 therefore thus says the Lord God:] Truly, with burning jealousy I speak against the rest of the nations [and against all of Edom]
who with wholehearted joy and utter contempt have considered my land their possession to be delivered over to plunder. 6 [Therefore, prophesy concerning the land of Israel, and say to the mountains and hills, the ravines and valleys: Thus says
the Lord God:] With jealous fury I speak,

1 1ff: Ez 25, 12ff.—m Ez 6, 3.

35, 1-15: After the fall of Jerusalem, Edom assisted the Chaldeans in devastating the land and subduing the population, and ended by occupying part of Juda's former territory. For this reason these oracles against Edom are found in the context of the city's fall.

35, 10: The two nations and the two lands: the superseded kingdoms of Israel and Juda and their territories.

because you have borne the reproach of the nations. 7 Therefore do I solemnly swear that your neighboring nations shall bear their own reproach.

8 As for you, mountains of Israel, you shall grow branches and bear fruit for my people Israel, for they shall soon return. 9 See, I come to you, it is to you that I turn; you will be tilled and sown, 10 and I will settle crowds of men upon you, the whole house of Israel; cities shall be repeopled, and ruins rebuilt. 11 I will settle crowds of men and beasts upon you, to multiply and be fruitful. I will repeople you as in the past, and be more generous to you than in the beginning; thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

12 [My people Israel are the ones whom I will have walk upon you; they shall take possession of you, and you shall be their heritage. Never again shall you rob them of their children.]

13 Thus says the Lord God: Because they have said of you, "You are a land that devours men,* and you rob your people of their children"; 14 therefore, never again shall you devour men or rob your people of their children, says the Lord God. 15 No more will I permit you to hear the reproach of nations, or bear insults from peoples, or rob your people of their children, says the Lord God.

Regeneration of the People. 16 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 17 Son of man, when the house of Israel lived in their land, they defiled it by their conduct and deeds. In my sight their conduct was like the defilement of a menstruous woman. 18 Therefore I poured out my fury upon them [because of the blood which they poured out on the ground, and because they defiled it with idols]. 19 I scattered them among the nations, dispersing them over foreign lands; according to their conduct and deeds I judged them. 20 n But when they came among the nations [wherever they came], they served to profane my holy name, because it was said of them: "These are the people of the Lord, yet they had to leave their land." 21 So I have relented because of my holy name which the house of Israel profaned among the nations where they came. 22 Therefore say to the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord God: Not for your sakes do I act, house of Israel, but for the sake of my holy name, which you profaned among the nations to which you came. 23 I will prove the holiness of my great name, profaned among the nations, in whose midst you have profaned it. Thus the nations shall know that I am the Lord, says the Lord God, when in their sight I prove my holiness through you. 24 For I will take you away from among the nations, gather you from all the foreign lands, and bring you back to your own land. 25 o I will sprinkle clean water upon you to cleanse you from all your impurities, and from all your idols I will cleanse you. 26 p I will give you a new heart and place a new spirit within you, taking from your bodies your stony hearts and giving you natural hearts. 27 q I will put my spirit within you and make you live by my statutes, careful to observe my decrees. 28 You shall live in the land I gave your fathers; you shall be my people, and I will be your God. 29 I will save you from all your impurities; I will order the grain to be abundant, and I will not send famine against you. 30 I will increase the fruit on your trees and the crops in your fields; thus you shall no longer bear among the nations the reproach of famine. 31 Then you shall remember your evil conduct, and that your deeds were not good; you shall loathe yourselves for your sins and your abominations. 32 Not for your sakes do I act, says the Lord God—let this be known to you! Be ashamed and abashed because of your conduct, O house of Israel.

33 Thus says the Lord God: When I purify you from all your crimes, I will repeople the cities, and the ruins shall be rebuilt; 34 the desolate land shall be tilled, which was formerly a wasteland exposed to the gaze of every passer-by. 35 "This desolate land has been made into a garden of Eden," they shall say. "The cities that were in ruins, laid waste, and destroyed are now repeopled and fortified." 36 Thus the neighboring nations that remain shall know that I, the Lord, have rebuilt what was destroyed and replanted what was desolate. I, the Lord, have promised, and I will do it.

37 Thus says the Lord God: This also I will be persuaded to do for the house of Israel: to multiply them like sheep. [38] As with sacrificial sheep, the sheep of Jerusalem on its feast days, the cities which were in ruins shall be filled with flocks of men; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

CHAPTER 37.

Vision of the Dry Bones.* [1] The hand of the Lord came upon me, and he led me out in the spirit of the Lord and set me in the center of the plain, which was now filled with bones. [2] He made me walk among them in every direction so that I saw how many they were on the surface of the plain. How dry they were! [3] He asked me: Son of man, can these bones come to life? "Lord God," I answered, "you alone know that." [4] Then he said to me: Prophesy over these bones, and say to them: Dry bones, hear the word of the Lord! [5] Thus says the Lord God to these bones: See! I will bring spirit into you, that you may come to life. [6] I will put sinews upon you, make flesh grow over you, cover you with skin, and put spirit in you so that you may come to life and know that I am the Lord. [7] I promised as I had been told, and even as I was prophesying I heard a noise; it was a rattling as the bones came together, bone joining bone. [8] I saw the sinews and the flesh come upon them, and the skin cover them, but there was no spirit in them. [9] Then he said to me: Prophesy to the spirit, prophesy, son of man, and say to the spirit: Thus says the Lord God: From the four winds come, O spirit, and breathe into these slain that they may come to life. [10] I prophesied as he told me, and the spirit came into them; they came alive and stood upright, a vast army. [11] Then he said to me: Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. They have been saying, "Our bones are dried up, our hope is lost, and we are cut off." [12] Therefore, prophesy and say to them: Thus says the Lord God: O my people, I will open your graves and have you rise from them, and bring you back to the land of Israel. [13] Then you shall know that I am the Lord, when I open your graves and have you rise from them, O my people! [14] I will put my spirit in you that you may live, and I will settle you upon your land; thus you shall know that I am the Lord. I have promised, and I will do it, says the Lord.

The Two Sticks. [15] *Thus the word of the Lord came to me: [16] Now, son of man, take a single stick, and write on it: Juda and those Israelites who are associated with him. Then take another stick and write on it: Joseph [the stick of Ephraim] and all the house of Israel associated with him. [17] Then join the two sticks together, so that they form one stick in your hand. [18] When your countrymen ask you, "Will you not tell us what you mean by all this?", [19] answer them: Thus says the Lord God: [I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and of the tribes of Israel associated with him, and I will join to it the stick of Juda, making them a single stick; they shall be one in my hand. [20] The sticks on which you write you shall hold up before them to see. [21] Tell them: Thus speaks the Lord God:] I will take the Israelites from among the nations to which they have come, and gather them from all sides to bring them back to their land. [22] I will make them one nation upon the land, in the mountains of Israel, and there shall be one prince for them all. Never again shall they be two nations, and never again shall they be divided into two kingdoms.

[23] No longer shall they defile themselves with their idols, their abominations, and all their transgressions. I will deliver them from all their sins of apostasy, and cleanse them so that they may be my people and I may be their God. [24] r My servant David shall be prince over them, and there shall be one shepherd for them all; they shall live by my statutes and carefully observe my decrees. [25] They shall live on the land which I gave to my servant Jacob, the land where their fathers lived; they shall live on it forever, they, and their children, and their children's children, with my servant David their prince forever. [26] s I will make with them a covenant of peace; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them, and I will multiply them, and put my sanctuary among them forever. [27] My dwelling shall be with them; I will be their God, and they shall be my people. [28] Thus the nations shall know that it is I, the Lord, who make Israel holy, when my sanctuary shall be set up among them forever.

CHAPTER 38.

First Prophecy against Gog. 1 Thus the word of the Lord came to me:* 2 Son of man, turn toward Gog* [the land of Magog],[t] the chief prince of Mosoch and Thubal, and prophesy against him: 3 Thus says the Lord God: See! I am coming at you, Gog, chief prince of Mosoch and Thubal. 4 I will lead you forth with all your army, horses and riders all handsomely outfitted, a great horde with bucklers and shields, all of them carrying swords: 5 Persia, Ethiopia, and Phut with them [all with shields and helmets], 6 Gomer with all its troops, Beth-Thogorma from the recesses of the north with all its troops, many peoples with you. 7 Prepare yourself, be ready, you and all your horde assembled about you, and be at my disposal. 8 After many days you will be mustered [in the last years you will come] against a nation which has survived the sword, which has been assembled from many peoples [on the mountains of Israel which were long a ruin], which has been brought forth from among the peoples and all of whom now dwell in security. 9 You shall come up like a sudden storm, advancing like a cloud to cover the earth, you and all your troops and the many peoples with you.

10 Thus says the Lord God: At that time thoughts shall arise in your mind, and you shall devise an evil scheme: 11 "I will go up against a land of open villages and attack the peaceful people who are living in security, all of them living without walls, having neither bars nor gates, 12 to plunder and pillage, turning my hand against the ruins that were repeopled and against a people gathered from the nations, a people concerned with cattle and goods, who dwell at the navel of the earth."* 13 Saba and Dedan, the merchants of Tharsis and all her young lions shall ask you: "Is it for plunder that you have come? Is it for pillage that you have summoned your horde, to carry off silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to seize much plunder?"

17 Thus says the Lord God: It is of you that I spoke in ancient times through my servants, the prophets of Israel, who prophesied in those days that I would bring you against them. 18 But on that day, the day when Gog invades the land of Israel, says the Lord God, my fury shall be aroused. In my anger 19 and in my jealousy, in my fiery wrath, I swear: On that day there shall be a great shaking upon the land of Israel. 20 Before me shall tremble the fish of the sea and the birds of the air, the beasts of the field and all the reptiles that crawl upon the ground, and all men who are on the land. Mountains shall be overturned, and cliffs shall tumble, and every wall shall fail to the ground. 21 Against him I will summon every terror, says the Lord God, every man's sword against his brother. I will hold judgment with him in pestilence and bloodshed; 22 flooding rain and hailstones, fire and brimstone, I will rain upon him, upon his troops, and upon the many peoples with him. 23 I will prove my greatness and holiness and make myself known in the sight of many nations; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

Second Prophecy against Gog. 14 Therefore prophesy, son of man, and say to Gog: Thus says the Lord God: When my people Israel are dwelling in security, will you not bestir yourself 15 and come from your home in the recesses of the north, you and many peoples with you, all mounted on horses, a great horde and a mighty army? 16 You shall come up against my people Israel like a cloud covering the land. In the last days I will bring you against my land, that the nations may know of me, when in their sight I prove my holiness through you, O Gog.

CHAPTER 39.

Third Prophecy against Gog. 1 Now, son of man, prophesy against Gog in these

t Ap 20, 7f.

38, 1—39, 20: These three oracles against Gog may refer either to a specific foreign invasion in the future, or to the apocalyptic struggle between good and evil at the end of time. By some they are ascribed to a later author than Ezechiel, who lived after the Exile and the return to Palestine.

38, 2: Gog: the name is almost certainly a symbolic one taken from that of Gyges, king of Lydia, whether or not the prophet has a specific person in mind. The gloss Magog may be an Akkadian expression, mat-Gog, "the land of Gog." Mosoch and Thubal, as well as Gomer and Beth-Thogorma (v 6), were countries around the Black Sea, the northernmost countries known to the Hebrews: the north (cf also v 15) was the traditional direction from which invasion was expected; cf Jer 1, 13ff.

38, 12: Who dwell at the navel of the earth: the people of Israel (cf v 18; also Ez 5, 5). Many ancient peoples spoke of their own homelands as "the navel," that is, the center of the earth.

words: Thus says the Lord God: See! I am coming at you, Gog, chief prince of Mosoch and Thubal. [2] I will turn you about, I will urge you on, and I will make you come up from the recesses of the north; I will lead you against the mountains of Israel. [3] Then I will strike the bow from your left hand, and make the arrows drop from your right. [4] Upon the mountains of Israel you shall fall, you and all your troops and the peoples who are with you. To birds of prey of every kind and to the wild beasts I am giving you to be eaten. [5] On the open field you shall fall, for I have decreed it, says the Lord God.

[6] I will send fire upon Magog and upon those who live securely in the coastlands;
thus they shall know that I am the Lord.
[7] I will make my holy name known among my people Israel; I will no longer allow my holy name to be profaned. Thus the nations shall know that I am the Lord,
the Holy One in Israel. [8] Yes, it is coming and shall be fulfilled, says the Lord
God. This is the day I have decreed.

[9] Then shall those who live in the cities of Israel go out and burn weapons:
[shields and bucklers,] bows and arrows, clubs and lances; for seven years they shall make fires with them. [10] They shall not have to bring in wood from the fields or cut it down in the forests, for they shall make fires with the weapons. Thus they shall plunder those who plundered
them and pillage those who pillaged them,
says the Lord God.

[11] On that day I will give Gog for his tomb a well-known place in Israel, the valley of Abarim* east of the sea [it is blocked to travelers]. Gog shall be buried there with all his horde, and it shall be named "Valley of Hamon-Gog." [12] To purify the land, the house of Israel shall need seven months to bury them. [13] All the people of the land shall bury them and gain renown for it, when I reveal my glory, says the Lord God. [14] Men shall be permanently employed to pass through the land burying those who lie unburied,
so as to purify the land. For seven months they shall keep searching. [15] When they pass through, should they see a human bone, let them put up a marker beside it, until others have buried it in the Valley of Hamon-Gog. [16] [Also the name of the city shall be Hamona.] Thus the land shall be purified.

[17] As for you, son of man, says the Lord God, say to birds of every kind and to all the wild beasts: Come together, from all sides gather for the slaughter I am about to provide for you, a great slaughter on the mountains of Israel: you shall have flesh to eat and blood to drink.
[18] You shall eat the flesh of warriors and drink the blood of the princes of the land [rams, lambs, and goats, bullocks, fatlings of Basan, all of them]. [19] From the slaughter which I will provide for you,
you shall eat fat until you are filled and drink blood until you are drunk. [20] You shall be filled at my table with horses and riders, with warriors and soldiers of every kind, says the Lord God.

Israel's Return. [21] Thus I will display my glory among the nations, and all the nations shall see the judgment I have executed and the hand I have laid upon them. [22] From that day forward the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord, their God. [23] The nations shall know that because of its sins the house of Israel went into exile; for they transgressed against me, and I hid my face from them and handed them over to their foes, so that all of them fell by the sword. [24] According to their uncleanness and their transgressions I dealt with them, hiding my face from them.

[25] Therefore, thus says the Lord God:
Now I will restore the fortunes of Jacob and have pity on the whole house of Israel, and I will be jealous for my holy name. [26] They shall forget their disgrace and all the times they broke faith with me, when they live in security on their land with no one to frighten them. [27]
When I bring them back from among the peoples, I will gather them from the lands of their enemies, and will prove my holiness through them in the sight of many nations. [28] u Thus they shall know that I, the Lord, am their God, since I who exiled them among the nations, will gather them back on their land, not leaving any of them behind. [29] No longer will I hide my face from them, for I have poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel, says the Lord God.
